VICTORIA BALL.

The long expected and much talked of Victoria, But we must speak of the Town Hall. It had been for morths in agriation, at one time laid on the shelr and like to expire, at another revived and newly inshelr and like to expire, at another revived and newly inshelr and like to expire, at another revived and newly inshelr and like to expire, at another revived and oned to this, in truth, is mid-winter,—and we looked around for the Park and his folice, and before very long we discovered. be one of those many anticapted events which never advauce further to an the conbeyo; but now it has actually been perfected in the womb of time, has existed, and is departed-gone, gone to the sepulchre of the past. All the bustle, and turnoil and excitement is now over, the vesture-makers will have a little breathing time, the curious nothing further to enquire about the mystery-lovers nothing to conceal, but the gossips plenty to talk about. A pageant of this elaborate nature has generally a fortught's maral existence,—it exists a week in prospect and a week in retrospect. It has now become something to talk about.

Never in our recollection has the City-of-Palaces been more full of youthful beauty than it is at the present moment. Bright eyes and rosy checks, and pale ones too, which, to us, at least, are still more fascinating (" pale with high and passiona ethologhis," as L. E. L. expresses it, in somewhat the same strain as that in which Shakespeare speaks of a cheek, "sickled of er with the pale cast of those int") and light forms full of grace and elegance, and sucet voices now abound every where There was a tune, when we eschewed society, and looked upon a Fancy Ball as nothing better than a " vanity but we hone-tly confe-s that we have been utterly unable to resist the fascinations of this season. Our social proper ities have been called into action to a degree altogether unprecedented in a life, which has not been a very bird one. Who can remain at home when a dance? Not we not we!—when we look around upon the throng of graceful, undulating forms which flit about like joing Sylphides, the buoyance of our by-gone days, again is rigorates our frames, and we fancy ourselves in reality young again, ever exclaiming in the words of a poet, with we do not very often ci'e as an authority, There's not a joy the world can give Like that it takes away.

Oh !indeed, when we look upon there fairy forms, we almost imagine that we have fallen into the hands of Medusa, who has cast us into her magic cauldron and made us young again. We have been before the public long enough to have been often out up without the assistance of the sorceress.

little Puck and his holies, and before very long we discovered him in the shape of a two-penny | - . . . ; ! ! we thought of the "bower of roses by Loudemeer's streams, and of the nightingale who last sang the pratty song to us. When we arrived in the ball 100m, was were quite bewildered; we knew not whether we were in Greece, or Switzerland, or the Highlands of Scotland, or Fairy-land, or whether we were taking a part in tableau vieant, representing an apotheosis of Walter Scotl each of the state of Scott, such a diversity of mimic garbs were there present, so many costumes of different nations were making up the motley throng. We wish we could do justice to the assembled multitude, and give a correct account of the fancy dresses; but as we have been often fold by one, whose dicta, are gospel to us, he who doe his best Does well, does nobly, angels could no more, we herewith begin our attempt.

Miss M. A. Ross and Mrs. Gordon, attired as Sco. h asses, are the first in order, to whom we must allude. Doctor Johnson said, that the only fine pro-pect which a Scotchman ever sees is the high-road which takes him to London; but the Lexicographer would not have said his, if he had seen such sweet Highland lassies in Scotland as we saw last night at the Town Hell. Towards the latter part of the evening a highland reel was danced me excellent style by the two Misses Ross, Dr. Stewar, Mr Edwards, &c. The two gentlemen whom we have mentioned, were gressed in a corresponding costume, and admirably attired they were. Miss Erskins, as Mary Avenel, looked the lovely high-born damied to perfection; but we should have thought from her grace and elegance that she had spent all her days in the "Court of Felicipans". ana," and not in the rustic neighbourhood of the Scotlish: Monastery. The two Misses Godby, in Polish contumes, looked, as they ever do, very pretty and fascinating. Mrs. Parker was splendidly attried as Anne of Austria, and Mr. Parker, in one of the firest dresses in the room, supported the part of the Duke of Buckingham, Miss Trower was a pietty little Swiss peasant. Miss Pierce Taylor, and Miss Shaw were tastefully attired, as we think, but we may be wrong, in the costumes of the Tyrol, and Mr. Taylor looked as though he had just stepped out of one of Lewis's pictures. Mr. Bayley, was very correctly attired as the Master of Roman-wood; Mr. Henry Palmer as Sir Giles Overtree; Mr. William Petmer as Rienzi, and Mr. Stocope r as Angelo Coloma. Mr. Larpent, in a sumptuo dress, assumed the character of Charles the Second. We kay as Sir Piercie Shafton, dressed needless to say to whom it is addressed. Wolustery) talked Euphusem most vigorously; but his courtly pace was so. what netarded by a very inappropried limp; we suppose that this was occasioned by the duello with Halbert Glendinning. Mr. Wm. Bracken Youth every where throws round the state of the state o ed the character exceedingly well; and Mr. Wyllie, as an Austrian Officer, struck us as a capital perso-nation. Mr. Cecil Trower was beautifully dressed in a Greek costume. Captain Colley, as Meg Merrilies excited our admiration; and a gentleman, whom he could not identify by reason of his huge proboscis, looked Punchinello to perfection. Robinson Crusoe, companioned by a new Zealand chief, in the absence of his man Friday, were regarded with much attention and well sustained their characters. We observed Sir Callaghan O' Biallaghan amidst the assembled multitude and "a flaxen headed Ploughboy, who vered; we particularly admire the bathos at the end, whistled o'er the lea," looking his character to admiration, and if the poet's request was complete with, we are sure Besides this there were a variety of Turkish, Greck, Swiss, and old English costumes, which we have no Poet Laureate on record. space to particularize, but we must not forget to mention one character, which was the chef d' œuvre of the night.

A very facetious gentleman, whose identity we were unable to decide upon, went about in the uniform of a two-penny postman, with a large leather bag and dakwallah's bell, distributing letters to the fair father assembled. We were able to exert our influence so successfully, that we contrived to peruse a few of these epistles and, as far as our memory, which is fortunately one of the best, will permit us, we now present our reader with a transcript of them. The following was recieved by Miss Ross.

> Scorn not our revels, Lady, for to-night Full many a gentle bosom with calm joy Is beating, as the joyous music swells And the gay dance progresses. Scorp not us Because we are arrayed in antic garbs, And for a little while have cast aside Our natural manners, striving to appear That which we are not; do not say that we Have ta'en our passage in "the ship of fools" Nor call us silly children; for tis good, Believe me, sometimes to unbend and cast The armour of our dignity aside Wherein we walk so stately—oh! 'tis good, Good for our hearts that we should sometimes fix Our thoughts on trifles which amuse the herd, And though we may be fit for loftier things Still sympathize with those gay souls who spend Day after days in unoffending sports, And feel no nobler yearnings; we can hold No commune with the multitude, nor give Our kindly, social sympathies full scope For action, if we move not with the throng, But hold ourselves apart and from afar Contemplate, with a grave, observant eye, Scenes, which we scorn to mix in—Thou art wise, And higher tings engross thee than the dance, the masque, the rovel, and the mimic show, But scorn not us poor Mountebanks, who strive Ourselves and others to amuse, deck'd out In garbs of quaint device.—One wisest man Fall of philosophy has written thus:
> The dignity of life is not impaired By aught that innocently satisfies The humbler cravings of the heart; and he Is a still happier man who, for those heights Of speculation not unfit, descends And such beingn affections cultivates Amongst the inferior kinds".

Miss Shakespeare's hallowed name seems to have originated the following elegant but well deserved complument.

Miss frower, who was attited as a Swiss Peasant girl, was exhorted in an acrostic to betake herself home again to her Swiss cottage. We doubt not but that the wirer alluded to a certain building of that description at Treaghur, which makes us think that he must be a Barrackporean.

But in spite of all that we have said, though there were hosts of beautiful faces and gay, sumptuous dresses at the Victoria Ball, it lacked animation. People were contented to dress, and thought nothing of sustaining their parts, with the solitary exception of the two-pency post-man, to whose feats we have already alluded. If in this hasty sketch we have omitted to notice any, whom we ought to have registered more particularly, we must plead the lateness of the hour, and the attendant hurry, as an excuse. However, we have done our best and we have only now to add that we hope very soon to be present at another Victoria Ball.

The Hall was crowded—not less than 600 persons were present. The decorations were of a light and elegant character, well suited to the occasion, and did much credit to the taste of the Stewards and the artists who carried their arrangements into effect .- Bengal Hurkaru, January 16.

THEATRICALS.

OTHELLO,

I have read with much interest the articles in the papers on the subject of Othello. A discussion of the same nature, occurred a year or two ago between the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru and myself. That gentleman seemed willing at first to adopt the criticism of Coleridge; but he subsequently, with an editorial candour extremely rare, acknowledged, that on more mature consideration he was inclined to return to the general opinion that Shakespeare intended to disstrate the nature of the passion of jealousy in the character and conduct of the Moor. I partly agree with the opinions expressed in an article on this subject in the last number of the Literary Gazette, and especially do I second that portion of the argument which opposes a preceding writer's notion, (very ingeniously -maintained, however,) opinions in the Literary Leaves in an article on the play. I differ, however, on the material point, from the writer in the last number of this journal. He has, I think, greatly and unjustly lowered the character of Othello by representing him as a man naturally jealous. It seems to me that Shakespeare did not intend to give this tone to the mind of Othello, and that it was not his chief object to show how jealous disposition is ready to seize without original or just cause of suspicion upon trifles light as air, as confirmations strong as proofs of holy writ; but to exhibit the effect of the hideous vice on men of strong passions and fiery minds. When the poison of jea-lousy has once fairly entered the heart, the most trivial circumstances tend to stlengthen and confirm its infig. ence; but with such a man as Othello, the misery is not at first self-inflicted. The Moor was the very reverse that Shakespeare intended lago, and not Othello, to be the leading illustration of the ill effects of giving too In the words of Dr. Johnson, and boundless in his coneasy admittance to that " green ayad monater, which in the words of Dr. Johnson, and boundless in his coneasy admittance to that " green ayad monater, which fidence. Even lago, who " knew all qualities with such a mocks the meat it feeds on, "I have expressed similar learned spirit of fluman dealing," repeatedly acknow-

The Moor showbeit that I endure him not,— Is of a constant, loving, noble nature; And I date thin he'd prove to Desdemona A most dear husband.

And it is from a due consideration of the Moor's " free and open nature," that lugo is induced to depend for the purposes of his revenge upon the effect of such sub-tle insinuations as Othello, believing him to be honest, was com, elled to credit.

The Moor is of a free and open nature. That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so ; And will as easily be led by the nose, As asses are.

Othello had too much fire in his soul to suffer him to play the mean and dilatory and patient part of a man naturally suspicious, who is always lying in wait for opportunities to discover his own misery and dishonour, and who treasures up long and greedily the minute evidences that feed his hateful rassion. "Think'st thou," he exclaims-

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy, To follow still the changes of the moon With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt, Is once to be resolved.

When he is sent by the Senate on the expedition to Cyprus, with what perfect confidence he places his young and lovely wife in the charge of logo; and when Brabantio says

Look to her, Moor ; have a quick eye to see ; She has deceived her father, and may thee. What is his answer?

My life upon her faith!

And to show, out of his own mouth, how little he was inclined to insist upon a strict surveillance of his wife, or to build his feirs of her fidelity on trifles, let us quote part of his speech to lago even after that artful villain had poured the first drops of bitterness into Othello's cup. It is not the language of a man originally disposed to be mistrustfal.

' Tis not to make me jealous, To say-may wife is fair, feeds well, loves company, Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well; Where virtue is, these are more virtuous; Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt; For she had eyes, and chose me; no, lago; I'll see before I houbt: when I doubt, prove; And, on the proof, there is no more but this,-Away at once with love, or jealousy.

When a man is naturally disposed to include the passion of jealousy, never does he exhibit it more strongly than when he is first working his way into the affections of his mistress; and Othello from being a mere soldier," rude in speech and little blessed with the set phrase of peace," and having a complexion and cast of features that he was quite conscious were no generally attractive to the Venetian ladies, might have been excused some time anxiety repecting the possible triumph of his rivels. Her ather never supposed for a moment that his reception of Othello's visits would lead to so strange a match, and, when the event actually occurred he was so perplexed and bewildered, that he could only attribute it to supernatural arts.

She is abused, stelen from me, and corrupted By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks; For nature so preposterously to err,

Being not deficient, blind or lame of sense Sans witchcraft could not

And even the pert Emilia could not help expressing her surprize that Desdemona had forsaken so many noble matches on his account. In her generous passion at the ledges the generals trustfulness and high character of suspicions of the Moor in one of the latter scenes of the the man whom chartes. play, she boldly tells him to his face, that Desdemona was "but too fond of her most filthy hargain." Yet. notwithstanding Othello's manifest disadvantages as a lover and a lady's man, of which he was so fully conscious, Desdemona never seems to have discovered in him, until the poison infused by Iago had worked its effect, the slightest indication of jealousy. Even after the scene of the handkerchief, when Emilia asks if this man is not jealous, Desdemona answers with an exclamation that she "n'er saw thus before." In a preceding part of the same scene the following dialogue occurs.

Dez .- Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia? Emil. - I know not, Madam.

Des .- Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse. Full of cruzadoes. And but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jeulous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking.

Emil .- Is he not jealous?

Des .- Who, he ? I think the sun, where he was born Drew all such humours from him.

I repeat my opinion, that Othello was not naturally jealous, but on the contrary of a most trustful and generous disposition, and that Shukespeure seems to have intended to show, bow rapid and terrible are the effects of jealousy when it has once taken possession of a fiery and impassioned heart. His object, it appears, was not to display the petty and never-resting suspicions of a little mind, of a jealous, key-hole-peeping, Paul Pry, but to exhibit a fearful picture of the tempest and desolation, and dehrium into which its sudden admission may throw the noblest natures.

We have no right, whatever, to regard Othello in the light of a feeble-minded dupe. If he had not been affected by the evidence so artfully brought forward by Ingo, whom he looked upon as a zealous and disinterested friend, and whose good faith had never been suspected by himself or others, whose honesty in fact was proverbial. we might have fairly censured him for his blind and overweening confidence in his wife's con-tan y or his own power over her affections. He would in that case have almost deserved his dishonor. We ought not to forget that we are behind the scene, and know more than the unhappy Othelto himself the true characters and designs of the same circumstances as the Moor could have been proof against the consummate skill of such a master in devilish arts as the fiend lago. We sympathize with Othello's amazement when the light breaks in upon him and he discovers how completely he webeen deluded and destroyed by his powerful circumvention. When lago is brought before him, he looks to see if the is cloven-footed.

Othello-I look down towards his fect; but that's a fable: Ifthat thou be'est a devil, I cannot kill thee.

I could easily multiply extracts in support of my opinion; but perhaps the render might grow tred of the subject. I shall give but one more brief quotation and conclude. It is Othello's character from his own mouth, and I think it a true one.

> Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice; then must you speak Ofone, who loved not wisely, but too well; Of one, not ea-ily jealous, but being wrought, PERPLEXED IN THE EXTREME.

I ought and Mogize for the length of this article on a subject that has arready occupied so large a space in the columns of the Literary Gasette; but it is difficult to A check oneself in a discussion in which Shakespeare is the theme.

RIENZI.

Miss Mitford's Tragedy of Rienzi, was performed on Friday evening for the benefit of Mrs. Leach. play had never before been performed, and we think, had been little read in Calcutta. It is nevertheless one of the best Diamas that has been produced in these latter days, when the cry is echoed from north to south and from east to west, that the sun of dramatic inerature in England, has been obscured, never again to put forth They who only know Miss Minford by her country stories, and think of her as the placed, subdued writer of those sweet rustic domesticities which find then way into the hearts of all dwellers in the country and of very many town-bred folk, will marvel at the vigour both of conception and of diction, which we meet with every where in the Tragedy of Rienzi. The play 1full of energy, each character forcibly sustained and full of individuality, the interest unbroken, and many of the situations eminently dramatic. We doubt not but that most of our readers have perused Mr. Bulwer's admirable Romance, built up on the same historical basis. Miss Mitford was first in the field; but neither of the two authors, in pourtraying the character of Riensi, have It was Sir adhered very faithfully to recorded facts. Walter Raleigh, we think, who on hearing a tumuli beneath his chamber windows, despatched some of his domestics to learn the cause of it, and when they returned, one giving him one and another another account of the affray, he exclaimed," Ah! indeed, if I find it so dithcult to learn the true facts of incidents which happen at my own threshold, how littlereliance must I place in the records of events, which occurred centuries ago. is indeed the carest of accidents to meet with an impartial historian. Bulwer accuses Gibbon of having unnecessarily blackened the character of the last of the tubunes, and we think that we might accuse Mr. Bulwer of having unduly exalted it. But this is a peculiar characteristic of many of Bulwer's writings to make us sympathize with those who are more worth y of our execration and abhorrence-witness the novels of Paul Clifford and Eugene Aram and the character of Sir Reginald Glanvillar in Pelham. None, but a bigoted Tory, could use from the perusal of Bulwer's Rienzi without a warm, perhaps an enthusiastic admiration of the noble character therein pourtrayed; but we are sorry to say that the Rienzi of the Romance is far different from the Rienzi of History. The cotemporary biographer, who has generally received the credit of race impartiality inspires not the reider with that belief in the virtue and nobility of the Tribune which the author of Eugene Aram instils into our minds. We see nothing in Mr. Bulwer's Romance of the obese and bloated wine-hibbing debauchee. We see himponly as a hero and martyr, as pure in his private and in his public relations The Romance writer describes him too, as a man of gentle feeling, which assuredly he was not—first he was, even to a Brutus-like justice, and endowed with a lofty and towering, but not a refined, intellect. Some leven of the "sordid hostelry," which was his brithplace, clung to him throughout his career. Unselfish wa cannot believe him to have been; he loved the peo-ple because he was one of them; he hated the aristocra-cy because they had insulted him. The memory of these insults was ever rankling in his soul and goading him on to action. Revenge was his guiding principle. It was not pity, it was not justice, it was not the love of liberty; it was revenge which stimulated his dormant energies, and stirred up those resolves in his mind, which led to the great revolution of which the victim .- "Yes"-he says in the language of Miss Mitford's Tragedy,

> Yes, I've trod thy halls, Scorned and derided midst their ribald crew,

A licensed jester, save the lap and bella; '.

I have borne this—and I have force the death,
The unavenged that of a dear brother.
I seemed—I way, a brase, ignoffle slave.
What am I—peace I say what am I now
Head of this great re-public, chief of Rome;
In all but name her sovereign.

Even Bulwer, in spite of his admiration for the Pribune and all that he has said about patriorism, confesses in the very first chapter of his Romance, that it was revenge which first incited Rienzi to action. When the spear of the ruthless Colonna passed through the body of Cola's brother, loud were the cries of Cola for justice. "See ye, Sirs, he was but too gentle; and they will not give us justice because his murderer was a noble and a Colonna. And this gold too, gold for a brother's blood! Will they not," and the young min's eyes glared like fire—"will they not give us justice? I time shall show!" So saying he bent his head over the corpse; his his muttered as with some prayer or invocation, and then rising, his face was as pale as the dead beside him; but it was no longer pale with gree!

"From that bloody clay and that inward prayer Cola di Rienzi rose a new being. With his young brother died his own youth. But for that event the future Liberator of Rome might have been but a dreamer, a scholar, a poet—the peaceful iival of Petrarch, a man of thoughts not deeds. But from that time all his faculties, energies, fancies, genius, became concentrated to a single point, and pations in, before a vision, leapt into the life and vigour of a passion, lastingly kindled, atubbornly hardened, and awfully consecrated—by revenge."

This is historical, and both the Dramatist and the Romance writer have availed themselves of this pathetie incident in Cola Rienzi's life, making such frequent allusion to it in their respective works, that the Pribune seems to think far more of revenging his brother's blood than of liberating his fallen fellow-countrymen. The latter consideration appears more like an afterthought a means -a sort of appendage to his plan of revenge. It was his scheme to crush the aristocracy; by crushing the aristocracy he consummated his revenge and at the same time he liberated the people. "Accade," writes the contemporary historian, "che uno suo frato fu ucciso, e non ne fu fatta ven? etta di sua morte : non lo potèo a jutare; pensa lungo mano rendicare 'l sanque di suo frate; pensa lungo mano dirizzare la cettate di Roma mulo guidata." Miss Mitford, in the second act of her fragedy, wherein Rienzi addresses the multitude thus beautifully in the person of the Liberator, alludes to this exciting cause-

—I that speak to ye—

I had a brother once, a gracious boy

Full of all gentleness, of calinest hope—

Of sweet and quiet joy—oh! how I loved

That gracious boy!—younger by fifteen years,
Brother at once and son! In one short hour

The pretty, harmless boy was slain! I saw

The coree, the mangled corse, and when I cried

For vengeance—rouse ye Romans! rouse ye slaves!

Have ye brave sons? look in the next fierce brawl

To see them live, torn from your arms, distained, Dishonoured—and if ye dare call fox justice—

Be answered by the lash.

The sudden breaking off from the narrative of his wrongs to the venement outburst of "rouse ye Remans, rouse ye slaves" is peculiarty fine, and at the same time highly a graffer tic. He had gone through, with the words of his part, he must comprehended, fully com-controlled feeling, the history of his brother's death, prehended, the individuality of the character he atbut when he came to that part of the narrative, where he was about to tell of the malls he himself received, when he called aloud for "justice," his indignation arishs at an excess wholf he has no longer powerto moderate, he connot tell of the cutting words which were spoken, and the contemptuous acts were done unto him, by the proud nobles; the memory of these things lashes his soul into a whirlpool of incontrollable passion, and he breaks of into a wild cry for vengeance vengoance upon the oppressors. If we have mistaken the true meaning of this passage, Miss Mitford and our readers must forgive us.

They who only know Rienzi in Mr. Bulwer's Romance, and have delighted (as who has not?) in the stirring scenes of that touching story, will marvel at seeing so little in the drama, with which they have been previously acquainted. They will miss Nina (what hosts of pleasant memories that name awakens in our mind)-they will miss Nina altogether, and they will see Adrian Colonna under the title of Angelo Colonna, but oh! not half so angelic as the Colonna in Bul-wer's Romance. And Irene, the sister of Rienzi. they will not see in the play; but in her place is Claudia, Riegzi's daughter, and the buile of Angelo Colonna. Mr. Bulwer, in the prefaces to his Romance, pays this fine tribute to the genius of Miss Mittord, " I cannot conclude without rendering the tribute of my humble praise and homage to the versaule and gifted author of the beautiful tragedy of Rienzi. Considering that our hero be the same, considering that we had the same materials from which to choose our several stones, I trust that I shall be found to have little, if at all, trespassed upon ground previously occupied. With tive of Rienzi and one of the antagonist party, which makes the plot of Miss Mitford's Tragedy, and is little more than an episode in my romance, having slight effect on the conduct and none on the fate of the hero, I am not aware of any resemblance between the two works. And even the incident I could easily have removed, had I deemed it the least adviseable. But where there is so much it were an honour to imitate; it would be almost a discredit had I nothing that resembled." And if we consider the difficulties, under which the dramabst labours, but which the novellist has not to encounter, we should find it difficult to determine between the respective ments of the Tragely and the Romance of Rienzi The very nature of a romance gives a wise scope to the writer for illustrating the times, in which he lays the scene of his story, but a dramatist can scarcely be descriptive, and not at all discursive, and must confine himself to one particular epoch, unless he violates the unities most flagitiously. The career of Rienzi is better described in the Novel, but we doubt whether we can say the same of the character.

Thus far had we written, with the exception of a few introductory words, before witnessing the performance of Riensi on Friday night. We have spoken at some length of the play; it now becomes our duty to speak of the payers. We are rul, sorry that we cannot do this in terms of very flattering culogium. We love to praise far better than to censure, and Juder damnatur cum nocens absolutur assuredly is not our motto; but praise becomes of little value, it is forthcoming upon every occasion, and We should be right glad to see a bolder tope of criticism introduced into our Indian literature. Nothing checks the advance of intellectual improvemean so much as indiscriminate praise. We shall never me really good acting upon the Calcutta stage until gamelemen are told when they play badly, especially, gentlemen who can play better if they please, but whom too much praise has rendered careless -- careless from overconfidence. It is not enough that an actor should know lof the hero, but to the entire representation of the play.

temps to embody; and this demands study, without which, be the natural talents of the actor what they may, he is sure to be proccipitated into a failure. We do not infer that the favorite amateur who represented Rienzi on Friday night did not understand the character of the hero; we think that he understood it very well and that he was throughout the Tragedy the very Rienzi which we have depicted at the commencement of this article; but he was not Miss Mitford's Rienzi. He may have studied, and we doubt not but that he did, the character of Rienzi as pourtrayed in the pages of Ginhon and the co-temporary historians, but we can hardly think that he studied Miss Mutford's Tragedy, with any great degree of attention. We have no great objection to his preferring the authority of the historian to that of the drainatist, especially as in doing so his opinion contendes most entirely with our own, nor should we object to his calling in his historical knowledge to aid him in his stage representations, if the words that he is called upon to speak in the Tragedy could possibly have proceeded from the historical Rienzi-from the Rienzi as performed the other night. The words spoken, and the manner of speaking them, were in almost every instance utterly at We saw two Rienzi's throughout the drama instand of one in lividual character. Young did not act this part in the least degree like Mr. ----, and Young was its original personator; in lead, we believe it was written for him. We were disappointed; for we had studied the play and there were sundry favorite processes which we had marked, anxiously looking forward to their delivery with a vague impression of how they ought to be delivered, partly derived from our own be saledge of the subject, and partly from our recollection of Charles Young ; but we missed almost all these points. For example, in the passage to which we have alluded above in terms of especial commendation, when Riegzi is telling the history of his wrongs and breaks off abruptly from his narrative into an enigetic appeal to his fellow citizens to bestir themselves from their slavish indolence, Mr. ---, instead of pausing in the middle of i'e line and changing entirely the tones of his voice from the broken accents of sorrow awakened by the memory of the brother's death to the lond outburst of fiery re-dignation and revengeful craving at the thoughts of the tojunes they had put upon him, ian on with the line as though there had been no stop at all, no sudden break. ing off, no sentence unfinished, no change of feeling. delivering the latter portion of the line precisely in the same voice in which he commenced it --

- And when I cried

For vengeance-Rouse ye Romans! Rouse ye slaves! became

And when I cried,

'For vengeance, rouse ye Romans, rouse ye slaves, as though the whole line had been a portion of the same sentence.

The scene with Claudia (Mrs. Leach) after the condemnation of Angelo Colonna, was far the best in the whole Tragedy; indeed a portion of it was admirably played. We did see a handkerchief on two uplifted seemingly to wipe away a tear; indeed, we acknowledge, that though old play-goers ourselves, and upon all oc-cusions as worldly and callous-hearted as most people, we felt certain creepings of the flesh which told us that our feelings were nertowed to rather an unwonted degree. If the whole tragedy had been acted as well as this scene, we should have thought Rienzi a much better performance than Othello, as we now pronounce it to We do not allude to the character have been worse.

We need say nothine of the Messrs. Ryckman; they an audience consists almost excluding entry well-played as they always do, deliciously; but of the Farce born and educated, and we show the effect of the pure all things what overacted, but it went off heavily enough—it not only measured but in companies the pure of the pure all things what overacted, but in companies the pure of the pure all things are pure. But this is no excuse whatever for indelically. only wearied, but in some instrances it disgusted us. With all submission to the gentlemen who have the management of these things, we think it would be as divers passages of the farce, which in our opinion, and we are not very squeamish, were exceedingly indelicate and low. It should be remembered at these delivered a valedictory address, written, we believe, by Capt. McNaughten. We have not seen it, but as far a great portion of the ladies of alcutta are gathered as we could judge from hearing it delivered, it was together within the walls of the Chowringhee Theatre; exceedingly well-written and appropriate; as good it should likewise be remembered that here we have and as little commonplace as it is possible to make no "gods" to whose vicious appetites unwholesome these addresses got up for an especial occasion, where food is to be administered, and therefore we do not see the subject of all others is the most hackneyed and any occasion for preserving these indecencies of an the least poetical. MRS. LEACH'S FAREWELL.

Mrs. Leach took her Farewell Benefit last night to f the fullest house we ever remember to have seen at the quite a la Nicholson. It struck us by the by (having Chowlinghee Theatie. Exclusive of the admirable se- handled a Rudall and Rose in our day) that his fluid lections she had made, the simple and much to be lamented circumstance of her last appearance was ample incentive for so full an assemblage. The house was literally crammed and more than once were apprehensions entertained by the denzens below of the unceremoniousodescent, per smash, of the Gods above. Those, however few, that were not present on this very interesting occasion, have to regret the tichest treat ever afforded to the bistrionic would of India.

Although we have had the pleasure of seeing Moster Walter in a great variety of characters, we never saw him in finer feather and more at home than he was last night. The maintenance throughout of the fiery spirit and majestic deportment of the ambitious and the noble Tubune, his seditions address to the rabble, his subsequeut defiance of their defection, his natural tenderness at the anguish of his daughter, &c., &c., &c., were of them elves sufficient to stamp him an actor of the highest class, and evinced a strict study of the very arduous part be had undertaken. This is but a cursory notice of one of the perfectest pieces of acting we ever witnessed on the boards of our Diury, and we can only repeat our consolatory comment to the absentees that they lost, that which we would not have lost for twenty catarrhs and all the untellable tin' of Crossus!

Mrs. Leach, the elfin spirit, who by the magic of her matchless attractions and the tender appeal of her last appearance, summoned this marvellous congregation of Calcuttaites, was as usual, au fait throughout and more than once elicited the most rapturous and deserved applause, particularly in the graphic scene of Angelo Colonna's execution and her fall which, by the same token, we observed very nearly capsized her papa, albeit against all the scientific rules of gravitation, which, we have read in sundry abstrace Encyclopædias, maintain, he may, we calculate (as Janathan would say) safely that the lighter body is hauled down by the heavier! rely on his future Thespic prosperity. utterly incomprehensible. It is a mistaken notion to Charlotte (although a character by no means callulated imagin, that such travesties tell, and if he would take for the display of sock and buskin genius, if our readers our humble advice he would reform altogether that will allow us the masculine adjective) was in her useal system of ill-conceived pleasantry.

The elder Ryckman's Non Piu Mosta, was played was a singularly small one, counter-balanced peradventure by the hands longitude of his digits which was equally conspicuous, his style of playing being, what from Hunter would call, high actioned! The suonila Tromba of his son was decidedly the best spicimen of The exquisite piano forte playing we ever heard. maintenance of the air through the prestissimo variations and the astonishing velocity with which he rattles his fingers, which are also happily Brobbig agian!) over the keys, is perfectly wonderful. We venture to perdict that he may confidently rely on his soon attaining the very apex of his calling.

Love a la mode was very creditably done by all therein engaged.

Sir Archy was very good in his keen sarcasms although his Scotch, we thought, was far from genuine. Sir Callaghan O'Bralleghan labored slightly under the same disadvantage, but with that exception (and it is no easy matter, we beg to assure our readers en passant, for your John Bull to come the Tipperary) got through his part in right, good style, Master Modus (as was his wont, in days of yore, when last we saw him) made a very happy (improvisatore) allusion to the heartless apathy which has of late been shamefully evinced on the subject of the Wellington testimonial.

The Beau Mordicai of "a debutant", was a very succossful performance indeed. With such an inauguration was but so so and strutted the boards backwards and What Ursini meant by making a sort of absurd clown at Astley's for our taste. His rescuant support badings of a serious part, by uttering words in a comic has a deuced hard mouth and requires to be awfully hard strain that were evidently intended to be tragic, is to us, held in some of his dramatic handicaps! Mrs. Take the display of sock and buskin genius, if our readers forwards too often and too much after the fashion of a.

We continue less to the painful portion of this our hasty confique, in so our indulgent readers will deign to dub it.

Malgré the immense crowd, the strictest-silence was preserved (even by those Bautian blockheads who delight at times in disturbing others and making themselves assumely conspicuous by their rude, untimely laughter and their imaginary wit) when Mrs. Leach came forward to falter her valedictory address which couched in the most apposite and touching terms, was delivered with the intensest pathos. There was no acting there, but the pure ebullition of the tenderest emotions of the heart, kindled by that relentless corroling and, alas! mevitable word FAREWELL.

MRS LEACH'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

Though oft-times here, with anxious, faltering heart. I've stood before you, in an acted part; While yet the mind (by after kindness nerv'd) Still fear'd the consure which it know desery'd And e'er, beneath your kindness, grown secure, I banish'd doubt, and felt ope's visions sure : Yet never, even in the earliest hours, Of my young trials in these Thespie bowers, Have I a task so hard and mournful known, As this-where all the affliction is my own. (Not, like the mimick'd gitef, alas! to cease, When the fall'n curt un ends the fictious piece) As this, to speak that severing word of pun, Which breaks a charm I ne'er can know again. In you I've found, through many a happy year, The fostering guilding of my stage career ; The pations warm and constant in my cause, Forbearing blame, but lavish of applause; Whose cheering smiles each humble effort paid, And cast each tault (of many !) in the shade.

Can I, then, hence, with light, ungrateful breast. Unutter'd thanks, and feelings all repress'd, Depart? from these our own dear Drury's walls, Where to the last your praise upon me falls?
Oh, no !-oh, no ! though cold and faint appear, The words which bear my anguish to your ear; Not therefore less my sadden'd heart ov'iflows, Not therefore le-s will memory fond repose On your long-granted kin lness, which has cast Its blessing o'er me, ev'n unto the last. Where'er I drag this health-deserted frame, Unchang'd by clime, my heart shall rest the same; Shall nurse the gratitude so feebly told, Which time shall not impair, nor age make cold; And yield, if on me e'er grait's blight descends, The whisper'd solace, -- 'there you still have friends.' That spell shall aweetly every fear allay, Shall check despondence, when it else might sway; To scenes of joy (and such may be in store) From warm remembrance, and one rapture more; Hope's precious balm to fate's dark hour supply, Or chase the tear from sorrow's trembling eye. But wherefore, linguing, in your presence keep, With woe fraught breast, and struggling not to weep? Why check the word which must at last be spoken? Cling to the link which must to night be broken? O! generous friends ! - Oh! patrons, firm and dear Deem not my words, though feeble, insuccie. The heart o'er burden'd finds all language fail, And feelings still o'er eloquence prevail. But you, with lement judgment to the last, Will not pronounce me thankless for the past; Not turn, with harsh suspicion on your brow, From the spoil'd child of your indulgance new; Whose lips and tears, heart-prompted, weakly tell, The bitter pang with which she sighs - Farewell!

SUICIDES IN CENTRAL INDIA.

We have been favoured by Major Sleeman, with a dred and fifty thousand. Suicide is not the result of record kept by his orders of the number of suicides climate but of morals. Friend of India. committed in the district under his charge, in the years 1634 and 35. The reports which were continually brought to him of the repeated acts of self-destruction, made him naturally anxious to discover the cause of the unusual frequency of this practice, and he directed the native officers to ascertain and place on rehe cord, whenever it could be discovered, the reason by which these victims had been actuated. It is singular to observe on how slight occasions many of these acts of suicide have been perpetrated ; sometimes for an attack of dysentery, at other times, for a pain in the intestines, and semetimes, through grief for bereavement. It is also worthy of notice, that out of forty cases that are thus reported, thirty were women.

England was for hiny years considered to be distinguished above other countries, for the number of suicides cummitted in 11, and this was attributed to the gloom of our climate. But those statistical researches which have given the present age so peculiar a character, have served to dispel this idea; and it is now ascertained that the number of suicides in France, where the timate is so much more propitions and cheerful than in England, is greater in proportion to the population. But starther corroboration of the fact, that climate has little to do with such acts, is found in the report we now making which in the second control of th publish, which, in a climate, directly the reverse of England, gives us forty suicides in a population of two hun- | quence of a dispute with her son.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.

Draft Memorial laid before the Meeting on the 1st of must otherwise have spent the remainder of their days in India, some through loss of fortune, from disastrous

To THE HON'BLE THE COURT OF DIRECTORS.

Sheweth-That the despatch of your Hon'ble Court addressed to the Governor-General in Council, and dated 3d May last, has been laid before the subscribers the Civil Service Annuity Fund, at their annual setting, having been communicated by the Government to the Managers of the Fund for that especial purpose, and thus has been printed and circulated to the Service.

That in this despatch your Hon'ble Court has destated your approval and confirmation of the rules pass ed by the Service to give effect to to the measures of indulgence towards the Service sanctioned by the orders of your Hon'ble Court, dated 27th May, 1835; but your Hon'ble Court repeat, the injunction that the rules so passed shall not be extended beyond three years without your further spk isl sanction.

Your memorialits, on the part of the whole body of the Civil Servants, subscribers to the fund, whom they represent, beg to offer to your Hon'ble Court their humble thanks for the consideration manifested for the suterests and wishes of your Servants in : these orders.

Through the effect of the provision made for permitting the finirement of Servants on their completing one quarter only instead of one half of the value of the annuities, no less than fifty of your senior Civil Servants will be commercial failures, others through disappointment and tardy promotion in their career of service, and many, it need not be concealed, through early improvidence and debts contracted under temptations that no longer exist.

Your Hon'ble Court has benefited directly from these retirements in the immediate relief they have given to the finances of this presidency; for a large proportion of the Servante who have so relinquished or are about to relinquish office, have been in the receipt of personal allowances and augmented salaries not continued to their successors; and, in many instances, a saving of the entire estary has been effected by abolition of the office on the vacancy occurring. Moreover, through the li-heral provision thus afforded, your Hon'ble Court has been relieved from the claim which your Commercial Servants of this presidency, whose career had been confined to that department so as to unfit them for high offices in other lines of service, must indubitably have possessed of your liberality, consequent on the abrupt discontinuance of your trade in India. But the most ir portant benefit of all has resulted, from the means and the inducement afforded by this more liberal provision to meritorious Servents work out by their unremitted exercions to relinquish important official situations, the duties of which they were from infirmity no longer while to perform. able to perform ړدن " healthan fifty of your sonior Civil Servants will he . The large number of retirements occasioned by these analyted together independence; the sisjority of whem measures, has not, however, had the effect that might have been anticipated in accelerating the premotion of Junior Servants; owing to the number of situations abolished, or filled by persons from other professions. To the working branches of the Service, therefore, there has yet been little gain in present position, and if the rule for completing only a quarter of the value of the annuity on retirement, is to cease altogether at the end of the third year, there will be none in future prospect, from the measures of relief devised by your Hon'ble Court.

Your memorialists being thoroughly convinced that the rule in question may safely be continued with advantage to the fund and without imposing new burthens on the finances of your Hon'ble Court, and feeling strongly the inevitable consequences that will follow from itssudden ce-sation are emboldened again to urge upon your Hon'ble Court their humble request that the present order for the rule to cease after it shall have been applied to the annuities of 1838, may be re-considered.

Your memorialists would submit that the effect of been felt injuriously : Junior Servants whose due period of service and residence has just been completed, have hurried forward their applications and have retired without the excuse of failing health, and before their accumulation of means was properly advanced upon a calculation that the annuity at a quarter value now is the same thing as one taken two years hence under the condition of completing the half value. Thus the extra inducement offered within the period fixed producing anticipated applications from Junior Servants, the whole number of annuities is likely to be prematurely taken, and several Seniors will be deprived of their just provision. when in ordinary course the period of their retirement shall arrive. The regular current of promotion, which, while all are confident of obtaining the retiring provision when their turn shall come, flows evenly with contentment to all, threatens to become unnecessarily deranged, and the advantage conceded instead of being a fairly earned and certain provision, will be the prize of harry eagerness, and a source of contentious jealousy and euvious feeling.

If your Hon'ble Court had graciously permitted the rule to stand until stopped by a vote of the Service, the annuities granted on improved terms, instead of being seized with greedy avidity so as to foreaten a deficiency to meet the applications, which your memorialists at present see reason to apprehend, would have remained for distribution amongst your Servants in the order of their being ready for retirement, and the measure would have been much more extensively beneficial without injury or loss of any kind to your Hon'ble Court.

Your memorialists solicit attention to the following brief reference to the principle on which the Annuity Fund was established as affording incontrovertible proof of the ability of the Fund to provide its annuities on the terms of quarter payment.

Your Hon ble Court is aware that the prospective estimate, upon which the assurance of the stability of the Fund is founded, assumes an annual subscription from the Sewice of about three lakhs and a quarter (the real average has exceeded three lakhs and a half,) and a like sum being feckoned as donation from your flon!ble Court, the sum of six lakhe and a half of sicca rupees was thus annually to be provided; but in order to turnish nine annu-Ties per annum, an income somewhat exceeding nine lakhs was necessary, the calculation was therefore so made, that through fines to the extent of half the value of the anauties, a capital in shape of unappropriated ba-lance should be provided in the early years of the institution, from the interest of which at six per cent., added to a permanent sum of about one lake from fines, the remaining sum of two lakes and a half of sices rupees

In the first ten years of the Func, the expenditure for the purchase of annuities, instead of thing, the lakes per annum, was less than half the thing of the paucity of retirements. Consequently the accumulation, instead of arising from fines, and proceeding in the fair estimated, was a net saving out of the income from subscription. tion and donation, and on the first May, 1836, it smouated to the enormous sum of Co. Rs. 74,02,874, or Sa. Rs. 69, 40, 195, exclusive entirely of the values set apart yearly as equivalent to the annuities furnished.

Your Hon'ble Court, upon representation of this condition of the Fund, and of the unfortunate circumstances which had combined to prevent the due retirement of your Bengal Se vants, allowed annuities to be granted for three years on the terms of quarter payment. But with due loresight, and in order to secure the stability of the Fund, it was ordered, that before making this appropriation out of the inordinately large balance that had accumulated, one-third of the value of over-due annuities, together with any that might remain unclaimed at the end fixing a date for the cessation of the rule, has already of the three years, should at once be added to the capital of the Fund, the interest of which was required to make good the annual income of future years,

Through the operation of this order the sum of Co.'s Rs. 39,81, 301, or Sa. Rs. 36,69,969 only out of the above stated large accumulated balance was set apart to provide annuities on the new terms, leaving Co.'s Rs. 34,21,573, or Sa Rs. 32,70,226 still available as a permanent capital yielding interest in addition to the other sources of income.

According to the accouts laid upon the table on the 1st per account, $56,75,082 Deduct remainder of the appropriated 35,81,301

January 1838, this balance on the 1st May 1837, was increased to 44,60,763 Co's Rs. or 41,81,255 Sa. Rs. from which six lakes being deducted to supply the additional six annuities present year, there still re-mains Sa. Rs. 35,00,000, yielding interest in the perpetuity. At six per cent. this reserve will give 2,10,000, ticca rupees to be added to the subscriptions a donation yielding between six lakhs and a half or seven lakhs. The Fund, has thus an assumed income from 114 present sources of very nearly nine lakes, and as the balance is still increasing the income will very shortly exceed that amount.

This being premised, it must be obvious to your Hon'ble Court, that the question as to the ability of the Fund to continue the rule sanctioned for three years, under which a reduced number of annuities are granted on the condition of completing payment of one quarter of the value must resolve itself purely into a question, whether an income amounting at present to very nearly nine laklis of Rupees, and expected shortly to exceed that amount, is equal to the providing of the number of annuities on such terms.

But nine lakhe of sicca rupees is the full average value of nine annuatics, which might be purchased with the sum, without the Fund's demanding any arther payment from retiring Servants. The rule for completing half the value was adopted, first in order to admit Senior Servants from the date of the Fund's being established, and that their payments might from the required capital, and secondly, for equalization of the benefit yielded by the Fund, and in order to provide a perpetual source of income, then deemed in his pensable to secure annunies in sufficient number. If, however, the interest of the capital of the Fund yields a sufficiency of inco to provide the full amount required, the fines mas dispensed with as a source of income, and by lower amount than one half may salely be assumed as the amount to be made good by the setting Servante. The question therefore of the Fund's ability to continue to per analym should be secured at the end of the 25th year. Inishing even nine annuities, on the quarter page terms, resolves self to a simple calculation, whether, the refunds to the fortunate Servants whose subtherefunds to the number of annuities permanently to ax per annuin scriptions exceed fide and the value, are likely to equal, fall or two-thirds of the original number, the values of the tal rule to the present date has shown an excess of fines above retunds amounting to 1,17,532 Co's. Rs.

But your memorialists are not prepared to draw from this cucumstance the conclusion, that the subscriptions of retiring members will ordinarily fall short of that proportion, more especially when the Fund shall have been of that duration, that servants will ordinarily have subscribers for the whole period of their service. Although therefore your memorialists are convinced that the Fund may safely grant annuities to the extent of its fixed income on the terms of requiring no further payment in the way of fine from retiring Servants, and the accessity of making good, a quarter value may fitly and advantageously be applied as a limit only to the beneht any Servant may take from the Fund, the refund of excess subscriptions above that proportion ought not to stand as part of any permanent rule of the institution | Courser, Jan. 3.

> Your memorialists therefore beg submissively to solicit from your Hon'ble Court, not that the rule as passed by the Service may be allowed to stand, under which only six annuties can be granted annually on the terms of quarter payment with retund of excess of sub-criptions, but that you will permit the Fund togrant annumes not exceeding nine in number to the extent of the annual fixed income of the Fund from sub-criptions, your donation, and interest on the fixed capital, under the condition of requiring retiring Sevants to make good to the extent of a quarter of the value of their annuities; but receiving no refund of any excess in the amount of their subscriptsons, in case these should at the time of retirement with interest exceed the annuies

STEAM MEMORIAL, &c

Cantrol intended to be proposed at the public meeting on Thrusday morning next, is published for general information:

THE RESPECTIVE MEMORIAL, &C.

Surwith,-That your memorialists, under date 5tl. March, one thousand, eight hundred and thuty-six, adin conjunction with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company, to establish a regular Steam the Read Sea.

That your memorialists very gratefully acknowledge Board, in having in a letter, dated the 17th October, 1836, tages themselves, or to the respective costs at which through your Secretary, to the address of the Howble each is attainable.

Sur Edward Ryan, Chief Justice of Fort William in Bengal, who signed the memorial on their behalf, acknowledged the receipt of the memorial, and dectared that the subject should receive that consideration to which its great importance and the high respectability of the parties subscribing it were fairly entitled.

That since the ate of the above memorial, your me-President of your Right Hon'ble Board to the Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed in June

The following draft of a memorial to the Board of the alternatives proposed in the 5th Resolution of the Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1834, which left to the joint consideration of the Home Go, vocament and East India Company " whether the comnumeation should be in the first instance from Bombay. nom Calcutta, or according to the combined plan of the Bengal Steam Committee."

That your memorialists, sensible of the advantages Adiesed a memorial to your Right Hon'ble Board, pray-derivable from the establishment of a frequent expeditions ing that certain resolutions of the Select Committee of and regular Steam Communication Immited to Bombay, the Commons, which sat in July, 1834, recommending adopted as it has been by the President of your Right the immediate establishment of a Steam Communication. That your memorialists have the less hesitation in pressing upon the consideration of your Right Hon'ble Board the expediency of the immediate extension of the communication to the other presidencies in cosequence of perceiveing, from the statement rendered by the Presalent of your Right Hon'ble Board to the Select Committee of the Hon'ble the House of Commons, that the morialists understand from a statement made by the Hon'ble the Court of Directors have reserved the question of such extension for consideration after trial has been fairly made of the limited communication, and last, to enquite into the best means of establishing a have further recommended to the Right Hon'ble the communication by steam with India by way of the Governor-General to send either the Atalanta or Bere-Read Sea, that the Hon'ble Court have concluded an nice round from Cricuma to Madras, thence to Ceylon arrangement with Her Majesty's Government for the and thence to Socoma and up the Read Sea, with a view salubishment of a monthly steam communication be to ascertain practically what objection there may be to arrangement with 1162 Majesty's Government for the and thence to soom and up in the majesty's Government for the and thence to soom and objection there may be to ascertain practically what objection there are as a section of the practical practically what objection there are as a section that obj towards the limited communication.

That your memorialists regard this reservation on the part of the Hon'ble Court of the consideration of the ulterior extension of the communication to the three presiden les, and the recommendation to the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General, to cause an experimental voyage to be made from Calcutta, as a recognition, by the Hon'ble Court, of the superiority of the extended over the limited communication; and the President of your Right Honorable Board having expressly declared his opimon in layor of such extended communication, your memorialists therefore deem it to be the less necessary to dwell on that superiority. They would, however, briefly state, that under the restriction to Bombay the advantages of the communication to the rest of India, beyond the more speedy conveyance of correspondence, and that limited as to size, are of little value, from Calcutta, between which place and Europe by far the most extended intercourse obtains. Passengers can never be sure of reaching Bombay in time for the steamer; and your memorralists would respectfully observe, that it is chiefly from mutual personal intercourse that the benefits and advantages contemplated by the Hoa' ble Court of Directors in their despatch to the Government; of Bombay under date the 14th March, 1834, must

That, as regards the intercommunication between the side of India, and especially the Supreme Government, the confinement of the communication to Bombay, must limit the correspondence to short letters consisting merely of general heads of information on the one hand and a monthly steam communication with the three presidencies, the minutest details of the several Governments, authorities at home with a regular connected series of fully detailed perfect information of all proceedings throughout all India, in accordance with the grand desidetatum as declared by Mr. Peacock, in his evidence before the select committee of the House of Commons . viz. "In time of war expeditious communication is adviseable; in time of peace regularity is the thing and perject knowledge when we have ait; if we have a regular communication and imperfect knowledge occasional expedition will not make up for it."

That your memorialists refrain from enlarging further on the florious incalculable mutual advantages which must arise to the two countries by approximation in the nost ample form of which it is capable; and rather actives themselves to urging on your Right Hon'ble Board to concur with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in the immediate establishment of the communication to the three presidencies on the most enlarged and liberal scale; worth, at once of the two countries, and of the prospects of real good, which such a communication, so established, hold out not merely to India but to the whole of Eastern Asia.

That it appears to your memorialists that no experimental voyage can be necessary to establish the practi-

Sea, to whom this purpose of establishing the communication to Bombay alone was known, recommended, expressly with reference to such extension, a continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company; where steam navigation cacate so regularly and secure-ly carried on as in India; where from the regularly with which extension, moreover, appeared to the Committee perfectly comparible with the arrangements in progress word ward to the intended port without lear in the intervented the limital company step. mediate time o. a change of wind.

> That referring to the declared opinion of the Select Committee of the House of Commons to the effect that the more extended system of communication is perfectly comparible with the arrangement in progress for time limited communication to Bombay, your memorialists would observe that this compatibility could be much more easily and advantageously applied, if the arrangements for the whole measure were in progress simultance ously, than if those for the extension are left out of consideration in the arrangements for the limited commumication; because it may be found that arrangements sufficient for the latter may not be so for the former, whence it might be necessary, at some sacrifice to remodel the establishment prepared for the limited communication.

> That your memorialists observe from the evidence of Mr. Peacock, before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, that the overland postage of the letters sent from all other parts of India to Bombay for steam conveyance is considered as an indemnity to the East India Company towards re-imbursement of one-half of the charge of conveyance of the mails between Alexandria and Bombay.

That the individuals residing in Calcutta and its neigh-Home Authorities and the Presidencies on the eastern bourhood send and receive very nearly one-third of the whole number of letters that pass between England and India, notwithstanding which if it were impracticable to distribute letters from England by steam vessels by any other means than through Bombay, of course your instructions on the other; while by the establishment of memorialists could not complain of the necessary charge for the conveyance of their letters between Calcutta and that place; but when the British Legislature, with recorded in the proceedings of the Governments, as well characteristic liberality in cases of transmission of core as in those of the several boards, could be conveyed respondence, has limited the postage of a single letter Home monthly as they occurred, within 60 days of their to 1s. from the Red Sea to a any port in the East transmission from India; thus furmishing the ruling "Indies", your memorialists do consider it to be unreasonable and unfair that they should be compelled to contribute to the means of transmissien to Bombay only, by an additional payment of fifteen annas or 1s 93d.; that the inhabitants of Madras and its neighbourhood are in like manner subject to this unreasonable impost in the reduced amount of the overland postage to that place. In fact your memorialists submit that by the restriction to Bombay the intended liberality of the legislature of Great Britain and the consequent advantage of the multiplication of correspondence is shut out from the inhabitants of Calcutta and Madras and from others residing within two or three days dawk distances, involve ing, your memorialists venture to assume, nearly if not quite the half in number of all the letters dispatched trom India.

That such unreasonable and unfair impost necessarily must continue until the communication is extended according to the prayer of your memorialists, and your memorialists ventured to hope that even under this view alone your Right Hon'ble Board will see the expedience and justice of at once extending the communication to the three presidencies, especially when, in addition to the above heavy tax on their correspondence, your memorialists as well as the inhabitants of Madras and its neigh. bourhood, are unable to despatch by the regular dawk cability of the communication being carried on monthly to Bombay for conveyance to England by a steamer at from all the presidencies of India, due attention being whatever cost, or however important the occasion met weight; in the weight than of the configuration of the weight than of the configuration. The state of the configuration of the configur is estimated it will take 15 or 16 days.

That your memorialists firmly believe that until such extended communication, as that now prayed for, is established an almost universal dissatisfaction will prevail throughout India especially as Her Maje-ty's midisterhave, through the Lords of Treasury and the particular ministerial authority for the affans of India, the President of your Right Hon'ble Board, expressly declared their unqualified concurrence in the now repeated anxious wish and desire of your memorialists and of India generally; while the evidence lately taken before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, cannot fail still further to satisfy your memorialists, and the people of India in general, of the justice, sound policy, and expediency of at once establishing a regular and expeditious steam communication between England and the several presidencies on a scale adequate to the growing wants of India in her relations with Great Britain.

That your memorialists therefore most earnestly and respectfully pray that your Right Hon'ble Roard will, in cenjunction with the Hon'ble the Court of Ducctors, forthwith establish such a steam communication between England and India as may give public satisfiction and fulfil, what has been admitted by the highest authority connected with the government of British India to be the "just expectations of the people both of England and of India.

CAPTAIN GRINDLAY'S EXPLANATIONS.

To C. B. GREENLAW, EFQ.

Secretary to the New Pengal Steam Fund. Sin,-I have to arknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 1st May, 1837, enclosing a resolution passed by the committee of Calcutta at a meeting held on that day,

As I trust that by this time my constituents in (alcutta entertain a feeling with regard to my labours very different from that which is expressed in the resolution which you have transmitted, I might perhaps be justified in abstaining from any comment upon it, and trusting to the slow, but generally certain effect of time to secure me justice.

The adoption of this course, however, might not be free from the appearance of discespect, and for this reason I think it necessary to make a few explanatory remarks.

In the first place I must observe, that the resolution is based upon an assumption that is incorrect. It is assumed that I have not advocated the extended plan of steam communication, and for this imaginary neglect the penalty of the disapprobation of my constituents is to be inflicted. I cannot but regret, and not less on account of those who passed the resolution than of him who is the object of it, that a little more attention was not previously given to the chole tenor and course of my proceedings, and also that the great principle of justice was not adhered to, which requires that a man should be heard before he is condended. Without affording me an opportunity of explaining such parts of my conduct as my constituents might deem to stand in need of explanation, I receive the most painful extession of disapprobation which it was in their power · to convey.

That the infliction might be rendered as galling a-possible, it is somewhat operatatiously announced in the public journals of India, and communicated to be, any document expeding 12 tollas or 4oz. 10dwt. in various individuals in this country, with a promptitude and industry which would seem rather disproportioned to the object, even if the resolution had been the result of full and impartial investigation, instead of being founded upon erparte views and heated feelings.

> No opportunity of defence or exculpation is allowed me. The first official intimation that I receive of the existence of a charge against me, is the transmission of my conviction and sentence. I cannot reconcile this to any principle of fairness, and I am sure that upon review it will appear even to those who have been parties to the proceeding, that I have been hastily dealt with,

> Returning to the question, whether or not thave advocated the extended plan, from the discussion of which I have been led by the extraordinary course of proceeding adopted. I heg to submit that I have been the constant, determined, and unwavering supporter of that plan, from a period antecedent to my connection with the Calcutta committee, and that I have devoted all the mental and physical energy which I possess to promote its success. It has been the object to which all my laboura have tended, and from which my attention has never been for a moment withdrawn. For evidence of this I may refer to almost innumerable passages of my correspondence, and to the testimony of all persons to this country who have had the means of observation. I am so much at a loss to conceive the grounds upon which is rested the assumption, that I have not advocated the extended plan of communication, that I am scarcely in a condition to meet the charge in any other way than by a plain denial.

Of the extent and persevering consistency of my advocacy, the subscribers generally have not the same means of judging as those who have been more immediately concerned in the management of the correspondence. Much that could not be conveniently introduced into public letters, has been adverted to in private communications; and when I am attacked for ne lecting that object which I have incessantly laboured to promote, I must rely upon the justice of those who are better informed, to give me the assistance of their good report.

I have understood indeed that exception was taken to a small part of the pamphlet which created so considerable a sensation where none was felt before, and the publication of which I succeedy believe was a most influential movement towards the end for which we were striving, I have heard that it has been imputed to me as a direliction of duty, that I did not in that Pamphlet insist upon the extended plan or none at all. My answer is that the entire tendency of the Pamphlet is to give an impression that the extended plan is not alone the most eligible, but that it is that which must ultimately be adopted. These are the views pervading the pamphlet, while in the appendix of documents the teader is conducted at once to the same conclusions in a more direct manner. course was adopted neither from coldness, nor from indolence, nor from carelessness. It was the result of deliberate consideration, and time has but convinced me more and more of its propriety. The pamphie dig not ex-pound all the views which I entertained on the subject nor all which I was anxious to communicate. It was but the commencement of a series of lubours to draw auchtion to the subject, to awaken the public mind and dually tomform it. I never professed my object to be different from what I now state it to have been. In my letter of the 24th December last, which accompanied the pamphlet I spoke of it as intended to " prepare the public mind for further measures," and this is the language which I have invariably held.

But why did I not take other ground and desire at once the establishment of the extended plan? Because arb conduct would have been the beight of impruience.

Authority was against us, some of the advocates of the communication were against us, and the public was not then with us. I was auxious while rousing the last of these three parties, not to alarm the other two. I was desirous of calling forth no enemy, and of ensuring to the cause as many friends as possible. I dreaded wasting time and losing strength in discussing points of detail, all that we could command both of time and strength were required to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is described to draw attention to the principle. It is not vanify to say that no man in this country is better acquainted than I am with the difficulties which stand in our way, and I can testify that we had no strength to spare and no time to waste. I might have taken the course which it seems now to have been desired that I should take, but I conscientiously believe, that the resultwould have been a considerable loss of friends, increase distaste to the question in the higher quarters, and comparative indifference on the part of the public.

Whenever I had an opportunity of safely enforcing the advantages of the extended plan I availed myself of it; and it I had not been constantly thwarted in my desire to aid the cause in public meetings, those apportunities would have been much more numeron. Let me here call attention to the resolutions prepared by me for the public meeting which I was anxious should take place in the city of London, and which at one period I had sanguine hopes of obtaining. One of these resolutions refers expressly to the beneficial effects of the proposed steam communication in reference to China, the Indian Archipelago and Australia. This implies the adoption of the most comprehensive plan of communication, and the resolution was expressly framed to imply this without calling for opposition or alarm. The same view was embodied in a clause of the proposed petition.

That these meetings which I had projected with others all over the country, did not take place, is no fault of mine; I laboured incessantly to obtain them, but in vain. Had I been successful upon this point we should have been armed with a strength which could not have been resisted, and I have no doubt, that by this time we should have had the extended plan in operation, I submit then, that it is both barsh and unjust to cast blame on me for the consequences of a course for which I am not responsible, and which I resisted to the tuli measure of my power.

In evidence of my zeal and of the object to which it was directed. I refer to the following letter addressed by me to the Home Committee on the 16th May last.

The Right Hon'ble Lord WM. BENTINCK. J. Mackillop, Esq. E. Fleicher, Esq. G. G. DE H. LARPENT, Esq. WM. CRAWFORD, Esq. T. M. TURTON, Esq. London, 16th May, 1837.

The home committee of the Bengal steam committee.

The question of steam communication with India has undoubtedly made some progress in the quarters where alone the power resides of carrying a into full effect.

The line to India will probably soon be perfected by extending the communication already established between England and Alexandria to Suez, Mocha, and Bombay; and there is reason to hope that some additional facilities may be afforded by occasional recourse to the new line of parkets about to be formed in the Mediterrannean by the French Government, sided by overland communication to and from Marseilles.

This appears to be the extent of what is at present to be looked for, and though it is to a certain degree satisfactory, it is obviously less than is required either by the wishes or the necessities of the Indian community. plan will meet their views and interests which does not embraces monthly communication will all the presiden cies; and so long as it is confined to one, the advan-tages contemplated must be very imperfectly realized.

The expectations of India on this point are reasonable, and the object to which they point undoubtly practica-ble. The comprehensive plan has in its favor not only appreliension that public opinion is not prepared to support them. This belief if it exists is certainly erroneous. and the most ready and complete way of removing it would be by petitions emanating from a public meeting in the city of London. The objection to this proposition formerly existing in the mind of Sir John Hobbouse mas not commue in its full strength, and in whatever degree it may remain it might probably be removed by a proper application.

To this end the good offices of Lord William Bentinck might be requisite.

His Lordship's influences it may be hoped, would be successful in obtaining the consent of the President of the Board of Controul to the adoption of a measure which is resorted to in all cases of public interest, and is usually found far more efficient in promoting a desired object than any other means which can be used.

> (Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

Deprived of those public means which would have been most efficacious, I was thrown entirely upon the use of private efforts; and to these I devoted myself to the mjury of my health and to the neglect of my personal interests, am d a host of obstacles which would have deterred any man who did not despuse both ease and self-advantage when they stand in the way of his duty. I experienced much anxiety and subjected myself to an overwhelming mass of labour, but I have the satisfaction of knowing that it was not altogether in vain. Obstacles gradually disappeared, the public become interested in the question, hostility diminished. One of the home authornes consented to admit the principle which it had always before steadily rejected, the other avowed itself a convert to the extended plan. Are these things nothing ? Or have they been effected without human agency? What share I have had in producing them I leave to others to declare, and I may appeal to two of the warmest, most judicious, and most intelligent friends of the extended plan, Lord Wm. Bentinck and Mr. Turton, for justice to myself, as well as to your Home Commillee.

From the moment that we obtained the ear of the public and of the authorities, I avowed publicly as I had before done privately, my advocacy of the extended plan : could I then take this step without compromising the interests of my constituents, and I lost not a moment when the proper time arrived.

I would call especial attention to my evidence before the late Parliamentary Committee, and to a paper formerly transmitted to you, which I had proposed to tender as my evidence.

Time will not allow me to enter into particulars so fully as I could wish, and indeed the vague nature of the charge against me renders it impossible for me to know to what particulars I ought especially to speak. On the fifth of August last, I addressed a letter to you containing a brief review of my proceedings with a statement of some of the reasons by which they had been governed. I enclose a copy of that letter now and request that it may be considered as a part of my present communica. tion, and submitted with it to the subscribers.

I know that I have served them zealously and I believe discreetly. I cannot believe that they will eventually blame me for a discretion which has saved their cause from being wrecked, and in the anticipation of the return of more kindly feelings I suspend until this communication has been considered the proceedings which would finally dissolve a connection which I have always felt to be an honor.

The home computes will meet on the 20th proximo, when they be a most part of the plan in and understood its practical bearings; but these upon my conduct. If our pheheve that it will be a most favorable one, and as they have had the best means of observation I need not say that whatever it may be, it will be plan in any form; and the evidence of Sin John Hobman in the highest respect.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

CATPAIN GRINDLAY'S RETROSPECT.

London, 5th August, 1837.

To C. B. GREENLAW, E-q.

Secretary to the Bengal Steam Fund, Calcutta.

Sin, - From the period when I had the honor of undertaking the charge which the committee at Calcutta were pleased to cutrust to me, I have kept them continually advised of the steps which had been taken to advance the question, and of the degree of success by which they had been attended. With regard to our progress previously to the 1st of June, I can have therefore but little that is new to communicate; but the transmission of the report of the committee of the House of Commons appointed during the last sessions, appears to mo to be a proper occasion fortaking a very buefre-trospect of our proceedings. By looking at the state of the question when it was first taken up, comparing it with its present position, and observing the intermediate steps by which the change has been effected, we shall, I think, be enabled better to understand and appreciate both our prospects during the past, and our prospects for the lutuie.

Previously to my being honored by the first instructions from my considerate in India, I had devoted my attention to the subject of steam communication, but appearances here were of the most dark and discouraging description. To say that the public generally and even the more intelligent part of them were indifferent on the subject will not convey an adequate idea of the prevailing state of feeling. That state was apathy at its extreme point—if I might be allowed to add a superlative to a superlative—I would say at its most extreme point.

The ignorance prevailing upon the subject equalled the indifference, and was indeed in a great degree the cause of it. Many perhaps a majority of those who took the trouble of ever bestowing a thought on the subject, believed the design to be about as practicable as a proposal for a communication by billoon. Others who did not deny a steam communication with India to be within the limits of possibility, were frightened at the enormous expense which they believed necessary to establish and keep it up. Others again were insensible to the advantage of such a communication, and many commercial men of eminence believed that it would be prejudicial to existing interests of greater importance than those which it was proposed to serve. This difficulty was especially felt by Major Head in his endeavors to obtain subscribers to his scheme, and the fact that his project received such slender incouragement, at a period when the mania for joint stock speculation was raying at its greatest quight, must be regarded as a convincing proof how little disposed the people of this country were to promote the object which in India was felt to be of such existing interest. Worse than all, those in authority were either against us, or not decidedly with us. - The Euphrates expedition was then in progress, it was a favorite in high quarters, the most sanguine hopes were entertained of its success, and it was distinctly asserved that the conveyance of letters by that toute, was all that the public had a right to expert, and all that the Government ought to provide for. The Red Sea route found 'advocates indeed in those who had studied the question and understood its practical bearings; but these persons were lew, and unfortunately not in the most influential stations. The Court of Directors twice rejected the plan in any form; and the evidence of Sn John Hobhouse will shew how attong was the feeling against it. In the legislature nothing was to be hoped for, until the stagnant power of public opinion had been effectually stirted; the Bombay pention had been effectually stirted; the Bombay pention had been effectually stirted; the Bombay pention had been presented by the President of the India Board, but this step so far from creating any interest corresponding with the magnitude of the question did not even elicit a single temark. The Ilouses of Pathament partook fully of the public torpor.

In this state of things the obvious course was to proreed gradually, but steadily in the work of awakening and enlightening the public mind on the subject which we had at heart, and the greatest caution was necessary to avoid the danger of throwing over the plan altogether, possibly for years. It was necessary not to claim too much at once lest both the public and the Government should become alarmed, and indifference should be exchanged for what would have been still worse, obstinate resistance. It was necessary, indeed, to divert attention exclusively to the Red Ser, and to muntain the supeciority of that line over every other; but this ground being taken as the basis of the movement, it was desirable to avoid controversy as far as it was possible. It was desirable to make no enemy and to lose no friends. These were the principles which I laid down for my own guidance, and on them I have invariably acted.

The first public step taken by me was the resertion of the circular in the Times* newspaper of the 20th of September. The circulation and influence of this journal are such as to render if the best vehicle for preparing the public mind and giving it a required direction u, on any subject. Having commenced the moment in this widely read and influential journal, I continue i it by publications in various papers and periodicals, the majority of which are named in the margin.

Thus far I acted solely on my own views and I believe that my labors were not in vain. On receiving the Committee's instructions I placed toyself in communication with Lord William Beutinck and the gentlemen appointed to act as a home committee.

From this period my system of operations under their sanction has been so fully and regularly submitted to your notice, that a mere glance at them will be sufficient.

I may remark that as Parlament was not sitting, our only course was to endeavour to act upon the public; and the general apathy on which I have already dwelt, would indeed have mode this advisable though Parlament had not been prorogued. The memorandum dated the 3d October, details the various modes by which I proposed to prepare the way for opening the Parliamentary contest with effect. It will be recollected that a plan was laid down for a series of public meetings and of petitions emanating from those meetings. I was especially anxious upon this point, because it would have given us opportunities of doing that which could not be done safely in any other way. Had the proposed facetings taken place, they might have led without difficulty to the adoption in their petition, of language utterly inconsistent with any system of communication, but that which is the best and most desirable, namely, the most comprehensive.

To illustrate this I may refer to the draft of the proposed London petition. The London meeting, had it taken place, would, in all probability, have been composed of persons of every possible degree of information and every possible shade of opinion. At such a meeting where many would know lattle or nothing of the subject, where many more were but half friends or perhaps concelled enemies, and where another portion would probably be enamoused of some favorite plan of their own, and consequently indisposed to tolerate any other which longer and more elaborate than pay which had yether is throatened to interfere with it, in such a meeting, ands with public opinion uninformed and wandering, the friend of a communication with all the ports of India could not venture to speak out as decidedly as they could wish, but the communication contemplated in the petition drafted for that meeting is with " India and China" without 1mitation, the widest extension which the most ardent friends of the plan could desire. By such a mode of advancing the comprehensive plan we should have escaped opposition, at the same time that we had a prospect of enlisting on our side, interests not immediately con-nected with India. I have continually regretted the disappointment of my views with regard to public meetings, and for no cause more than for this, that we lost the opportunity of pledging the petitioners to the extended plan, and of acting upon the Government in its favor. with the full force of their naited influence.

It is indeed useless to regret that which has passed, but it is necessary in this case to advert to it, in order to shew that the plan was arranged so as to carry the peutioners the full length that could be desired.*

The press was another engine of which I proposed that we should liberally avail ourselves. In commencing this branch of operation it appeared to me desirable to fix attention by issuing something very buef, but to the purpose. As opinion then was, a great mass of printed papers would not have been read. Selection and compression were necessary; in making a choice among the materials received from India it was due both to my constituents and the cause that the views both of Calcutta and Madras should be presented to the public here. To effect this object I printed the Calcutta circular, the Calcutta pention and the Madras petition preceded by a short appeal in favor of the communication " with all parts of India." A map accompanied, which was made the means of silently advancing the more per-tect plan of communication, for by pointing out the route to each of the principal parts of India, it was to be inferred as a matter of course that none of them was to be neglected.+

This paper was circulated throughout every part of the kingdom. Articles in the various literary journals mentioned in the margin succeeded.

For one important publication (the Asiatic journal) distinctly advocating the comprehensive plan, we are in-debted, as I have already mentioned, to a very high authority, with whom I was in daily communication.

Attention being thus partially roused it appeared to me that a separate publication on the question, somewhat tonger and more entering that the property of the property and published my pamphis. I was convinced by this time the public would read such a work, spice at an early period they would not. §

One difficulty was thus removed, but others remained in full force. We had raised so much of sympathy in the public mind that we might fairly expect by a further effort to excite much more, but there was still the risk of going too fast, of overrunning public opinion, of exciting collision and calling forth opposition, and, I must add, my conviction, that a very slight opposition would have been fatal to all out hopes! it was necessary, therefore, to sity only so much as would be received without very great difficulty, and thus prepare the way for the rest, which might follow in due time. I must confess that I looked with much anxiety to the reception of that pamphlet. I Ind not feel quite assured that the public appetite was prepared for it, and I was in some fear that either it might excite no attention, or might provoke some hostihty. With regard to the latter point I was fortunate, the only discontent called forth was from the advocates of the Euphrates plan; as to the effect of the paraphlet I was still more fortunate, and I need only refer in proof of this to the immense number of notices referred to in the margin. | Lam informed by those well acquainted with literary affors, that the cucum-tance is nearly if not altogether without parallel, except in the case of some work of general literature, emanating from an author of distinguished name, and calculated for popular reading and enterainment. It may be proper to state that the notices were the actual productions of the parties having the literary management of the publications in which they appeared - care was taken that the pamphlet was placed before them, but no means were used to indusence their judgment. Their unanimity may, I think, therefore, be accepted as a proof that whether or not I displayed any great portion of talent, I was at least not denevent in the equally indispensable quality of judgment.

I excited attention without creating opposition, and this effect is attributable to the cautious avoidance of all controversial matter as far as was consistent with the general advocacy of any particular plan. These testimountly were not without effect; some who had been strongly, and I doubt not conscientiously opposed to every plan of stead consynuication with India, and others who had been specially of 1984 to that hy the Red Sea, gave way. Government saw that he public were becoming interested in the matter, and that something must be dood and had we been fortified by public meetings and petition, there can be no doubt that the comprehensive scheme would have been carried at once.

At the meeting of Parliament we had made some way We had not done then all I wished, but I had done all within my power, and we were in the condition to expect that Government should at least give us a hearing. I was mixious for the early presentation of the petitions, but difficulties arose partly from the distracted state of public business, and partly from other causes. Lord William Bentinck was desirous that we should have the co-operation of Major Head's Company; with a view of effecting this object various meetings took place which ended in nothing. Indeed had the terminations been different as far as we are concerned the ultimate result would have been the same, as Sir John Hobhouse's evidence shews ever with the Government. During this period, as before, myself with the use of the means which fell within my personal power.

The question continued to be postpoued in Parliament until its friends had reason to be sick at heart; and a main cause of this was an impression that it would be taken up by Government in a proper spirit. Our interview with the chairs and with Sir John Hobhouse were considered to a certain extent satisfactory, and the declaration of the President against public meetings was held to be decisive as to their prohibition. At the same time, I could not but feel that though the chairs had expressed themselves individually favorable, this was all, and I could not but see that Sir John Hobhouse still retained a hogering attachment to the Euplicates plan. This feeling was so apparent, that with a view of soothing it, and thus winning a most influential man from an impracticable plan to one that was I took the opportunity afforded by a second edition of my pamphilet, to offer such an explanation upon that delicate subject as I thought would be gratifying to Sir John Hobbouse and would dispel any reluctance which he might feel to a retreat from the Euphrates to the Red Sea, and the comprehensive public meetings though opposed by authority, but it would have been faolish to contend with authority ly becoming one of no practical importance.

and I rejoice to know that these efforts have not been without effect.

The letters from the treasury and from Sir John Hobhouse to the rourt, shew, that the comprehensive plan has made its way with the Ministers of Her Majesty's Government. It was not equally successful elsewhere, and the arrangement made may be regarded as a compromise.

It seems clear that the Court of Directors would not at present yield more, and it may be presumed that Sir judgment as well as of my judgment at the time the dif-judgment as well as of my judgment at the time the dif-ferent transactions took place, and had I the same duty to ther lest he should risk that portion of it which has been gained. The danger of the question being lost altogether, as apparent from Mr Melvill's evidence.

Here in my mind arises additional reason for regretting that we did not strengthen the hands of Government by public meetings and petitions.

That under any circumstances would have been my plan had I been left to choose; it is but fair, however, to say that the state of the question as between the two authorities was kept very closely. Lord William Ben-tinck, one of the warmest advocates of the comprehensive plan, constantly expressed himself satisfied with our prospects, and repeatedly delayed the presentation of the petition at the suggestion of Sir John Hobhouse, who said that when prepared to state the intentions of Government, the petition would be a powerful auxiliary to

We know that he was friendly to the comprehensive plan; but during the month of May, I obtained private information of the possibility of an unlavorable turn, and, in consequence, addressed to the home committee a letter of which you have a copy. In this, I re-urged the nethat the London Steam Company had no chance what cessity of public meetings and petitions on the ground that no plan would meet the wishes and views of the I continued to urge the importance of public meetings. Indian community which did not embrace a community and petitions; but, unfortunately, with no better success cation with all the presidencies," and that "as the than formerly. I was compelled, therefore, to content comprehensive plan had in its favor not only private suffrages but had been sanctioned by the deliberate judgment of the treasury and the India Board, there could be no impropriety in endervouring to assist Government to carry out the plan," by the means which I recommended. You will have seen, however, that I failed to convince the committee of the necessary of this until too late, and I believe that Lord William Bentinck now considers this a subject of regret.

> I will not recapitulate the contents of my letters of June and July. You are aware that Lord William Bentinck finding that it was intended to introduce a partial measure, moved for the appointment of the select committee. I have stated that some of its members were averse to the comprehensive plan, and Sir John Hobhouse having failed in his efforts with the Court of Directors took the adverseide also and carried his party with him. The consequence was that the affair was Learly strangled in its commencement, and nothing but the indomitable perseverance of Lord William Bentinck and Mr. Mullins prevened the committee separating immediately after Sir John Hobbouse's evidence had been heard, without hearing any more or making any report.

On the prospects of the question I will not now plan. As I compromised no principle and endangered no interest of my constitutions, I thought, and still think, that I was acting prudently. I pressed the holding of and in a future Parliament, as it is now so generally understand the property of the prospects of the question I will not now speculate. Lord William intends to bring it torward, and in a future Parliament, as it is now so generally understand the property of the question I will not now speculate. stood that he will have abundant aid from without and I trust it is unneces-ary for me to assure you of my unceaswould have been house to contend with authority ing exertions to promote it. To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary to the New Bengul Steam Fund.

Sin,-We have heretofore abstained from reporting the progress in this country of the question of steam communication with India, because we understand that Capt. Grindlay transmitted monthly a detailed account of such particulars as would keep you duly acquainted with the course of events here. Our object having now been partially attained we feel called upon to congratulate you upon the degree of success which has attended our exertions, and to express our earnest hope that the step which has been gained is but the prelude to complete realization of our wishes, and that a few months will produce the extension of the communication to all the principal ports of India. You are aware how zealously the comprehensive scheme has always been supported by your late Governor-General. The opinion which he has hitherto maintained he continues to hold, and is prepared to assert them in the next session of Parliament, when the subject will be again pressed upon the notice of the legislature. Great caution has been necessary to avoid ruining our prospects altogether by too much rapidity of action, but we have now gained a point from which we cannot be driven, and the possession of which will enable us to advance with greater certainty and confidence.

We forward a memorandum which will convey some knowledge of the difficulties with which we have had to contend, difficulties which could only be surmounted by the operation of time aided by cantion and discretion. Captain Grindlay has devoted his time almost exclusively to the furtherance of your views, and has constantly been engaged both publicly and privately in promoting their success. As we have had opportunities of becoming acquainted with his labours not enjoyed by his constituents in India, we think it due to him to bear testimony to the universed zeal, judgment and assiduity, with which he has sought to advance their interest, and to express our entire satisfaction with his conduct throughout the proceedings in which we have been engaged.

We have the ho for to be, Sir, your most obdt. servts ..

STEAM MEETING AT THE TOWN HALL.

the Steam Meeting at the Town Hall on Thursday was very numerously attended. At a little after ten the Sheriff took the chair and read the requisition on occasion of which the meeting had been called and having so done, he proceeded as follows : Gentlemen, had the occasion upon which we meet to day, been a matter of an ordinary nature or of minor importance, I should have desired, as Ishould have considered it my duty, to preside at it; but when I take into consideration the intensity of interest that is felt upon the question we are met to consider, and the peculiar position in which it is placed as respects the authorities at home, I think that I shall best fulfil my duty by proposing that the chair should be taken by one far more capable of filling it with effect. Gentlemen, I shall therefore propose the name of one who has often fulfilled the propose to you that the Chief Justice be requested to take the chair, Sir E. Ryan.—Gentlemen, my excellent friend the High Sheriff, having selected me to fill the chair Ashis meeting and you having been pleased to express your approval of his nomination, I with pleasure assume a duty connected with a subject upon which, it is true, that I have always and do take the deepest interest. Upon the general merits of the subject it will not be necessary for me to enlarge at the present moment, my sentiments have often been expressed, and before I make any further observations on the subject, it will be better to allow the proposed resolutions to be submitted to the consideration of the meeting.

There the Government is every thing, here the Government is powerless, unless supported and urged forward public opinion.

The Lord Bishop then rose and said, I should have been much better pleased if the duty of proposing the first resolution, had been sententrusted into other hands, had the occasion upon which we have niet together, been one of ordinary import or of common character. retired and sacred nature of my profession would render it improper and unbecoming in me to take a prominent part on occasions of meetings for ordinary purposes or with a view to objects of doubtful utility; but on a subject whereupon an intensity of feeling pervades the public mind, and were the question under discussion may be considered as embracing all the interests of humanity, and in its consequences calculated materially to affect the whole well being of society; on a question which regarded in its influence upon all the benevolent relations of life, is boudless in its scope, on such an occasion I deem it not only not unbecoming, bud entirely consistent with my more immediately sacret duties, to exert my voice in support of that which is calculated to prove so eminently coducive to the benefit of mankind.

In whatever light we regard the great question of Steam Communication with Great Britain, whether as public men, or as private individuals, as members of the community, or as fathers, husbands, or guardians,in every relation of life shall we had the vast importance of this great improvement in the means of distant and rapid intercommunication, between the metropolitau country and her colonies. What father of a family, does not appreciate the immense value of the means of learning the progress of his distant progeny, their health and happiness within a comparatively unimportant interval of time? Who, looking at the subject as a public man, can regard with indifference the vast improvements which will be derived to commerce in general? What boundless advantages will this country enjoy in the 12-pid communication of the discoveries of the western world in the arts and the sciences! Of what inestimable value towards the civilization of the East must be the full and apid communication of European knowledge, and the wisdom of the West! To every missionary of religi-on, to every traveller in search of knowledge, as well as to every servant civil or military of the Company, is this subject of deepest interest. It is a project which like the discovery of the mariner's compass or invention of printing, must produce consequences which it is beyond the view of human speculation to embrace. In such a case. and to promote such an object, I cannot but feel that I am justified now in coming forward as 1 did five years ago for the same purpose. Nothing, indeed, can be contemplated as so wonderfully calculated to promote the interests of humanity as the invention of locomotion by means of steam; and as regards India, the present moment appears to present a crisis, which not only justifies but demands the support of all, and of every character in promoting the scheme in its largest and most comprehensive extent, an object upon which such an intensity of feeling pervades all India. Our great business is, by manifesting our own anxiety and eagerness to kindle the sympathies of the British nation, which unless wears.

strenuous will necessarily become lukewarm, and conse-object when attained. In the time of sickness, the quently the objects have in view will be not smothered enfeetbled patient may be rapidly transported from the but delayed. Our exertions in the description of the abstract merits of the question, or the benefits to be derived from its accomplishment. We parting with our children, when we send them to the are to consider not so much what we have to gain as what we have to overcome: the coolness and backwa dness of friends, the hostility of those whose interests are in truth identified with our own, but who choose to oppose instead of supporting us. I speak of Bombay. All these cucum-tances demand that we exert ourselves in proportion. The selfish policy of Bombay as exhibited in the early stage of intercommunication, sufficiently evinces what would be the result of a scheme which should confine the channel of communication to that port. Of their unaccomodating spirit we have had example we may say before hand. Of the uncertainty of the present mode of conducting the communication, I need only in-stance the case of Principal Mill, who, taking his pasthe question is, shall it advance with the firm, bold from such a nation owes to the Alunghty, from whom its great-of ficemen or the creeping abjectness of slaves? The ness flows. Into this great measure should the British cause must advance, it is not to be resisted; but the ques-nation plunge at once, not headlong, but with an atter the most comprehensive scale, are boundless, and for my own part I cannot perceive the immense difficulties that have impeded the regularity of communication between Suez and Bombay; and in making allusion to the conduct of Bombay in respect to the steam question, we should recollect, that we are not possessed of all the facts, and that we ought to believe that but for some operating causes to us unknown, there would exist the same unanimity at the other presidencies, and the same desire to promote the one great object, and the more we me enabled to give a favorable and charitable construction upon the conduct of others, the more easily will the great question make its way. That it will make its way through whatever may obstruct it is certain; but the question is, whether India shall enjoy this blessing now or whether it is postponed to twenty years hence! With the aid of this discovery and holding the most important colonial possessions ever connected with a present state, such vast means of bestowing happiness upon mankind have been entrusted by Providence to the British antion, not merely for herself but in trust for the many millions who look to her, not only for protection but for improvement and civilization. England beholds India thirsting for knowledge, and looking to her fountains from whence to draw and be satisfied. India beginning to awaken from the sleep of ages, after sixty years' repose, under a benignant, mild and paternal government, turns her eyes towards England, and asks that the book of knowledge he spread open before her. Sugland has been placed by Pravidence on the pinnedle of national greatness, and Itidia has been entrusted to her care, in order that she may from the height of her own prosperity and glory, communicate to her colonies, the knowledge and the wisdom that has made her great. The question then is, whether England will haster to send forth her sons to communications. that has made her great. The question then is, whether petition should be read, which was accordingly done. England will haster to send forth her sons to communicate these, boundless sirvantages to these her visit possessions, and in erifer so to do whether she will adopt such means as many be said with scarcely a menaphor, to bring their wast possessions nearer home? Immeasureable will a the straightful we may rejuctance that I address you as the mover of the 2d resolution, and in doing so I may congratulate the land of their fathers, as though we were to be separated with but the distant and cheerless prospect of seeing them again only after the lapse of years-when perchance they have stept from infancy, to an adult age-we may hope by means of steam, to send for them and have them with us in a space of forty days! So vast and various indeed are the advantages to be anticipated, that it is impossible even to immagine, far less to enumerate, the grand results which must be the consequences of the full attainment of the great object which we have meet this day to promote! If ever there were a triumph for public spirit, it will be enjoyed in the accomplishment of this great object; and, it is only by the full and energetic stance the case of Principal Mill, who, taking his pas-sage here on the best calculation, arrived at Bombay By this means shall religion, by this means shall religion, by three days after the steamer had sailed. There can be no in its widest and noblest sense, be diffused amongst the doubt, that whether we are lukewarm or whether we are millions of the East. To aspire to such grand objects energitic, this great object will make its way; but the is a noble feeling and worthy of the greatest nation upon question is, whether you will have it now or twenty years earth; it is worthy of the claims which reagion has hence? The cause will advance, it cannot be stopt; but upon such a nation; it is worthy of the bled cace which tion is, shall it advance with the current or against it? disregard to sorded and narrow calculation of expense. If you are lukewarm; if you are tame and to pid, your Now is the hour when it is in the power of the British na cause must advance against the stream. If you are reso tion to open the flood-gates of measureless bit ssings upon lute, firm, energetic, you will turn the current in your her Indian territories. Let her not hesitate, let her not favor. The results that are to be anticipated from a free delay, but achieve at once that great good, which will communication between this country and England, on clothe her with true glory, and secure the future happiness of India.

Sir Edward Ryan. -Gentlemen, I am desired by his Lordship to read the following resolution.

1st,-" That as the petition of the innabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood to the Honorable the House of Commons, and the memorials to the Right Hon'ble the Board of Commissioners for the affairs of India, and the Court of Directors of the East India Company, all dated the 5th March, 1835, praying for the immediate establishment of a regular, expeditious, and frequent communicaation between the principal Indian ports and Great Britain, by means of steam vessels, have failed in the attainment of the object as far as relates to Madras and Calcutta, an arrangement having been entered by the Court of Duec. tors with Her Majesty's Government for the establish. ment of a communication limited to Bombay, and as the select Committee of the House of Commons which sat in June last, has recommended a continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company, it is expedient that a further petition and memorials be presented to the above named authorines from the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, praying for the immediate establishment of the extended communication."

The resolution was seconded by Mr. lucker, and passed by a shew of hands, no one disserting.

Sir Edward Ryan .- Gentlemen, you have unanimously carried the resolution for presenting the petition of which a draft has been proposed and published and which may probably have been seen and perusal by many present; if however you are desirous that it should be fow read, the Secretary to the Steam Committes, will read it to you. "

Here a number of voices intimated by acclaim that the friends to Steam Communication upon the numbers here increased and enforced with all the encouragement that the assembled to support its interests. It proves how gene- Government authority can bestow. I hak to steam ral is the conviction that pervades our society, that the cause of steam will never be complete till the full and entire object prayed for by the petition has been attained. The petition itself is so ably drawn, and so tully and clearly expresses the strong grounds upon which we claim the attention of Parliament, that it leaves little to be said further in its support; and, I am fully assured, that it must carry conviction, as well as satisfaction, to the breast of every impartial and unbiased man. With your permission I beg to read the 2d resolution.

2nd.-" That the petition now read be adopted and that the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund be requested to take charge of the same in order to its being duly signed, and that they be further requested, after full opportunity shall have been afforded to the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, to sign the same to for ward it to the Right Hon'ble Lord William Cavendish Bentinck for presentation to the House of Commons, with the expression of the grateful thanks of this vecting for the indefatigable exertions made by his Lordship in furtherance of the prayer of the former petition, and to solicit the continuance of His Lordship's invaluable aid until the object is attaine !."

The Right Hon. Lord William Bentinck, Chairman of the Committee, turther Examined.

1954. - Lord Sandon. Do you consider that a speedy and regular communication by steam with all the ports in India will be productive of any moral or political advantage ! Very many, and very great. With respect to the moral advantage, I have already had the occasion, in India, of publishing my opinion; and I will now re- whole of their time, and the fault hes not with them, if they peat it. The subscribers to the Madras Steam Fund have contributed little or nothing to this object. The goaddressed me a letter, in 1834, in which they stated their vernment, indeed, may perhaps be accused of omesson, and belief that this project would comer vast and incalcula- of not having done as much as they might; but I doubt ble benefits upon our country and mankind. I answerd even with more exertion on their part whether, while the as follows : " I confess that my anticipation of the expected benefit goes far beyond the more obvious results, All the improvements of the description to which I great as those undoubtedly would be, of improved government, of the welfare of the people, as effected by such improvement, of the promotion of commerce, and of what may be considered of minor importance, of the comfort of our own numerous countrymen, separated by such great distance of time and place from all connextion with their dearest interests. The limit assign ed by the resolution is expressed by theslarge term of 'mankind,' aftl in my judgment appropriately and cor-fectly; because the great want of this eastern world, India, China, &c., may be comprehended in the single word, 'knowledge.'" If the moral condition and happiness of the most enlightened countries suffer from this cause, it can be easily conceived, that on this great space, where the human mind has been buried for ages in universal darkness the lask must be hopeless unless the knowledge and sufficiently provided by European colonists same means which have alone accomplished the object can never be sufficiently provided by European colonists same means which have alone accomplished the means and speculators only. The natives themselves emust elsewhere are brought into section, and these means and speculators only.

navigation as the great citine of working this moral improvement. In proportion as the communication between the two countries shall be facilitated and shortened, so will civilized Europe be approxi sitted, as it were, to these benighted regions; and in no other way can improvement in any large stream be expected to flow in. Past experience shows what we have to expect for the future. I shall take the liberty of enlarging upon this topic. For much more than half a century the British dominion has been established at the three presidencies over a great extent of territory, with a large dependent population. Examining attentively the intellectual condition of these numerous communities it caunot be demed that little progress comparatively has been made in the acquisition of useful knowledge. There prevailed throughout, and in the darkest ages of European history, the same ignorance and superstition, the same belief in witchcraft, the confidence in charm- and incantations, the same faith in astrology and omens, the practice of human immolation of all sexes and age-, and many other barbarous customs, opposed to true happiness, and repugnant to the best feelings that Providence has planted in the human bleast. Again also, in the arts and sciences, in every branch of u-eful attainment, the Gentlemen, I will only add that to Lord W. Bentinck ancient usages and learning retain their unimpaned sway. few individuals of superior talents and ambition, remaining stationary in their primitive rudeness and ignorance. Sir Edward Ryan.—Gentlemen, I hold in my hands educated Europeans, deeply versed in all these part of the evidence taken before the Committee of the branches of knowledge, have been succeeding each other, Why, it will no other part of the world does there exist greater quicksuperior aptitude to acquire it? The answer to this question is plain and obvious. The cause is to be tound in the past principle of our rule, of rigilly precluding the fice admission of Europeans to India; the direct consequence of which, whatever in other respects may have been its advantages, has been to dain up in a great degree the main channel of improvement into India. It may be assumed that 19-20th parts of the importation Europeans have consisted of the Company's servants, they have had, of course, other duties to perform, occupying the of not having done as much as they might; but I doubt same system lasted, much progress could have been made. have been adverting, are exclusively due to the skill and enterprise of individuals, aided by the capital of the houses of agency. Every indigo and coffee plantation, the Gloucester mills, the works of every description that are moved by steam, the iron founderies, the coal-mines worked after the European fashion, and the other great establishments that we see around us in Calcutta, are so many great schools of instruction, the founders of which are the real improvers of the country; it is from the same sources that we must expect other school-masters of new and improved industry. The new charter will remove many obstacles, but steam communication far more. But with the opinion I entertain, that the extent of colonization, (as it is mistermed.) and the effects of it, lieve been very much overrated, I am convinced that the knowledge and instruction so much needed by India be encouraged to go to Europe, there to study in the military force, in co-operation with an adequate steam es-best schools of all the sciences. This opinion I know tablishment, would be more efficient than the whole withto be entertained by soll a of the intelligent members of a committee now sitting at Calcutta, to consider the best means of educating the natives in the higher branches of medicine and surgery. The Pasha of Egypt has given a noble example in this respect to the rulers of rude and unlearned nations. The circumstances that have litherto operated as a complete barrier against the intercourse of the natives with Europe, except the classes of sailors and of menial servants, have been, first, certain customs as to food prescribed by the Hindoo religion; and secondly, and mainly, the length, the expense and apprehension also of so long a voyage In respect to the first of these obstacles, Ram Mohun Roy, who will be of illustrious memory among his posterity, has broken the ice; and I know that some, and I have no doubt that other, rich and well-educated natives are preparing to tread in his footsteps, with the same laudable desue of seeing what India may become, by what Europe, and especially Eigland, is; and of raising their country by the same means from the moral and political degradation in which she is plunged. With respect to the second obstacle, which makes the attempt almost impossible to the great class of students, however willing to those who are to be the practical operatives and the introducers of the new arts and sciences, and will become the best teachers of their countrymen, steam navigation, with the aid of Government, and of those interested in India's walkers, will go far to remove it. I was happy to learn from the same members of the medical committee, that natives thoroughly acquainted with the English language would, if assisted, be ready to embark immediately in that pursuit, and necessarily in others of the same utility. I will, therefore, conclude this too long detail by saying, that it is knowledge that is needed; knowledge is the beginning of wisdom; knowledge alone can raise this country to a higher standard among the nations of the world; and with the sentiments I have expressed, of the best and most effectual mode of attaining these great purposes, the Steam Committee are amily borne out according to my firm conviction, in their resolution, " that this project opens vast and incalculable benefits to our own count y and to mankind." The principal political advantages I will shoully state; First, great increase to our military power. The vast space we have to occupy and defend, and the consequent impossibility of quickly transporting troops from one point to another, has led to the necessity of having upon each portion of our territory a force sufficient for its protection, independent of all extraneous assistance. It is evident that, India forming a peninsula, and the monsoons offering no impediment to the access of steamers, large means of transport of this kind could always convey troops to the point menaced, and the whole arms could thus be made available for the service of every portion of our dominions. The last overland mail bring-an account of the arrival of the Atalanta at Bounday, and of her being dispatched three days afterwards with a whole native regiment to Mangalore, the seat of an insurrection. In Bengal, the river steamers will convey a reinforcement in three weeks, and safely, to Allahabad, situated at the junction of the Jumpa and Gauges, and the central point of the upper and lower provinces of Bergal, which by the ordinary boats of the country could not have been done in less than as many months, and without much risk, the insurance to Allahabad being equal to that upon a whole voyage to England. When in India I recorded the opinion, which I repeat, that had the establishment of steamers now proposed been in existence during the Burmese war, many thousands of lives, prodigious individual suffering. and millions of money, would have been saved to the state. It is not too much to assert that under the peculiar local circumstances of India, with great space, no roads out it. If, moreover, the Pasha of Egypt could be induced, as some well-informed witnesses seem to consider practicable, to allow the passage of our troops through his country, a regiment or more from Malta might reach Bombay in five weeks. All this is power exercised in its most imposing character. Hyder Ally is said to have declared, that it was not what he saw, but what he did not see, that he was afraid of. I beg leave to put in an extract from a letter (vide Appendix) from the superintendent of steam vessels on the Ganges, upon the great success of that establishment, and as affording a certain legree of expectation of a similar result to the seaf-going steamers. Secondly, the civil fuctionaries, who now come to India so young as to have acquired little European useful knowledge, and necessarily from their position, too apt to contract arbitrary feelings and habits, would have easy means and should be encouraged to visit Europe, there to acquire liberal notions of the principles and practice of improved administration. Thudly, the same salutary influence would operate upon our military officers. Susbordintion would be greatly promoted by the knowledge that the authority of the superior power at home could be quickly interposed; nor would the courts-martial have the same reluctance to do their duty, if all those considerations which distance so myn-The comfort, the alleginously creates were removed ance, the attachment of all to their native country, would be more firmly maintained. Fourthly, but perhaps the most important benefit of all, would be its tendency to place the security of our impute upon the only solid toutlation, the general good will of those we govern. Our present position is this; we have conquered the whole of India; we have much above 100,000,000, of meu under our direct and inducet rule; and it is universally allowed that our government has no hold upon the attachment of the people. I will introduce here, as more deserving the attention of the Committee than any opinion of my own, an extract from a minute of one of the most sagacious state-men that India, or indeed any other country, has produced, the late Sir Thomas Munro, written in 1824, describing the effects of our government. "If we make a summary comparison of the advantages and disadvantages which have occurred to the natives from our government, the result, I fear, will hardly be so much in its favour as it ought to have been. They are more secure from the calamities both of foreign war and internal commotion; their persons and property are more secure from violence; they cannot be wantenly punished, or their property seized by persons in power; and their taxation is, on the whole, lighter;" (my experience cannot confirm this latter opinion;)" but, on the other hand, they have no share in making laws for themselves, little in administering them, expect in very subordinate offices;" (some amelioration has taken place in this latter respect, but not much ;) " they can rise to no high civil or military station; they are every where regarded as an inferior race, and ofteneras vassals or servants than as the ancient owners and masters of the country." This minute is full of able, wise and entightened principles, and the same sentiments, will be found to prevail in the recorded documents of two other mest able and distinguished individuals, Sir John Malconn. and the Hon, Mount Stuart Elphinstone. Sir Thomas Munro observes also, "It is not the arbitrary power of a national sovereign, but subjugation to a foreign one, that destroys national character and extinguishes national spirit." Successive foreign domination under Mahonfmedan emperors, for centuries, has been the sad lot of India; and it ought to have been a happy change in her fortunes and to doubt will be, that she has become subject to a civilized, enlightened and Christian nation; but so far she has gained little by the transfer, except general peace and tranquility, and the consequent capability of receiving the benefits of improved institutior canals, as very unhealthy climate, and with a sea- capability of receiving the benefits of improved institutiried with the natives; they admitted them to all privileges, the interests and sympathies of the conquerors and tant a voyage of several months from the scene of action, conquered became identified. Our policy, on the contrary, has been the reverse of this; cold, selfish and them with all their countrymen, unfeeling; the iron hand of power on the one side, of our system is not soely that the civil administration is entuely in the hands of foreigners; but that the holders of this monopoly, the patrons of these foreign agents, are those who exercise the duecting power at home; that this directing power is exclusively paid by the patronage; that the value of this pationage depends exactly upon the degree in which all the honours and emoluments of the state are engressed by their clients, to the exclusion of There exists, in consequence, on the part of the home authorities, an interest in respect to the administration precisely similar to what formerly prevailed as to commerce, directly opposed to the welfare of Sir Edward Ryan. I thought that whilst we tender-India; and consequently it will be remarked without ed out thanks to Lord W. Beatinck it would not be prosurprise, that in the two renewals of the charter that per in some measure to show how far his Lord-hip merithave taken place within the last 25 years, in the ed them for his services in this cause. His Lordship first nothing was done to break down this administ follows out the argument to its full extent. Before I trative monopoly, and in the second, though a very important principle was declared, that no disability from holding office in respect to any subjects of the Crown, by reason of birth, religion, descent or colour, heaven, is settled and decided in our lavor; that battle should any longer continue, still no provision was made is fought and won; all we have now to ask or desire to working it out; and, as far as is known, the enectment that our success be complete. The petition, therefore, has remained till this day a dead letter. India, in order to become an attached dependency of Great Britain, must be governed for her own sake, not for the sake of the 800 or 1,000 individuals who are sent from England to make their fortunes. They are totally incompetent to the charge, and in their hands the administration, in all its civil branches, revenue, judicial and police, has been a tailure. Our government, to be secured, must be made popular, and to become so, it must consult the welfare of the many, and not of the few : the government must remain arbitrary, but it may also be, and should be, paternal. But how can this be effected? England has no knowledge of and no care for India. India, again, has no representatives in England, and has hitherto had no access to her shore-; her fate is entirely in the hands of the two authorities with whom her management as vested. The Court of Directors seek their office for the sake of the pationage only; for the most part they are strangers to India; have their own separate affairs to manage; are divested of responsibility; but, from their permanency, and the knowledge which they derive from their numer ous chents, they possess a power and influence over all affiairs, which a temporary President of the Board of Control, unaided by any board possessing local information, cannot possibly control. It is much to be regretted, when the last charter was renowed, that these two bodies had not been amalgamated into one department, with a Secretary of State at its head, with a competent board like that of the Admiralty, possessing local experience and information; chosen, perhaps jointly by the East-India Company and the Crown, or Parliament, and paid out of the India revenues. It is through the means of a quick, safe and frequent communication between all India and England, that the natives of India in person will be enabled to bring their complaints and grievances before the authorities and the country; that large numbers of disinterested travellers will have it in their power to report to their countrymen at home the flature and circumstances of this distant portion of the empire. The result, I hope, will be to rouse the shameful apathy and indifference of Great Britain to the con-cerns of India; and by thus bringing the eye of the British public to bear upon India, it may be hoped that surpassed our rule; the settled in they countries Company have been so little successful in ameliorating which they conquered; they intermixed and intermate the practical operation of their government, it has been owing chiefly to the di-advantage of their situation, disand to that imperfect knowledge which is common to

> The whole scope of Lord William Bentinck's evidence, goes to prove his entire conviction of the utility and the necessity of establishing the communication by steam on the most comprehensive plan. By means of this invention months are reduced to weeks, and there can be no doubt that had the facilities of steamers existed in India during the Burman war, one-fourth of the military force employed, would have produced more efficient results. A regiment might be brought from Walta to Bombay in three weeks. Hyder Ally, used to say that he feared the English, not from what he saw but from what he did not see."

Sir Edward Ryan .- I thought that whilst we tenderconclude allow me a few words more. We are not met here to consider whether communication by steam with India, shall be established or not; that question, thank has been prepared which states that the home authorities have not done enough in restricting the communication to Bombay, nor granted to us that which we have a right to claim. The petitions shew, that by the regulations of government the greatest weight allowed by dawk, is 4 ounces, and by dawk banghy 19 pounds; the time occupied by the dawk banghee is double that of the dawk, and thus all important as to the transmission of public document and public correspondence, having to be conveyed to us across the peninsula of India, steam is of little or no use. Now as we are the payers, we have a right to ask for the full, complete, and equal establishment of steam communication by letter. But what is still more desirable, and the absence of which is a still greater hardship upon us, is the means of personal communication by steam. Every body is aware of the difficulty that at certain periods exists of getting round to Bombay. Principal Mill, on every reasonable calculation, expected to arrive there in time for the Atalanta; he was three days too late, and these three days occasioned him the loss of many weeks as regards his arrival in England, as well as much additional expense. However, although individual cases may serve to illustrate the mischief, it is not the loss or disappointment sustained by individuals, but the inconvenience to the public that constitutes the guevance. It is the withholding that tacility of intercourse which once established would bring thousands to India who now never dream of such a journey. Look at the difference in the traffic between Liverpool and Manchester, in the establishment of rail roads between those two towns. When steamers shall be regularly established between this country and India, multitudes will flock here, and return and tell those at home, what we are and what we are not, which at present they do not at all seem to know. The Lord Bishop hasso ably developed the vast results which may be most confidently relied upon that it will be unnecessary for us to dwell further upon the subject; but I would call attention to one point. Whilst we are seeking for the full completion of our wishes, . we ought to feel grateful for what has already been achieved. We have an admission of the justice of our cause. We shall have We have so British public to bear upon India, it may be hoped that Ceylon, which is at present altogether excluded from the desired amelioration may be accomplished. All ever be ready to second your "agitations" as they have this and more, much more is to be anticipated among the been termed, and the ultimate and, I hope, near consummation of our wishes, will take place.

Mr. Spiers .- I was under some approhension from certain remarks in the public papers, that an opinion had gone shroad that we had agreated this question too much; but the numbers I see assembled around me convince me that I was mistaken. If I feel any degree of hisitution in addressing you upon this subject, I feel an equal confidence, that your support and comment will bear me forough. I am very certain that we have a good cause, in confirmation of which we have not only the acknowledgment of the home authorities themselves, but the strongly expressed and ably maintained opinion of Lord W. Bentinck. It is therefore very clear that it is not without good reason that we cotinue to meet and to With respect to personal communication, who petition. can regard the immens number of vessels crowding our port, and learning that the whole traffic by these ships has been entirely left out of consideration in the present steam arrangements, and say that we have not ground to petition or cause of constlaint. They think it home that a passage to Bombay, is tantamount to a conveyance to any part of India, just as a corresponding friend will give you a letter on your departure from England for Bombay, and request you to be so good as to delive it to their absent friend in Bengal, whonever it is conveniant to you to go out and see him. We ask the Court of Directors for steam intercommunication. Very well, says the Court; we will give it, and they then take us and land us at a remote corner of this great peninsula, and then say, we have given you what you asked for, you have got seem communication with India. It is true we find ourselves in India when set down at Bombay, but it our object is Calcutta we have either to be jol ed in a palankeen twelve or fifteen hundrad miles or begin a new voyage almost as long as the one we have just made. But even as regards letters, in order to indicate what are the sentiments of mercautile men, as to the extent of the advantage hitherto enjoyed by us. I need only state the substance of a resolution yesterday passed at the Chamber of Commerce, that Government be specially addressed on the great inconveniences to the mercantile world of the present irregular and uncertain mode of despatching the steamer from Bombay. I am glad to find that the interests of the mercantile community have been so warmly advocated by Lord William Ben-tinck, who regards this great measure not as a means of gaining space, but of diffusing knowledge, and extending civilization. It is by the frequent and constant contact of British civilization with native ignorance, that improvement in the national character of this country is to be effected. I was informed by a friend of mine who had been 19 years at Singapore, that he witnessed a very decided improvement in such of the Malays who inhabited the neighbouring islands and had frequent intercourse with our settlement there. I am hence led to consider that there cannot be a better school of civilization for the natives of the East, than a British settle-ment—than the establishment of a free and civilized community amongst a parbarous and degraded community. Not only, therefore, is justice to ourselves, but in justice to our native friends, we are bound to promote the great object of steam communication by every means in our power. The highest office and employments are now open to the natives of India, but how can their sons be rendered fit to fulfil them, without they get education, and what is it that prevents the natives of India from sending or taking their sons to the best source of educagreat results of steam intercourse between England and India. We may therefore feel assured of the warm support of our native friends. I shall now therefore read the resolution.

3rd, -" That the memorials to the Board of Control and the Court of Directors, now read be adopted and after being engrossed that they be signed by the Hon'ble the chairman on behalf of the meeting and by him transmitted to the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council, with a request His Honor will do the memorrhists the favour to forward the same to England, with such support as His Honor in Council may consider the matter to deserve."

The resoltion was then read and seconded by

Mr. R. Scott Thomson, who said. I beg to second theproposition of Mr. Speirs, that the memorials to the Board of Control and the Court of Directors be received and adopted by this meeting. I do so with much pleasure because I consider it to be the bounden duty of all classes to come boldly forward on this occasion and with one accord support the prayer of these memorials.

That we must have steam communication between India and England on a permanent footing sooner or later, every one feels confident of; every thing around us carries conviction to our minds that it is fast approximating to that " consummation devoutly to be wished;" but whether we are to sit under the limited plan as suggested between Bombay alone and England, via the Red Sea, or enjoy all the advantages which must accrue to this portion of India by the home authorities adopting the comprehensive scheme, must rest in a great measure with ourselves. It is the duty of every one to aid in accomplishing this desirable object; the effect of the limited communication is ably expressed in the petition as throwing a vexatious taxation on this side of India which the public ought not to bear, and the advantages of extending it to all other ports including Cey-lon has been most forcibly and eloquently land down to us by my Lord Bishop, this morning. If we persevere, by respectful petitions to Her Majesty's Government, and continue to agitate the importance of the question, there is no doubt that it will ultimately be crowned with success.

Mr. T. U. Maddock .- The resolution which I have to propose will require few remarks. The opinion of Lord William Bentinck on the subject under discussion. has already been laid before the meeting, and there can be no doubt, that the opinion of LordAuckland is precisely the same, and that he views the subject in exactly the reasons urged by Lord William Bentinck will have weight with Lord Auckland, and will conduce much to the conviction of our present Governor-General of the property of his recommending our petition in the strongest sense to the attention of the home authorities.

Neither can there be any doubt that the voice of the present meeting, supported as it is by the presence of the most dignified public characters of the metropolis, will not fail to have great effect, especially when it appears that the sentiments expressed in our petition are participated in as well by natives as by Europeans. But we must not on that consideration neglect to avail ourselves of the aid of Lord Auckland's support, and on this ground beg to move the following resolution:

4th .- "That it is expedient in the present position of the question of steam communication with England, to address the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General with the expression of the confidence of this meeting, tion but the deary prospect of having to traverse half to address the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General the globe on board a ship, on a journey which will with the expression of the confidence of this meeting, occupy a twelvementh. Were steam communication that his Lordship, from his own judgment of the advanestablished on its best system, natives of property might, tages which must ensue to Great Britain and especially and would carry their sons to England, place them at to India, from the establishment of a perfect and efficient Bleam communication with the three principal presiden- | Committee of the House of Commons. Many gentlemen will support the prayer of the memorials and petition in such manner as shall appear to His Lordship best calculated to procure the establishment of an efficient steam communication with the the three presidencies."

This resolution was secon led by

Baboo Duarkanauth Tagore, who said, gentlemen, in seconding this resolution I cannot but remark that if the nobleman we propose to address for his aid and support be desirous, as there can be no doubt he is, of doing good to this country, he can not do better than adopt the sentiments of Lord W. Beatinck, which I hold in the greatest veneration, and which cannot but be recollected upon an occasion like this without respect and gratitude. I doubt not that Lord Auckland will view this great question in a similar light, and equally appreciate the great benefits which will flow from its adoption. The chairman has justly said that we have got something; true we have got something -we may get our letters sometimes a month or sometimes two months earlier than without steam, but as far as personal communication with Europe, we are little aided. If we would go to England, we must contemplate a voyage of six months. during which nothing shall meet our eyes but an expanse of waters. As maintained by Mr. Speirs, I concur that if the natives could get their children placed at English seminaries, within a reasonable distance of time in communicating with them, and within a moderate length of passage, they would have been sent to the seminaties of Great Britain. The native population, do wish for knowledge, but how are they to get it if they are shut out from access to its sources? They must be enabled to go to the spot where it emanates. Lord Auckland can do nothing wiser and better than to promote the success of the petition. When it is obtained and its consequences developed by education, we shall then be able to demand with a lotty front a full equalization of rights and privileges.

Sir Edward Ryan declaring the business of the day concluded, rose to quit the chair.

The Lord Bishop. - I would for one moment begthe attention of the meeting before it break up. I beg to propose the grateful thanks of this meeting to the Chief Justice, and when we consider how much the cause of steam communication with India 1, indebted to his exertions, I am confident that the meeting will join with me in the most cordial thanks to Sir E. Ryan.

Sir E. Ryan .- I am most grateful to you, gentlemen, for this testimony of your kind acknowledgment of my limited services to the cause in hand, but I must be allowed to say that your thanks in this instance are due in another quarter. It was to Mr. Greenlaw, whose indefatigable and most able services have then so ardently devoted to the cause, that the thanks of all, myselfincluded and among the foremost, are pre-enumently due. 1 must repeat now that which I have so often publicly declared before, that it is to Mr. Greenlaw we are all chiefly indebted; and if I might be allowed I would propose as an amendment, that the thanks of this meeting be first and foremost given to Mr. Greenlaw by acclamation.

This proposal was received with loud cheers and acclamations.

Mr. Greenlaw expressed himself, as he appeared, embarassed at the cordial manner in which his services were acknowledged. He had so frequently had occasion to express his grateful sense of the kindness shown to him in connection with the object of the meeting, that he had no words remaining with which he could adequately express his feelings. He wished to be permitted to read two questions and answers from the evidence given by cies and Ceylon, will be disposed to view favourably the then present might remember when he originally proposed object of this meeting, and praying that his Lordship the comprehensive communication, how he had been met with reference to the S. W. monsoon part of the question, though his argument only applied to one single voyage during that monsoon. He hoped the evidence of Capt. Brucks, an old officer of the Indian Navy, which he would now read, would have the effect of satisfying every one that he had not been in error in his original opinion. Capt. Brucks was asked by Lord William Bentinck.

> "1852, You think that, whether from Point de Galle to Socotra or from Bombay to Socotra, there are no difficulties even in the south-west mon-oon, which would prevent the permanent establishment of steam pavigation by either of those routes ?- Certainly not. But I ought to mention, or it may be said I act inconsistently in India, as when I left India I was as great a bigot to the system laid down by Captain Wilson as any one knowing the seas could be depending for information on Captain Wilson's report of the Hugh Lindsay; but since I came to England I have, under the sanction of the Court of Directors, made a point of going round in steam vessels to see that they could do, and I feel, from the experience I have gained, there is so hatle to prevent the constant communication being carried on, I should be quite ready to stake my professional reputation on the subject.

> 1853. Chairman.] Having, in India, entertained a different opinion !- Yes having had no information but that derived from Captain Wilson's pamphlet, and no knowledge but of the Hugh Lindsay, a very inferior vessel to most here."

> Such, Mr. Greenlaw observed, is the matured opinion of Capt. Brucks, and he would offer no observation on it but repeat his thanks to the meeting for their kindness .- Herald, January 7.

> The following address to the Right Hon'ble Lord Auckland, voted at the late Steam Meeting, and his Lordship's reply, are published for general information.

> TO THE RIGHT HON, GEORGE LORD AUCKLAND, G. C. B.

Governor-General of India.

Address of the Inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood in Town Hall assembled.

My Lord,-The inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, duly assembled at the Town Hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the present state of the question of steam communication with England, having prepared a petition to the Hon'ble the House of and memorials to the Right Hon ble the Commons, Board of Control and the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company, praying that steam communication from England may forthwith be extended to the three principal presidencies, venture to address your Lordship, confident that their prayer will receive from your Lordship all the attention and support which its importance merits.

They refrain from entering into any details of that importance, satisfied that your Lordship cannot for any period have presided over the Councils of this vast empire, without being fully sensible how much its moral, political, and commercial welfare must be promoted by an efficient steam intercourse between England and all parts of India.

They therefore content themselves with soliciting your Capt. Brucks of the Indian Navy, before the Select Lordship to afford them the benefit of your support in form.

On behalf of the meeting, EDWARD RYAN, Chairman.

TOTHE RIGHT HON'BLE SIR EDWARD RYAN, &c. &c. &c.

Sin .- I have to acknowledge the receipt of an address signed by you on the part of the inhabitants of Calculta and its neighbourhood, soliciting my support to a petition, and to memorials, in favor of the immediate extension to the three presidencies of steam communication with England. In answer, I willingly promise you that cordial support which I am bound to give, as well by the feelings which would lead every Englishman in India to bring himself nearer to his country, as by the duty which is imposed upon me of endeavorting to promote whatever may tend to the general welfare; and I need not add any thing on my part in confirmation of the evidence given by Lord William Bentinck and others before the Committee of the House of Commons, to prove how deeply involved are the interests of our native as well as of our Britis Mellowsubjects in the success of your representations. I am ready to acknowledge with gratitude the liberality with which increased means of communication have within the last year been supplied to us; the advantages of which, not without occasional disappointment, we have all experienced; but I strongly feel how insufficient for many of the great purposes to be contemplated in the such manner as may to your Lordship seem best calcu- extension and accelaration of intercourse with our counlated to attain the object in view in its most efficient try, those means must yet be considered; and for their further improvement, I rejoice that the government and the community may rely upon the continued exertions of those who, with you, have long and strenuously applied themselves to the accomplishment of this most important public object. I cannot doubt that the manifestations of the general and intense interest with which this question is regarded in India will be received with all the attention which they so justly merit by the high authorities to which they are addressed.

On my part, no opportunity will be neglected of aiding by all means in my power, the renewed representa-tions which will now be submitted. I am confident that the willing co-operation of the President in Council will be afforded to us; and I am looking with impatience for the hour of putting to the test of actual expriment the facility of overcoming those obstacles, to which, it may yet by some he apprehended, that a steam voyage from Calcutta to the Red Sea during the untavorable season, will be exposed.

I am, your faithful servant,

AUCKLAND.

> To enlarge upon the services of "that great and distinguished General (to use the words of George the 4th) who has so often led the armies of the nation to victory and glory, and whose high military renown is blended with the history of Europe," would indeed be superfluous ; but it has often been remarked that these splendid services, which have received the repeated and unanimous thanks of both Houses of Parhament, and which have been honoured by the sovereign with the highest rewards which it is in the power of the Crown to bestow, have been suffered by a singular neglect to remain unmarked by any national testimonial in the metropolis of the British empire. I am aware that a statue has been erected in the city to the Duke of Wellington, but this was intended as a mark of the grantude of the citizens of London to his Grace for the interest which he had taken in the improvements in the City, especially those connected with the rebuilding of Lordon Bridge.

> The monument now proposed to be erected will have neither a civic nor a local character. It is intended as a national and a Military Trophy.

It has been objected in some of the London newspapers, that this is not the proper moment for a sub-scription of this nature which ought, it is argued, to have been entered into, either at the close of the war, or not plain Show, | Captain Bower, | In the close of the war, or not until after the decease of the hero; and that our zeal to do honour to the great general, may be, by party misrepresentation, converted into a species of political homage. MEETING OF THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE BANK OF BOMBAY.

Our readers will observe in another column, the sary step has been taken to introduze the project to the notice of the home authorities, and of all parties whose influence can at all be instrumental to its success. The prejudices that at first existed against the scheme, and which tended so powerfully to throw a damp on its reception at the Court, have been counteracted or removed, and there is now nothing lett for those to whose management its affors have been committed, but to await quietly the result of the application made to the Government of India, for its opinion as to the proposed Bank of India, which is to be so decisive in regard to that of Bombay. Where then is the necessity for a farther advance out of the funds subscribed? Mr. A-hburner's activity is admitted on all hands, and there can be no doubt that he has done much to promote the interests of his constituents; but when nothing farther can be done till the derision of the Court upon the Governor General's reply to its communication is ascertained, what in the name of all that is absurd, can the committee mean, by increasing the expenses when all onword proceedings are at a perfect stand? It is anticipated that every thing will be known in a very short time, and there is little doubt entartained that a charter will be eventually procured. These views are, we apprehend, a little over sanguine, as the Court is not always particularly speedy in its decisions. The delay may then be prelonged from month to month, and from year to year, without any nearer approach than at present to a conclusion, and the money of the shareholders is in the mean time fittered away without any purpose being gained.

We see no reason why an end should not at ouce be report of the Bank Committee, read before the subscripput to all hesitation as to faither proceedings, or why a bers at the meeting of Saturday last. We see little in Joint-Stock Bank should not as proposed at first be that document at all sansfactory to the shareholders, immediately started. All the details of management and most particularly object to the farther grant made might thus be put in operation, the business fairly out of the funds, for the expense of an agency in Eng. commenced, and instead of funds being unprofitably land. A committee has now been formed in London; wasted, the concern would be in a fair way of paying its that body has been put in full possession of the views own expenses. On a charter being granted, the business that body has been taken to introduce the project to the leavested wasted might with a stocke of the conservation with a stocke of the conservation might with a stocke of the conservation. completely organized, might, with a stroke of the pen, be transferred from the Joint-Stock Bank, to the chartered one. The delays of the Court of Directors ought to have no influence whatever on the proceedings of the committee who, on ascertaining that there are difficulties in the way of one scheme should love no time mentering on the other. Orders have been sent to England, regarding the engagement of people conversant in banking affairs to manage the institution and immediate instructions should be forwarded to the committee to conclude arrangements with such individuals, and send them out, with all the necessary paraphernaha, by the earliest opportunity. This would be the only course to quiet the minds of the subscribers, who must by this time be heartily sick of the postponements which have taken place.—Bombay Cazette Jan. 15.

The following report of the proceedings of the committee was read by their chairman, D. Greenhill,

Report

The Committee have, in common with the subscribers generally, to regret the unforeseen delay which has occurred in procuring a confirmation of the charter bility, by the last advices from England, of an early enabled him so successfully to effect. decision being obtained.

Many serious difficulties, unlooked for when the application was sent home, have arisen to retard its completion. Some of these, time alone could obviate, and others have been diminished or removed by Mr. Ashburner, whose presence in England, the committee feel has been of such high importance to the interests of all concerned, as to have abundantly confirmed the propriety of his having been deputed there.

"It would appear that previous to the application from this presidency, a reference had been made to the Government of India, for its opinion on the scheme proposed for the establishment of the "Bank of India;" and until the answer was received, it was intimated to your agent that no resolution could be come to on the subject of the "Bink of Bombay" Mr. Ashburner lost no time in pointing out in the most forcible manner, in personal conferences with several influential parties the hardship of this delay to the subscribers of this Bank; but being a sured that there was no likelihood of the court being disposed to alter the course they had adopted, he was recommended by the London committee not to press for an immediate decision, as any further attempts to hasten proceedings under the existing circumstances, were more likely to injure than assist the end in view. Mr. Ashburner was the more reconciled to this advice, there having been reason to expect the report of the Governor-General by an early opportunity; and since the first communication from Mr. Ashburner, several papers on the subject have been received by the Court; and the report itself of the Supreme Government was looked for in London by the next packet.

The committee have no official information of the sentiments of the authorities in India who were consulted; but that the opinion of the Governor General is in favor of banking in this country is sufficiently well known to lead the committee to anticipate the support of the Supreme Government to an Institution based on the principles of the Bombay Bank; and from all the information your committee have been able to obtain, in regard to the scheme for the "Bank of India," they see no chance of its ever being perfected, or that its consideration will eventually interfere with the Establishment here.

Your committee have addressed the Government of this presidency, soliciting it to ascertain from the Governor-General the date of the transmission of His reply has yet been received.

most usefully employed by Mr. Ashbarner; whose correspondence, which has been open to the perusal of all the subscribers, evinces how indefatigable he has been in obtaining interviews with the public authorities, and private individuals of weight, who take an interest in the welfare of this presidency, for the purpose of explaining all the circumstances under which the charter was a plied for and granted by the local Government.

In adverting to the active opposition, naturally created by an apprehension of the injury to private esta-. blishments, which the institution of a Bank would doubtless give rise to the committee are of opinion that the opportune arrival of Mr. Ashbarner in London was most valuable to the subscribers in removing the prejudices industriously circulated against it, and which pees 4,054, 3, 07,

The committee have at the same time much satisfaction in stating that their applications to the influential in dividuals addressed by their Chairman, and supported personally by Mr. Ashburner, have met with the anticipated success.

In regard to the delay that had taken place, whilst, the committee regretted the necessity of Mr. Ashburner's detention; they were, notwithstanding, decidedly of opinion that the presence of a zealous Agent was essential to overcome the tediousness of the forms of office and to neutralize the opposition that would certainly be persevered in ; and persuaded as they were that no one possessing the interest and qualifications, in any degree equal to Mr. Ashburner, could be found to supply his place with more economy; they approved, on the expiration of the period for which an allowance for his expenses was made, on the part of the subscribers, of his remaining until he could be furnished with further instructions; being satisfied that the interests of the subscribers in general will be greatly benefited by his continuing in England for the short time, within which it is probable that the question will be finally decided, the committee trust the inceting will authorize them to sanction his stay for that purpose.

The committee have the pleasure of stating that Mr. Ashburner has likewise been assiduous in obtaining every kind of information respecting the detailed management of Banks both in England and Scotland, and is still engaged in making such enquiries as are likely to add to the efficiency of the Establishment; his detention, however, so much beyond the time originally contemplated, seems to entitle him to the consideration of the subscribers for some further compensation; and the sum which the committee would now submit, in a separate resolution, for the sanction of the meeting is no more than scenisto be consistent with the grounds on which the previous grant was made.

Since the last meeting your committee have transmitted to the Agent, a Memorial addressed to the Board of Connol, on the subject of the Charter, to be presented in the event of the London committee deeming it advisable. A copy of that memorial is laid on the table with the rest of the correspondence.

To the London committee, Mr. Brownigg, of the Excellency's report to the Court of Directors; but no firm of Sir Charles Cockerell, But., and Co. has been added; whose agquaintance with the subject, and influence with parties whose support was desirable, has The delay arising from this unforescen cause has been been highly useful, and the committee have requested Mr. Finlay, who has just gone home, to join the committee there.

> Several vacancies having occurred in the Bombaycommittee since the General Meeting, the committee have the pleasure of announcing that Messrs. Skinner, Bruce, Waddington and Gordon have accepted their invitation to join them. They have also to aunounce that Messrs. Dadabhoy and Muncherjee Pessenjee having requested to be relieved from the office of treasurers to the institution in the month of March last, it was undertaken at the request of the committee by Messrs. Duom. Carter and Co.

> The account current with the treasurers is laid on the table, shewing the balance in their hands to be ru

A statement is also submitted to the meeting received from Mr. Skinner, (the trustee) of the Government paper now in his possession, amounting to rupees $1,800 (the interest on which he invers in the 4 per cent. loan) and a cash balance of rupees 77. 83 reasond there is now a total balance in favour of the subscribers of rupees $5,931, 3. 9. exclusive of the sum in the hands of Messis. Rupees 47,076 3, 68 or £ 5,000 sterling were remitted, as stated in the committee's last report, and in terms of resolutin 8th of the 11th January last, remains in the hands of Messrs. Coutts and Co., of London.

Rupees 7,000 were appropriated, also under the authority of the meeting of the 11th January, to meet Mr. Ashburner's expenses, and supees 3,145 3 10 have been further disbursed by the committee here since its appointment.

The meeting will perceive by these statements, that besides the salary of the Secretary to the committee, which was fixed on the very lowest scale, vic. 150 inpees per mensem, the allowance to the agent in London, and the charges of the solicitors here; the expenditure of the committee has been limited to rupees 485,1,40 principally for Bank notes, advertisements, and postage.

The committee, in now submitting their proceedings, since the list General Meeting, for the inspection of the subscribers, have only further to state that they trust they will meet their approval.

We have had several communications on the subject of the late bank meeting, but as we consider it unnecessary to give a place in our columns to many when one will equally well answer the purpose, we have selected the letter which appears to us to contain the greatest modicum of what can be reasonably said against the proceedings in question.

With the writer of that letter, we entirely concur, and recommend what he has said to the grave consideration of all concerned. We are totally averse to the practice which has intherto prevailed of calling the public meeting of this institution in a private office, where it was impossible that any thing like a decent sprinkling of the shareholders could be brought together. In fact we are of opinion that summoned in this way, the meetings can hardly be called any thing but private, and are considered rather in that light than in the other by the great body of the subscribers, particularly among the native community. Why not convene the Bink inectings in the Town hall, an apartment large enough for every pucpose and which no one would demur in entering, as he would into a private office. For committees, the latter is all right and proper, but for general meeting of hodies so large as that of stockholders in the bank, every one will allow that the Town Hall is in all respects much better adapted.

The plan proposed by our correspondent, of announcing the measures to be brought forward at the General Meeting, is an excellent one, and if adopted, would give every one an opportunity of stating his opinion. As it is, many, for the reason above stated, do not attend, and those who do, are quite taken by surprise as to the motions which they find made, seconded, and for the mort part agreed to by the subscribers—who are present. This ought not to be, and a public notification of the business to be proceeded with, would have the effect of putting every one on his guard. We could wish that the late proceedings, in justice to all the subscribers, had been tested in this manner, in which case we should have looked forward to a very different result.

With regard to the allowance given to Mr. Ashburner, we think it quite an extravagant one, considering the present circumstances of the bank. His first allowance was understood to include the amount of passage money to and from Great Butain. Even this deduction would leave a handsome surplus for his services in favour of the Bank, and if the new advance is to be made in proportion to the original, instead of the reduced amount, then will the Bank Agent have but little reason to regret the continuance or delay in a settlement of the question, which is so auxiously looked forward to. We admit that a great deal has been done, nay we are ready to admit that all has been done that is necessary, till an answer is received from the court. Where then is the gain to be reaped from further expenditure? all has been done, what work is there then yet to do, before the receipt of this portentous answer? We shall be told, perhaps, that though not positively engaged in advancing what is placed under his care, an agent may yet be pretty well employed in looking after contingent advantages and in collecting information that may possibly be useful. To this we teply, that so long as an agent is kept in pay, equally long will there be a nominal duty for him to perform; but we think the simplest, most satisfactory, and most economical plan, would be to recommend Mr. Ashburner to return, and leave the future management of the Bank affairs to the London committee, several active members of which are directly interested, in its success. The accountants whom that body has been requested to engage, if well selected will be able to communicate all the information requisite on provincial banking, and thereby supersede the necessity for an agent to make himself acquainted with the details. If these accountants have not been already engaged, they ought to be so immediately, and dispatched to Bombay to open an institution of some description or other. With active assistance, a moderate capital, and a fair field to actupor, there ought to be no further enquiries for an agent to make in either England or Scotland, which could not be much more satisfactorily and profitably answered here.—

It may be well to remind you also with reference to the profits realized on the past half year, that during a considerable period the state of things at Home and in China operating on the market here, naturally caused a larger diminution of our deposits, and thereby contracted in proportion the funds of the Bank disposable for the lucrative work of discounting. ROMAN CATHOLIC GENERAL MEETING.

The Most Reverend Dr. R. St. Leger in the Chair.

The annual meeting of the Roman Catholics for the election of wardens, was convened by the usual notifications this day, and at 8 A. M about twenty of the most respectable Catholic gentlemen were present. On the chair being taken, the most Reverend Dr. St. Leger, addressed the meeting, informing them, that the purpose for which they had assembled was familiar to them, and that he felt it his duty to express the saustactory manner in which the outgoing wardens, Messrs. M. Crow and Thomas Gregory, had conducted their honorary duties; and, said the Reverend gentleman, they are entitled to and after thanks were voted to the most Reverent the thanks of the community for the attention they man, the gentlemen retired,—Hurkaru, Jan. 16.

REPORT BY THE DIRECTORS OF THE BENGAL BONDED WAREHOUSE ASSOCIATION.

Report by the Directors of the Bengal-Bonded Warehouse Association, submitted to a General Meeting of the Proprietors held on 12th January, 1838.

Had the Association been definitively constituted, the period for the Meeting would have been in November; but the Directors have deferred calling you together, till the Draft of the Incorporation Act should be published, that you might at the same time have an opportunity of taking its provisions into final consideration.

The course of the Act to its present stage may be shortly stated.

The measure was quite new. We had no precedents here for our guidance. On being desired by the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General to prepare a draft, we made our legal advisers acquainted with all that had taken place on the subject, whether in correspondence with Government, or at the proceed ags of meetings; and we from time to time gave such assistance, in suggestiny and revising, as was required, and we were competent to afford.

After much labor a draft was at last handed up to the Government, too voluminous probably, as it attempted, by express regulation, to provide for whatever seemed to be of titely occurrence. We were then required to place our counsel if communication with the Advocate-General, for the acttlement of the Draft.

It had become obvious, that the dimensions of the Draft must be greatly curtailed, to render it eligible to be passed into a law. This having been effected, after much pains and care had been bestowed upon the task, a Draft was in October returned to Government, in a very abridged form as compared with the original. It had been thought that, were the Society empowered by enactment of Government,) for its internal administration, all such rules instead of encumbering the Draft had better be left to be prepared, discussed, and submitted, after experience should indicate what was essentially wanted.

The Honorable the President in Council was lately pleased to forward to us a Draft, which the Legislative Department was inclined to prefer to the other; and he invited some of us to wait upon him and the Hon'ble Mr. Macaulay, to confer on the points in which the two Drafts differed, as they were desirous to settle these in a manner satisfactory to the Association.

A deputation accordingly waited upon those authorities to point out the few differences which were held to be of con-equence, and found them prepared and anxious to meet the views of the Association in whatever was reasonable.

The Draft of the Act having now been published for general information, you have doubtless all, as was intended, formed your opinion of its merits.

We are bound in candor to admit, that it is a decided improvement on the Draft which was handed up; it is more concise and lucid; and is, we think, in no wise less comprehensive, or of inferior efficiency. We anticipate that it will obtain your full approbation. 🕳

The Accounts, and the Books of our proceedings, are placed before you. You will there perceive that the Receipts and Disbursements up to 31st ultimo are as follow:

In reference to the plain projected for the first range of warehouses, it was necessary to commission iron beams and pillars from England, towards the purchase of which, bills for £6,228, secured on consignments of produce, have already been remitted. At the time when the first indent was framed, it was supposed that the whole iron work would cost on board ship in England £14 per ton, or £14,000 on a computation of 1,000 tons; but as the price of iron has fallen since then, the cost should amount to less than that sum. The execution of the order was entrusted to Messrs, D. Ainslie, G. C. Arbuthnot and T. Speir, shareholders, whose gratuitous services are reckoned on as being cheerfully afforded. We are now daily looking for accounts from those gentlemen.

Some time unavoidably passed away, before the part of the premises which we required could be vacated, and possession obtained; and afterwards, breaking down the houses, and removing the rubbish, consumed a considerable interval; nor, finally, could the excavation for the foundation be completed before the end of October.

Apprehending that much time may yet elapse before the iron work can be received; and as it is not unlikely that some further iron apparatus will have to be provided, to ensure the stability of the pillats, and to support the floors; and as the exigencies of the Bonding Trade imperiously demand that no time be lost in oreparing sufficient and suitable accommodation for its reception, we have thought it expedient to have a plain specification and estimate made out, for the construction of the first range, with brick pillars and saul beams, leaving the iron works, with such additions as, in the judgment of a scientific person, may be proper for its completion, to be used for a second range, which we feel persuaded the progress of the bonding system will ere lising call upon you to erect.

This plan is now shomitted for your consideration and decision.

The amount of the estimate, Rs. 3,20,000, is unquestionably high; but we conceive that it is susceptible of considerable retreechment. The cost of the masonry is stated to be Rs. 1,32,000; and the wood work amounts to Rs. 1,38,000. You are already aware that much of the ground, being of comparatively recent formation, the base of the walls will require to be of unusual breadth; and it being of the greatest importance, for the preservation of the merchandize which may be stored there, that the ground floor be rendered dry, it will have to be well raised, involving much expense; but in the estimate for the wood work, we perceive room for great reduction. Parties have tendered for the delivery here of teak planks from Moulmein, of the prescribed lengths, breadths, and thickness, required for the flooring, at the rate of 1-12; indeed one party tendered at 1-8 per cubic foot; and such plank, for the purposes to which they are destined, should need but little additional workmanship, assuredly not the costly labor implied in this estimate, which charges 1-8 per square foot of 3 inches planks. In the single item of teak planks for floors, extending to Rs. 1,34,000,a saving of Re- 50,000 appears to quite practicable; and it is not unreasonable to assume that some considerable, though it may not be a proportional reduction, may be effected in the provision of saul wood, amounting in the estimate to Rs-30,417 for beams.

We will now direct your attention, in a summary way, to the actual position of the bonding operations.

Government, averse to grant private licenses, having prepared some of the godowns of the export warehouse, gave the Society the option of hiring them, intimating that, if declined, they were to be conducted, for storing goods, seeking the privilege of the bond, under the Board of Customs. Anxions to support the views of Government, and judging it expedient that no other should have the initiation of the system, we did not besitate to hire the godowns, though, from their being detached, insulated as it were in another establishment, and from the indifferent character of their accommodation, we were not sanguine as to the result being productive. The experiment has now been in so far tested on an unfavourable field, and here is its issue. As was to have been expected at the commencement of a business quite new, it moved on but languidly for a time, and of precerious extent. Its progress, however, after a season accelerated; and as its advantages became known, the confidence in its steady growth was strengthened. The hired godowns are now quite full, the rent chargeable for the goods in store amounting to about Rs- 1,300 a month; which exceeds by Rs- 400 the cost of your establishment and the hire paid for the godowns, and it has become not only desirable but necessary, for the reception of the goods already in progress to be bonded, to resort to measures for obtaining the earliest possible occupation of the godowns which already exist on the south part of the import premises. This will involve the necessity for a further payment, on account of the purchase money, of about Re 50,000. But the room thus got is of decidedly superior description as compared with the hired godowns, and will store away times five the quantity of goods whereas the rent at present paid for those hired godowns is equivalent to seven per cent. on this instalment of the price. The hired godowns are to be vacated as soon as possible. As the offices are to be ready in the course of March, it is, independently of the saving, of obvious advantage, to have all the Society's operations concentrated on one spot, and under the immediate control of your directors.

Under the powers given to them and with reference to the expenditure above required, the directors now call for a third contribution of ten per cent. per share.

call for a third contribution of ten per cent. per share.

In conclusion, it is proper that we submit a few observations, as to the future prospects of the undertaking.

the ground, being of comparatively recent formation, the base of the walls will require to be of unusual breadth; allowing ample space for the passage of the goods, may and it being of the greatest importance, for the preservable estimated at 20,000 tons; but taking it at 15,000 tien of the merchandize which may be stored there, that tons throughout the year, the rent by a calculation we possess, and based on the average we find in the jon the benefit of concentration; and on the great rates charged by a number of the mercantile firms here, would amount to about Rs. 2,70,000 in the year. Occupied to that extent of its capability, the revenue you will be sensible, would ample suffice to remunerate, the cost of even an expensive fabric, to support the requisite establishment, and to afford a considerable reduction of the current rates of godown hire. Such experience as we have had of the warehouse business, still in its mere infancy it must be admitted, does yet encourage us to expect that the warehouse will be well occupied; further we anticipate a necessity at no remote period, for the construction of another range; and we ground that anticipation, not only on the extending value of the bonding privilege, but on the advantages of goodness, cheapness, and security of accommodation; convenience and facility afforded to trade by theoperation of the warrant.

TRANSIT DUTIES ON SALT.

We are glad to observe symptoms of a change for the | better in the conduct of Government in regard to the transit duties on salt, although what is yet done falls miscrably short of what the public have a right to expect, and what must be done. Our readers will remember, that some short time ago an order in Council was published, continuing the transit duties upon salt alone, without any intimation as to the duration of such continuance, whether until the new law should come into operation, or till such other period as it might seem good in the eyes of our rulers to decree. To do away with the effect of this order, it is evident that another must be issued to council it, in toto, and this we had expected from Government so soon as its eyes became open to the singular anomaly of bringing into force the new Act passed by the Supreme Government, while the article to which that act had reference was still by an express order emanating form the former, subjected to the old duties which the new law was expressly framed to abolish. Well, and now that the absurdity and injustice of such a course of procedure have become manifest to our Government, what is proposed to be done by way that oincer surely can use of partial in its apparent so imperfect in its nature, and so partial in its apparent able order is declared to be cancelled. Not exactly so we are sorry to inform them, although we have little doubt such is intended by our law-makers. The notification of the 22d November last is undoubtedly referred to, and the transit duties as well as all other duties except the 8 annas per maund are repealed on all salt manufactured in the territories subject to the government of the presidency of Bombay. would be too much: evil may be done in wholesale, but we correct by degrees. No, the relief can now only be afforded to that salt which may be imported into any part of the presidency of Bombay! Is it seriously meant that this notification is to be understood as a reversal of the other? If so our local law-makers would seem to lave forgotten that there may be salt produced in other parts of the presidency and carried to the interior without being imported at all, and that the order now before us provides no remedy for salt so conveyed unless it has previously passed through the or-deal of importation. But let our readers judge for themselves; here is the notification which has suggested to as the above observations.

With reference to the notification of 22d November last, the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council is pleased to declare, that all salt on which the duty of eight (8) annas per Indian maund, imposed by Act XXVII of 1837, has been paid, shall be exempt from the payment of transit duties, and also from that of sea baving been thought of before, we are inclined to believe customs, and all other taxes or imposts whatever, on importation into any port of the Bombay Presidency. Published by order of the Right Hon'ble the Governor

We are not exacity aware of the practice in force among our authorities when orders in council or public notifications are framed with reference to the various departments of the service, but should think that in all such cases the officers in charge of the departments should either receive instructions to frame the documents, or be referred to and consulted as to the forms necessary to be observed. We should think that one or other of these courses is the most natural to be followed, as well as the best calculated to ensure the purposes of any enactment being fully answered. If then in the case under review a reference has been made to the Collector of Customs, who we presume is the officer under whose department the new arrangement in regard to salt will come into operation, as to what was necessary to be done. tendency, could answer the purpose of cancelling the preceding one. He must have known that there are many ways in which the salt produced in the presidency may be transmitted for consumption to the interior without being imported, and that salt proceeding towards the interior direct from the place of production without any intermediate process, does not appear to be in any wise included within the provision of the present notifi-He must have known, that as the new duty is imposed in lieu of all transit duties whatever, a total repeal of the latter is plainly and distinctly called for without reference to importation or any other circumstance. The duty levied once for all at the page is intended to relieve the producer or purchaser from all farther exaction, and it appears absurd to speak of importation when the whole scope of the enactment is to leave the future operations of the dealers unfettered by any restriction as to the mode of its transport or the whereabout of its destination. This we are sure will at one glance be perceived by the able and active officer who now manages the department of Customs, and we have too much confidence in his good sense, to believe that he will not immediately suggest to Government some mode of getting quit of the difficulty pointed out. The best remedy would, in our opinion, be a simple declaration of the obnoxious order we have so frequently referred to being cancelled. A few words would suffice, and the matter would at once be placed beyond all doubt. Sup-pose something like the following, which, from its not that the collector of customs has not been consulted at lis at present beset, and place the trade in salt on a clear ject, which has not yet been reached, notwithstanding the turning and windings that have been taken to arrive at it. But our rulers, like other wise even, who have like them committed an occasional blunder in policy, seem to think that there is nothing more statesman-like than to mistify a measure so much as to hide its object from ordinary observers. But we are inclined to hold the opinion that the plainer a law is the better it is understood, both by those for whose guidance it is enacted, and by those upon whom it is to take effect. The less room left for eavil or dispute, for legal difference, for revisions or interpolations, the better. We should say something like what follows would at once and without going about the bush have effected all that was required :

" It is hereby notified, in reference to the notification of 22d November last, that the Right Hon'ble the Govergor in Council, is pleased to cancel that notification. and to declare that from the 15th instant, when the new law, imposing a consolidated excise duty on salt, of 8 annas per India maund, le lable at the place of manufacture, came into operation, that article has become exempt from the pryment of transit duties, sea customs, and all other taxes or imports whatever, which have heretofore been levied on it.

This we should think, or something like it, is necessary to get rid of the difficulties with which the question | Gazette. Dec. 25.

all on the subject, as he would undoubtedly have taken and indisputable footing. As it at present stands, any some such short and simple cutto the attainment of the obbe, may cause a great deal of trouble and annovance to multitudes engaged in the traffic, and put many parts of the country to serious inconvenience. He sees his instructions plainly laid down in the notification of the 22d ultimo, and he will observe no reversal of the decree herein promulgated. The partial one we have quoted will only serve to puzzle and perplex him, and he will consider it the safest course he can follow to walk by the letter of his instructions, waiting patiently till he hears of somthing to the contrary. Nothing ought, as we have said before, to be left to be inferred. All ougit to be distinct and explanatory, in a document emanating from Government. We trust to see the evil yet unprovided against remedied in an early number of the Government

> By the way, the price of salt in the bazar affords omple conformation of what we have repeatedly urged regarding the hardships inflicted on the poorer closes by the new law. We can hardly think that even the stronest sticler for the perfection of Government will deny that a grievance much more oppres ive to the people than the old system ever was, has now to be submitted to. The dealers have been relieved from the delays and inconveniences they were tomerly subjected to, but the consumers were ten times worse off than ever. - Bombay

ARMENIAN PHILANTHROPIC ACADEMY.

Yesterday the Annual Examination of the Pupil attached to the Armenian Philanthropic Academy Revil. Mr. Boswell, Revd. Ter David, Revd. Ter Autone, Messrs, Jacob Antone and Manuk.

Owing to various circumstances, the company was not so large as it usually has been, otherwise the interest felt by the pupils and their friends, would have suffered no diminution.

The senior boys were examined in the English, Greek, and Roman classics with Armenian; were questioned in English, Roman and Armenian History and Astronomy they then solved propositions on the Elements of Euclid, and worked several problems on the terrestrial globe.

The second and third classes read English and Lann the Armenian, they answered numerous questions on, woman and Armenian History, and acquitted themelves very much to their own and the credit of their instructors.

a foreign language, we should say, that their proficiency n that department was very considerable.

Several pieces were recited in Armenian and English with great effect. Indeed, so completely did some of the boys-enter into the spirit and character of what they recited, that we could almost imagine them to be their own.

Specimens of plain and ornamental penmanship were exhibited, which displayed both taste and ability on the part of the writers, and proved, that there is no lack of talent in the graphic art.

To those boys who had made the greatest proficiency prizes were distributed of sufficient value to encourage them to persevere with unabated diligence. We cannot close this notice without observing, that this institu-tion, which is supported entirely by Armenians, reflects the greatest credit on its benevolent founders and excellent managers, inasmuch as it proves their regard for the interests of literature and science, as science, as well as their deep solicitude for the general instruction of the Armenian youth. We sincerely congratulate the members of this community on the advantages they possess, and the certain prospect they have that the blessings of an enlightened and liberal education will The junior boys were examined in English and be transmitted to their children's children, even to the Armenian; and, considering that the former is to them latest posterity.—Cal. Transmitting memorial of Uncov. Assistants praying the grant of occasional furlough and establishment of a Retiring Fund, with annuities in reversion to widows and children.

1. We cordially participate in the feeling which you express that the meritorious and efficient services of the body from whom the memorial in question proceeded are entitled to every possible attention. We are compelled, however, to adhere to the principle sugguested in our public letter, dated 30th July, 1828, (para. 40) that any pension fund which the Uncovenanted Service may tablish, must rest exclusively for support upon the contributions of the members; and realizations of the proposed benefits be entirely dependent upon the amount of subscriptions being adequate to the satisfaction of the accruing claims. The only part which we could take in connexion with such a fund would be to deduct at the desire of the subscribers, the sums for which they were hable from their salaries and allowances, to grant on the money thus withheld, interest not exceeding the ordinary market rate, and to disburse in India, when only duly called upon for the purposes of the fund, such sums as might be ie quired, not exceeding the amount of the principal and interest. It might be distinctly understood, that we can undertake nothing beyond this, nor can we incur even this limited responsibilty except in furtherance of a plan to be previously submitted to us, which, in our opinion. shall offer a full probability of success.

The circumstances of the services which enjoy the benefit of furlough, being widely different from those which apply to the memorialists, the possession of the previlege by the former, can afford no argument for its extension to the latter, and in the absence of all other reason we must decline to make any change in this

Extract from a public general letter from the Hon'ble the Court of Direc. tors, dated the 30th

July, 1828. 40. We regret that it should have been found neces. sary to abandon the project of a pension rund for uncovenanted servants; we shall be ready to afford any reasona. ble encouragement to the proposed Savings' Bank, and we are still of opinion that if any considerable body of our uncovenanted servants should come forward with a plan for establishng a pension fund exclusively by stoppages from their own salaties, and in which plan the benefit to be held aut si ould be made entitle contingent u the amount of subscriptions to be received, all proper tacilities should be afforded to them for that purpose.
41. On the plan of a savings' bank which has been submitted by Mr. Mc Keozie, and commented ppon by Mr. Hunter, we shall offer no remarks, because your local knowledge renders you competent to regulate the details. We think, however, that the annual subscriptions should be limited to 500 rupees, and we cannot consent to allow a higher rate of interest on the deposits than scheme of a Widows' Pension Fund. when, encouraged by the senti-ments expressed by the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in a public general letter, dated 30th July, 1828, an extract from which is noted in the margin, they solicited the annual grant of a donation towards its support and interest at 6 per cent, per annum for such monies of the fund as might be deposited in the general treasury ; This definite scheme received the sanction of the Supreme Government as communicated in your letter, dated the 14th Sept. 1836. in which the Governor-Ciencial in Council was pleased to grant the ministerial and of the Government officers in managing the funds of this scheme, as well as an account current at 6 per cent. per annum, but with regard to the annual do-nation His Lordship in Council declared his incompetency to afford any such aid, but stated his intention of referring the subject to the consideration of the home authorities. Under the encouragement thus afforded by the Supreme Go. vernment, the Uncovenented Service Family Pension Fund, as it at present exists, supported by the paironage of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India, was established and eventually commenced operations on the 1st of May, 1807; the success and future prospects of the fund were fully detailed in a letter to the address of its pation under date the 10th September last.

The letter from the Hon'ble Court, under date the 30th August last, has reference to our address to Governrelative to the memorial from that class of public servants, ment under date the 25th February, 1835, special reference made during Lord Auckland's Government, which could not have been received at the time the Hou'ble Court's dispatch was written, put the Hou'ble Court in possession of the principal features of the Fund, as well as of the data on which it is based, we have reason to hope that its establishment will not only be confirmed by the Hon'ble Court, but that with their wonted liberality a suitable donation will be granted in addition to the ordinary market rate of the day (already conceded by them,) and which invariably averages a higher percentage than that which the fund at present enjoys, viz. 6 per cent. Under the circumstances above explained, we trust that it will please the Government to await the re-Bult of the special reference, previous to passing any final orders on the subject of the dispatch from the Hon'ble Court with which we have now been favoured.

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE PEN-SION FUND.

Financial Dept.—Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 29th ultimo, and in reply to state that it is not the intention of the Deputy Governor of Bengal to interfere with the arrangements made on behalf of the Uncovenanted Servants' Pension Fund until a reply shall be received from the Hon'ble Court to the special reference made on the subject, in a letter of the General Department, dated 1st March last.

2d. As the despatch of the Hon'ble Court dated 30th August had distinct bearing on the subject, a copy was communicated for your information, in order to prevent the disappointment of any too sanguine hopes of support, that might be entertained; but no final orders on the subject will be issued till the receipt of the reply of the Court to the letter above referred to.

I am, gentlemen, your obedt. servt.

VEGETABLE EXHIBITION.

The show of vegetables was far beyond anything that! could have been expected with reference to the unusually unfavorable season. The cauliflower was beautiful and would have viel with any in Covent Garden. The cabbage was also very fine. The peas were excellent, and there were two fine baskets of English or rather Cape broad beams. Carrots from Cape seed were superior to preceding years; onions and leeks, though few, were large and good and the red beet and salad were in good season. Only two basilets of artichokes were visible, and potatoes very few. Of native vegetables, the pure white and red bringals were most conspicuous; the celery though good, was not sufficiently blanched.

The scene was altogether attractive, and the number of ladies who graced the Hall, rendered it doubly so. Let us hope, now that they have found their way to the Town Hall, they will not consider it beneath their attention to get up a Floricultural exhibition. The highest noblemen and noblewomen in England compete now for prizes in Horticulture, and if the ladies in India would only set their fair hands and heads to work, we should get on even more rapidly in the flower garden, than we have done in that of the kitchen. We intreat the ladies to give this subject their immediate consideration. We have noble proof of what they can do and have done in furthering the great objects of education, and charity; let them bestow a very small portion of time and means to "flowers of loveliness," and we shall not despair of seeing the dahlia, the crocus, ranunculus, moss rose, gum-listus, lavender and the innumerable list of pretty flowers that adorn our English parterres, brought to emulate those in our native land.

We understand that the secretary has applied to Messrs. Noble and Sons, of Fleet-street, for a supply of rate flower seeds against next cold season.

Among the visitors who were present, we noticed Sir Edward Ryan. Sir John P. Grant and Mrs. Pennington, Captain Hobson of the Royal Navy. Several Officers of His Netherland Majesty's ship of war, Dr. Wallich, &c.

The medals and rewards, were distributed by Mrs. Pennington, in the following order, Nursery Committee .- Dr. Wallich, W. Storm, Dr. Huffaagle, W. F. Gibbon, Capt. Leach, and John Bell.

The secretary read the annual report of the society including that of the collector, for the past year, which exhibited very satisfactory evidence of the increasing interest, to the objects of the institution, both as regards its financial resources, and numerical strength. During the past year 243 names had been added to the list of members, and only three retirements, two of those being gentlemen leaving Calcutta, and the other, having no time to attend to its proceedings.

Proposed by Mr. Cracroft, seconded by Dr. Wallieb, and

Resolved .- That the reports just read be adopted.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. G A. Prinsep, that the thanks of the society be given to Mr. Bell for drawing up these reports.

The vice president, next called attention to the annual exhibition of vegetables, and anniversary dinner, and proposed that the same course be adopted on this, as on the former occasion, ciz., that the time and details regarding the exhibition of vegetables and the dinner be left to the Committee of Management. This proposition was adopted by the meeting.

Read the report of the Caoutchone Committee on the motion made by Mr. Cractoft at last meeting. The committee recommend that the gold medal be awarded to Lieutennt Vetch on the condition being complied with, as embodied in the proposition.

Resolved .- That the report be adopted.

Read the report of the committee on implements of husbandry and machinery, on the motion by Mr. Bell at last meeting.

The committee report, that a machine after Mr. Teignmouth Sandy's model, could not be erected at a less cost than one thousand supees, and that it is not expedient to incur this cost, with reference to the advantage it might possess over machines of similar construction, &c.

Resolved .- That the committee's report be adopted .

Read the reports of the Nursery Committee, made up since the last meeting, showing an increased cultivation of sugar-cane, and resolutions upon which the cotton beds, &c., are to be made subservient to more supplies of cane expected from Jubbulpore and Bourlon.

Resolved, that the Committee's reports be confirmed.

The motion made by Mr. Storm at last meeting—
"That an application be made to the Admiral commanding in India, requesting him to give instructious to any of Her Majesty's ships of war touching at Orabeite, to bring such quantity of the cane of that land as they may be able couveniently to carry for the use of the society," had been carried into effect by the secretary addressing a letter to that authority.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Proposed by A. Beattie, Esq. —"That with a view to the improvement of sugar cultivation in Bengal, this society having employed all the means in their power to obtain a sufficient supply of a better description of cane than is indigenous in this country; and there being only a limited quantity now in their possession, and but slender prospects of an early accomplishment of this desirable object, on a sufficiently extensive scale without aid from some other quartes, that the secretary be requested to address the Government on the subject, and solicit His Honor the President in Council, to consider whether, for an object fraught with such extensive benefit, and of such general utility, the Government could employ at an early period one at their own vessels in bringing up a supply of seed case from Otaheite, this society would undertake to distribute it in the most prudent manner, to secure the best possible result from the same, in the sugar cultivation throughout this presidency."

The following communications were read. From Dr R. Wight, of Madras, dated December 21st, transmitting 410 more copies of plates of dye lichens to complete the number required for the transactions, viz. 500, forwarding copy of a correspondence with the Madras Government on the subject of lichens, and regretting his mability to furnish more information at present regarding them, but promising to do so, when in his power to procure it.

The Vice Pre-ident here called the attention of the meeting to the subject of certain observations made by the secretary in his precis of the meeting of the 8th November, 1837, in a letter from Dr. Wight, of Madras, to Dr. Wallich, which wis read on that occasion, and stated that from letters that had since passed, which be thought it unnecessity to bring forward, he was sorry to say, had given offence to Dr. Wight.

The Vice President then read the extracts and observations in question, after hearing which the meeting was of opinion, that nothing of an 'offensive' nature appeared in the sec. of any's remarks.

The secretary, however, observed, that as the remarkmade in Dr. Wight's communication in the precis of the 8th November meeting, were his own, and not those of the society, he begged to "propose that a minute be made in the proceedings, to the effect that the paragraph which appeared in the precis of a meeting of the 8th November might be cancelled, which was assented to

Stating that he has also forwarded by the same vessel, three buttles of genuine Saintoway tobacco seed any sugar-cane cut in the island of Ramiee, as samples of the cane of Arracan, which seem to be superior to the common cane of Bengal. Asking for a supply of seed paddy, cotton seed, and Otaherite cane, mentions hiendeavours of discover beds of coal, and iron ore, which are knowned exist on that coast, and requesting information on the subject of caoutchout.

From Dr. W. G. Maxwell, dated December, forwarding, for presentation to the society, two large stzed colored drawings, from nature, of two species of the tobacco plant, natives of the Northern Circais.

bacco plant, natives of the Northern Circars.

From R. W. Chew, Esq., dated December 18th, forwarding a banch of junesee, the produce of his garden.

From the Revd. T. Boaz, dated December, 21st, forwarding on the part of Capt. A. Bogle, the neveral articles alluded to in that gentleman's letter, viz, 3 bottles Sandoway tobacco wind, 3 sagar canes, and a packet containing samples of rice.

From Dr. Wallich, dated becember 21st, annexing arract of a letter to his address from Mr. Richards of the Royal Boranic Garden at St. Denis at Bourbon, under date 26th O tober last, in which that gentleman promises to transmit years shortly a box of caetto with concheniller fina, and 25 cases of Batavian sugarance.

From Lieut. H. Higge, Secretary to the Agricultural Society of Assard? deted September 16th, announcing the formation of a branch society at Gowhatti, on the 15th September, under the title of "The Assam Agricultural and Horti cultural Society," and soliciting the order of Assardance of the Parent Society, towards furthering the objects of this association.

N. B. The even assigned in the precis of last nonth's process here, for the delay in acknowledging here ent of a contraction from R. Montgomery, Esq., of Azo, e., equally applicable to the above etter.

From Maper Section, dated "on the Ganges," December 14th, symmetric in accordance with the request onveyed in the real system account of the society's nursery, a good supply of cone toon his Jubhulpore plantation, and that the same also be expected to reach the presidency in the early plut of February next.

Conveying, in reply to queries, some information respecting the Otaheile came, and mentioning the circumstance, that at Deyrah, a solution of the celer-oil in water, has been found an effectual preventive to the attack of will anatom this species of came.

From Lieut. Charles Brown, dated Jubbulpore, Deember 7th, intimating his intention of forwarding to the rate of R. Lowther, E-q., of All-thabad, 2 hackery loads of Otaheite sugar-cane, from Major Sleeman's plantation.

Stating that he has advised Mr. Lowther of this inended despatch, and has requested that gentleman to ranson the canes to the society by the first steamer leaing Allahabad. Mentioning that it required, he can end down a further supply next month.

From Dr. H. H. Spry to Dr. Wallich, dated Decemor 17, presenting a small supply of sugar-cane procurd from Car-Nicobar, where it grows in a wild state, corwarding a few copies of the proceedings of the Agrialtural Committee of the Royal Asiatic Society.

From Dr. Wallich to the secretary, dated December 19, forwarding a letter to his address from Dr. II. H. pry, and stating that the cane therein alluded to (11 in number) are in good condition, and have been plunted out in the society's nursery.

From Lieutenant C. Burnett, dated Beaur, November 29, advising despatch by dak banghy of the following, viz. sample of a species of barley termed "celestial," ultivated in the vicinity of Beaur; sample of maize rown from American seed forwarded by the society ome time ago, and sample of nankin cotton, the produce of Captain Dixon's garden.

Annexing a memorandum regarding the cultivation of the cotton seed supposed to be American (of the produce of which a sample of cotton has been forwarded, care of Dr. McLeah, who may be expected to reach Calcutta in January.

Alludes to the aftempts made to introduce the Otaheits sugar-cane in that part of the country, in which they have been frustrated by the depredations of the white ant, and requesting advice, as to the best means of destagning them.

From R. Watson, Esq., dated December 26, asserting a letter to his address from Mr. J. C. Warner, dated Guttaul, December 21, on the subject of a second unsuccessful attempt to wind off the silk from another supply of area cocoons transmitted by Captain Jenkins, and of which a small quantity had been forwarded to Mr. Watson. Suggests, that with reference to the latter part of Mr. Warner's note, a supply of the eggs of the area worm be sent to that gentleman, when a fairer experiment may be made, on the cocoons produced by them.

Specimens of Bhangulpore tusser wound raw silk, from James Pintel, E.q., were forwarded by - Shaw, Esq., of which particulars will be given hereafter, as to the mode of reeling it off.

From D. F. MacLeod, Esq., (no date) received December 29, prescuting specimens of tusser raw silk from Seonee.

From Government, 3 copies of a pamphlet, containing remarks on the natural resources of the Tena-serim provinces, by Dr. J. W. Helfer.

The Hon. Mr. Melville proposes to open a communication with the Highland Society. Their anxiety to obtain the productions particularly of the Himalaya, that gentleman had well ascertained and was sure they will supply in return any product, which may be destred.

The secretary intimated that he had addressed the Highland Society, last year, and had forwarded a copy of this Society's transactions, but he thought there was scarcely time yet to receive a reply. The meating scarcely time yet to receive a reply. The meeting was unanimous in its anxiety to be placed in communication with that and all societies of a similar nature and Mr. Melville and Dr. Jackson, offered to co-operate in England and Scotland, towards effecting this object. The latter gentleman also offered to procure for this society any books, or information, that were required from England.

The thanks of the society were directed to be offered for the foregoing communications and presentations.

N. B. The society give the foregoing precis of the various letters and papers submitted to them, with a view to their acknowledgment, and for the information of the public without professing to answer for the certainty of the facts, or the propriety of the reasonings therein contained, which must rest on the credit or judgment of the writers.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Jan. 10, 1838.

PROCEFDINGS OF THE NURSERY COMMITTEE.

A meeting of this committee took place at the residence of the secretary on Wednesday evening, the 20th December, 1837.

PRESENT.-N. Wallich, M. D. ; C. Huffnagle, M. D. ; W. F. Gibbon, Esq.; John Bell, Esqr.

The committee and previously visited the Nursery, and found the suger-cane, recently planted, coming up very regularly, notwithstanding the continued drought. Plot No. 12 of Dr. Huffnagle's plan, was holed ready for the reception of more cane; plot No. 14 was being trenched.

Resolved .- That the ripe cane in plot No. 1, be forthwith cut down and planted out in plot No. 12.

Resolved .- That the ground now trenching be reserved for expected supplies.

Dr. Wallich read an extract of a letter his-day re-ceived from Mr. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden at Bourbon, dated 26th October, 1837 stating that he had prepared a case of cuctus, on which he intended to transport to this society the grana-fina insect, and promising to follow up this despatch by more in the event of accident or failure.

Mr. Richard also informs Dr. Wallich, that he had made ready 25 cases for the reception of Batavia cane. destined for the society's Nursery.

In regard to the 25 cases of cane expected, it was resolved that they be immediately planted out on arrival.

The secretary read a letter to his address, received from Captain Brown, in charge of Major Sleeman's cane plantation at Jubbulpore, bearing date 7th December, intimating his intention in reference to the secretify's letter of the 24th February last, to despatch in a day or two, 2 hackery-loads of canes for the society, to the care of Mr. Lowther at Allahabad, with a request that the latter gentleman would take the first opportunity of forwarding them by steam to Calcutta.

Read the secretary's reply to Captain Brown, dated 18th December, thanking him for his attention to the from their appearance could not be expected. wishes of the society, and with reference to the latter para of his letter, and anticipating the concurrence of the committee and of the society, (as Capiain Brown required immediate notice) solicing a further supply of 10 hackery-loads, which would make in all, 12 loads.

Read a letter that day received from Major Sleeman. dated on the Ganges, December 14, stating that he had nustructed Captain Brown to give the society a supply of cane, and promising to give further information on the question of saccuarine richness, compared with the juice of the country cane, when he should have time to follow up the enquiry.

Resolved .- That as the cotton beds had done their office, and with reference to the original design of the society, with regard to the Nursery, the land now under cotton cultivation be opened for cane cuttings, when they

Resolved .- That the Secretary's application to Captain Brown, appears to the committee, judicious, and that it be confirmed.

Resolved. - That Major Sleeman is entitled to the bes! thanks of the committee in giving effect to the society's wishes, as advised in his letter to the address of the secretary read this evening.

A meeting of the committee took place at, the residence of W. F. Gibbon, Esq., on Friday evening, 5th January, 1838.

PRESENT .- N. Wallich, M. D.; C. Huffnagle, & D.; W. F. Gibbon and John Bell.

The committee visited the Nursery, and found that with reference to a resolution, passed on the 20th ultimo, the greater portion of the old stock of sugarcane of plot No. 1, had been cut and planted out.

That the sugar-cane received from Captain Bogle, of Arracan, through Mr. Boaz, had not come up, and

That plots 14 and 15 were mostly trenched, and partly dressed with lime.

That the West India ginger roots were now ready to be taken up.

Resolved .- That they be taken up and kept carefully in sand, and that an advertisement be sent to the papers, with a view to collect the names of parties desirous of having a small supply; but that none be delivered until after a month's date of the first advertisement, when intending cultivators shall be entitled to equal shares, re--erving a small quantity to keep up a supply in the Nursery.

The cotton seed (Gulf) offered for sale by D. B Syers, E.q., had partially vegetated in gumlahs only that on the open ground had not sprung up.

Resolved .- That it does not appear to the committee prudent to recommend a purchase of the seed.

The report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the state of the society was then presented.

f The Committee recommended.

1st. That the Quarterly Journal cannot, consistently with the interests of the society, be caused on in its present form, and the funds ought not to be expended otherwise than by publishing from time to time the transactions of the society by building or purchasing suitable apartments to meet in, and to contain the library and museum, and by encreasing these according to the means of the society.

2nd. That the election of office bearers should be by vote of the resident members, among whom the voring list should be circulated soon after the last December Meeting, that the result of the election may be ascertained before the beginning of the succeeding January.

This will prevent self-election in (a-e-of the January meeting being thirdly attended, and be the means of avoiding personal and disagreeable discussions, and of making the votes public in so far as the resident members are concerned.

3rd. That instead of two committees, there should be only one, to be called "the Committee of Management and Papers," consisting of the Oili e-bearers and four ordinary members.

This committee to the elected at the same time and in the same manner as the other office-beaters, and in the event of a vacancy occurring between the period of election, the vacancy to be filled up by the individual who commanded the number of votes next to those of the members returned at the last election.

4th. That no official statement of the proceedings of the society shall in tuture be published without baving been previously laid before the Committee of Management and approted of by them.

5th. That in consequence of the difficulty of collecting the subscriptions from the more distant statious, the secretary shall be releaved from the duties of treasurer, and a person, not a member of the society, be appointed treasurer.

The present committee being desirous of ascertaining if the above opinions meet the wishes of the resident members, they are requested to have the goodness to insert, yes or up, as they may approve or disapprove of each of the five propositions according to the form appended.

This report was signed by two members of the committee, but Dr. Goodevê objected to the 1st proposition, stating that he wished this question and some others to be referred to the Mouseil members.

At the singlestion of Dr. O Shaughnessy, these propositions were then put to the vote seriarine.

The first proposition was negatived and the following] amen ment, proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy and seconded by Dr. Goodeve, was carried by a majority of gentlemen were found to be elected by a very large

That the first proposition, together with the accounts. be referred to the Mofuseil members, and that the correspondence therefrom ensuing he referred to a Committee of scruttneers composed of Messrs. Sawers, Bell and Ranken.

The 2nd proposition was carried by a majority of 16 surer. to 2.

An amendment was proposed upon this by Mr. Mc-Cosh, secon led by Mr. Bell.

That the rule be applicable to the present election.

This was cast by a similar majority.

The 3rd proposition, proposed by Dr. Ranken seconded by Mr. Green, was carried unanunously.

The 4th proposition, proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Dr. McCosh, was lost by a majority of 10 to 3.

The 5th, proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, was carried by a majority of 18 to 1.

It was then proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, and carried unanimously, that the bye-laws of the society be collected and printed.

The society then proceeded to elect the office-hearers and the ballot box having been circulated, the following

Dr. Sawers, President.

Dr. Wallich, Vice President.

Dr. Goo leve. Secretary and Treasurer.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy, Foreign Secretary.

Dr. R. O'Shaughnessy, Assistant Secretary and Trea-

Drs. Ranken, Egerton, Chapman, and Stewart, Mem. bers of the Committee of Management.

The President then stated, that is case it should be deemed experient for the society to remove from its present locality, the Medical Board would be most happy to accommodate it in the rooms of their odice, where ample space might be found for the purpose.

It was proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Chapman, that this liberal offer should be accepted; but Mr. Corbyn having reminded the inceting that it was past 12 o'clock, and consequently that they were encroaching upon San lay morning, the President adjourned the discussion upon this point all the next meeting.

The Secretary read the Proceedings of the last Quarterly General Meeting, and the following Report of the Proceedings of the Committee of Management during the last quarter :

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT,

Medical Retiring Fund Office, 8th Junuary, 1838.

Para, 1st, Since the last Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Returng Fund, the Committee of Management have received applications for admission to Annumes from the following Subscribers to the Fund, viz.

John Swiney, E-quire, M D, Member of the Medical

George Canning Campbell, E-quire, Superintending Surgeon, (Furlough 1st March 1833) through his brother A DeCampbell, E-quire, of the Madras Civil Service.

Thomas Stoddart, Esquire, Surgeon, (Furlough, 6th February 1836.)

Alexander Scott, Esquire, Surgeon, (Furlough 8th January 1834) through his constituted Attorneys Messrs Boyd and Co, of Calcutta.

Paro. 2d. Dr Swiney having served as a Member of the Medical Board for upwards of three but not quite four years, he has paid thirteen-sixteenths of the value of an Annuity at bisage, conformably to sect on XXXIII. of the Fund Deed; and having resigned the service from the 31st ultimo, he has been admitted on an Annuity from the 1st Instant, January, 1838.

Para 3d. The prescribed affidavit of age not having been furnished on behalf of Mr G. G. Campbell, his admission has been deserted until its receipt; when, on his resignation of the service appearing in General Orders he will be admitted an Annuitant on the usual conditions

Para, 4th. The Committee of Management report, speedily, as possible, they have much pleasure in giving, sary to his admission, accompanied by a letter addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Mili tary Department, tendering his resignation of the service; which letter was torwarded to the Officiating Secretary with the remark that " if Mr. Stodd ort's resignation can be unconditionally accepted by the local Government, so as to gue immediate promotion in his room, that Gentleman's applie tion to be admitted on one of the Annuities declared this year will be immediately complied with; if, however, the confirmation of the Houble the Court of Direcears to his resignation be necessary, owing to his being on furlough, the committee must defer granting him an annuity until the receipt of the Hon'ble Court's orders." The Committee have been informed in reply in Officialing Secretary Lieutenant Colonel J. Stuart's letter of the 11th ultimo, that " Mr. Stoddart's application should be submitted to the Hon'ble Court, it not being within the competency of the local Government to accept the resigna-tion of an Officer on furlough." Mr. Stoddart has had the sentiments of Government communicated to him by the Committee.

Para. 5th. An Annuty has been likewise reserved for Mr. Scott pending his resignation of the service appearing in General Orders. His Attorneys have been advised to this effect.

Para, 6th. It has also been intimated to Mr. Superintending Surgeon Thomas Tweedie (furlough) whose application for an Annuity was noticed in the Committee's Report road at the last Quarterly General Meeting, that the publication of his resignation of the service in General Orders is a necessary preliminary to his admission on an Annuity.

Para. 7th. Surgeon Thomas Munro, M. D., of the 58th Regt. N. I., whose acceptance of one of the first declared three Annuties for 1833 was noticed in the Committee's Report read at the Quarterly Meeting, held on the 10th July, 1837., not being yet relieved from the charge of his Regiment, an Annuity remains reserved for him.

Para 8th. The Committee beg to notire, that of the seven Annuates offered by Circular dated 11th July, 1837,* six have been accepted; viz. by Messis Swiney, G. G. Campbell, Thomas Tweedle, Thomas Stoddart, Alexander Scott, and James Hall, leaving only one available. and which the Committee have reason to suppose will be immediately taken up.

Para 9th. During the present quarter applications for admission as Subscribers to the Fund have been received from Surgeons John Turner and William Dyer, and Assistant Surgeon Alexander Smith, M. D., all of whom have just returned from furlough. The Commutee will submit their request for the consent of the Subscribers agreeably to the provision of Section 111. et the Fund Deed.

Para- 10th. The Committee of Management find that their ex-Secretary, Mr. Assistant Surgeon J. T. Pearson, has taken some objection to the following words used in the Report of their Proceedings read at the last Quarterly General Meeting. " No regular sets of books of Accounts having been at any time kept in the office of the Secretary to the Fund, the present Secretary has been directed to open the necessary books." As in noticing the fact above recorded, the Committee of Management did not mean to couvey any consure against Mr. Pearson, but to urge upon the present Secretary, the expediency of having the accounts systematised and brought up as that Mr. Stoddart has furnished every document neces in his own words, the explanation that Mr. Pearson desires the Committee of Management to offer, " As misconception has arisen of the meaning of the 2d puragraph, page 3d of the Committee's last Report, they have to state that they did not mean to convey an impression that there had been any neglect or incorrectness in bringing up the arrears of account on the purt of the late Secretary; but that the orregularity they alluded to, was unavoidably owing to the unsatisfactory and unsettled state of the Fund, pending the sanction of the Court of Directors, which for so long a time interrupted and prevented the business of the Office, and the organization of a regular system of receipts and payments, and to the 16quisite documents not having been supplied to enable them to bring up and complete the Accounts.

> Para. 11th. Whilst on the subject of the Accounts of the Fund, the Commitee of Management are glad to be able to-inform their constituents that the Fund Accounts have been brought up as respects the posting up of each Subscriber's Account; but as it is necessary that the ba- . lance of the fund, as found by this process, should correspond with that exhibited in its favour on the Government books, and any discrepancy in either account properly reconciled; it will be necessary to wait the receipt of the Accountant General's promised Account of Interest on a sers of the Fund in the Treasury. This account will be found useful for check in the adjustment of the interest accruing on each subscriber's account as computed in the Fund Office; and as its preparation is indispensable for the use of the Treasury Officers themselves, to enable them to arrive at the correct balance due from the State to the Fund on the 30th April, 1837, preparatory to investing it in General Treasury notes, as directed by Government, the Committee anticipate that it is, by this time, completed, and that a copy will now be soon furnished to them. Until, therefore, the Committee are favoured with this Account, they cannot carry into effect their intention to furnish each Subscriber with his Account Current with the fund, including Interest, as nonced in their last report. As the arrears, however, due from every Subscriber can now be accurately determined. all such as have not paid up, will be immediately called upon to liquidate.

Para. 12th. The Receipts and Disbursements of the Fund from 1st October, 1837 to 31st December, 1837, are as follow: Recepts in October, 1837.....Co.'s Rs. 10,505 November, ,,.... 18 208 Ditto ,, December, ,,..... 45,352 8 11 74,352 5 7

> By order of the Committee of Management, GEO. HILL, Secretary.

Resolved .- That the Report of the Committee of Man gement, just read, be confirmed and adopted by this meeting, and that the same be printed, and a copy thereof be sent to each subscriber conformably to Section XXI. of the Fund Deed.

DR. JACKSON called the attention of the Meeting to an editorial article in this month's number of the " India Journal of Medical and Physical Sciences," entitled "the last quarterly proceeding and close borough system commenced in the Committee of the Medical Fund," and handed a number of the work to the Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN read the article to the Meeting. expressed Mr. corbyn's dissent from the Report of the Committee of Management, read at the quarterly meeting held on the 30th October last, as respected the Agra proposition, as well as the passage in the Report commencing with the words ' No regular sets of books of accounts having been at any time kept in the office of the Secretary to the Fund, the present Secretary has been directed to open the necessary books." Mr. Corbyn observes that the ex-Secretary, (Mr. Pearson,) sent a " full refutation of all neglect on Mr. Pearson's part," implied in the Committee's Report, and that he (Mr. Co.byn) applied to the Secretary for the letter containing such refutation to publish the sune in his Medical Journal; but that Mr. Hill, -instead of complying with his request, which, as a member of the Management he had a right to expect, he (Mr. Hill) took the orders of his (Mr. Corbyn's) colleagues in the Management, and the result was, that his request was negatived. Mr. Corbyn asks " by what authority or by what low the Committee of Management thus ussume such a power," and whether a functionary fin reference to the Secretary 1 was authorized to disregard the requestion of a Member of the Management." Mr. Corbyn's remarks are tollowed by the note of the secretary to the committee of Management submitting Mr. Carbyn's request for orders; and the votes of the several Members of the Management, with their remarks.

DR. GARDEN Said that Mr. Pearson's letter, which Mr. Corbyn asked for publication, was evidently written under excited feelings, and under the erroneous belief that the part of the committee's Report which he (Mr. Pearson) held objectionable, emanated from the presen Secretary, and as the publication of the letter would tend only to prolong controversy, the Committee of Management objected to its publication. Dr. Gardencontinued, that although the part in the committee's Report respecting the books of the Secretary's office was substantially correct in every particular; yet, as no censure was implied against Mr. Pearson in the notice the committee took of the state of the accounts sent Report the exclusion that Mr. Pearson himself dictated, he, as a Member of the Management, could bear his testimony to the zed and trouble Mr. Pearson took in conducting the details of his office, and he was sure that, had Mr. Peacson continued as their Secretary, the books of the office would have been systematized; but as he queted t'dennia without having done so. the work has been necessary tell to his successor, and to draw the present accessive attention to the state of the Accounts, on communicating to him his election to that office, the economics accorded a Resolution. That, Dr. O'Shang messy having brought to our notice the total warr or system and regularity in the Books of the Office, the Secretary le directed to attend particularly to t's Department, and bring the bools and Accounts' into the order without delay." The substance of this Re old on was douced in the committee's last Quartely Report, and which was the subject of Mr. Pearson's a unadversion. Had the Committee not readily accessed to Mr. P.'s wishes regarding the explanation in the ore-ent Report, he (Dr. G.) would not have objected to the publication of the letter at the proper time, not penting the consideration of it by the Committee, be certainly did object, as such publication could serve no good purpose and would tend to keep up excitement, and prolong controversy

Mr. Sawins, Drs. Ranken, Jackson, and Stewart, and Mr. Raimon respectively addressed the Meeting on the mischievous tendency of publishing garbled Statements of the proceedings of committees entrusted to their last Pepoit, they readily inserted in their present Report the exchanging that Mr. Pearson himself dictated, he, as a Member of the Management, could bear, his testingony to the 2r d and trouble Mr. Pearson to the publication of all their proceedings, and would no conducting the details of his office, and he was sure that, had Mr. Fearson continued as then Secretary, licetion,

The following Resolutions were then put and carried.

Resolved.—That the Secretary was fully justified in not sending any papers to Mr. Corbyn for the avowed purpose of publication in his Journal, without the previous sanction of the committee of Management.

Resolved,—That the remarks published by Mr. Corbyn in his Journal of this month, and read in this Meeting by the Chairman, were premature and injudicious.

Resolved.—That no Member of the committee of Management is at liberty to publish any documents of the Fund office without the consent of a majority of his colleagues.

Resolved, That the committee of Management will be ready to afford every facility to the publication of a fair and complete account of their Proceedings.

Resolved,—That the thanks of this Meeting are offered to Thos. E. Baker, Esquire, for his impartial conduct in the chair.

T. E. BAKEF, Chairman.

BOMBAY GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

Hend Quarters, Bombay, 12th January, 1838.—At a general court-mattial, held at Bombay on Monday, the 20th Nov. 1837, Brevet-Colonel and Liout. Colonel J., G. Baumgardt, of her Majesty's 2d (or Queen's Royal) Regiment of Foot, was arraigned on the following charge.

For scandalous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman in the following instances:

lst. In having unknown to me, communicated in a letter to Major-toeneral Willshire, of Her Majorty's 2nd or Queen's Royals commanding Poona brigade and station, dated Lat. July, 1837, that I had called on Lieutenaut Cuyler, of that regiment, then under arrest, and had privately listened to his reflectious on the character of another officer of the same regiment, such statement being malicious, unfounded, and injurious to my character as his immediate commanding officer.

2nd. In not having taken the means of contradicting or making known to me the malicious and unfounded report contained in his letter aforesaid, dated 1st July, 1837, to Major-Ganeral Willshire, although the false-hood of it had been made known to him, and he had been repeatedly, recommended by the latter efficer to communicate the same to me.

3rd. In falsely insinuating in a letter to Major-General Willshire, dated 20th August, 1837, that I was aware of the injurious report in circulation against me, in such manner as His Excell but that I had shewn on disposition or wish to institute the chief may be pleased to direct, any inquiry or take any notice of it.

(Signed) James Salten, Brigadier-General,

Commanding S. D. A.

On which charge the court came to the following decision:

Finding and Sentence.—The court having maturely weighted and considered all that has been adduced on the pro-ecuttion, together with what the prisoner Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel A. G. Baumgardt, the Majosty's second (or Quen's Royal) Regiment foot, his brought forward in his defence, is of opinion as follows:—

That he is guilty of the first instance of the charge, with the exception of the term "malicious" set forth in the concluding part, in respect to the statements referred to.

That he is guilty of the second instance, with the exception of the term " malicious," as applied to the report therein referred to.

That he is not guilty of the third instance.

With respect to the preamble to the charge, the cone finds the prisoner guilty to the extent of unofficerlike conduct.

The court having found the prisoner guilty as above specified, in breach of the Articles of War, in such case made and provided, does adjudge him to be reprimended in such manner as His Excellency the Commander-inchief may be pleased to direct.

(Approved)

(Signed) H. FANE, General,

Remarks by the Commander-in-Chief. - In publishing | Commander-in-chief, and with which he had not chosen the charges, finding and sentence in this case, the Commander-in-chief feels it his duty to state, that in coursequence of the prosecutor, Brigadier-General Salter, having deemed it requisite that His Excellency should personally give evidence on the trial, it seemed right to His Excellency, with the view of obviating any suspicion that might possibly exist of the case not having been disposed of with perfect impactiality, to transmit the proceedings for approval or otherwise, to His Excellency the Commander-in-chief in India.

Sir Henry Fane has approved the finding and sentence of the court; but in reference to that part of the sentence which provides that Colonel Baumgardt shall be reprimanded in such manner as the Commander-inchief of the Bombay army shall direct, he has expressed his wish that the task of giving it effect should remain in the hands to which the court had committed it. His Excellency however, at the same time, pronouncing it highly necessary that the proceedings of Colonel Baumgardt should be remarked on in the language of strong censure.

Under this intimation, it becomes the duty of Sir John Keane to observe, that the conduct of Colonel Baumgardt, as developed in these proceedings, has throughout the whole transaction been quie unbecoming his position in the aimy.

It appears in evidence, that Colonel Baumgardt, in a letter to Major-General Willshire, made an incorrect statement relating to the conduct of Brigadier- General. Salter, his superior officer, and the commander of the division, to which he (Colonel Baumgardt) belonged.

As soon it was known to Colonel Baumgardt, that the statement referred to was inaccurate, and of that fact he could not be left in doubt, for it was established by the finding of a Court of Enquiry, which he himself had called, and the proceedings of that court were by himself communicated both to the Commander-in-chief in India and to the Commander-in-chief of Bombay; it obviously became incumbent on him, to undo the injury which in a monoment of (a-hne-s or midvertence, he had committed. The leehags of an officer and a gentleman, it might have been expected, would make him ever eager to volunteer a reparation, but Colonel Baumgardt took no measures whatever for that purpose.

The transaction being very properly brought by Major General Willshire to the knowledge of Sir John Keane, Ilis Excellency, through Major General on the subject, counselling him forthwith to offer a pro-per apology to Bugadier-General Salter, and at the same time to explain to that officer the manner in which he had received the erroneous information to which he had unfortunately been led to give precedence and currency. The advice, however, which Colonel Balingardt clearly ought not to have awaited, he thought proper wholly to discegard.

Brigadier-General Salter, on afterwards becoming aware of what had passed, and hearing also of the advice which Colonel Baumgardt had received from the

to comply, sept for Colonel Baumgardt, and, in the presence of the division staff officer, put to him the question whether he had written the letter to General Willshire already mentioned. The answer was in the affirmative, and Colonel Baumgardt was proceeding to offer explanations, when General Salter ordered him to be placed in arrest, telling him that the time for explanation had gone by.

In the view the Commander in-chief takes of this case, it signifies not whether Colonel Baumgardt originally looked on his letter to Major General Willshire in a public or private light. Relating as that letter did, to the promotion of an officer of his regiment to a vacant company, Major-General Witlshire, under all the circumstances of the case, which were very unusual, deemed it his duty to communicate it to higher authority; and when Col. Baumgardt was apprised of this having been done, and received from the Commander-in-chief the advice before mentioned, he has bound to regard the letter as a public document and to act on the advice so offered; and even independently of this view of the case, Colonel Baumgardt's own feelings should have promiped him to repair the wrong, which he had unwittingly done, introducing on false information the character of the general officer commanding his division, to that officer's militay superiors. Yet in the defence, made by Colone! Baumgaidt before the court-maitial which the Commander-in-chief considers as placing his military judg-ment in a most unfavourable light, he uniformly seems anxious to make it appear, that himself, and not General Salter, is the injured party.

The Commander-in-chief would hold out this case to officers of all ranks, as an example of conduct to be avoid. ed, should they be betrayed into the commission of an act injurious to the feelings or the reputation of another, and especially of those to whom they own peculiar repect, their first duty and their most honorable course, on being made aware of their error, is to resoit to a frank and ingenious acknowledgment, rather than, by maintaining a stubborn silence, to convert the unintentional into a wilful injury.

The Commander-in-chief has exprienced the utmost pain in finding himself compelled by a sense of duty to comment in these terms on the conduct of an officer of such high rank and long standing in the army, as Colonel Baumgardt; but His Excellency felt that he had no alternative, and Colonel Baumgardt can only im-pute to his own misjudgment and obstinacy the unpleasant situation in which he is placed.

In conformity with the sentence of the court, Colonel Baumgardt is hereby reprimanded; and he is to be released from airest and to retuin to his duty.

By order of His Excellency, Lieut. Genl.

SIR JOHN KEAN, Commander-in-chiel,

And this court doth further decree and eternally pursuing Arr. Fandy with the writt and never and declare, that the residue of the and decretal orders be able to serve it on him; or Mr. Tandy might quit the of 23:1 February 1832 and of the 1 th day of May 1836, jurisdiction of this court and thus baffle the plaintiff, being in effect not only consistent with, but an actual who has come down to Calculta on leave to explain performance of, various injunctions of the said order of some circumstances connected with this case, which as His Most Gracious Majesty in his Privy council afore this libel materially affects his character, he felt himsaid, ought to be and are hereby confirmed and establishes self bound to do, and unless this order herein solicited ed. And whereas the said Privy council did report and be granted by the court, the probability is that the derecommend to His Most Gracious Majesty, and His femiant will avoid the service of this writ until the period Most Gracious Majesty did order, that the said report and of the plaintiff's leave expires. True it is that the planrecommendation herein next mentioned should be punctu- tiff might apply for an extension of leave, and perhaps ally complied with, decree and order, that the costs of the Commander-in-Chief might grant it : but how long could the plaintiff remain absent from his regiment without detriment to the service, to meet the wishes of The Advocate General hereon added that Mr. Tandy. he understood that Mr. Tandy is connected with a paper called the Agra Ukhbar, in which he has stated his readiness to meet the plaintiff in this court, and defend this action, and ascribed the delay to him. If so, why does he not abide by his word and enter his appearance on this summons.

The Chief Justice here observed to the Advocate-General, that his allusion as to what has appeared in the 23.1 of April 1835 be paid out of the founds standing to neral, that his allusion as to what has appeared in the the General credit of these causes in manner following, Agra Ukhhar on this subject, could not be admitted in

The Advocate General' replied, that he was aware of Mesers. Henry Young and John Jackson their soloci- that. He likewise knew that he could enter a return of tors and the costs of the East India Company to Edward non inventus to the Sheriff's writ and thus "enter up an ex-parte judgment, but as the libel materially affected | deceased's estate on behalf of Mr. Parlybean, the the plaintiff's character he wished to be personally pre- Executor to the will. sent in court, and have the writ served on the defendant, to enable the case to be heard, and his character vindicatedan open court. The plaintiff did not seek to recover damages, no money would satisfy him : all he sought was a full hearing of his case if not an ex-parte judgment.

The Chief Justice observed, that even if the order prayed for were granted yet even then the plaintiff could not prevent the defendant giving him an ex-parte decree, if he felt disposed to do so, for he might not appear to defend, or let judgment go by default.

The Advocate General said that was true, but that whom the subpoenas could not be served, and thus the sired deponent and Mr.

The Chief Justice replied, that he recollected that this motion had been made before him in Chambers shortly before this term, and he had refused the application as being irregular with leave to the plaintiff to move it during this term if he wished to do so : he then added that the court was still of opinion that this application cannot be granted. Mr. Tandy is a British subject living within the jurisdiction of this court, and if the Sheriff cannot serve the writ on him let him make a feturn of noninventus and the case can be heard and decreed exparte. With regard to a native who lives at Benates of elsewhere and his a gomashtah in Calcutta through whose agency he may contract debt in Calcutta, the court has allowed a service of a writ by sub-titution on the gomestah to be good service, but if the court were to allow the same ing witnesses subprenoed and examined. on this application, suits might be entered against Butish subjects and ex-parte decrees obtained without their ever knowing any thing about it. The application was refused accordingly.

The Judge, after all the motions were disposed of, said, that the court would pronounce jugdment in this term on the suits of Ousely versus Dwarkanath Pagore, and Cockerell versus Dickens, and that it would hear the argument in the case of Turton versus Mangles.

After this the court adjourned at a quarter after 12 o'clock till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.-Hurkaru, January, 9.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Knt., and Sir S. P. Grant, Knt.

IN THE GOODS AND CHATTELS OF MRS. S. E. FLOORD. DECEASED.

The Advocate General made a motion to examine an attesting witness to the will of the deceased, to enable will it ought to be filed in this court, and if it is a false. his client to take out letters of administration to the will, it ought to be suppressed.

The application was granted, and J. C. Mathews deposed, that he had known the deceased about two months previous to her demise. When she signed the will she was perfectly sensible, and when she died she was about forty-two years of age. She had a son, he is alive and might be about twenty years of age. The deceased was on bad terms with the son; and the son did not live in the same house with her, nor was he present when the will was signed. He learnt of itshortly after her demise. Deponent does not know how the son supports himself. Deponent is accuainted with a person named Deponent is acquainted with a person named Parlybean; he was the person who introduced depondit would show that his client had made every effort to ent to the deceased. Deponent does not know whether have the matter elucidated. He then said that there connexion existed between Parlybean and the deceased, was nothing extraordinary in this application, for if he but they lived on very intimate terms. The other attestremembered ought in an action in a former term, the ing witness to the will is a person named Langdon. Court had granted an order to subpose a the witnesses to This will was drawn up by Mr. Hudson, the Attorney the signature of some female witnesses in the case, on at law, by the desire of Mr. Parlybean, and he dewhom the subposens could not be served, and thus the sired deponent and Mr. Langdon to witness its signawitt was served by substitution, as likewise in the case of ture. When the deceased signed the will Mr. Hudson Mudden Mohon Mitter, where one of the parties lived was not present. Deanother at Allighur, and that this be admitted as good ponent then informed her, that in signing her will, she should write her name and not Parly bean's, and then she wrote her name. Deponent cannot conjecture why a woman who was sensible would make so great a mistake as to sign another person's name to her will. Deponent cannot say at what time the deceased's son came to the knowledge of this will -whether beto e or after the deceased's death, for he was not present when it was sign-Whether the property which the deceased has thus willed away was given to her by the father of her son or otherwise accrued, deponent does not know. Deponent does not know whether Mr. Hadson ever did any other bu-iness for the de cased besides this. The deceased was a woman of color.

The Advocate-General wished to have the other attest-

The Chief Justice replied, that he could do so, but he must cite the hearing at law and have the will proved and allow the opposite party the chance of cross examining the evidence. This application, he added, had been previously made in Chambers before Sir J. P. Grant. who refused granting the probate on the grounds already mentioned and give the applicant his choice of re-mooting the point in this term.

The Advocate General said, that he believed that his client would not be able to offer any further evidence than what has already been given, even by the examination of the other attesting witness to it, he therefore prayed the court to return the will to him.

The Chief Justice, after consulting Sir J. P. Grant, said that the Judges could not redeliver up the will after it had been filed in the court. It will be filed in the Registrar's Office for his report on it. If the will is a true ENTHE MATTER OF DWARKANATH TAGORE Persus R. SWIN- the same manth, Sheikh Assoud Ollah, called upon Mr. HOE. ATIONNEY AT LAW.

The Advocate-General ma'e a motion on behalf o' Dwarkanath Tagore, Esq. 1. Robert Swinhoe, Attorney at Law, to make the latter show cause why he should certain papers which Air. Hedger, hat Law, certain papers which Air. Hedger had sutrusted to him, on his written receipt to redeliver them to Mr. Hedger whenever Mr. Hedger may require them. Here the learned counsel read the receipt of Mr. Swinhoe to the Judge. He then said that in detailing the particulars of the transaction out of which this application " originated, he would be as concise as possible.

He then stated, that a person named Mahomud Ajeeb, died some years ago at II loghly, leaving a l'alook there called Dwar-Bhasnee between his sons and daughters. and appointed Sheikh Asso lollah, his eldest son, his executor, who accordingly administered to the state. Sheikh A-sodollah on the 2nd April 1834, mortgaged this Talook to Agah Manomed Curbullye, a merchant of Calcutta. It was covenanted in this mortgage, that the mortgagee was to pay on the 28th January 1835 to the mortgage: Res 4,000 with the interest of the bond up to that date, and the like amount yearly until the whole mortgage was liquidated, and in the event of his failing to fulfil this part of the agreement, it was provided that the martgager might at once enter into the possession of this estate and foreclose the mortgage. Subsequently Sheik Assdoo lah contracted a heavy debt to the firm of Messrs. Carr, Takore and Co., he likewise failed to pay the instalments on the mortgage as they became due, and when the mortgager was about to foreclose the mortgage and enter into possession of the estate, Messis. Carr, l'egore and Co., having bhamed information of this proceeding, became alaimed for the recovery of the money which Sheikh Assodollah owed their firm, and after consulting their attorney, Mr. Hedger, on the subject, they directed him to get an a-signment of the talook made over to them, on their advancing Seiki Associalian 17,968 rupees, the amount due with interest on the mortgage, to enable him to redeem it. This was done on the 19th May 1836, and in May 1837, Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. further paid the amount of the arrears of cent to due by the estate to Government, to prevent the collector seizing and letting it, for Sheikh Assodollah had let them get into arrears for a long time, and was indifferent on this point. There is a person named Rajchunder Mookerjea, who is a constituent of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. and had a large sum of money invested in their hands. He consulted Biboo Dwarkanath l'agore, as to the best mode of investing this sum and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore advised him to invest it in landed property. Sebsequently by the mediation of Baboo Dwarkauath Tagore, an agreement was entered into between Sheikh As odollah to sell this Talook to Baboo Rajchunder Mokerjea for 1,35,000 rupees, and it was further covenanted between Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore and Sheikh Assadollah, that the latter was to purchase Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row, for 40,000 rupees, which sum was to be paid to House Dwa kanath Tagore out of the purchase money of Sheikh Ass dollah's Talook to Baboo Reichunder Mookerjea.

In consequence of this arrangement, a draft was sent by Mr. Hedger, as the attorney of the purchaser, to Mr. R. Swinhoe, the attorney of Sheikt Assood Ollah, for the amount of the mortgage. Mr. Swinhoe, in reply, wrote back that the sum was insufficient; he likewise wrote to Mr. Hedger to send him the title deeds of Ba-boo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row. for inspection, and Mr. Hedger accordingly seat them to Mr. Swinhoe, who then gave the receipt which counsel had already read in courts. On the 18th June last, Hedger at his office, and prevailed upon him to accompany him to the office of Messrs. Cari, Tagore and Co. and show them the negociations for the sale of this Talook to Baboo Raj Chunder Mookerjea for R., 13,000 were renewed, as likewise the agreement for Sheikh As. sond Oliah, purchasing Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Explanate Row, for Rs. 40,000 In conformity with this agreement, Baboo Dwarkanath Pagore deliverel to Mr Hedger, his attorney, a signed assignment of his house in Esplanade Row, to Sheikh Assood Ollah. with instructions to deliver it to Mr. R. Swinhoe, Sheikh Assood Ollah's attorney, whenever Sheik Assoud Ollah would put into his hand the assignment of his talook to to Baboo Raj Chunder Mookerjea, signed by him and his prothers and sisters and witnessed by the husbands of his sister, Baboo Raj Chunder not deeming it safe to purchase the talook on any other conditions. On the 31st July last, Mr. Hedger, Mr. Paul, Baboo Dwarkanath l'agore and others, attended to execute and witness the executions of the assignments they were respectively to make to each other. On that occasion Mr. Paul, who is an Attorney of this court, brought to the nonce of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore several objections to the assignment made by Sheik Assood Oilah to Baboo Raj Chander Mookerjea. They were these. First, that although the sisters of Sheikh Assoud Ollah had signed the assignment, yet the hu-bands of none of them had witnessed it. Secondly, that there were several judge ments of this court perding for large amounts against Sheikh Assord Oilah, and his father Mohumed Ajeeb, and thirdly, that there were heavy arreads of ioni due by the estate to Government, and lastly, that the share of Mohimed Ajeeb in the Talook of Dooar Bashinge in Zillah Hoooghly was only 11 annas in the rupee and not 12 annas as the assignment had stated it to be.

This last objection, putting aside the others, was in usel a fatal one to the fullilment of the purchase by Bahon Raj Chunder Mookerjea of this estate; he therefore discontinued the negoriations and declined to purchase it. After these negociations were broken, Mr. Hedger wrote to Mr. R. Swinhoe on behalf of his client, Ba con Dwarkanath Tagore, to return to him the title deeds of his client's house in Esplanade Row, which had been promise to him by Mr. Hedger for inspection, on his promise to return them whenever Mr. Hedger may to quire them. Mr. Swinhoe then teplied, that if Mr. Heilger could succeed by obtaining an order new from the Supreme Court to compel him to deliver up the e papers ne would do so and not otherwise; for he considered the agreement for the sale of the house and the sale of his client's talook to be in force and binding on the contracting parties, and he therefore would keep the papers in his custody on behalf of his client Sheikh Associallah, nor could be consider himself justified, if he were to return them to Mr. Hedger on his simple application to him for them, under the existing circumstances of the case. He further intimated that it was his client's intention to file a bill in Equity against Baboo Rajchunder Mookerjea and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, to compel the former to purchase the Talook of Dooar Bashnee for 1,30,000 supees, and the latter to sell the house in Esplanade Row for 40,000 rupees to him.

The learned Counsel then argued, that this was a case in which there was no necessity for his client to bring an action against Mr. R. Swinhoe for Trover. In this case he submitted, that if this court had the power they ought to interfere summarily and grant an order nisi for Mr. R. Swinkoe, (who has unwarranta. bly taken upon himself the office of a judge between his client and Baboo Dwarkanth Tagore, and illigally detained the title deeds of his house, which were entrusted to him (on his written promise to deliver them up to Mr. Hedger whenever he may require them.) to show cause hese pegociations were interrupted but on the 14th of why he detains these papers, and that the court can and has the power to interfere, he submitted, will be proved | Advocate-General for a rule nisi for Mr. R. Swinhoe to to the court's assisfanction by a reference to the 3d vol. of Term cases, page 275, in the case af flughes persus Muir, in which the application was granted, and which case is analogous to this case in Strange's Trails vol. 1st p. -in the case of Strong vs. Home, which likewise was similar to this case and had the application granted. With regard to the sace of auton vs. Datter in the same volume, the Advocate-General contended that it differed materially from the present case. Then the Attorney received the documents from his client and therefore refused to deliver them up to any other persons In this case counselargued there was an anomaly at law, for Mr. R. Sw nhoe was illegally detaining Baboo Dwarfanath's title deeds on which he fancies his client has a hen, whilst Assood Ollah, his client, is in possession of the l'alook, and not only enjoying the rents of it, but likewise annually depreciating the value of the Talook and thus injuring the mortgager's interest in it by letting the Government rent accumulate. With regard to Mr. Swinhoe's assertion that he would deliver up to Mr. Hedger the title deeds of Baboo Dwarkanath's house in Esplanade Row, whenever Mr. Hedger would deliver up to Mr. R. Swinhoe the title deeds of Sheikh Assood Ollah's Talook of Dooar Bishuee, he begged to remark that the parties stood in a very different position; for Mr. Hedger's client by having advanced a large sum, had a hen on the little deeds of the Ta'ook whereas there was no such hen on the title deeds of his chent's house, and therefore their detention could not be justified.

The Chief Justice, after having ascertained, on enquiry from the attorney of Sheikh Assood Ollah, that no bill had been as yet filed by his client in the equity side of this court, to compel the parties to abide by then several contracts, informed the Advocate-General, that he differed very widely from him with regard to Mr. R. Swinhoe's client not having a lien on the title deeds of Bahoo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row, especially after the Baboo had signed an a-signment of it to Mr. R. Swinhoe's client. With regard to the cases of Hughes vs. Muir and Strong vs. Home, they differed in some respects from this case, and in the former Lord Kenyon, the judge who granted the application for a rule of nisi, give a very qualified order. Had there been no contract for sale of the house, and had not Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore signed an a-signment of it, the court might then have taken the matter of a summary interference into their consideration; but as it is, the court would be deciding on a simple application backed by an affidavit the proceedings of an Equity case, and were Mr. Swin-hoe's client thereafter to institute a suit in Equity against him for the possession of these title deeds, the order of the court would not be a sufficient reply on behalf of R. Swinhoe to that suit. Had the case been one where an attorney received the papers in trust from his client, and refused to deliver them uh to him, the court might have granted a rule nisi on a simple application for the attorney to show cause; but in the present instance they must refuse the application.

Sir I. P. Grant, after remarking that he coincided with the Chief Justice in his view of the case, added that the court is bound to see, and will see, that the attornies, attached to it, do not abuse the trust confided in them; that there was a trust counded in Mr. Swinhoe, when he received these title deeds, there is not the slightest doubt; but it is a question that after Babon Dwafkanath had made an agreement of the house to Mr R. Swinhoe's client, and then atterwards refuse to abide by it, in consequence of Baboo Itajhchunder Mookerjea declining to purchase his client's talook, whether it become imperative in him to consider that trust reposed in him to be in favor of his client, or Mr. Hedger. Mr. Swinhoe naturally considered it to be in favor of his client, and such is the view this court at present is instined to take of it; therefore the application of the show cause why he detains these papers cannot be granted. The application was then refused.

After this motion was made for the examination of a witness to prove the will of one of the Bysacks, which was granted, and the witness examined by Mr. Pearson. After the muttons had been disposed of, the Chief Justree enquired, and ascertained from Mr. Dickens, that there was one case set down for hearing on the equity board. The court then adjourned till il o'clock A. M. to-morrow. - Hurkaru, January 10,

Before the Chief Justice.

Mr. L. Clarke made a motion on behalf of a persoit named Bhowanychurn Roy. He said that this person had been in the March Se-sions of 1828 tried and convicted for forgery, and sentenced to be transported to the S E. Coast of Maitaban for seven years. The period of his sentence having expired, he returned to Calcutta in December last. It appears that at the time he was arrested by the Police Othce there were Bank of of Bengal notes to the amount of Sa. Ra. 3,256 found on his person and 60 gold mohurs in specie. The notes the counsel has been informed are deposited in the custody of this court and the gold-monuis in that of the Police Office. Connsel therefore prayed the court that the court would pass an order for the restitution of these notes and gold-mohurs to the said Bhowonychura

The Judge replied the court would institute an enquiry regarding the Bank notes said to be deposited in this court, and having ascertained the result of the investigation pass an order regarding them; but with regard to the gold-molius said to be lodged in the Police Office, the Judge informed the counsel that this court would pass no order about them as yet, and counsel had better advise his client to make an application regarding them to the Police Magistrates, who no doubt would pass an order on his petition.

The learned Counsel observed, that all that his client required was an order regarding the notes deposited in the Supreme court-he believed there would be no disheulty regarding the coins at the Police Office.

Mr. Edward Black took the usual oaths to-day, and was admited as an attorney on the rolls of this court,

Mr. C. R. Princep made an application to prove a will by the evidence of one of the attestating witness to it, who he said was in court. Council observed that in this case the deceased, after he had executed the will and shortly previous to his demise, had in the presence of the attestating witnesses to it erased the names of two of the legatees mentioned in 11, and had thereby, to its prejudice, leit the whole estate under the sole control of the executor to the will.

The Judge observed, that under the circumstances mentioned by the counsel in behalf of this application, he would decline to examine only one witness, and desired council to have both the attesting witnesses in court by Monday next, when they could be examined and the will proved.

The case of T. E. M. Turton vs. R. D. Mangles, was likewise fixed for hearing on Monday next.

After this a few more motions of no great importance were made and the court adjourned till 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow .- Hurkaru, January 12.

In the matter of Ilingun Khan and others ?. Bebee Anfeerun and others.

Mr. Leith made a motion in this case on behalf of Mr. Thompson, an Attotney of this court, to be exempted from acting further as compliment's attorney in this suit on an affidavit of Mr. Thomson.

The affidavit stated, that deponent had been engaged by Himgun Khan, who had represented himself to be the agent of Rosher Beches and others. Deponent could not obtain any advance of costs from Hingun Khan, who is already indebted to deponent for office fees in this suit, is further more in fail, for costs due to Beebee Ameerun. Hingun Khan has subsequent to his confinement, apphed to this court to be permitted to carry on his cause forma pumperis, and this application has been granted, and deponent, is willing to resign the sole management of it to pauper's attorney; and counsel moved that a rule nin be granted in the use to serve a notice by substitution on Hingun Khan in jail, to inform him of this deponent's discontinuance as attorney in this case.

The Judge replied, that the applicant must first endeavour to serve the rule nisi on the principal chents in this case, and if he does not know where they reside, he must endeavour to find out the name of the village, and if it is a large village the street in which these parties reside; and after he has done his utmost to serve the order on them and failed, then he may apply for a substitution of service.

The counsel replied, that the parties resided in the village of Belloor, in the Zillih of Khanpoor, a great distance from here, and that they were strangers to Mr. Thompson. Further, it would cost Mr. Thompson 3 or 400 rupees to serve this order, even if he succeeded in serving it, which be doubted, and Mr. Thompson was already a sufferer in this case, and could not afford to suffer a further loss.

The judge replied, that he had given his order and he would not alter it.

On a motion made by the Advocate-General, Mr. William Adam, was sworn in to-day as Officiating commissioner of the Court of Requests, in the room of C. W. Brietzcke, E-q., chief commissioner of that court, now absent on leave.

The case of Turton v. Mangles has been fixed for Learing on Thursday next the 18th instant.

After this a few other unimportant motions were made and disposed of, and the court adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow morning .- Hurkaru, Jan. 17.

John Moore v. Thomas Driver.

Mr. Advogate General moved for a rule to show cause why the trial of this case should not be postponed, on the ground of the absence of Mr. Crawford, whose evidence is material for the defence. The plaint was filed on the 13th instant, and Mr. Crawford sailed for the Isle of France nine days ago, from whence he is expected to return in a short time .- Rule nisi.

E. K. Hume v. Stephens and others.

Hume, deceased, made by him to the complainant; and that it be referred to the Master to enquire and report whether the complainant ought to pay to the receiver any, and if any, what rent for the estate since the 12th of October 1836, and in what manner such rent should be apportioned between the complainant and defendants. The learned counsel moved on the affidavit of Mr. Butcher, the constituted attorney of Mr. Hume, which set forth, that on the 28th of June 1836, the receiver granted a lease of the real estate to the complainant for the term of three years from the 12th of April the same year, he the complainant agreeing to pay for the first year rupees 21,000 and for the second and third year rupees 27,000. Previous to the appointment by the court of a receiver, Mr. Thomas Bird and Mr. J. C. Sarkies had been appointed by Mr. Cracroft, who was then judge of Dacca, guardians of the persons and the estates of the children of Stephens, one of the defendants. This appointment by Mr. Cracroft was confirmed by the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, but afterwards Mr. Sarkies was discharged from the guardianship. In September 1835, an injunction was granted by this court, enjoining the defendants and Mr. Bud to desist from collecting and getting in the rents. Nevertheless they did not desist, and the receiver appointed by the court, has never been able to put the complainant into possession. Under these circumstances, Mr. Hume is desirous that the lease granted to him by the receiver appointed by the court should be cancelled, and that it be referred to the Master in the terms of the order.

Mr. Leith, on behalf of the infant defendants, showe l cause against the application, on the grounds that Mr. Hume as lessee under a formal leval lease, hal no right to intervene in this suit to seek a reference to the Master, to reduce the amount which he had covenanted to pay by his lease, and try on the equity side of the court, his legal liabilities and the receiver's legal rights against him. The learned couns I stated, that his clients were interested in opposing any deduction of the amount of the rent agree! to be paid by Mr. Hume, as they were entitled to a moiety of it, and could not consent to a reference to the Master which would entail considerable expense. He asked that the motion should be discharge ed with costs against Mr. Hume.

The court discharged the motion with costs, reserving liberty to Mr. Hume to renew his application on the same grounds if the receiver's consent can be obtained.

T. E. M. Turton, v. F. and C. E. Mangles.

This was an argument on the plea filed by the defen-

Mr. Prinsep, with whom was Mr. Sandes, opening the plea, which set forth, that by an order made by the Recorder in the Mayor's court of the city of London, the 10th March 1836, in a cause then pending, wherein defendants were the plaintiffs and complainant defendant, it was ordered that all matters in difference be referred to arbitration. It was also agreed that plaintiffs and defendants should not bring any bill in equity against each other. On the 18th April 1836, the arbitrators published their award, adjudging that all proceedings in the cause should cease, and that the complainant should pay to the defendants £362-6-5, in full of all demands. The complainant before filing his bill in this court, did nay by his agents, the amount thus awarded. The subject of the suit was included in the reference, and was taken into consideration by the arbitrators. The learned counsel stated, that the action at law arose out of advances made in London by defendants to Captain Gillet of the ship Ernand, of which vessel Mr. Turton was the Mr. Clarke moved on notice on the part of the com-owner. It was agreed to refer disputes to arbitration, plainant, that the receiver appointed in this cause be at and the award was made in London as pleaded. In liberty to cancel the lease of the real estate of Mary the mean time before this adjustment was known.

complainant filed his bill in the Supreme Court, and pay the full amount into complainant's hand; - that Calcutta. The award has been prid.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke were heard in support of the bill.

But the court allowed the plea, and dismissed the bill, each party to pay his own costs.—Englishman, Jan. 19.

'Lucknarain Moorkeejee v. Paul E. Roussac.

In this case the plaintiff is or was banian to the firm of Roussac, Brothers in this town; defendant is not a member of that firm, but was employed to manage their firm during the absence of the partner in France. During this period be borrowed from the plaintiff sums of money, or government paper, on which sums of money were raised, of rupees 4,900, rupees 6,000, rupees 800, and on the 6th of March last, rupees 3.000, in all about rupees 10,000. For this he gave his promisory notes and undertaking to return the paper. The last note had been endorsed over to a tund party, who on its non-payment, brought his action against the plaintiff and recovered damages and costs, both of which were paid. The present action was brought to recover the sums of money abovementioued, and also the costs of the action against the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke for the defendant, admitted that all the sums were proved, save one for 800 inpees, of which the only evidence was that of a sucar, who placed the amount to defendant's debit, by direction of the plaintiff, in a Bengalli account book. The defendant, however, pleased a set off, to have deducted and allowed to him from the plaintiff's claims, a sum of rupees 3,500.

It appeared in evidence, that one of the bills, drawn by defendant, accepted by plumiff, had been discounted by the Bank of Beng d. On this note an action was brought by the Bank, and in its progress the parties assembled at the chambers of Mr. Sandes, the Bank's solicitor where, it was sworn a check on the Union Bank was given by defendant to plaintiff, payable to Moischunder Bonnorjee, the plaintiff's in piece. Moischunder was instructed by his uncle to take the money to Mr. Sandes. The trial turned caurely on this, whether the amount of the check was paid by the defendant, on account of the firm of Roussac, Brothers, or on his own account.

The court allowed the set off, and gave a verdict for the amount, claimed, less rupees 3,590.

For the plaintiff, the Advocate General and Mr. Sandes. For the defendant, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Barwell.

II. Kyte, v. Hullodhur Day and others.

Mr. Gochrane, on the part of complainant, moved for an injunction to restrain two of the above defendants from receiving, and the sheriff from plying over a sum of rupess 1348, in the hand of the latter levy, seized in an action, in which one of the defendants on the plea side of the court was plaintiff, and Henry Kyte the leftendant, under a writ of fieri facia. The grounds on which the learned counsel moved were certificate of bill filled, an affilizvit of plaintiff that Hullodhur Day was the father of the two other defendants, and had been retained by Kyte in superintending a coach building concern of his, on an understanding that he was to receive five per cent. on all business brought by him to the yard.—That Hullodhur had received from Kyte three notes of hand, one or rupees 400, one for rupees 500, and another for supees 1,100;—that on these he premised to obtain money in place of so doing he had received bills to the amount of rupees 3,000, of which it was believed he had recovered the full amount, but had not paid over any part of the same, or of any part of the notes granted to him and his sons. That Hullodhur had left the service of the complainant and had, in the names of his three sons, filed three distinct actions on the notes given as before stated. In the one, complainant being arrested, paid the money. In another, Hullodhur had obtained an exparte judgment, and under an execution seized the sum sought to be detained in court by the injunction; -that on the third action he had also obtained an eaparte judgment and was proceeding to execution. It was stated to obtain a rule nist (the late Rule of court requiring that all motions for injunction should be on notice) that the money in the hands of the Sheriff was payable to day, and that it was the belief of complainant if it passed into defendant's hands, they would abscond out of the jurisdiction, and the complainant would lose his money, and be without remedy, neither of the defendants having property and the defendant Hullodhur having taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act.

The Court said the motion must be on notice, which would restrain parties from taking the money until motion heard. That the affidavt did not state the irreparable injury contemplated by the rule which formed the exception, and that they could not grant the application but on notice which might be given at once.—

John Moore v. Thomas Driver.

This was an order nisi, obtained on a former day, calling on the plaintiff to shew cause why this trial should not be postponed.

M1. Advocate General now moved the rule absolute.

Mr. Prinsep shewed cause, insisting that the defendant's grounds were not sufficient; that they were vague and unsatisfactory, merely stating the absence of Mr. Crawtord, who, it is alleged, has paid the money for which the action is brought, but nothing was stated to show, the alleged payment could not be proved by the partners of the firm of Gilmore and Co.

But the court thought the grounds sufficient, and made the rule absolute.

John Aitchinson v. J. A. Currie.

This was a demurrer to the plea of the defendant. The action was brought to recover the amount of wages due to the plantiff far his services as an engineer in the Howish Dock-yard. The defendant pleaded the general risue, and the non-performance of a contract, plantiff hiving quitted defendant's service without giving notice. To this plea defendant demurred.

The court allowed the demurrar on the first, second, and third counts, and directed an issue to prove the contact—Englishman, January 23.

E. K. Hume v. Stephens and others.

In this cause, the order was made, referring to the Master to enquire and report whether or not the lease ought to be cancelled, on payment of any, and if any, what sum of money, by the complainant to the receiver, and how such money, when received, ought to be apportioned. — Englishman, January 26.

and commercial point of view, was at the time we left, in progress of argument in the Supreme court, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Grant presiding. It was the appeal of the Assignees of Fergusson and Co. against the decision of Mr. Justice Malkin in the Insolvent 6,54,029. Mr. Clarke afterwards became a banktopt court, in the matter of the Assignees of David Clark against the Estate of Fergusson and Co., who claimed to be allowed to prove for about six lakes of rupees. Sir B. Malkin decided in favor of the claim to prove against the estate, and hence the appeal by the Assignees of Fergusson and Co.

Mr. David Clark retired from the firm in Calcutta in April 1827, and on his going out of the house, upon a balance of accounts being struck between the parties, an agreement by way of dissolution of partnership (we believe) was entered into by the other parties with Mr. D. Clark, and he was credited with a certain sum which he left in the house, and which after certain fluctuations now amounts, according to the Assignees of Mr D Clark, to about six lacs.

The decision of Mr Justice Malkin is appealed on the ground that there was abundant evidence before him to shew, that at the time the partners entered into the agreement with Mr D Clark the house was in-olvent; and that there was in point of fact, nothing in the books to the gredit of Mr D. Clarke, The Advocate-General and Mr. Leth for the Assignees admit, that had the transaction · heen bona fide, and had the house been solvent at the time between legal and moral fraud. APPEAL TO THE SUPREME COURT FROM A DECISION OF THE INSOLVENT COURT.

of Fergusson and Co.

Appellant-Elliot Macnighten, Esq., Assignee.

Counsel .- The Advocate General and J. F. Leith

Attorney .- Mr. Waldington,

For the Respondents .- Counsel .- Longueville Clarke, Esq , and William Patrick Grant, Esq.

Attornies .- Messrs, Wight, Boyle and Thomas,

In the case Mr. David Clarke was the head of the firm of Messrs. Fergus-on and Co.; he lett India in $826, and retired from the firm on the 30th of April, at stake, and the question was to which of two bodies of 1827, joining the London firm of Fairlie, Bonham and creditors both of whom had been sufferers, the law would Co. On his retirement, the remaining partners admitted give it; he should therefore press every point of law and that sicca suppers 8,31,636 stood to his credit, and wasdue fact which could avail his clients, a course which the mess of this balance having by subsequent investigation Clarke and his creditors,

A case of very considerable interest, both in a general (been doubted, he voluntarily gave up two lakks of rupees. But even the amount due to him after this ielinquishment frequently varied, from consignments made by him, and remittances made to him, and on the failure of Fergusson and Co., the balance to his credit was in England, and the respondents were appointed bis assignees. They claimed a dividend from the state of Fergusson and Co. on the sum standing to Mr. Clarke's credit. This was resisted by Mr. Macnaghten. The Assignee of Fergusson and Co., and a petition was ascordingly presented to the Insolvent Court, where it was decided by Mr. Justice Malkin, that the estate of Mr. Clarke was entitled to the dividend and against the decision, the present appeal was presented.

> The Advocate General in support of the appeal, contended that the decision below was erroneous as ag on t law and facts. He doubted the authority of Ex 16000 Peak, the case on which the Conneil for the English Assignees and Mr. Justice Malkin had principally relied. Sii Thomas Piumer, by whom that ease was decided, had been undoubtedly an emment Lawyer: but the greater part of his life was spent in courts of Common Law, and he had never been distinguished for his knowledge of Equity. He cited the case of Anderson ressus Maliby, 24 Vessey jumor, 244, which is stated to be completely in point, and read passages were the Lord Chancellor's judgment to show the ois more a Ex-parte Fed.

Mr. Leith followed on the same side, and in a loston to what had been urged by the Advocate - Greend, contended that it was most natural that air Clarks should have been very desirous of retiring from the House In the matter of the petition of Samuel George and Ed. and would domuch to effect has object; now one who ward Edwards, Assignees of David Clarke, and the estate knew the uncertainties, anxieties, and misories, att noing a Calcutta mercantile life for the last fifteen years, vontil readily comprehend this feeling. He likewise argued that the deed of dissolution of partnership was void for what of consideration as Mr. David Clarke gave no consideration to the remaining partners for the eight laklis of rupes the was to receive, and for taking on themselves his liabilities.

Mr. Longueville Clarke for the English Assignees, stated, that he should conduct this case in a very different manner from what he would do, or would deem proper, were he appearing for Mr. Clarke or any of the partners. It was an immense sum of money which was by the house to him, but in consequence of the correct- would not adopt, were the question between Mr. David

In the first instance he denied the right of his friends been committed. Having thus disposed of the law, he be heard, because he said they must shew their right would up come to the facts. These depend upon oral oppose before their opposition could be entertained, and written testimony. The oral evidence consisted of the Assignee only represented the creditors and lifthey the depositions of Mr., T. H. Gardener, a clerk in the to be heard, because he said they must shew their right to oppose before their opposition could be entertained, The Assignee only represented the creditors and if they had no right to oppose, he could have none. First he contended that no creditor could oppose, unless he had been a creditor of Mr. David Clarke's, that is a creditor of the house previous to April 1827, and had continued to be so ever since, 2-lly, that right would be lost, had such creditor known of Mr. Clarke's retirement and con-enter transfer his credit to the remaining partners. This had been decided in the Court of Exchequer so recently as April last, in Captain Hart versus Henry Alexander, 2d Meeson and Wetsby 4d8.

The Chief Justice. The Assignees hold the fund, you demand a payment from them; how can you say they have no right to be heard against making that payment?

Mr. Clarke said the right to be heard, was consequent; on the right to resist payment, the right to resit was based on the right to invalid ite the arrangement made between Clarke and his partners, but no sebsequent creditor, nor any creditor who had transferred his credit, was affected by or could question that arrangement; therefore, it followed that those who were not in a situation to question the arrangement, could have no right to be heard. Now, before the creditors could question the arrangement, they ought to show that they had a right to do so; but there was not one tittle of evidence in the court below to shew, that the Assignee represented any creditor of Mr. David Clarke's or that any of the present creditors of Fergusson and Co., were creditors in April 127. The onus probandi was with them.

The Chief Justice. - Phis is arguing on a circle. The Assigneed has a right to resist payment, but it by no means follows that he has a right to enforce it. We think he has a right to be heard, but on being heard, if he does not prove he has night to oppose another question may arise, but nevertheless we must hear him.

Mr. Clarke stated he would not argue against the opinion of the cour much less would be do so when the weight of his objection would avail him equally on the consideration of the whole question. He would therefore go to the ments. He would at once acknowledge the correctness of the law of all the cases cried by the Alvocate-trenerd, and he would show from them, that his found was in error in questioning the correctness of Peak's case. Nothing in lact could be more clear, more simply, than the law applicable to this case. It was all to be found in Peak's case, and the other cases instead of difficing from, sup orted that decision. This was the law. It the arrangement for Mr. Clarke's retirement was made with the intention of defrauding the creditors, then it was bad; but if not, then it was good. Knowledge of Insolvency by the partners at the time of making the arrangement did not of itself constitute proof of fraud, but it might be coupled with other circu astances by evidence of it. In Peak's case, knowledge of Insolvency without other circumstances was held not to be sufficient; in the other cases, there were strong circumstances coupled with this knowledge, and therefore trand was held to be proved. There was, therefore, no contradiction in any of the cases, they all established the leading prin ciple, whether or not the evidence amounted to a proof of fraud. Mr. Pearson had disclaimed attributing moral frand to the partners of Forgusson and Co., but he argued that they had been guilty of legal fraud; he denied broadly that any such distinction could exist in this case; he would take the high ground, and tell the court and his friend, that in his opinion, if the partners gave this sum to Mr. David Clarke, knowing there was a deficiency in the house, that all of them had been guilty of the grossest moral traud. He would draw no nice dis-house, Mr. McKellegan, the book keeper, and Mr. Fergusson, one of the partners. [Here Mr. Clarke read the three depositions commenting on them as he proceeded.]

The only evidence referred to by his friend, was that of Mr. Gardener's, whose subordmate employment in the firm, prevented his having any intimate knowledge of their affire; but putting that aside, for he was determined to take the high ground, he challenged his friend to point out one single line which could even imply, that in Mr. Gardener's suspicion the firm was insolvent in 1827. There was nothing approximating to such a notion; how then could this evidence help them! Bit what said Mr. McKellegan. He had been the book-keeper from 1823, and in reality knew from his peculiar duties the pecuniary affairs of the house better than the partners themselves. He swore that the house was perfectly solvent, that he would have tru-ted it to any extent, and that Mr. Adam Freer Smith, now an emment merchant in Calcutta, but then a clerk in the house, and thoroughly cognizant of its affins, applied for admission as a partner on Mr. David Clarke's retirement. Mr. McKellegan was an independent man, he had never been in the house, and wis now the first member of one of the richest houses here. Mr. bergusson, of whom he would say without fear of contradiction, that no one was more esteemed as a merchant or a man, swore to the same tiets. How they shood the case ! Had these gentlemen perjured measures! If not, the decision of the court below could not be altered. He liked to put things on the borost and, therefore, what he conceived the real ground. He would therefore ask, could the court with the searcy evidence before them, which they had sappose that they could un leistand the affairs of Furgusson and Co., in April 1827, better thin Mr. Mckeliegan the book-keeper, and Mr. Fergusson, the partner I It not, they must then be gooded by their evidence, or disbeheve it-or in other words, for he liked plan language, they must et ler believe them and support the decision of the court, fire, or if they revened it, pronounce them to be gody of colds rate perjury. There was no drawing the law a there were no nice distinctions in this part of the case, any more than there were in the other. He now come to the documentary evidence. The coart would recollect that when a batimee of 18,35,104 was found to be due to the partners in April 1827, they were ranked among creditors of the house. The balance due to them was always treated as any other debt of the house. Now take the first account made up in March 1828, that shows 6,63,913 deficit, that is what is due to creditors beyond the assets; but among what is due to creditors, is what was due to the partners, namely 12,85,101; so that had all the creditors, but the partners, been paid, the surplus would have been 6,21,493. Now the partners might do what they pleased with their own, and Mr. David Clarke having given up two likhs, the portion assigned to him was only 10,141 beyond the assets of the house. So much for the first calculation; but the second shewed a very different state of affairs; then the deficit, instead of being 6,33,612 in five months after, showed a deficit of 401, thus leaving a surplus, after paying all debts, of 12,84,703.

Look then at this documentary evidence; it was ludicrous to say that it was any proof of the house being insolvent. In point of fact, the proof was the other

But the case did not rest here. Hitherto he had confined himself to the appellant's evidence, let him now turn to his clients'. There it will be found that these two unctions; if the House were not solvent, and complete accounts were made up not between the pattners and ly solvent, then he said that agross moral fraud had creditors, but between the partners themselves. There account, which was a fund expressly reserved to meet bad debts, or an evil hour. To the creditors this fund belonged, but the partners never touched it; therefore in making up accounts between themselves, they never referred to it. This fund in 1327 amounted to 62 tacks of rupees, and was not included in the calculations produced by the appellants, as between the partners and the creditors it would be included; and, therefore, the 60 lakhs ought to be added to the calculations produced, which made it ludicrous to talk of the insolvency of the house at that period. Mr. Clarke then went into an examination of the Gloucester Mills accounts, shewing the vicissitudes of mercanile speculations. This property had cost him 10 lakles, in a few years after it was sold for 2 lakhs by the assignces, and then sold for 6 lakhs by the purchasers from them. Again in regard to debts, there was equal uncertainty, many were es eemed good, which turned out bad, and many were con-idered ho peless Wight were among the latter; he found them noted bad, and afterwards principal and interest paid in full.

Mr. W. P. Grant supported Mr. Clarke. He went at great length into the accounts explaining the nature of the suspense account, and attacking the Advocate General for a want of proficiency in mercantile accounts, He also went at great length into other points not touched on by Mr. Clarke, especially the law relating to the hability of partners as between them and their creditors.

In March and October, 1826, did not shew a complete when the following dialogue took place. state of in-olvency. There the word deficit was used, and over that his frends could not get. There was he had ever admitted that he was ignorant of accounts; termed Italian book keeping a system which to him appeared to have been invented by merchants, with its others in the dark and my-tifying themselves.

The court, after short deliberation, stated they would deliver their judgment at an early day .- Hurk. Jan. 29.

An interlocutory decree ad computandum had been obtained in April 1835. but the final decree was not dated until the 1st of November, 1837, so that the present bill was filed antecedently to the latter, though subsequently to the former dearce. The bill was taken pro cinfesso against all be the defendants except the three infants who had put in their answers in February and March 1637.

it will be found, that there was a fund called the suspense of Doorgachurn Monkerjee, who were making away with it to avoid the effect of the decree of this court.

> MrPrinsep and MrCochrane for the infant defendants. This is a mere experimental bill, wholly novel and unprecedented both in form and principle. The decree upon which the complainants ground their alleged title to relief from this court, was not in existence at the time when the bill was filed. As to the interlocutory decree of April 1835, it only directs an account, and therefore establishes nothing more than a possibility the a claun might at some future period accrue to the defendants. Smith versus Eyles, Atkyn's Rep, is an authority that a mere decree quod computet does not affect the right of dealing with the property, and that a final decree alone can put the parties in the position of creditors.

> Mr Clarke in reply urged, that even the interlocutory decree gave the complainant a right against the estate so far as to entitle him to relief from this court, although it did not precisely define the amount of his claim.

> The court postponed judgement, and rose at three o'clock.-Hurkaru, January 31.

Does he know what is meant by letter to his brother. Would any, but men conscious of, taking an oath? No. If he tells hes and falschoods, and weighed down by insolvency, have written to that does he know it is displeasing to God? No he does not effect. His friend Mr. Grant was wrong in stating that know. Does he know that it is wicked to say what is he had ever admitted that he was ignorant of accounts; false? He does know that. Does he know that God but this he had done be had admitted and did admit that will punish those who swear falsely? He does not. Has he was ignorant of that system which is magnificently he been taught where wicked people will go in the next world? He does not know that. Has he heard of Hea-ven and Hell? No he has not. Of what persua-ion is entry and double entry, for the sole purpose of keeping the? A Roman Catholic. What prayers has he learnt? A moral poem in Tamil. Has his father taught hun any prayers? The ten commandments to pronounce. Does he know any commandment about bearing false witness? He does not know it. Has he learnt any commandment? He has learnt ten. Which of the ten can he say? No reply. The boy was sent to the Grand Jury with a message that he was not to be examined on oath as he did not comprehend the obligations of it.

We have given the above, not for the sake of pointing out the ignorance of the witness, for although stated to be eight years old he hardly looked five, and was perhaps confounded at being so closely interrogated in open Court ; and still less to question the propriety of persons being strictly examined, as to the sacred obligation of an oath'; but to suggest whether something like the foregoing enquiry might not be beneficially extended to a very considerable pertion of the persons who go into the witness box; and whether any thing is so likely to impress the natives with contempt for the ceremony of swearing as the slovenly manner in which oaths areusually administered For our own part, we do not believe that a person who would assert a deliberate false-hood would have much hesitation in breaking an oath ! but whilst oaths are legally considered necessary, they certainly ought not to be mumbled over in a whisper, as they constantly are in our courts of Justice and in possession of the present defendants, the representatives cases of improtance, where the liberty and even life o. prisoners is at stake, we can imagine that great advantage would be derived by closely questioning the principle under these circumstances we contend no means should under these circumstances we contend no means should be derived by closely questioning the principle.

Supreme court, during which period we have had occasion to watch the evidence with some attention, our decided conviction is, that the natives of this country, as the moral penalty which he incurs the court will be pal witnesses as in the case of the lad on Monday he left untried to cheek so enormous an evil. The simplest method we can recommend is to impress the witness with the awful responsibility of calling God to After several years pretty close attendance in the bear testimony to a lie, by obliging him distinctly and opposite court, during which period we have had deliberately to repeat the oath or allegation in the face of the court, and by warning him that, in addition to a body, have no more hesitation in asserting what is always ready and willing to inflict the highest punishfalse in the witness box than they have out of it. We believe our opinion coincides, with that of most persons jury.—Madras Herald, Jan. 17.

INSOLVENT COURT.

JANUARY 6, 1838. (Before Sir E. Ryan, Knight.)

IN THE MATTER OF GOVIND CHUNDER KUR AN INSOLVENT. Mr. Letth in opening the proceedings in this case, addressed the judge, and said that he had on a former occasion obtained an order from this court to examine this Insolvent regarding some landed property which it is alledged on behalf of his assignee, and the creditors on it. The spot of ground to the east of Sree Ram of the estate, that he possesses within the jurisdiction of Mootee's garden, likewise belonged to deponent's grandthe Zillah of 24 Pergunnahs, and which he has omitted to insert in his Schedule filed in this court by him.

The Insolvent was accordingly sworn. He deposed that he has no separate dwelling house, but he and his then Mohon, nor does he know any ground at Rajhpoor family, together with his other relations, live in a house called Amrah Bagan. Deponent's grandfather had situated on 26 beggahs of ground in the village of Rajhpoor, within the jurisdiction of the Zillah of 24-Pergun-nahs. This house was the ancesterial property of his grandfather, Doorgah Ram Kur, who shortlyy previous to his demise, bestowed it by a deed of gift for religious purposes, on the goddess Radha Govindo Gee. The image of this diety is kept within the dwelling house, and is ou festival days brought out into the Hindoo-temple. Besides the Hindoo temple there is a Mahomedan Musjid likewise on this ground. Doorgah Ran Kur died leaving 4 sons, Ram Chunder Kur, deponent's father Kisshen Chunder Kur, who had 6 sons, 4 of whom are alive, Sumbhoo Chunder Kur, who had one son yet living, and Mohes Chunder Kur, who has a daughter. The deed of gift was executed by Doorga Ram Kur, 18 mother's previous to his demi-e, in Bengally. Depolitives at their request. Deponent's share was two annas nent was then only 10 or 11 years of age. He does in the rupee. Deponent does not know what was the not know whether the registry of this land was trans-annual amount of these collections. Deponent collectferred in the collector's books to the name of the deity after the deed of gift. He cannot say in whose name these lands are now entered in the collector's office, it might be in the joint names of Sumbhoo Chunder Kur and Mohes Chunder Kur; but deponent believes it to be in the name of the idol on which it was bestowed. This land was seized by the collector for arrears of rent, and sold about 4 or 5 months ago, and Baboo Isshur Chunder purchased it for 3,600 rupees. This sale happened before deponent was discharged by this court, This sale but he cannot say whether it was before deponent had made his application for an Insolvency. Deponent was made his application for an Insolvency. Deponent was at that time, in the jail of Calcutta. This land deponent imagines to be worth 6 or 7,000 rupees and not 30 co 40,000 rupees. After the seizure of these lands by the collector, deponent's relatives petitioned against the sale to the commissioner of Alipoor Division, Mr. Pigou, who, as the land was devoted to religious purand as such are not liable to assessment, cancelled the collector's sale. Deponent has no his brother Bindahur Kur; but the lands devoted to religious purposes is udper the general superintendence of them all, but Monesh Chunder Kur as the senior of the family is the nominal superintendent. Deponent's grandfather, besides the afore-aid land, possessed a garden house at Rajhpoor, situated on the banks of the River Ganges, which he at the time he made the deed of gi't alienly mentioned, bestowed on the goddess Gungu Mye, and there is no Government rent assessed father, who annexed it in this deed of gift as well as the adjoining beetelaut garden of 2 biggah's. The beetelauts grown in it are appropriated to the use of the idol and not sold. Deponent is unacquainted with Gopaul and Kisa house adjoining Chundy Chuin Sircar's at Rajhpoor; this house is converted to an abode for the pilgrims and songsters who worship at the shrine of the derty. Deponent does not know Bhowany Rov, nor is he aware of any lands his grandfather purchased from him. Seekdar Bagan, at the village of Goopy poor, contains Is biggahs of land; deponent does not know whether it was acquired by his grandfather, or sub-equently bought from the savings of the revenue of the other religious estates; it is devoted to religious purposes. Besides the lands already mentioned, deponent's grandfather left many other estates, many of which he has never seen, and does not even know their names. After the death of his uncle, deponent for a short period collected the rents of his share, and at times of the shares of his relaed the rents for about two years and a half. The accounts of these collections are in the custody of the shareholders at Rajhpoor and their gomastas. Since deponeut's confinement, his uncles and cousing have separated and therefore these gomastas are now dispersed; yet some of them may be forthcoming. Umbikha Jadub and Ramchund Boes, mohurirs, who collected and kept the account of these rents and do so still, are residing in Zillah 24-Pergunnahs in the village of virzapoor, and can be found if inquired after. Deponent's grandfather had a lower roomed house at Barreapoor called Peach Sahib's garden : this, together with an indigo factory at Erachee, were mortgaged to Baboo Juggeidernath Mullick by deponent's uncle for 5000 Rs shortly after the demise of Sumbhoo Chunder Kur, in 1242. This mortgage has not as yet been paid, and the property was totally sold for are are of Govern-ment rents. Deponent believes that he has entered it in his Schedule as forming a portion of his acceptorial preperty. The rente of Turf Seeta Koond exceed 200 share in any of these lands. Each of the deponent's Re annually : it is dedicated to the delty, but Kiete-nastes and .cousins look after their own share, likewise Ram poor, which is included in the Talook of Dangah is not devoted to religious purposes. Deponent had two annas share in Kisto Rampoor. Pergunnah Dangan was sold, together with the other landed property already mentioned, for arrears of Government rents, and purchased by Ramdhon Bose.

Deponent has inserted it in his Schedule. He knows Muddenpoor and Jugguderampore, but he cannot say how they were acquired. There are some estates acquired by deponent's uncle's and cousius in which he has no Ghose.

After denying all further knowledge of any other land. deponent deposed, that since his release he has not col lected the rents of any of these lands, but he has been occasionally consulted respecting them, and he has signed receipts for the rents received on behalf of the deity; but deponent did not receive the money, it was collected by sucars employed for that purpose. This money was all carried to the expense of the deity, and none of it devoted to present purposes. The ornaments and plates belonging to the idol are in the po-session of the depouent's uncles at Rajhpoor. No part of these have ever been sold by either him or his relatives. The lands are all rent free lands, and the deed of gift is in this court; it was delivered by deponent's uncle to Moorloosooden, a triend of his, to have it translated into English by Mr. Smith, the interpreter of the Supreme cont. After it had been translated, Moodoosooden gave it to deponent, who entrusted it to his attorney alr. N. Hudson. Moodoosooden has no employ at present; he lives and boards with deponent's uncle, and what his profession is deponent does not know. This ended the examination on behalf of the assignee.

The Advocate-General here put a question to this insolvent, but before he could answer it, the Chief Justice asked Mr. Pearson on whose behalf he appeared. Mr. Pearson replied on behalf of the insolvent. The Chief Justice then observed, that as the insolvent was already discharged, there was no necessity for this procedure.

Mr. Leith then begged the court's opinion on the testimony of this insolvent, and wished to have him in attendance again on the next Court day to confront his evidence with the depositions of the persons mentioned by him in u.

The Chief Justice replied that the court must take the insolvent's account of the lands as he gives it and his testimony appears to be consistent enough; but if the assignee wishes to examine him further, he can do so as often as he pleases, by an application to the court, or have him brought up again to confront his evidence by the testimony of the persons mentioned by him; but if he thinks that there are sufficient grounds to make out his case by the evidence already given by the insolvent, he can then, if he chooses, institute a suit in the Ziliah 24-Pergannalis court for the recovery of these lands, as these resituated in the jurisdiction of that court, and not the Supreme court of Calcutta. He then, at the request of Mr. Leith, order the insolvent to be in attendance again on the 27th instant the next court day, unless he received an official notice from the court that his attendance was not required.

After this a few miscellaneous motions were made, and the court, after despatching them, adjourned till Saturday the 27th instant. - Hurk. Jan. 8.

ALLIPORE COMMISSIONERS COURT.

DEC. 27, 1837.

(Before W. Cracroft, Esq., Judge.)

brother of Kassinath, claimant.

Suit of one seventh Share of 3,57,000 rupees.

The plaintiff stated, that his tather and the father of the derendants were brothers. Their granulather had eight sous, seven of whom died leaving cuildren. The plaintiff's lather and the delendant's lather joined then property together and accumulated it by their earnings. Plaininfi's lather died, leaving plaintiff an infant, and the father of the defendants brought up the plaintiff and his brother, the husband of the claimant, and he continued to give him and his brother then share of the profits of then mutual estates until the year 1235, B. S., when the plaintiff, who had been a dewan in the collectorate of Jessore, was muster on some charges brought against him ; and his protter, the busband of the claimant, being dead, the plaintiffs, after the death of their uncle, stopped the share of their profits of the estate. The plaintiff complained for his share of the family estates and monies which he states was 51,000 rupees, and the claimant, on behalf of her husband, clouds for an equal amount against the defendants on similar grounds.

The defendants desied that either the plaintiff or the claimant's tather ever had contributed to realize any portion of the property to which they had laid claim, or that grandla us-

The Judge remarked to the plaintiffs' attornies, that the property in his client's schedule was very veguely described, and asked him whether they could either by documentary or oral evidence prove that then client ever Kassinath, plaintiff, Luckynarain and others defendants, Rookuee Bewan, widow of Ramnath, the which they now lay flaim, within the last 12 years from the date of their suit being instituted, and the same question was put to the claimant's vakeel. The vakeel of the plaintiff replied, that his client had received certain sums of money up to the Bengal year 1235, as his pornon of the assets of these lands, &c., but no annual accounts had ever been rendered to his client of the profits and loss of their mutual estates by the defendants, and the claimant's pleader made the same reply, except that he added, that his client had all along been in possession of the land on which the ancestorial household was situated.

The judge remarked, that this might tend to prove the possession of that one house, and after observing that the better mode of proceeding would have been for the claimant to have instituted a separate suit for the share of the property she now claims, postponed the case for the plaintiff and the claimant to prove the most es-sential point of their claims, which had been denied by the defendants in the outset of their reply, viz., that nelther the plainuff nor the claimant, nor their father or father-in-law, had ever been in possession of the property posterior to the year 1228, B. Si-Hurkuru, Jan. 4.

THE PETITION AGAINST MB. CRACKORT.

We were present in Court on Thursday and Friday either they or their lather were ever in possession of any lest, and read a petition addressed to the Deputy Gopertion of it, it being the sole earning of their father and grandfather.

Sessions Judgeof the 24-Perguenahy attended Court between I and 2 o'clock daily, and that he appropriates his time to the hearing of only criminal cases. The petitioners also prayed that the Deputy Governor should desire Mr. Cracroft to fix two days in the week for the hearing of civil cases. The neution bore the signatures of Pecaree Loll Mundul, and Kistoonund Biswass, both respectable zemin lars, the names of two or three vakeels of the Court, and about eight other Bengallee names.

Peearee Lolf Mundul and Kistoonund Biswass, as well as the vakeels, denied all knowledge of the petition and declared it in open Court to be a forgery; the remaining names are unknown in the Court, as the whole of the file, have been searched and no suits whether in Court, or by appeals from the native subordinate courts bearing those names have been found.

The fact is, that about a month ago Mr. Cracrost did attend Court for about two or three days at late hours, but he was then in a very sick state, and could have very well staid away altogether, as he was often obliged to quit the Court in a state of sever and debility. We suppose this petition must have originated with some of the subordinate native courts, with whom Mr. Cracrost is rather unpopular, not for neglect of duty, but for having set aside native influence altogether, and for having placed the Omlah on their proper socials, that of clerks, &c instead of allowing them the dangerous intersering influence they were formerly altowed to practise.

We must confess that we have lately experienced great good in the Julge allowing access to him at all hours of business, as from 11 to 5 and 6 p.m. we have transacted both civil and criminal business, without heing put off on account of any particular engagement of the Court. Were all the native pleaters to speak the truth, they would have no alternative but to confess that business has been facilitated ten-fold, nay twenty, fold, within the last 10 or 12 months.

As this forged petition has made a little noise as it were, we would not be surprised at several others being sent in within the next month, or two. Mr. Cracroft (we believe it is pretty well known) has mide a reference to the Superior Court against the Principal Sudder Ameen of Allipore, and a case is now pleading before him against the moonsiff of Manickullah, in which that officer has shewn how he can venebis spleen on those who care not for him. The Court was engaged five days in the hearing of Moonshee Ameer reisis Mr. Duncan McPherson, a full report of which we shall soon give, as we consider the case one of great imporance to Soonderdun grantees.—Hurkuru, January 9.

MOONSHEE MANOMMED AMERR U. ME. DUNGAN MCPHERSON
GRAPTEE.

The plaintiff appeared by his vakeels, Moonshees Surroopchander Ghose, Issurchunder Moozumbar and and Gourunchunder Ghose, and the defendant by Mr. R. Dias.

The Government in 1928, by Clause I. Section ziii. Regulation III, of 1828, declared the whole of that extensive forest known as the Soonderbuns, the property of the state, and immediately granted leases to several individuals to effect the jungith and to bring the land under cultivation within a certain term of years, during which they should held the lands free. Among these to whom the greats were made, Mars Dungan McPheroon obtained assesses for $200.

The plaintiff sued for damages, to the extent of 5,800 rupees, and interest, being an alleged loss sustained by him, from an act of the defendant, by which a portion of the plaintiff's land was rendered uncultivatable, the defendant having obstructed a water course, the plaintiff used from the time of the Nuddeeah Raja, from whom the plaintiff purchased his estate.

To prove his claim to damages, the plaintiff produced several witnesses, by the evidence of four of whom, fucheer chaund Geen, Chedaum Murdul, Dhulto Gazee and Harroo Mundul, the plaintiff proved that, from the time of the Nuddeah Rajah at the usual season, he used to cut a certain bund and let his water off through a creek, on the defendant's lands, and to prove his loss, produced certain books of accounts unstitched, alleged to have been kept by one Sunnawoollah, a gomastah in his employ, but this witness said, that he did not make any of the entries, but merely put his signatura to them as correct, and that he did not know the names of the individuals by whom those entries were made.

The Judge informed the pleaders of the moonshed, that he could not admit the accounts in evidence, as they ought to have been proved by the evidence of those that made the entries, and that the attention of them by the gonashtah was not evidence in support of them.

The pleaders urged that it was not customary to prove semindary accounts by the evidence of ryots.

The Judge said, that he had great experience in the reception of accunts in courts, and that he could not see any reason for receiving accounts, the entries in which are not proved by the parties that made them, but by a gomashitah, on whom the court would place no reliance.

Mr. Dias urged, that the manner in which the accounts were filed was objectionable, as they were not books, but merely pages of paper threadded together in the manner of nuthers, which left them open to the merey of the people about the court; and that there could have been no didiculty in changing any of the pages during the proceedings in the case; besides which Mr. Dias urged that in those accounts the valuation was made by the zemindar at his own valuation, and that that valuation was far from the reputed unpropuctiveness of jungle boree lands.

The Judge said, he would not receive the accounts in evidence, and had them sealed up, and put his own seal to them, to prevent any persons from having acces to them for any improper purpose.

The defendant originally entertained Moonsee Shuncautoollah and Ramconni Bose, the former the Government pleader of this court, and the latter a vakeel : those individuals had entirely overlooked the principal points urged, and filed answers and replications of a superfluous unimportant nature, and examined witnessess on points hardly connected with the case, and consequent. ly there was nothing to rebut the right to the inter-course claimed by the plaintiff, which though it fortunately happened that by the evidence of Messrs Broad. head, Patkin, McDougald, and James Patton, grantees, all of whom stated that it would be impossible for the defendant to clear his lands and to continue his cultivations if the crocks were left open, to let the plaintiffs water out; and they also proved that the plaintiff had the means of letting his water out by a creek on his own estate, and that the cultivations alleged to have been injured by the act of the defendant, appeared to have always been in the state in which they now are, and that the stoppage of water course had not injured the plaintiff.

under cultivation within a certain term of years, doing which they should had in the land; whom the greats were made, Albar Duncan McPheroo obtained a lease for 19,200 beginns and the latter of neighbouring seminder, whom the greats were made, Albar Duncan McPheroo obtained a lease for 19,200 beginns and the latter of neighbouring seminder, but had since gone to the defendant sentence obtained a lease for 19,200 beginns and the latter of neighbouring seminder.

Moonnee had been in the habit of cutting the land.

be his water out, but that he used formerly to let it out by his own creek; which had in latter years become shallow, but that if he would cut it, there would be no difficulty in letting out the water. These witnesses also of the land on Moola Bheel, the grant was in a state of cultivation, and that only the culculating at 200 beggs, 197 beggs of which sunken part of it, immediately on the defendant's boundary, was in an uncultivated state.

The Judge here remarked to Mr. Dias, that he would be obliged to receive the evidence of the last two witnesses with great caution, as they had formerly been ryots of the plaintiff, and went afterwards over to the defendant's estate where they were employed as laborers, and that it was natural they would speak in favor of those for whom they were interested.

Mr. Dias submitted that the witnesses were not in the employ of his client, nor were they tenants at the time they gave their evidence, but that they lived by selling the produce of their own labor; they were allowed a certain spot of land for a certain period rent free, which they gradually cleared and cultivated. That they sold the wood and Mr. Dias believed they now had a little paddy on their land. Mr. Dias added, that if the court deprived his client of the evidence of the last two witnessess, he would be at a loss to make any defence, as the case had been altogether neglected and mis-mismanaged by the vakeels that were employed, and Mr. Dias particularly called the court's attention to a most extraordinary proceeding on the part of the plaintiff. That at the time witnessess were produced by Mr. McPherson, Mr. C. R. Martin was Judge, that the defendant produced four native witnessess, and while they were in court, mookhtar of the plaintiff assisted by two peons, arrested two of the witnessess and took them away to the plaintiff's house at Sealdah, where they were detained for the night, and where the witmesses were on the following morning found, Mr. McPherson fearing the plaintiff had exercised his influence with them, and rather than run risk, erased the evidence of those two men ie was thereby deprived of evidence by an unjustifiable act of the agent of the plaintiff.

The Judge said, that he could not take cognizance of what had transpired during the time of his predecessor, but that if such an attempt was made at his court, he would make severe examples of the parties concerned.

The Judge informed Mr. Dias, that the plaintiff had proved his right to open the watercourse to let out his water, but that he had failed to prove the damage elaimed by him as the accounts could not be admitted in evidence; but that, however, it appeared by one of the witnesses on the plaint, that he paid Re-10 for twenty-five beegas of land, according to which the Judge would assess the damage.

Mr. Dias as here called the Judge's attention to a report from Mr. Commissioner Shakespeare, No. 44, dated the 12th February 1837, filed with the papers in this case by Mr. McPherson on the 14th July of the same year, by which it would appear that Mr. Shakespeare made it evident, that unless Mr. McPherson raised the bund and kept it in good repair, he would have found it impossible to bring the land to its present state. Mr. Shakespeare slso stated, that he had inspected the spot alleged to have been rendered unproductive, and that the damage claimed by the plaintiff was by far in excess of the injury done.

The plaintiff's pleaders urged, that the defendant had smitted in either of his answers filed, ether to deny the injury or to compute it at a sum less than was claimed by their client, they therefore submitted that the full smitted of damages awarded.

Miss submitted that the court would not award more than hominal damages in the case, as there were no means to ascertain the exact amount of injury sustained, if any, and that one of the plaintiff witnesses had asserted that with exception to two or three beegas of the land on Alcola Bheel, the grant was in a state of cultivation, whereas the plaintiff laid damages in Moolla, calculating at 200 beegas, 197 beegas of which ought to be set aside. Mr. Dias then maintained that his client had acted in every respect under the construction put by the Revenue Officers on Clause 1, Section xiii Regulation 111. 1828, under which certain lands were declared the property of the state, and which lands under cases were granted to individuals, who were empowered to hold them, and use them as actual proprietors of the soil. Mr. Dias here produced and authenticated copy of instructions issued by Mr. Commissioner Figou, No. 298, to the commissioner of the Soonderbuns, the fourth paragraph of which is as follows:

fourth paragraph of which is as follows:

4th—To the fisheries comprised within the limits of any grantee's pottah no zemindar can allege any right, for it he has no right in the land, he can certainly have none in the water, and so long as the state does not think proper to claim such julkur, no party, other than the grantee in possession, can urge a right thereto.

Mr. Dias continued, that the creek by which the plaintiff wished to let his water out was clearly within the boundaries of the granter's estate, which had been leased by Government to his client, he therefore presumed his client had an undisputed right to close, or to open it, or to use it, to his own advantage; for said Mr. Dias, if that creek is opened, there is evidence to shew that the grantee will injure his own cultivation.

The Judge replied, that all that Messrs Shake-pear and Pigou had arged was very good as fi-cal law, but that he did not see that the grantee in this case had a right to exercise a power, which the grante did not possess, and could not therefore bestow (keeping in mind that the plaintiff had proved his right to the water course for a period as great as the memory of man.) If the Government (said the Judge) wished to give the right to the grantee, they ought within seven years, to have stopped the use of the cicek, and as there is no evidence to shew that it was done, he had no alternative than to admit the plaintiff's right.

Mr. Diss then observed that he would, if allowed by the court, take an objection to the plaintiff's right on a new ground. The plaintiff appear as the proprietor of a certain land named Hora Bheel, which was granted by Government to Mr. McPheison, a when the commissioner laid down the limits of the detendant's grant, be included the whole of Hora Bheel in it, and, said Mr. Dias, it the objection will be admitted, it will at once decide the question of right, as the plaintiff wishes to pass the route from Hora Bheel through the creek on the defendant's estate. Mr. Dies then said that he require the plaintiff to prove his right to Hora Bheel.

require the plaintiff to prove his right to Hora Bheel. The Judge-gemarked, that such an objection ought to have been taken at the onset by those who had framed the defendant's answers, and that he would not now admit it. He had sufficient evidence that the plaintiff had a write to the watercourse, by the stoppage of which by the defendant, the plaintiff had sustained loss and ordered that it should be opened when necessary to let the water out. That it also appeared that the plaintiff had a passage on his own estate by which, with a little expense, he could let out the water, but which it was optional with him to do, but the Judge considering that point and several others urged on the defence, and the plaintiff having failed to prove his accounts, it was awarded that the defendant should pay damages at 400 rupess per annum for three years, with costs on that amount only free of interest.

This case will immediately be forwarded to the Governor General by the grantes as one of great hardship, and which may be the means of ruining him enemually.

Hurkery, January 13.

BHAUGULPORE COURT.

JANUARY 1, 1888.

(Before T. Wyatt. Esq.)

A RAJAU CONVICTED OF MURDER.

The Magistrate having, as it is usual with him, examitel this case with great deliberation, made it over to this court. We were present in the inferior court during the examination, but omit the details to avoid a repetition. We gave the facts as brought to light before this court by the depositions of witnesses, -- premising that the family of the Raja placed before the bar, for the commission of a horrid murder, was at one time very respectable in these parts, but owing to the strange mishap of the Rajas, for two or three generations, being of unsound mains, the zemindaree has been much neglected, and consequently reduced the late rajas to a rather undesirrable state of affairs. The last twig of the audient stock. now arraigned for the wilful murder of Kokeon, feelban, seems to have a touch of the hereditary malady; for it does not appear in evidence, that there was any cause of irritation given by the poor tellow who has been sacrificed by the Raja, of Koonwur, as he is termed.

The place where the Rajas reside is called Muhwur, in purguinan Munechaire, lying in a south-east direction from the station of Bhaugulpore, but subject to the jurisdiction of that district. The Session Judge was aided in the investigation of this case, by the Mahommedan law officer, but no assessors, as in the case of manslaughter, we reported a few days ago,—a circumstance we could not help being surprised at, as this case is evidently a mane serious one, and therefore required sauch more urgently the aid of a jury, than the other.

This hound case of murder was brought on by the prosecution of Onaree, the brother of the decease I who represents that his brother was in the employ of the Raja or Koonwur Chundun Singh as feelban or elephant derver, and accompanied hun to Burnut; that when he arrived there the Koonwur, very unaccountably, commenced beating his servants without any cause assigned (in evidence) for such violent proceedings; that the irritabifity of his temper rose to such a pitch that he caused his brother to be forced into a room, ned, and cut to pieces. The deponent was also ordered to be caught and carried into the place of execution, but fled for his life without waiting to entreat the Koonwar to spare that of his The real cause of all these proceedings appearbrother. ed to be this. A person by the name of Data Ram, Mahajun, who was in the interest of some persons not mentioned (probably neighbouring litigadt zemindars, who had fallen out of some boundary dispute) had been either on a visit to the Raja, or had gone to Burhut on business. While there, the Raja seems to have received some serious provocation from Data Ram, whereupon he sought to do him some serious harm, pursuing him with a drawn sword, Data: Rain takes to his heels, and escapes the danger to which he was exposed by the excerbation of the Raja's temper to a degree, never known by any of the witnesses to have been seen before at any time; but a borse on which he had come to Hyrhut, and which Data Ram abandoned to its fate in his precipitate sight fell in the way of Koonwur Chunder Singh, and on its carcast he wreaked the vengence he mediated against its fider. The atunal was cut to pieces by him, with his own bands. Having thus shed the blood of the beast, he seem to have grown "desperately wicked;" and sought to spend his rage on any object that might fall is his way. I infortunately for footners, he happened to eatch the against his master at this away at the catch time.

wild, unruly mania, and rued the folly of throwing himself in the way of an infuriated madman. How the catastrophe occurred, the deponent does not particula-rize; but Jhubbun Dhanuk, is more precise in mention-ing the details of the affair. By the Koonwur's order, Manjea, Pulta, Gopal, and Beesoo Goryt, dragged the feelban into a shed or kutcherry standing within an inclosure, through which every thing that was transpiring within could be seen and was seen by the witnesses. I'wo of the individuals, (placed at the bar as accessances to the fact,) by the Raja's direction, lied the two. legs of Kokeen to a post, while the other two held him fast by his hands against it on the opposite side. Raja then drew his sword, and at one stroke, almost severed his head from his body. He then almost cut him in two by a stroke which he levelled at his waist; and finally gave him a wound in one of his legs. Beesoo Goryt, by the Raja's order, caused the mutilated remains of the wre ched elephant driver (or mobut) to be conveyed into a neighbouring jungle, but not before they had arrived at an offensive state of decomposition, by having been thrown into one of the close huts within the inclosure before mentioned. In the jungle, the body was put under the carcass of the slaughtered horse of Dataram, in which situation, ere long, the bones of man and beast were indiscriminately commingled. One of the witnesses swore that, at the time of the Tadarook or Soor athhal, he discovered the bones of his mobut, by marks of the cuts inflicted by the sword of the Koonwur, deeply left on the neck bone, ribs, and thigh hone of the descased, which first the court thought to be rather strange. But this witness was almost stone deaf and could not, without his interrogator's bawling with all his ungh, comprehend nothing that was spoken to him; but he certainly swore what we have stated.

Having finished the dark deed, the Raja seems to have recovered from the effects of his irritation, and began to contrive means to procure the concealment of the murder he had perpetrated. He prevailed on the people about him and in the place (all his ryots) to give it out that Kokeen had died of cholera; and in which attempt to hush up the foul affair, the Suzawul of police of that part of the country, plainly under the control or in the interests of the Raja, takes a conspicuous part.

The Raja, a young man of about 25 years of age, pleads not guilty, and mentions the story of Kokeen's having died by cholera. The four accessaries try to excuse themselves as well as they can; but give a very clear and particular detail of the progress and consum-mation of the catastrophe. One of the witnesses, Seebua Dhanuk, to our astonishment, spoke the Hadoostanes remarkably well, though he was an inhabitant of the foot of the hills, a site usually occupied by Sountars, Bhooneas and other semi-savage races that have branched out from the great trunk of highlanders occupying the huge range that extends from Behar to the Deccan. this witness also prevaricated a good deal, and the Court found it necessary to waru him of the serious consequences of being found guilty of perjury. Some of the witnesses being Puhareeas, were sworn on a little salt put on a knife and washed down into their mouths; while others were sworn on a piece of tiger's skin put in their hands. It was mentioned by some of the witnesses, that the young Raja had exhibited unequivocal signs of distraction, whether as a hereditary malady, or produced by constant addiction to excessive drinking. The words The words used to express this distraction were burhow (want of self possession) and buhuka, (straying ;,) states of mittel which might, it is most probable, have been occasioned by the inordinate use of ardeat liques which Beebu Dhanoek called brandy from the seleus of its but the that which whisky is in Scotland, namely, muhooka shurab, a liquor distilled from the flower of the busia latifolia, and sold to an enormous extent all over Hindoortsu, to the great misery of the people, but with great advantage to the resources of the state. This is not the first nor the nine hundredth and muty minth instance of murder, resulting from the practice of drinking licensed ardent spirits. The description of liquor represented to have been used was remarkably strong or double distilled, called by the witness chounnee (or four. annas a bottle.) This in Bengal would be called dertushuh or vulgarly doasta, sufficient unquestionably do drive the most sober head into utter rabidiess. The Raji's sanity being called into question, the civil surgeon, who had observed him attentively since his imprisonment on trial, was called liquor was evidently in the highland is of this part of India, | upon to depose to the real state of his intellects, which be did. stating that he had carefully examined his looks, manners, and replies to questions put to him, and saw no indication of insauity. The law officer produced his futwah purporting that the prisoners Maujeea, Pulta Gopal, and Beesoo Goryt, were proved to have aided Koonwar Chundon Singh in killing Kokeen, and were deserving of discretionary punishment by tazeer; and that Koonwur Chundun Singh was found guilty of the wilful murder of Kokeen, and was worthy of the extreme penalty of the law; (agoobut-i-shudeed), and may therefore be punished capitally. The court coincided in the verdict of the law officer and ordered the rosedad to be forwarded to the Nizimut Adambut for final orders .-Hurkaru, January 22.

SUDDER DEWANNY ADAWLUT.

CIRCULAR O' DERS.

NO. 3155. ORDINARY COMMUNICATIONS TO THE SUDDER FROM NATIVE JUDGES HOW TO BE FORWARDED.

Considerable inconvenience having been experienced in consequence of the native judges a ldressing the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, direct, on various subjects connected with their official situations by the public dawk, the Court have instructed the Judges to direct the native subordinate judges to submit through the zillah Judges any communication they may desire to lay before the Sudder Court.

It is to be understood, that the above rule is intended to afford the zillah judges an opportunity of recording, whenever they may deem it necessary, their own sent ments on the references which may be made by the native judges.

The zillah Judges have also been desired to explain to the native Judges, that the above rule is not to be considered as applicable to appeals preferred by them against any orders passed by the zillah Judges. Such appeals will continue to be preferred in the usual manner on stampt paper and through a regular vakeel or agent.

NO. 2897 DECREES OF THE CHANDERNAGORE JUDGE TO BE EXECUTED BY THE ZILLAH COURTS

On a reference from the Civil Court of the 24 Pergunnahs, the Sudder Dewanny Adamut have ordered that the decrees of the Judge of Chandernagore Court shall be executed through the officers of the zillah Court provided there be no apparent irregularity in the procoeding connected therewith.

NO. 3764 CORRESPONDENCE OF NATIVE JUDGES WITH NATIVES OF RANK.

The Sudder Dewinny Adamut have circulated the following instructions to the several zillah Judges on the subject of the mode of address to be adopted by native judges when corresponding on matters of business with natives of rank.

1st. Principal Sudder Ameens will correspond direct by Rooboocaries with all covenanted officer of Government, except the Secretaries to Government, the Sudder Dewanny Adamut, the Loard of Revenue or any military officers in regard to whom the present practice is to be continued.

2d. Sudder Ameens and Moonsiffs, will forward all communications to covenanted officers as heretofore, through the European Judges except communications to such officers as are parties to suits before them, in which case, they will be addressed direct to the officer whom they may concern.

3d. The native Julges of every grade will correspond direct with natives of rank.

It being desirable that an unifrom mode of conducting public correspondence should be introduced into all the Mofassit Courts, the attention of the zillah Judges has been requested to the practical application of the rule above laid down for the regulation of the correspondence of Principal Sudder Ameens with coveranted officers, the result of which the Judges have been requested to communicate on the expiration of six mouths, together with their opinion as to the expediency or otherwise or extending the same privilege to Sudder Ameens and Moonsiffs.

In communicating the above instructions to the native Judges, the zillah Judges have been particularly desired to impress upon them the propriety of observing a proper respect towards all natives of rank, with whom it may be necessary to correspond on official matters, and addressing them in the form and style employed on like occasions by the European judge of the district. In like manner natives of rank will be required to pay proper respect to the native Judges, adopting as a general rule the forms of address laid down in the Courts Cucular of the 14th December, 1832, No. 74 .- Hurk. Jun. 19.

CIRCULAR ORDERS.

NO. 3081, -- UNSTAMPED POLICIES OF INSURANCE. An instance having been brought to the notice of the Sudder Dewanny Adambut of unstamped policies of Insurance being received as legal evidence, although the court have no reason to believe that such an arregularity prevails a extant, they consider it proper to direct the attention of the Zillah Judges to the entries Nos. 42 and 43 in Schedule A, Regulation X of 1829. with a view to prevent any instruments of the kind being admitted as evidence, except when they bear the prescribed stamp.

NO. 3127. TRANSFER OF CASES FOR TRIAL BY NATIVE SUBORDINATE JUDGES.

We have to remind our readers, that from the let of January, 1837, Act XXIV of 1837, took effect, and under its provisions the Sudder Dewanny Adamint have issued the following instructions to the Zillah Judges.

The court have directed the immediate transfer from the files of the Judges, to hose of the Principal Sudder Ameens and Moonsiffs, of all suits in which the Government or its officers may be a party, and in which the amount of value of the property sued for, may not exceed | C of all suits above the amount of 5,000 rupres, that may 5.000 rupees. The zillah Judges are of course compe. tent to retain under Sections VII, and Regulation XXV 1831, any of the above suits on their own files, provided they see sufficient grounds for so doing; but in reporting to the court (which they have been requested to do within fifteen days) the execution of the present orders, the Judges have also been requested to submit a list of all the suits, that they have so retained, and to explain their reasons buefly for doing so.

The zillah Judges have in like manner been directed to transfer to the file of the Principal Sudder Ameen all suits preferred under Clause I., Section XXX, Regulation II. 4819, retaining however on their own file, any suits of the above nature, that they (the Judges) think ought to be tried by the Judge, submitting a list of the same, and their reasons for having retained the cases. All suits thus referred to a Principal Sudder Ameen have been directed to be sent as heretofore to the collector of the district for investigation and report; the collector Principal Sudder Ameen for decision.

The Act now passed authorizes the Judges, subject of course to the general controll of the Sudder Dewanny Adamlut, to refer any suit above the value of 5,000 rupees to the Principal Ameen for trial. The Superior court have requested the zillah Judges to exercise this a Principal Sudder Ameen, in which the documentary evidence may be in the English language, or may involve points of English law, unless such Principal Sudder Ameen is acquainted with the English language.

2d.—On referring any suit to Principal Sudder Ameen above the amount of 5,000 rupees, the Judge will report to the Superior court that he has done so agreeably to a form marked A*.

3d. The Principal Sulder Ameen will forward to the Judge in publicate a Persian statement as per form marked B, of all suits above the amount of 5000 rupees, that may be pending in his file at the end of the month, and another as per form marked B of all suits above the amount of 5000 rupees, that may be pending in his file at the end of the mouth and another as per form marked have been decided or disposed of by him during the month. One of each of the above statements will be forwarded by the Judge to the court with the monthly returns, the other will be retained for record in the Judge's office.

4 h .- All summary appeals from the decisions of Principal Sudder Amsens will be mide direct by the parties to the Sudder Dewanny Adamlut,

5th .- All petitions for regular appeals will be preferred direct to the Principal Sudder Ameens, who will make up the original record in the manner precribed by Regulation VI of 1793, Section XI. The package containing the record of the case is to be addressed to the Registrar of the Sudder Court, and it is in the first instance to be sent under the official signature and seal fof the Principal Sudder Ansen to the zillah or city Julge, who having had the parcel properly secured from wet agreeably to the circular orders No. 67 and 70, dated the 19th September, 1823, and the 21-t May, on cosing his proceedings will transmit them under 1824, will at once forward it with the usual certificate Clause VI. Section XXX, Regulation II, 1819, to the to the Registrar of the Sudder court. The copy of the record which is required to be made by the regulation last quoted, is to be deposited for sale custody in the office of the Judge.

6th .- All applications for revisions of judgment in suits above 5000 rupees will likewise be made to the Principal Sudder Ameens, and when recommended to power with a sound discretion, and their attention has be admitted, that officer shall proceed agreeably to been called to the following illustrations:

Section XIX, Regulation V of 1331, and the application 1st .- No suit above 5000 rupees shall be referred to Ishall be forwarded by the Judge to the Sudder Dewauny Adawlut.

7th -- Precepts from the Sudder court will be either sent direct to the Principal Sudder Ameen, or to the Zillah Judge as may be deemed most expedient; but all returns, unless specially directed otherwise, will be submitted by the Principal Sudder Ameen to the Judge for the purpose of being transmitted by him with the usual certificate to the Sodder Dewanny Adawlut.

NO 3328. - UNSTAMPED SECURITY BONDS DECLARED IN-ADMISSABLE AS EVIDENCE AGVINST SURETIES.

It having been brought to the notice of the Sudder court, that a practice obtains in some districts of admitting as legal evidence security bonds written on the same sheet of paper with the Principal Deed, where the stamp used was only of the value required for the latter instrument; as the superior court consider the practice as clearly erroneous, they have declared them wholly madmissible as evidence against sureties. The Zillah Judges have been requested to make this circular known to be lower courts.-Hurk. Jan. 30.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

CIRCULARS, - Sections VI. AND IX. REGULATION XIX. of 1793.

No. 77 .- The Officiating Secretary to the Sudder Board has informed the Revenue Commissioners, that the Board having had occasion to observe that the provisions of Sections VI. and IX. Regulation XIX. of 1793, have been overlooked by settlement officers and Commissioners, have directed him to draw their attention to the subject, and to point out to them, that vested as they are with the powers of the late Board of Revenue, they are competent to dispose of cases of the nature therein provided for without reference to the Sudder Board

That the Commissioners will readily perceive, on a careful perusal of the Sections above noticed, that, the Government settlement officers will have to deal with Oct. last, transmitted for the information and guidance uch cases, only when the Bevenue of the lands ma boy, of the Board a copy of correspondence, and requested payable to the .state. On such occasions a seperate settlement statement will not be requisite, but the jumma which may be assessed on the lands to be held as a dependent talook, will be included in the gross assets forming the basis of settlement of the estate to which they (the lands) belong, whenever that settlement may be concluded and submitted for the sanction of Government.

The Commissioners have also been requested to issue appropriate instructions to all the settlement officers in their respective divisions for their future guidance.

DUTIES OF REVENUE COMMISSIONERS, AND IMPORTANT AS TO SETTLEMENTS AND SPECIAL APPEALS.

No. 78 .- Mr Secretary Mangles, on the 10th of the Board to take the necessary measures for carrying seasons, good and bad, and the testimony of a very the views of the Supreme Government into effect. This communication also directed that the Commission ers should be required to furnish to the Hoard a quarterly return of settlements, including forms, as now sauctioned by the Board confirmed by them, one transcript of which ought to be sent by the Board to the Revenue Accountant, and another to Government with any remarks that they desire to offer.

From an extract of a letter from Mr. Secretary Mc Naughten, dated the 29th April last, it appears he was directed to observe that it appears highly desirable that means should be resorted to for lightening the labors of the officers in the Revenue Department, Mr. Mr Naughment, the same work being in fact performed three ship, however, would not delay that letter by entering into details which will best be arranged by the Right Hon ble the Governor, Mr. Mc Naughten was, however, desired to suggest that the Collector's report confirmed by the Commissioner, might in some instances be admitted to be final, but if this should be found to be objectionable, His Lordship in Council requested that early attention may be given to the practicability of shortening and simplifying the settlement reports, and thought that for this purpose it might probably be well to refer to the forms in use in the Western provinces, and to the practice adopted in regard to them.

By a letter from Mr. Secretary Mangles of the 13th June last, to Mr. Secretary McNaughten, the former was directed by the Right Houble the Governor of Bengal to request the latter to sub not to the Supreme Government, an explanation of the existing rules, for the revision and report of detailed settlements, and of His Lordship's views in regard to the points noticed in the passage of Mr. McNaughten's communication above

Abstracted

The form in which settlements conducted under Regulations VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833, are reported by the assessing officers in the Lower Provinces, is simpler (says Mr. Mangles) and more con cise than that in use within the jurisdiction of the Sudder Board of Revenue at Allahabad, that is to say (observes Mr. Mangles) the statement prescribed by the Calcutta Boards, orders of the 12th November, 1833, of which a few specimens were submitted, and which was drawn up after a careful examination of the returns devised by the Western Board, admits of the record of all the necessary facts with regard to a single mouzah, in a more compendions shape, than the latter, whilst it does not appear to a nit anything of which it is essential that the superintending authornies and eventually the Government should be informed.

But the form in question (says Mr. Mangles) is confessedly not suited to present a comprehensive view of the Agricultural resources of a large and continuous tract of country, which was the object for which the Sudder Board at Allahabad had to provide; nor with the single exception of Cuttack, is there any such tract, open to assessment, under juri-diction of the Lower Board; but on the other hand, the officers engaged in assessing resumed or lapser, or purchased mahals in permanently nettled districts, have in some important respects, a more arduous task than these employed in the general settlements of the western provinces, hecause they have no data whatever, but those of their own acquisition, to proceed upon, and are therefore necessarily compelled to institute much more minute and careful enquiries, in order to ascertain the proper basis of settlement, in the real amount of rental received by the superior class of native officers, (the teh-ulders) possessed of great local knowledge to direct them.

Under the circumstances above described, it being understood that the Revenue Authorities in the western provinces rely far more, (in determining the proper amount of jumms to be paid by a mehal or pergunnah) upon the evidence above adverted to, than upon present local enquiries, and that with such evidence to guide them, they form rather general averages for conaderable tracts of country than scrupulously assess particular villages, and can do this with safety; it is evident, that the settlement of a single mouza in a permanently settled district, which has either never been ten went on to observe, that at present it would seem upon the public rent roll, or if a purchase by Governthat then is a needless waste of supervision in that depart, ment, was engaged for at the period of the decennal ment, the same work being in fact performed three settlement, without any investigation of assets, must netimes over, first by the Collector, then by the Commissions require far more labor and attention, to presomer, and lastly by the Sudder Board; that His Lord, clude fraud, or even to ensure satisfactory certainty, in regard to a proceeding of so much importance to the well being of large classes of the people, than a similar operation within the jurisdiction of the Western Board.

These facts (says Mr. Mangles) which probably satisfy the Supreme Government, that the forms and modes of procedure in use in the Western Provinces, would not be generally applicable to the districts of the permanently settled provinces, when only detached Mehala (though in some instances very numerous) are to be assessed. Mr. Mangles goes on to state, that as regards Cuttack, His Lordship has long been anxious to reduce the bulk, and simplify the nature of the settlement returns, to which most desireable end, however. the peculiarities of the under tenures obtaining in that Province are seriously opposed. With a view, however, to it- obtainment to the utmost feasible extent, the Governor has recently obtained from the Hon'ble the Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces, a specimen set of all the returns an Lieports furnished to the Board at Allahabad, by every class of their subordinate officers, employed in the formation, or revision of detailed settlement, and by the Board again to Government, and these it is His Lordship's intention to lorward to the Board in Calcutta, in order that, in communication with Mr. Commissioner Ricketts, they may devise the simplest practicable scheme for recording and r porting the new assessment of Cuttack.

Withtreference to the extraordinary manner in which the lands in Chittagong are intermixed, and the tact that patches only here and there are now being brought under settlement. His Lordshid does not desire to interfere with the arrangements which the very able and experienced revenue officers of that district deein most expedient.

With reference to the remark expressed in the 2d paragraph of this circular, " that there is a needless work of supervision in the Revenue deparment," Mr. Mangles says, that His Lordship would submit, that of late settlement have not been revised by the Commissioners with exception of a small number which they were directed to retain, in order to test the work of each assigning officer, but have been handed direct by the Board, who undertook the duty, in order to relieve the commissioners, and to obviate delay. This plan which was originated by that zealous and indelatigable officer Mr. C. W. Smith, could scarcely, as experience has proved, have succeeded, if he had been permitted to remain at his post to carry it into effect; but in the actual course of events, it has, as the Supreme Government are aware, decidedly failed. It was in fact (says Mr. Mangles), only expedient to shift labor, from one over burthened class of officers to an individual, not less burthened, but whose energy was very great, who voluntarily proposed to undertake the ardu-ous duty, and who had certainly far more and better malgoozar, than those who have the records of former subordinate assistance than the commissioners, measettlements, a knowledge of the case or difficulty with sures have been taken to enable the Board to dispose which the revenue has been collected during the past of all greens; and, if, as His Lordship understands, if is the intenton of the Supreme Government to relieve the of the Commissioners involving complaints of gross Commissioners of revenue altogether from judicial func- irregularity, or security of assessment. tions, they ought to be well able to superintend all settlement business, and to revise the returns of the assessing officers, although business of that nature will be extremely heavy during the next four or five years.

These returns, under existing rules (Mr. Mangles observed), and be handed up to Government salv when the parties entering into engagements or entitled to that immunity in perpetuity, when such a party is recusant, and a temporary settlement is, consequently, concluded with another, to his exclusion, or when the term of a temporary settlement or farm exceeds twenty, or if a ryotwar settlement, ten years -all otner settlements the Sudder Board are competent to confirm, submitting to flie Lordship an annual schedule of all leases granted by them. When the proceedings of the commissioner, the labor imposed on the Board, whether they forward the papers to Government, or themselves dispose of them under the rules above described, will be comparatively light and they have been specially authorized to report all settlements requiring His Lordship's sanction, but not presenting any novel features, or involving any important principle, not already discussed and settled, in the briefest possible abstract shape.

Upon the information now submitted, the Governor (says Mr. Mangles) will gladly receive the instructions of the Supreme council, if they think that any of the checks described could be dispensed with, or any part of the bus ness, forming, arising, or confirming settlement be abbreviated. He apprehends, that the Hon'ble the Court of Directors would not be willing that the power of sanctioning settlements in perpetuity should be deligated to any authority subordinate to his own. The Go vernor-General in Council is doubtless well aware, how often and how strongly the injunctions of the Han'ble Court against granting permaneut tenures to persons not absolutely entitled by the law to that immunity have been repeated, and it frequently occurs that settlements are reported to him by the Board for confirmation in perpetuity, which the strictness of these orders compels him, on an examination of the claims of the Malgoozars, to limit to a term of years. Twenty years (says Mr. Mangles,) is probably long enough for any lease not of a Junglepooree nature, and the later are, of course, special arrangements. By recent orders, leases granted to the exclusion of recusant maliks have been restricted to years; those pethaps the Board might be allowed to sanction, and the license as to ryotwar settlements might safely be extended to twenty years. No other measures of relief occur to His Lordship.

By a communication from Mr. Secretary McNaghten, addressed to Mr. Secretary Mangles, dated the 9th October last, the former was desired to state, that the Governor-General in Council is not prepared to suggest any abbreviation in the forms now used in reluting settlements; but His Lordship in Council is of opinion, that, generally, the proceedings of the assessing officer (although not the Collector of the district) should go direct, to the commissioner, that the commissioner should be vested with the powers of confirmation now belonging to the Sadder Board, subject to a special appeal to that Board on the part of any person deeming himself aggrieved, or to a special reference on sufficient cause shown at the instance of the settling officer, and should be empowered to mention leases for terms not exceeding ten years, granted to the exclusion of recusant meliks.

It was proposed in Mr. Mangles' letter, that the above power should be conferred on the Sudder Board; but His Lordship in Council is of opinion that it might safely be exercised by the Commissioners, and that the duties of the Board should be chiefly confined to those of general superintendence and control, including of source the cognitiones of appeals from the proceedings

The power (says Mr. McNaghten) of sanctioning settlements in perpetuity, or for long terms of years, on the report of the Sud ler Board, should remain with the Government as heretofore.

His Lordship in Council concurs with the Right Hon'ble the Governor in thinking that the license, as to sanctioning ryotwariee settlements, may safely be extended to twenty years, and that this power also, should subject, as before, to a special appeal, be confided to the Commissioners.

The Board, in conformity with orders above given. have directed all the Revenue Commissioners to con-firm the following settlements, and to promulgate in manner likely to give general information the license given to appeal to the Sudder Board.

1st. Ryotwar settlements for a period not exceeding twenty years.

24. Temporary settlements, or forms of mehals of which the maliks or persons entitled to a settlement in perpetuity, are recurant and therefore excluded, for a period not exceeding ten years.

34. All ordinary settlements for a period not exceeding twenty years.

4th. All temporary settlements preparatory to a permanent one.

Settlements confirmed under the above orders being all subject to a special appeal to the Board on the part of any person deeming himself aggreeved, and to a special reference on sufficient cause shewn at the instance of the settling otherr.

We call the particular attention of the Reformer to the above circular order and strongly recommend that the Canichar Durpun, the Gyananneshun, and all the other native papers should immediately publish transunderstand the meaning and extent of the orders contained in it.

No. 79 .- SHERISHTA DARS HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR ERRORS IN THE ADVERTISEMENTS OF BALES.

To prevent the frequent occurrence of errors in the advertisements of sales, Mr. Officiating Secretary Dunbar, under the instructions of the Board, has requested the revenue commissioners to issue instructions to their subordinates to hold the Sherishtadars of their respective olices responsible for the advertisements of sales being correct, and for the balance, for the realization of which an estate is advertised, being due one month before the advertisement is published.

No 80. - TENDER OF COMPROMISE UPON THE PART OF GOVERNMENT TO LAKHIRAJDARS.

Mr. Officiating Secretary F. J. Halliday, on the 7th November last, with the view of gwing effect to the wishes of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, was directed by the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal to request that the Board will call upon the several special collectors for an immediate report, whether a tender of compromise, upon the part of Government, on equitable terms, would be generally or largely acceptable to the Lakhirajdars, and if so, what terms should in their judgment be offered.

The Board were also requested to submit their return to this requisition with the least practicable delay.

The Board have furnished the Commissioners of the divisions noted below with copies of the above communication, and have requested them to call on the Special Deputy Collectors for the reports required.

This circular is not general, but only promulgated to the Commissioners of Bauleah, Bhaugulpore, Chittagong, Cuttack, Dacca or jessore, Moorshedabad and Patna .- Report.

No. 81" .- RETURNS OF THE SALES OF ESTATES.

Mr. Officiating Secretary Dunbar, under the di rections of the Board, has requested all the revenue Commissioners to call on the collectors within their Divisions to submit returns of all the sales of E-tates which have taken place within their respective divisionduring the year- 1835, and 1836, and of the number of these sales which have been confined or otherwise finally disposed of within those two years respectively .- Hurkaru, January 6, 1838.

Consultation, Friday, the 9th January, 1838.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. M. A. BIGNELL.

Mr. Officiating Secretary Holliday, on the 7th November last, in reply to the addies of the Board No. 555 of the 4th instant, informed them, that the Hon. the Deputy Governor of Bengal, was pleased at their recommendation to appoint Mr. M. A Bignell to be their deputy in their (the Board's) capacity of superintendent and remembrancer of legal affire, on a salary for the first year of 500 rupers per measure, and a per centage on the value of the suits which may be conducted by him in person, and decided in favor of Government, agreeably to the scale laid down under the orders of the 21-t August 1828, for the Government Agent in the court of the special commissioners. But, (said Mr. Halliday) this scale of remuneration must be left open to revision, in order to its increase or reduction, as it may appear from the result, which the Board were requested to report at the end of that period, to be either too low, or too high.

The Board on the 14th of November forwarded copies of the above orders to the presidency special commissioners, and to Mr. Bignell, informing the former, that Mr. Bignell would conduct all cases on the part of Government, and the latter to attend to receive in-tructions previous to entering on his duties: but the Special commissioners, Mesars. T. H. Maddock, and E. R. Barwell, on the 16th of that month, addressed the Board enquiring what construction the Board put on the Government orders of the 7th November, as it they considered them to mean that Mr. Bignell should attend personally and conduct the suits in their court in which Government are parties, that the special commissioners would point out to Government the objections, which in their opinion existed to such an arrangement.

In reply to the above, Mr. Officiating Secretary Danbar, on the 28th November last, informed the commissioners, that the Board considered the orders of Government to imply that Mr. Bignell should plead in person in the apecial commissioners' courts in all cases in which the importance of the matter at issue, or any other circumstances may seem to demand his personal attendance, and that Mr. Bignell could use his discretion, as to the conduct of all other cases, either in person or by deputy, the responsibility resting wholly with himself.

After receipt of the above, the special commissioners wrote Government, stating their reference to the Board, and urged the following objections to the appointment of an English gentleman to plead in their court on the part of Government,

According to the Board's interpretation, though in principle (observed the special commissioners) the objections that suggest themselves to the constant presence of an English gentleman as the Attorney of Government in their court may be mainly obviated, the principle in which they deem it objectionable remained unaltered. For (said they), Government is aware, that according to Regulation III, of 1328, by which the commissioner's court is constituted, and the rules of practice by which under that Regulation the commissioners are guided, the written pleadings (observed those gentlemen) comprise in almost all cases the entire argument on which judgmen's is to be passed on the decision of the resuming officers. The presence of pleaders on either side, excepting as a matter of form, and for the satisfaction of the court that its judgments are heard viva vace before being embedied on its written decrees, is in most cases of no essential necessity, and to this circumstance may probably be attributed that, as there are no licensed vakeels or pleaders attached to their court, and parties opposed to Government are, by rule 26 of the rules of practice, prescribed by the Regulation allowed to appoint any agents, whom they please, to represent them before the special commissioners, their agents are, for themostpart, unclucated men, possessing very lit le knowledge even of the few regulations applicable to resumption suits, whose services we obtained at a trifling cost compared to the value of the stake at issue. But, (said the commissioners) to whatever cause it may be attributed, it is an undoubted fact that the native pleaders in our court are of a very deficient and inferior order of men to those employed in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any Judge's court in the mofussil. The Native Government pleader, Hurrischunder Kur, who has lately been discharged, was the only exception to this description, and his superiority over the other pleaders (observed the commissioners) was sufficiently evident as a security for the interests of Government, without liability to a suspicion that he was allowed to sway the judgements of the court. If (said the commissioners) to such, or for greater superiority in talents and acquirements, on an European agent were added, the circumstance of his being a gentleman, living in the same society as the Judge before whom he pleaded, with the advantage of verbal communication with the Judge in a language unknown to the other parties present, there is reason to apprehend that such suspicion might not always be wa ding.

But (said the commissioners,) believing as they think it may be admitted, that in reality it can make little difference in the issue of a cause whether Government is represented by a native or European agent, during the reading of papers and passing orders in the ar peals before them, it seems on every account inexpedient that they should admit the appearance of an advantage on the aide of Government, which in the minds of the people would be unplied from the attendance of an European agent to oppose the native agents employed in their court, and they respectfully submitted to the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor the inexpediency of a measure so calculated to increase the unpopularity of the resumption laws, and to affect injuriously the character of the final appellate court in which they are administered without in any way promoting the interests of Govern-in the protection of its just rights in cases under adjudication.

Although (observed the commissioners) in their judgment it would have been preferable that the Deputy Superintendent and Remembiancer of legal affairs should have been excluded altogether from attendance as a pleader in the courts, of the special commissioners, the objections which they have uiged to his constant attendance would not exist to his occasionally appearing in cases of importance where European, or other equally well qualified agents have been employed by a party opposed to Government. But if the views of the Board in this report coincide with the intentions of Government, the commissioners begged leave to suggest, that the option of attending ought not to be discretional with the deputy. It (said they) should be con-tingent on the sanction of the special commissioners notified to him, on his application to attend in any case in which he deemed such a course advisable,

The commissioners concluded by observing, that from their experience of the conduct and abilities of Mr. Bignell as a pleader on the part of private individuals, they felt assured that his personal attendance in their court sould have been satisfactory to them individually, and might have tended to facilitate their proceedings, advantages which they should not have wished to lorego but for the reasons above stated,

Mr. Officiating Secretary Halliday, on the 26th December last, informed the special commissioners, that the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor was at the outest indisposed to agree with them in opinion that their proceedings would for the most part be conducted quite as well without, as with agents and pleaders, and until (says Mr. Hailiday) the Deputy Governor shall learn that five lers and good pleaders, are unnecessary in the Sudder Dewanny Advalut, the proceedings of which court are in all essential respects the same as in the commissioners, he will continue to think that the presence of a good bar has a whole ome effect even upon a good beach, in I that the character of no court is so little likely to be compromised, as that in which the pleaders are upright, intelligent an lin lependent.

If (continued Mr. Halliday), as stated by the commissioners, the agents usualty couployed in their court do not a swer to the character, the Deputy Governor thinks it very probable that the low stan laid of qualification hitherto decrand necessary for the Government agent in the Commissioner's court, may have had no shall share in producing such a state of things. But he Honor (continues Mr. Halliday) is rather inclined to believe that the chara ter of the Commissioner's bar, was, and is greatly improving. Mr. Bignell himself, whose ediciency the Coaimi sioners have admitted, was, it is understood, in good practice in their court before his present appointment, Mr. Baillie, who, like Mr. Bignell, is a pleader in the Sudder Dewanny Adambut, who is believed to possess high qualifications, and was indeed one of these persons selected by the Sulder Devanny Mawlutfor the situation of Govern ment vakeel to that court, pactices in the Commissinner's court, his Hogor is informed, with considerable and increasing seccess, and there are others in practice there, of whose abilities a favorable report is made. seems (said Mr. Halberr) reasonable to expect that the comber of such plend as will now increase, as they have increased in the Sudder Downing Adamint, and the Depity Governor is apt to believe that the employment consideration. of Mr. Digital on the part of Covernment, will create a demand by apposite profession the aid of skill and talents in the presecution of their appeals, and that thus, the evil of an interior bar, couplined of by the commissigners, will, through the very means which they at pre- to ascertain through the several Collectors, and inform sent deprezate, be at an early period removed from their

That Mr. Bignell's employment (continued Mr. Haladay) as a Government Agent in the compassioner's court, would tend, or be supposed by the public to tend to sway the judgment of the commissioners, His Honor never apprehended , and he has too high an opinion of the functionaries who preside to their court, and of their estimate with the public, to admit that any such apprehension need be entertained.

In concluding Mr. Halliday observes, that, after giving to the arguments urged by the commissioners, all the consideration to which both for their motives, and the authority from which they emanate they are confiled, His Honor is unable to concur with the Commissioners, that there exists any necessity for altering the course originally intended, and now pursued by the Sudder Board of Revenue in regard to Mr. Bignell's precedings.

The Board, on receipt of the two preceding communications, ordered their record, and that Mr. Bignell should be supplied with a copy of the whole of the correspondence.—Hurkaru, January 17.

CIRCULAR ORDERS, 1838.

No. 2, ACCOUNT SALES OF LANDS SOLD FOR ARREARS OF REVENUE.

The Sudder Board of Revenue having had occasion to remark that the account sales of lands sold for arrears of revenue, transmitted to them are seldom alike in form, have furnished the revenue commissioners, with a view to uniformity in future, with a blank statement for adoption in the several collectorates comprised in their divisions *

No. 3, A KNOWLEDGE OF THE TERSIAN LANGUAGE DECLARED UNNECESSARY FOR THE OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR UNDER REGULATION 1x. of 1833.

Mr. Officiating Secretary F. J. Halliday, on the 19th December, 1837, informed the Board that in the opinion of the Hon'ble the deputy Governor of Bengal a knowledge of the Persian language does not appear to be a necessary qualification for the office of Deputy collector under Regulation 1X. of 1833.

The Board have communicated the above order to the revenue Commissioners.

No. 4, DEPUTY COLLECTORS APPOINTED UNDER PEGULA-TION IX. OF 1833, MUST BE ABLE TO READ AND SPEAK THE VIRNACULAR LANGUAGE OF THEIR RESPECTIVE DISTRICTS.

Mr. Officiating Secretary F. J. Halliday, on the 23th November last, informed the Board that it appeared desirable to the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal tor obvious reasons, that deputy collectors under Regulation IX of 1833, should possess at least a tolerable ability to read and speak the vernacular language or the districts to which they may be appointed. The Board have also been directed in future before submitting nominations of individuals to such situations, to satisfy themselves of the qualifications of the nonnees in this respect, either through the local officers, or where the nomination may be by the Board, by examination at their own office of the candidate's acquirements. The results of such enquire, or examinations, are to be reported with the nomination for the deputy Governors,

The Board have circulated the above orders among the revenue Commissioners, and have instructed them that the orders ought to have a retrospective effect, and the Board of the names of those Deputy Collectors subordinate to them, who may not be able to read and speak the vernacular language of the district in which they are employed, and to inform shose individuels that their removal will be recommended, unless within six months succeeding the communication of the orders, to that effect, they attain this indispensable qualitication.

No 5, how commissioners of revenue should issue ORDERS ON THEIR SUBOLDINATES.

The Board, on the 16th instant, instructed the Revenue Commissioners that whenever they may have occasion to communicate to any of their subordinates an order, requiring any particular duties to be performed, or any forms to be sub-tituted for those in previous use, that the Commissioners will exact from such officer a declaration in answer that the order given him, has been duly carried into effect.

[.] We shall furnish the statement in the Calcutte Manthly Journal .- Reporter.

No. 6. RISTS TO BE REGULATED FROM THE 1ST MAY 1837. | No. 7, HEAD ASSISTANTS, OR CLERES TO THE REVENUE

It having been brought to the notice of the Sudder Board of Revenue that, in one of the district's within their jurisdiction, proper attention has not been paid to the Board's Circular orders of the 5th September 1836directed that Kists should be regulated from the 1st May, 1837, according to the English months and not those of the native calendars, the Board have requested the revenue Commissioners to report for their infomation whether those orders have been duly carried into effect in the several districts within the division of their respecting commissioners.

COMMISSIONERS, NOT ALLOWED TO SIGN LETTERS ON BEHALF OF THOSE OFFICERS.

By an extract of a letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal dated the 18th October last, it appears that Lord Auckland did not think it expedient to authorize the head assistant to the commissioners to sign letters on behalf of those officers. His Lordship remarked that the clerks had already been authorized to authenticate all copies, and to frank all letters issued from the commissioners' office on the pubhe service.

By an oversight in the Board's office the above orders were not communicated to the Revenue commissioners before the 16th instant,-Hurk. Jan. 31, MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

MR. MARTIN.-The Deputy Governor of Bengal has Hoogly, and his being placed on the allowances of a se-mor merchant out of employ. The charges brought against Mr. Martin, are considered to have been so far established by the investigations held by Mr. W. W. Bird, that His Honor considers it mexpedient to continue him in the high office he held. Much praise is bestowed by His Honor on Mr. Lowis, who first brought to notice the reports affecting Mr. Martin's character which were current in the Hooghly district. Some further investigations, it is supposed, are to take place.

SILVER MUG TO SERJEANT MAJOR COBLY .- Serjeant Major Cobly, of H. M.'s 9th Foot, being about to proceed to England, to take the pension, the officers of the regiment, in token of their sense of his services, have presented him with a silver mug, gilt inside, bearing a highly complimentary inscription. The commanding officer, Colonel Macaekill, Major Barnwell, and the adjutant of the regiment, addressed letters to him expressive of their approbation and good will.

THE CIVIL SERVICE-ORDER OF MERIT.-It is said that the Court of Directors have hit upon a new and very ingenious expedient for the effecting of a further saving in the sala ies of their Civil Servants. It is in contemplation to establish an Order of Merit to be conferred on the distinguished, or rather on the to-be-distinguished Members of the Service, and in as much as honors have their worth and intrassic value, in the estimation of their wearers, the opening to their servants of this new road to honor, is to be accompanied, simultaneously, with certain further clippings and reductions of salary.

mn. r. c. secret - Mr. F. C. Smith, the Superintendent of Politon for the Bougal Presidency, embacked on board of the Jellinghee, and proceeded up the river, to join his establishment at Guyah and commence the duties of his office.

THE NONEVA-The Novena was celebrated at the Roman Catholic Church at Howrah, by Fre Paul da Gradoly. The Church was brilliantly illuminated on the occasion, and after service, a few fireworks were let off, but not half so many or so good as we were led to expect. The scantiness of the pyrotechnic exhibition, shows the good sense of the managing Padree, as it evinces that he knows to make a better use of Money, than to waste it on such vain shows.

THE FREE SCHOOL CHURCH,-Tu consequence of certain alarming fissures in the walls of the Free School, or St. Thomas's Church, the Governors called upon Lieutenant Abercrombie, of Engineers, attached to the Conordered the removal of Mr. C. R. Martin, the Judge of servancy Department, to examine and report upon the Hoogly, and his being placed on the allowances of a se-edifice. He has given it as his opinion that the whole of the western face would long ago have come down in a crash if it were not for the belfry, which acts as an abutment in support of that portion of the building. The Governors of the school consequently met on the 11th instant, to look into the extent and nature of that injury, and having satisfied themselves that some measures should be immediately adopted to guard against the probable comingency of the building giving way, have called upon Mr. Parker, the original builder, to take down that part of the Church, and have the necessary repairs effected, the whole to be conducted under the skilful super endence of Major Hutchinson, of Engi> school at Burdway. -- Government has sent instructions to the Magistrate at Burdwan for the erection of a school in that district, and also to ascertain how far its wealthier inhabitants are disposed to further the project of establishing one.

> WARDENS OF THE PRINCIPAL ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. Messis, F. Rodrigues and M. Augier, were, on the 15th instant, elected wardens of the Prinipcal Roman Ctholic Church, in succession to Messrs. M. Crow and I.Gregory, who have gone out in succession.

> STRAM PETITION. - Upwards of 6,000 signatures have been affixed to the steam petition.

> THE UNION BANK. - The Union Bank has paid a dividend of twelve per cent. to proprietors, and this has been the result of a quarter, in which the bank's operations have been considerably checked by several > MARINE REGISTRY OFFICE .- Mr. Joseph Young has been engaged in carefully examining the constitution of the old Registry Office, in which he has every aid from the Marine Board, and is preparing a plan for submission to the Chamber at an early date for the new Marine Registry office. There is, therefore, every reason to hope that the scheme, when brought forward again, will be presented to them in a shape deserving of all the patronage of the Chamber and the Public.

> BENGAL CLUB HOUSE -A proposition is to be brought forward at the next General Meeting of the Bengal Club, to purchase ground and build a new and Capacious Club.

House by joint stock subscription of two lakhs in, shares of 500 rupees each.

HOUROF BUISINESS. - A resolution has been passed on the subject of the hour of buisiness to be observed in Public Offices—the periods fixed are from 10 to 4 or 11 to 5. This reform is attributable to the representations of the Chamber of Commerce, to whom the thanks of those who may benefit by the change, are therefore due

THE PUBLIC TANKS—The Conservincy Department has directed the engine at Chandpaul Ghaut, to be worked for seventeen hours daily instead of the usual eight hours. This is with a view to filling all those tanks with his which the engine conduits communicate and will be the means of preventing much of the distress which was last year telt from the scarcity of water in those parts of the town which are at a distance from the river.

Coller, Bird and Grant, has been selected by the Sheriff, to fill the office of Deputy, during the ensuing year.

ar-unions.—The first Re-union of 1838 took place at the Town Hall on the 2nd instant. The company was more select than numerons; and ther e was an unusual pancity of the fair sex. The evening went off, however, with great eclat, and those who were fortunate enough to secure partners, kept on the "light fantastic toe" until long after the "witching" hour of night."

NAWAB ICHAL UD DOWLA.—His highness Nawab Echal ud Dowla arrived in Calcutta on the 2nd instant, from Benares. He has deported on the Duke of Beford for England, where he intends to urge his claims to the throne of Onde.

The attendance of natives was much smaller than usual. A nortion of the table opposite to the auctioneer was railed off for the officers of the Board to prevent confusion in receiving the deposit. The Patna opened at Rs 815 but fell at the third lot to 750, at which price 50 lots were taken by option and the bidding then went on steadily at 765 to 775 till the end of the hist moiety of the Paina. The first lot of Benares was knocked down at 750, the second at 715, and the price afterwards declined gradually from 720 to 665. The rest of the Patna was then brought forward, the price opening at 775 and going up gradually to 835, but declining again and closing at 805.

EXECUTION OF DECREES AT SERAMPOOR-Ever since the enactment of the Insolvent act in this country, the Danish authorities have refsued to give protection to deb tors who abscond to that place, to avoid an enforced payment of the debts due by them. Lately a person proceeded from Calcutta to that town, with copies of three decrees of the Court of Requests, against an individual who had absconded to that settlement; and after having relutted the defendant's allegations of his having paid the amount of these decrees, he obtained an order for the immediate payment of their amount, and it was only on consideration of the defendant having placed in the custody of the Danish Court, some furniture, &c. sufficient to cover the amount of these decrees, that he had 15 days' time allowed him to pay the money and redeem the pledged articles, at the expiration of which period, if not redeemed, they will be sold to satisfy these decrees.

THE INSOLVENT ESTATES.—A rumour has been in course of circulation that orders either have already been received, or are on the point of being conveyed to the Assignces of the estates belonging to the creditors of the Lite insolvent agency houses, to the effect of their being required peremptorily to wind up such portion of the unsettled outstandings as relate to Indigo Factories or other real property, the interest of which still remains vested in their hands.

MRS. LEACH.—The managers, amateurs, and proprietors of the Chowringhee Theatre, have presented Mrs. Leach with a jewel, on her taking leave of the Threatre, in consideration of the services she has done the drama here.

MESSRS CAMERON AND AMOS .- Mr. Cameron, the Law commissioner, goes into council as Fourth Ordinary Member, on the departure of Mr. Macaulay, and he will continue in council until the arrival of Mr. Amos, the new head of the Law commission.

GOOMSOOR. - An officer of Government at Goomsoor, has recently succeeded in rescuing twelve individuals of different sever and ages, destined for the sacrifices to the Koordish divinity, and the same active officer expects twenty-four more to be brought into his camp. The full moon is the period for the consummation of the abominable rite, on which period at least one-half of the above number of persons would have been sacrificed. An etfective blow has been struck against the system, by the active measures of this officer.

Loss of A BRIG DEFINE.—Co the night of the 12th in-stant, between 11 and 12 o'cock, an outward bound Laccadive brig was totally burnt off Budge-Budge. She had 3,000 rupees in coah on board, half of which was recovered by the owners. The fire originated by a lamp having set fire to the beam, by which it was suspended in the cabin or round house on deck.

rings .- Several fires have occurred this and two Native Christians had len victims to the flames, but property has not sufficient of the river police for any practice lately in this line. The highest left for Allyghur en route to Meerut the next day, under another salute.

Small Pox continues raging with great violence among the natives. Amongst the European population two perty recovered.

ALTERED AND FORGED BANK NOTES .- There are several altered and forged bank notes in circulation at present, some of the latter so very admirably executed, that they are easily passed for genuine once. The best distinguishing mark is, the quality of the paper, the forged notes being on paper considerably inferior to that of the genuine ones.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT .- A melancholy occident befel a young officer of the Cameronians, Mr. James, on the 20th instant. He was sliding down the banisters of the starr-case leading to the officers' quarters, when he suddenly slipped, lost his hold, and fell to the bottom-His skull was freetured, the joints of his fingers bloken, and his body otherwise much bruised. Buarculeonr, -A perty Rajah, of a place called Muhawar, has been convicted before the Sessions Judge of Bhangalpore of the wilful and unprovoked murder of an elephant-driver, whom he had tied to a post in a tent, and there, deliberately cut his body in pieces with a sword. The Sessions Judge had condemned the Rajah to suffer capitally, and referred the sentence to the Nizamut Adawlut for confirmation.

MIRZAPORE. -- A project for a Joint Stock Bank has been set a foot here, with every prospect of success. Bank will be formed chiefly on the model of the Union and Agra Banks, but will be of a more commercial character than the latter. The extensive men'y operations at this great triding town, will be highly favourable to it. This undertaking will defeat an intention at one time said to have been entertained by the Directors of the Agra-Bank of establishing a branch of their institution at this place.

The Field Officer whose arrest was noticed recently drew down on himself the punishment, for declaring with a considerable degree of candour the strong doubts he entertained of the judgment and capacity of the Members of a Court of Requests, before which he was pleading as defendant. The case has, it is said, been forwarded by the General of the division to Head Quarters.

There is so much distress near Futtegbur that instances have been known of people coming for telief to the almshouse and actually expiring from starvation before assistance could be afforded to them. Representations have been made to Government, and assistance to a certain extent afforded; but, alas much more must be done before the present urgent distress can be effectually relieved.

The Futteghur treasury is so completely cleared out, that all payments have been stopped, and the authorities have been authorized to borrow three or four lacs of rupges; as usual, there is a difference of opinion about interest, the Government offering four, the shorffs wanting six per cent.

The scarcity of money just now is principally to be attributed to the old coinage having been recalled and not a sufficient quantity of the new having arrived to replace it.

The subjects of Therawaddie have commenced aggressions on our subjects by the deliberate murder of the head man of the village of Durray, situated on the north-west extremity of Biloo-k'own. It appears his house was surrounded by robbers on the night of the last day of the year. On becoming aware of their presence, he escaped from the house and was in the act of calling out to his villagers for assistance, when one of the villains fired and shot him dead on the spot. Durray is one of the largest villages in the province, but as the men were employed in their paddy fields, the robbers escaped with impunity. Their numbers have not been ascert fined, but, they are supposed not to have exceeded ten, and as they came to the village by the creek from ser-ward, there can be no doubt of their being from Martaban; and, indeed, the whole transaction is consonant with what we have repeatedly heard is the intention of the Burmese on that side-to harrass our people by a constant system of dacoity, and to cause them to look for safety and protection only by abandoning us and placing themselves under Burmese rule.

The disposition evinced towards us by the authorities of Bileng and Martab in is said to have undergone a most complete change. Whereas formerly, any mes-enger from Moulmein was invariably treated with kindness and respect, an individual sent there recently with a letter from the Chief Civil Authority, and addressed to the Governor, was not allowed to enter the town, and was treated by the Governor with much indignity. The officer even proceeded so far as to tell him " Things are changed and are not as they were—I am old, but I should like to fight the English again."

It is further said that a kind of levy en masse had been ordered throughout the Burmese empire, and that the most active preparations for war were on foot.

Our position on this frontier seems to be fast verging towards hostilities, unless, indeed, it be intended quietly to put up with every insult and injure that may be offered to The terror and distress already suffered by our people, are sufficient warrants for vigorous measures totressing. Women and children resort to the Jungle at night, whilst the men are solely occupied in measures for the defence of themselves, their families, and property.

By the brig Elizabeth, from Rangoon, some letters from that place and from Maulmain have been received. It appears that the Burmese Governor of Martaban, the town directly opposite to Maulmain, had songs sung at a public festival, grossly abusing the English and beasting that the Burmese would go and destroy Maul- Straghite.

a prominent and useful part for many years prior and main, stating that the Burmese were nesembling a force at various places in the vicinity and making washke preparations. A report had been brought down from Koukmoung stating, that the King intended to acknowledge our treaties so soon as his other uffairs were settled, but that the last intelligence from Calcurta, which would soon have seached the King, was calculated to do much mischief. It was that the Governor-General does not much regard the King's disavowal of our treaties so long as the Burmese commit no aggression, and that as vet, our Government is of opinion it has no cruse to quarrel with the King.

The Bucen Boun, a schooner belonging to Messrs. Trill and Co ,of Raugoon, had grounded on the John and Gargaret shoul and been dese ted by her commander and crew; but hopes were entertained of getting her off.

PENANG AND SINGAPORE.

During the week have been received files of the Singa pare Free Press to the 21st of December, and Prince of Wales Island Gazettes to the 30th of the same month. In these papers are two letters from Mr. H. U. Prinsep, to the merchants of Singapore and to the Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce at Penang, respecting the claims of the latter, on behalf of the merchants of these islands to be placed on the same footing as the purchasers of opium for the China market,

It appears by these documents, that the Government here wash their hands of having determined the scale of distribution by which the Bonus was paid, and throw the ment or dement thereof on the China merchants. The Penang and Singapore merchants have won nothing by the measure they adopted. On the contrary the former are told somewhat coolly, that "the measures of Government were of necessity taken upon grounds furnished by estimates and general interences, and the Governor-General of India in Council had not before him such precise information in regard to the state of the market in the Streights as has now been furnished; but his Lordship in Council cannot add the assurance, that if the present information had then been possessed, the Merchants of Penang would have been considered entitled to greater consideration in any respect than they have received.

The cargo was discharging partly-damaged, and after undergoing the necessary repairs the Mulcolm was again to proceed on her voyage with the sound part of the cargo.

SINGAPORE.

During the week Singapore journals to the 7th o December last have been received. A proposition has wards breaking up this nest of villains now congregated been made, for a Monthly Steam Communica in herwicen at Martaban. Those who have gone up the Salween the Sringhts and Calcutta, with a view of extending to River declare that the state of the villages is most distinct quarter, and in some dogree to China, the banefit of that quarter, and in some dagree to China, the benefit the Steam Communication between India and Great Britani. In this point of view, the proposed plan has peculiar interest at this jouncture, for it is another argument in favour of the comprehensive plan, by which alone the tull advantages of a steam communication with England can be extended to the Straights. For that purpose, however, there should be, as has been proposed, branch steamers running between Point de Galle and the Seas, in which the Cautation, the B. Ivanno, the Ariel, and was consequently very much retaided. The Hington several other craft, were discussed on otherwise damaged. Hong affairs remain unaltered. CHINA.

DINNER GIVEN TO THE HON. G. F. RUSSELL, ESQ.

The Dinner given to the Honourable G. F. Russell, Esq., at the Banqueting room, on Thursday evening, wore entirely the enthusiastic character we had anticipated for it. About 150 gentlemen assembled on the occasion, amongst whom were Lord Elphinstone (who presided at the entertainment), Sir Robert Comyn, the Honorable Mr. Sullivan, Major General Doveton, Sir Edward Gambier, the Honourable Mr. Lushington, Major General Vigoureux, with the heads of all departments, civil, military, and medical. A spacious tent was erected in front of the banqueting 100m to receive the thronging company, and a very well executed transparency was placed over the entrance to the hall diplaying Mr. Russell's arms, supported on one side by the hisignia of civil occupation, and on the other by military trophies amudst which the names of Kimedy and Goomsoor were interminated, and the whole surmounted by the words, "Rusell, Farewell" This device had a very pleasing effect, and many a heart found a quickened motion when marking its token of adieu. Dinner was served up about eight o'clock in the usual recherche style found at the present day within the walls of that edifice which had been accorded for the entertainment; delicacies and luxuries covered the tables; the wines were cooled to a fault; and excellent vocal and instrumental music heightened the enthusiasm of the more stirring objects of the assemblage. We give below a list of the toasts, with the names of their proposers. Mr. Russell's health, it is scarcely necessary to say was received with the most rapturous chearing, and again and again did the burst of applause break forth, telling in its energy and enthusiasm how honest was the tribute to his eminent public character, and how sincere the appreciation of his private worth. The moment was one of proud gratification to the honoured and valued object of the warm offering; it told that, even amylet the proverbial indifference of Indian life, a guerdon of popular esteem and effection is still within attainment, and Mr. Russell must have felt that the convincing proof lay before him of his having nobly and truly won it. But the tide of recollection carried him back over thirty-five years of honourable service; he thought of companions in its long career, many of whom he beheld around him; he felt that he was about to part from those who had just proclaimed the warmth of their affectionate regard, and we need not wonder, that ove rcome by his feelings, he was able alone to falter forth the expression of his thanks and the saddened words of farewell.

Several very neat and effective speeches were delivered in the course of the evening, and the party went off in the happiest manner, all evidently partaking in one common feeling on the occasion that brought them together, and communicating it to all the social agremens of the evening. Toasts.

" The Hon. G. E. Russell, Esq. has been per-mitted to resign his seat in Council and the Honorable Company's service, from the date of his embarkation to England on the ship True Briton.

The Right Hon. the Governor in Council cannot permit the Hon. G. E. Russell, Esq. to quit India without an expression of his deep regret at the loss which the public interests will sustain by the retirement from the service of an officer whose experience and ability, whose zeal, judgment and temper in circumstances of responsibility and difficulty have been repeatedly recognised by the Government.

FREE PRESS DINNER AT THE TOWN HALL.

One hundred and mucty-six gentlemen sat down to of the question, but confine myself to offering two dinner at the Town-hall to celebrate the emancipation of the Indian Press, and to do honor to its noble liberator, Sir Charles Theophilus Metcalle, who had been especially invited as the guest of the evening the annual celebration, which is on the 15th of December having been postponed to the 9th of February on that account. Mr. Longueville Clark presided in the Chair and Mr. Henry Mendith Parker in the vice chair. At a quarter past seven, the Honorable Baronet arrived at the hall, and was received at the door by the stewards in a body and ashered upstairs. At half past seven the friends of the Free Press dinner was announced, Sir Charle sat at the head of the table, between the Chairman and R. D. Mangles, Esq. There were several native gentlemen present, among whom we noticed Ramnauth Tagore. Prosecuna Coomar Tagore, Rustumjee Cowhall being cleared of the servants the first toast was announced.

THE CHAIRMAN.-A bumper, gentlemen, to our youthful Sovereign. Under ordinary circumstances 1 should have proposed this toast unaccompanied by any remarks, and have left it to be drank with that feeling of lovalty, which I believe is common to the breast of every subject of the British Crown. But the present are no ordinary circumstances : we are assembled here to commemorate a great political event, the liberation of the Indian Press, and this is the first meeting we have hold since that Sovereign ascended the throne, who has proved her attachment to the principles we advocate, by continuing the Ministry, who gave reform to England. (Loud cheering). Well then may she boolear to her people. Those whose proximity places them within the influence of the Royal and youthful fascinator, may be pardoned for that fervent enthusiasm, with which she appears to have! inspired all ranks in England. Even we, whose feelings must be dulled by the distance which intervenes, gaze on her as a creature of a rate order, on whom endowments have been poured, which, collectively, are seldom attainable. Possessed of the love of her relatives, the affection of her friends, the esteem of the nation; rank, which makes her pre-unment in the world, fortunes public ; accomplishments to hallow retirement ; beauty to fascinate; youth to enjoy: these are guts individually estimable, in their union -- unparalleled.

Quo nihil magus meliu-vo terus Fata donavece, bonique Divi, Nec dabunt quamvis redeant in aurum. Tempora procum.

Up then, gentlemen, and with brimming glasses drink to the prosperous reign and happy life of our youthful Queen, Victoria. (The toust was druk with immenese chearing.)

Air .- " God save the Queen."

THE CHALEMAN. - Gentlemen; it is now my duty to give you the super important to set of the evening. The farenow of his Passa in India. (This announce order, may well laugh, but the working of it was not ment tous received with the most tremendous applicate, and the demonstrations of ending of the most tremendous of the two journals which were suppressed, or to the two largest and the demonstrations of the two journals which were suppressed, or to the two thusing it mainted secretal minutes; the Chareman frequently differs who were basished. (Cheers.) Such, gentlemen, attempting to continue his address, but supt by the was the state of the country when the Press was fettered, reiterated shouts from all part of the room. When the but what is its state now? Why, the first great point is, burst of feeling at last unbisided, he continued.) So much has been said and written, and well said and well written. In English who have come to this distant on the Freedom of the Press agreeable, that I shall not always a superstant that the filests who have come to this distant remarks, the one regarding the origin of the periodical press, the other relating to the results to which it has led. To some of you it may not perhaps be known, that the Periodical Piess of England owes its ougin to the most despotic sovereign who ever swaved the British sceptre. Lyrannical as the race of the Tudors were, no one was more so than Queen Elizabeth. She protected her country from foreign aggression, but she was a despot over her people. Yet was she wise in her generation; and when she found, the liberties, the religion of the people were endangered by foreign invasion, and her crown at stake; she appealed to the nation for support, she roused its enthusiasm through the mighty engine of a Periodical Piess, which was then for the first time established. But it was not more remarkable that the Penolical Press should have originated in the asjee, and Manikjee Rustomjee, E-qrs. The dinner and act of a tyrannical monarch to protect her empire, than the wines were excellent and about nine o'clock the were the results which that Press has produced. Look, gentlemen, at the man of the world, and dwell on the conditions of the countries, where the Press is lettered, and the Press is Free. (Loud cheers.) Look, gentlemen, at America and England, and compare them with kny other nation on the globe. In these two states the people enjoy liberty to a degree beyond that, which is any where else to be found; they are wealthy, they are enlightened, while the countries themselves have no rivals in power. It is the people which make the coun. try; it is the Free Press which has made the people-(Loud cheers) Gentlemen; having briefly alluded to the origin and re-ults of the Freedom of the Press, I now applicable the immediate object of the toast, Ins. FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IN INDIA. (Choers.) Those who are opposed to it, admit the excellency of the institution in other countries, but they allege, that India is not prepared to receive it, and that peculiarities exist here, which make its introduction dangerons. On this point which made its introduction daugetons. On this point 1 come to issue at once, and affirm boldly, that of all countries, B.itish India most requires the Freedom of the Press. (Cheers) I draw no nice distinctions; I admit the local peen samiles which are relied upon, and I assert that it is the existence of these very peculiarities, which improve the requires that the Piess of India should be free. In support of this assertion, I appeal which makes her pre-amment in the world, fortunes to the former and present state of this country, when the which distance the idea of necessary; talents to tale in Press we restricted, and when the Press is Free. Many of you must remember the celebrated order of the 5th of April 1823, published by Government for the guidance and conduct of Editors. In that they were told, that they not toot publish, nor republish any thing, - no not even from the English papers,-which might impuga the conduct or hart the feelings of the King or any of the Royal Faibly, -the Court of Directors, or Authorities in England connected with India .- the Governor Gene. ral, Mombers of Council, the Judges, Bishop, Government Officers, nor disturb the harmony or unanimity of Society. It they could have relied on the veracity of the small note which followed, true it is, that they had slight reason to complain; for the order gravely assured them, that these prohibitions impored no irksome restrictions on free discussion, or publishing information. (Laughter.) Ave gentlemen, those who only read the on the Freedom of the Press generally, that I shall not chime, have not left their fiberty behind them; and the trespass on your time by descanting on the colleged view natives of the soil find that the English have brought liberty to them. (Cheers) I deny gentlemen, that not diffused. It not only imparts instruction, but excees are desirous of a partial despotism. Euglishmen would to learning, and the man who is opposed to the freeing content, but it discloses it in the germ by exposing the they perceive the difference between the spear and sword, causes by which it is generated. Well did my friend Mr. the rappine and violence of the Mahiatia and Pindaree. I unou say, when speaking from this chair, no man commits treason in a newspaper; and well did he allude to the evidence of Sir John Malcolm, who disclosed the seditions libels which had secretly been circulated among the native soldiery, exciting them to mutthy and the murder of their officers. That, gentlemen, could never have happened in a newspaper. (Cheers). But now, gentlemen, let me also recall to your recollection the peculiar situation of a Governor-Coneral. In him the fault is not, but it is in the system. He may be the wisest, the most talented, and the best of men, yet when he lands on these shores, what does he know of the countiv, the people, their language, their habits, customs, or laws! He has to rule the destines of eighty millions, without possessing those indispensable essentials for governing, experience, and local knowledge. He must either be a useless tool in the hands of those who surround him, or, if he be deaf to their advice, his ignorthe is his only guide. To this vast evil one remedy has been found, the freeing of the Indian Press. It injustice be practised, there the injuled can complain; if suggestions are to be offered, they can be the e proclaimed, and canyassed by the public, who may support! words of Lord William Beninck to the departation of which I formed one? I repeat them in the presence of land william beninck to the departation of self to behave, that any one whose heart is in the right which I formed one? I repeat them in the presence of the self to behave, the self to be a self-to-make the many who heard them with myself. " Fuar HE HAD DE- place, that any one who is upright, honest, benevolent, many who heard the me with iny self. I that the hab be-sired more information from the Indian Press, of the sagacious, and featless of scratting into his public acts, nived more information from the Indian Press, of the sagacious, and featless of scratting into his public acts, REAL SIALS OF THE COUNTRY, THAN TROM ALL THE COUNTILS, ALL THE BOARDS, AND ALL THE SECRETARIES BY WHOM HE WAS SURROUNDED." (Loud cheers.)

Let me now, gentlemen, examine how far the Freedom of the Press conduces to the weal of the governed. First, it confers on its freedom of discussion, which is the birthright of every freeman. The disjecty of the people is: no tille phrase, for it imports that, which is really the case, that the time sovereignly is in the nation, and not in the cuter. All kings, all governors, are in fact but the servants of the state, placed at its head for their talents, their knowledge, and their virtues, justly respected for these qualities, and looked up to with gratifude for the benefits they dispense. I abate not one tittle from the honor which is their due, and vield to no man for the respect in which I hold them. Yet is the government of the state entrusted to their care, not because it is their property, not because the people are their serfs or staves; - but in order that they may faithfully discharge the duties of governing. (Cheers.) Can it be endured then, that the people for whom they hold these trusts are not to question their acts, or that the rights of discussing the measures of their rulers is to be denied to the state, for whose service and weal they have been crowned? Hence, gentlemen, is it, that freedom of discussion is a freeman's birth-right; and by filering the Press you benefit the governed; by treeing the Press the hearts and the altars of their country might not be you likewise extend the blessings of knowledge and polluted by a foreign loc. (Cheers.) It is sufficient enlighten the people,—a measure which all allow is for me to feel that it placed between a terrible enemy banish desputism altogether. I deny that we want on of the Indian Press, must be the foe to enlightening the atmosphere of liberty of our own; but that liberty which natives. (Loud cheers.) But, gentlemen, a stronger arguis our birth-right we would not part with, and we would ment still temains. Free the Press, and you strengthen share it with our native fellow subjects. (Loud cheers.) the bond of union between the native and the British subject. In the present state of the country we do share with them (Land cheers.) Free the Piess, and you teach the the Liberty of the Press; and this is the first contrast natives what European countries are; what England is; between our present and former condition. The next contrast gentlemen, is, that a system has been introduced alike your arts, your sciences, your comforts, luxinies, wealth beneficial for the gove nois and the governed. For the and independence; they draw the contast be tween governois it is beneficial, for it not only dissipates dis-tine state of things there, and in their own country here; and the protection of property and person by Law. (Loud cheers.) I'ell me then, will not the native find himself drawn towards the land and the nation who give him security and justice, in exchange for destruction and plunder ! Tell me, will not the bond of union be strengthened? And this is what the Freedom of the Press in India will assuredly achieve. (Loud cheers) tientlemen; have I drawn the sketch correctly ?- Have I correctly pourtrayed the past and present state of the country, when the Press was enthralled, and when the Press is Fice? Have I shown you the blessings it be-tows on the governors and governed ! If your hearts te-pond to these sentiments, up. I say, and drink to the "Freedom of the Indian Press," (The toust was drank with immense cheers.)

Air .- " See the conquering hero comes."

VICE PRESIDENT .- Gentlemen I have the honor to propose to you a toast that will not, I know, fail to be received with all those demonstrations of attachment and respect to which it is richly and honestly entitled. I have to name to you a nobleman who, though far away, cannot but view with interest all things bearing upon so vital a question as the Freedom of the Indian to the Free Press in India. If then, these things give a guarantee of such friendship, assuredly the illustrious person I now have to you, must be such a friend, for all the qualities I have enumerated are emineutly his, gentienen - The Governor General. (Cheers.)

Air .- " Here's a health to those that's awa,"

THE PRESIDENT .- Gentlemen; charge your glasses with a bumper. The toast I am about to propose to you, will speak for itself, and requires no introductory remarks from me. Gentlemen, I give you The Navy of England. (Loud cheers.)

Air .- " Rule Britannia."

Vice-President. - Gentlemen; it is my duty to propose a toast to you, and the labour is the labour of love. or I should say with greater truth, no labour at all, but a real pleasure. Gentlemen; my toat is the Bitish Army. (Cheers) I know there has been discussion infinite Press,-for my own part, I will own to you candidly, that I don't care one he what its politics are, or what us feelings are, on the question I have hinted at, -it is sufficient for me to know, that through long years of pent and gloom, the Brinsh Army fought and bled, that of vital importance to India. In those countries and our pleasant fichis and native homes, the iron barrise where the Press is most free, is knowledge most of its indomirable valour. (Cheers.) I can no more him myself to care for the politics of our brave soldiers, Inhabitants by Mr. T. B. Macautay on the debate on the India Bill in the House of Commons. the gates of Foulouse, and from the wood of Soignes to pripation of the Press. Were I before another tribunal, the towns of Notic Dame. (Cheers.) But in this I might defend that measure; (Deafening cheers.) but to assembly my toast has a peculiar title to receive all the do so here, is evidently quite unnecessary—perfectly honors. The British Army, gentlemen, everywhere met and baffled the most despotic, the most formidable effects of a Free Press which the world eversaw. Almitting all his greatness, all his magnificent and richest qualities, yet there never lived a fiercer hater, a more inexciable tyrant, where the liberty of the Press was concerned, than Napoleon Bonaparte. (Cheers.) But the hour of retribution came, and the murder, - I will call it by no other tule, -the foul murder of the unfortunate Palm of the poor bookseller, whom the desput crushed in warth and in scorn, was gloriously tevenged on the Plains of Waterloo, by THE BRITISH ARMY. (Much cheering.)

Air .- " British Grenadiers."

THE CHAIRMAN.-Gentlemen; another bumper, and let this be the fullest you can fill. I have given you the freedom of the Indian Press; I have emleavoured to describe the immeasurable blessings it will co fer on fallow the interest of the occasion to divert our attention this country; but my toast now is the health of him to altogether from the grand odject of our meeting, or to whom we owe that boon? our distinguished guest, Sir forget that much yet remains to be done. It is not Charles Metcalfe. (Enth. s. astic cheering which continued for a long time.) I shall not, gentlemen, detain by the statute or advance by regulation, nor is it suffiyou long, for more I cannot say, than what I have cent that it should be guarded by all the provisions that already uttered, regarding the value to India of the free, the ingenuty of man or of Law Commissioners can already uttered, regarding the value to India of the free-the ingenuity of man or of Law Commissioners can dom of the Piess, nor can I say more regarding our devise. No true friend of the Piess will rest satisfied obligation to Sir Charles Metcalfe, than that it is to him, independence, we are published for that incalculable blessing. But surpassing as are the claims of Sir Charles Metcalfe on us, for this great act, how well are they supported by the history of his Indian life. (Lond cheers) Lond thinks through all your hearts. I am content with that the history of his Indian life. (Lond cheers) Lond thinks through all your feelings; but I cannot sit down the history of his Indian life. (Lond cheers) Lond without drawing your attention to the facts that the Piess of India enjoys halle of that security. It is only in the King's Courts it has no such appeal to a jury at all, reflever of distress, the munificent patron of resolut reliever of distress, the munificent patron of useful and in those courts it has no such appeal, except upon institutions, the assiduous officer of Government; the statesman who cared for the empire' (Cheers,) Were I to seek for that, to which I might compare him, I should find it in the striking feature of this country, where numerous and magnificent streams flow through. and fertilize vast tracts of land, till uniting together, they form a mighty river, bearing on its boson the riches and commerce of the kingdom, and constituting the source of all its greatness. So with Sir Charles Metcalfe : his assiduity, his talent ; his mumbcence, his charities, his judgment, firmness, and integrity, are the qualities resembling those rich streams, and uniting in from underneath the Fyrs of jury trial. Gentlemen, him as they have done, they have given to India. that let us, therefore, drink in a full bumper, Trial by him as they have done, they have given to India, that let us, therefore, drink in a full bumper, Thial by him as they have done, they have given to India, that let us, therefore, drink in a full bumper, Thial by him as they have done, they have done they have done in a full bumper, Thial by him as they have done in the Press (Cheers.) (Immens cheering.) I give you, gentlemen, prosperity, leadth and happiness to Sir Charles Metcalte, the liberation had been done which has thrilled through your hearts; tor of the Indian Piess. (The toust was received as it I will now cause a chord to be touched, which will merited, and many minutes elapsed before Su Charles thrill through your ears. Mr. Stocqueler, will you could abtain a hearing, so prolonged and enthusiastic kindly commence? was the cheering.

Air .- " Charlie is my darling."

SIR CHARLES METCALLE, rose and was again greeted with cheers, which were continued in one universal burst for about five minutes. The worthy Baronet seemed deeply affected, but recovering himself, he said : -Gentlement you have so overwhelmed me with your kindaess, that I find movel quite unable to give expression to my feelings, or to tetain my thanks as I could wish. I possess not the eloquence of my fixed, the president to enable me to do so; but I believe with him, and with you, that a Free Press is a blessing in any country; (Much cheering) and I perfectly concur in all be begaind in praise of it as applied to this. (Cheers.) We have ample proof of the vast benefits accruing from a Free Press in our own country and in America; and it was on this proof that I acted as I did here, respecting the Freedom of the Press. (Cheers.) I will proceed no further on the subject of the eman-me to this party in celebration of the Freedom of the Press; (Cheers.) and, secondly, for the exceeding kindness with which you have just drank my health. (Much

Mn. Dickens,-Gentlemen; one cheer more to the honestest statesman we have ever had. (Deafening and long-continued cheering.)

C. R. PRINSER, Esq.-Gentlemen; we are Ther to celebrate the anniversary of the Liberated Press of India in the presence of its illustrious liberator; and I am not surprized when I consider it is the last time he will join in its celebration, that his presence should have been hailed with such enthusiasm. But we must not a crimmal charge. All its civil liabilities are but to the absolute discretion of the Judges, which English principles and English practice have denounced as a most unsafe tribunal. I have done enough to draw your attention to the necessity of going a step further, and obtaining the security of jury trial in all cases where the Press is concerned. That point gained, all will be safe, all will be permanent. Tories may combine against it, Whigs may job, and Benthamites may blunder on; the Press shall bring its enomies to the ground one after another, when it shall be enabled to launch its weapons

Mr. Stocqueler, with much effect, sang

Sing Ballinamora Ora Ballinamora Ora Ballinumora Ora Huzza for the Press is now free !

'T was a real " Court Journal," you all may be sure, Telling only such truths as such Queens might endure, For in those times in ink it was dangerous to dip, When the ears were snipp'd off, if the pen made a slip, Sing, &c. &c. &c.

Alas! little better, three lustres ago. Were we of this land, as all present well know, When the Sensor with witless and pitiless shears, Lopp'd an Editor's brain though he cropp'd not his cars. Sung, Sc. Sc. &c.

And in recenter times when the Licence so dread, Like a sword was hung over each Editor's head : Our hopes and our fortunes a breath had swept down, If a word of reproof made a Governor frown.

Sing, &c. &c. &c.

But Freedom's fair hand hath our manacles snapt, And the Press in her own sacred panoply wrapt; And though despots may hate it and dotard- may fear, Yet to liberty's votaries that act shall be dear.

Sing, &c. Sc. &c. Aye, and still by her friends, through the world, shall be lov'd,

His name, who that badge of our slavery remov'd; And year after year shall resound in this hall, The glory of METCALTE who freed us from thrall. Sing, &c. &c. &c.

Then fill every glass with bright wine to the brim, And freedom shall hallow the toast that's for him : Let our hearts prompt our voices to three times

While we shout through the welkin " The Press is made Free!"

Chanman, at the bottom of the hall, and my other vibred friend, should receive full justice at my hands. mends under his care, have not been uniformly orderly Hence my mistrust, hence my apprehensions. I am in their proceedings this evening, and I feel a little jear sandle that the public and private virtues of this admilous that at a lestivity given in the cause of Freedom, they rable individual ought to be themes for some tongue "less should have all the disorder to themselves (A laugh), unworthy of name," at the same time I feel that my own As I cannot set, I shall therefore tollow the example, and triendship, instead of inspiring makes me full of doubts,break through the order of the toasts. We have drank, doubts lest I should fulfil neither my own ideas or yours gentlemen, the Freedem of the Press and its Liberator, of the honor due to the name I am about to proposebut there is another to whom the Pressoves great obligative why should I feel thus apprehensive? It ought to tions. If it needed any argument to recommend to you be no very difficult matter to illustrate what is already the object of my toast, I know I need but mention the illustrious. Thank God, the honor due to the name conhigh opinion which Sir Charles Metcalte entertains of nected with my toost depends upon a more solid founda-him, and the sincere esteem with which he prizes him as tion than my feeble words! That name is inscribed ly set the Press of India free ; for from the moment that he landed on these shores, to the hour that he left them, the restrictions existed but in name. Let me recall to is nobly advocating the scheme in England; and though he has left our shores, he has not deserted our interests. Cheering.) I could dwell on many other strong claims he has on your gratitude, but need I do more than give our late Governor-General, Lord William Bentinck, the friend of the Press, the staunch advocate of Steam. (Drank with loud cheers.)

THE CHAIRMAN. -- Gentlemen ; previous to our proceeding to the next toast on the list, permit me to read to you a letter I have received from a gentleman now absent, but who is greatly respected and esteemed by you all; I mean my friend Dwarkanauth Tagore. (Cheers) Mr. Clarke then read the following letter :-

LONGUEVILLE CLARKE, Esq., Chairman of the Free Press Festival.

· My DEAR SIR, - It is a severe disappointment to me that the departure of the steam packet, only two days before our meeting, deprives me of the satisfaction to which I had so long looked forward, in common with my brother atewards and the friends of free printing, of beg you to assure the meeting and our greatly respected guest, that nothing but unavoidable necessity could have kept me away on such a great occasion as the celebration of the privilege of freely expressing our opinions of public measures and men.

It is my duty more particularly, as a native landlord and merchant, and more intimate than most of my countrymen, perhaps, with yours and with the nature of the Government under which this great and using country is connected with England, to speak out on an occasion like the present I sincerely believe that the liberating of the Press in India is one of the most valuable acts ever attempted by the Indian Government; it strengthens their own hands, and ears, and eyes, in fuling this vast region, and it is also a guarantee to the people that their rulers mean to govern with justice since they are not alraid to let their subjects judge of their acts.

Yours very truly,

DWARLANAUTH TAGORE.

Calcutta, 6th February, 1838.

THE VICE CHAIRMAN,-Gentlemen; I rise under feelmes of no ordinary embarrassment, with a greater mistrust, indeed, of my own powers to address a public assembly, very limited as I have always felt these powers to be, than I ever expenenced in my life. It can scarcely be otherwise, for while I feel that no words of mine can do justice to the excellence of the good man and good citizen I am about to name to you, I am nervously THE CHAIRMAN. - Gentlemen; my friend, the Vice- anxious that one whom I am proud to call a dear and all enlightened statesman, and a friend of India. Gen-loremost amongst the foremost on the roll of those most tlemen, it was Loid William Bentinck (Loud cheering.) distinguished for mercantile liberality and commercial Lay it was Loid William Bentinck who first practical enterprize. It is amongst the first, if not the very first, on the list of active, able and munificent crizens to whom the whole community is indebted. The name of my triend is revered by many whom he has saved or estayou also, gentlemen, his uniform support of the cause of blished it. life by his judicious advice or his liberal as-Steam Navigation. It is he that has sent the boats to sistance. It is written in the hearts of thousands who the distant provinces by inland navigation; it is he who have partaken of his mexhaustible charity, who have had cause to bless his boundless benevolence, confined to no caste, colour, or creed. It shows brightly surrounded with all that is urbane and kind and courteous, on the tablets of social hospitality. It is heard in the halls of our colleges, in the porticos of those literary and scientific institutions which he has supported and enriched. It shines gloriously through an act, a recent act, of charity so princely, so magnificent, that 1 tax my memory in vain to discover a parallel to it within my own knowledge and experience. Above all, the name of this admirable citizen is inseparably connected with that cause whose triumph we have met this night to celebrate. Gentlemen, need I say after this that it is the name of Dwarkanauth Tagore. (Much cheering) Here then we have in an individual,-though to a degree so eminent that we cannot expect it to be common,—the qualities and attributes which we desire to foster amongst his countrymen at large, -moral courage, integrity, libera-lity, self dependence, love of truth, a sense of right, a scorn of wrong, and a freedom from prejudice, (Cheers.) But what if we succeed in our endeavours to create anaholding our yearly festival in the presence of Sir Charles logous feelings, not only in those immediately around us Metcalfe. But there is no help for it, and I can only in this metropolis, but in thousands, tens of thousands,

-Aye, there's the rub. The question is a grave one, and demands grave consideration, let us think of it. I do not now address that party, for many of whom I have the highest esteem, but whom I must be permitted to designate as of the Silver-suck and Burra Sahib school, in reverence for whose mighty attributes the worthy Hindoo backed his horse or his asseinto a dirch, on the approach of the majesty of the services, in the person of our departed friend, Indophilus - (Cheers and laughter.) science of the Moorish Alchemists, They would have the people remain in the same tree and happy state as when the succe sors of Sevague levied chout, and the dues of the state were collected from the zemindars by the sim-Sultan. But let that pass. This party is at least con-sistent, and in friend or too! I revere an honorable consistency. (Cheers) But I turn from them to another] them a love of truth and knowledge, which is in other words a love of freedom, yet at the same time shackling the Indian Press with fetters of iron and manacles of steel. (Cheers) Nothing appears to me more about than this singular delusion - It is to the Greek's foolishness. I trust and believe that this party will not succeed in their said bal efforts again to manicle the Press; but if they do, then it seems to me self-evident that they must be prepared at once, not only to discourage, but altogether to prohibit and put down the study and acquitement of the English language, (Cheers) Gentlemen; the explusive tendencies of steam and of all the commustible gasses in the world are as nothing to those which would exist almongst a people conversant with the language of Milton and Junius, of Chatham and Brougham, of Frankin and Washington, yet posibled by law for giving publicity to these sentiments with respect to the acts of their Government. (heers.) No; if the enemies of the Indian Free Piess, to whom I now advert, wish to be consistent,—if they wish even for safety,—let them adopt in their projects of civilization, the civilising language of Muscovy, or Cinn-l'artary; but let them beware of English. For you shall as soon bind the light of the blessed sun with chains of iron as prevent a people familiar with the language of libery from openly uttering their sentiments on the public measures of public men. (Much cheering.) But we may be told, "When English is familiar to every man who can read or who thinks, we will then place at the disposal of the community the means of publicly expressing their thoughts on the important point of Government, to wit, the Free Press. Giving the party 1 advert to credit for this, intention, yet still surely it is a missiable delusion, it is as if one were to say, here is our charcoal, and our sulphur, and our saltgetre; while they are in separate beaps approach them not, even with when all was apathy or dismay; at the time of the pasea rush light or a dark lanthorn; but when we have ing of the Press Law, Dwarkanauth Tagore and his millions, of their countrymen. If we inspire the masses | mixed them, and grained them, and glazed them into gunpowder, then throw a lighted torch into the midst of the heap and itsha I not explude. (Cheers.) Gentlemen; will these people never learn from experience,—are the lessons of history to be for ever lost upon them? What have we and our tathers seen for the past fifty years in France, in Spain, in Portugal, in Italy? Why, that wherever a Free Press has suddenly grown up amongst a people previously civilized,—mind, gentlemen, I say amongst a people previously civilized but yet wholly unthe last person in the world, God knows, to require such familiar with its workings, wholly unprepared for it, -- an act of homege which filled him with a-tonishment in other words, were the Free Press has not "grown with and pity. (Laughter.) I do not, gentlemen, address this a nation's intellectual growth and streightened with its party. They are at least consistent. They would still strength,"—there it is no longer a beneficent spirit ministegislate for India not after the A. Z. fashion but from tering to civilization, prosperty and happingers. The a the Verlas and the Koran. They would be great in San- revening flend " with Ate by her side come bothom hell" ment and Arabic. They would enlighten the same revenue and he stop the dogs of war," to spread mind of fadha with the philosophy of Aristotle and the stope, blood-ned, and misery. (Chens.) Think not, however, that because I utter these opinion- I undervalue the Freedom of the Press. However introduced, its ultimate results are well worth a century of revolutions. I advert only to the facts, and in doing so I again ask, ple and effective process described in Mr. Harrington's will the party I have alluded to never learn from experiantly is, of tying up their bare legs in company with ence? For I turn from the countries I have mentioned some half dozen of cats in a pain of loose pantaloons to another -1 look "upon this picture and on this." I (Loughter.) As for the Press; no doubt this respectable turn gentlemen, to the United states. They also passed party would be well content to allow the Press as much through the terrible orded of civil war; they toosiw feedom and influence as would have been accorded to party in every village, almost in every family; factions it, had they ever thought about the matter, by those in every city,—foreign aimnes in every field. But what liberal minded potentiales Surajah Dowlah and Tippoo was the result ! The storm rolled over, the fiery stife, bloody -mark me, gentlemen - bloo y, walt so few exceptions that history has almost forgoten them, only in the "tan field of highting men." The hery strife hied away, party, full of magnates and dignitaries and Emparion and left freedom, happiness, prosperity and notional class Committees, and School book Societies and Friends of racter, which has nobly manifested riself, it our latest India, and every thing that is genteel and superb, both accounts from Home are to be rebell upon in the conduct here an lat home a prity which attempts to carry into of the American merchants during the recent trying mopractice the incongruous absurding - I know not how to netory crists. (Cheers.) Whence is the cause of the designate it - the vain imagination of enlightening and imighty difference which I have noticed ! I answer coneducating and civilizing the people of India, of giving fidently in the pre existence of a Free Pr. in the present United States; (Cheers.) to the people being famihar with a Free Press in all its bearings, including those political and social benefits to Society to which a Free Press is essential, and which are as inseparable from its constant presence amongst a people, as harmony and beauty are inseparable from the works of creation. (Chrers.)

> Gentiemen, I know not by what process of ratiocination it occurs, but the idea of a Free Press is invariably associated in my mind with Highland Whiskey. (Laughter.) I believe there are those here who will tear me out in the assertion, that as soon as the young Gael enters the w. rld, he is made lamiliar with the virtues of "mountain dew." From thencelorward he never relaxes in the landable attachment thus early fostered. It is good that it should be so. It is good for the Highland con-titution, to enable the shepherd on the mountain, the fisherson the lake, the humer in the glen, to contend against the storms of a humid and severe climate. At the age of discretion a pint bicker or quaigh, I believe. is the term of the veritable Farintish, is but a comforting and wholesome draft; for the drinker bath ever been used to it. But give the same medicine to one who has not been taught to reverence the virtues of this elizin vite from his youth upwards, and instead of promoting a wholesome circulation, a cheeful glow inrough his entire frame, it makes him a mad, ungovernable savage. (Laughter.) Gentlemen; I pray of you to pardon this long digression; chantably think that I have inadvertently mounted my hobby horse and that he has run away with me. I return to the ambject of my toast and I could return to none more worthy or more nobie. (Cheers.)

> Dwarksnauth Tagore, then, is inseparably connected with our good and just cause. (Cheers.) At the time illustrious friend, who sleeps with the just, alone stood forth to fight the good fight. (Cheers.) On the first celebration of this anniversary, we were told by no mean authority, that Dwarkanauth Pagore had spent thousands with no other object than the Freedom of the Press. They went to charges geotlemen,—heavy charges which, after all, is no bad test of men below in emerst. "Kill as mad's family," says Byron, "and he may brook it," but keep your hands out of his breeches' pocket." (Langhter.) They went to charges, gentlemen, they entertained counsel to argue against the registration of the Law in the Supreme Count; they pentioned the Pathament; they stood, in short, like those described in the beautiful lines of Moore.

"Night closed around the conqueror's way."

Night, gentlemen, always closes round the way of any conqueror or who trumphs over the Press.

"Night closed around the conqueror's way, And lightning shewed the distant hill, Where those who lost that dreadful day Stood few and faint but fearless still."

Manfully did this little band of patriots stand in the breach; manfully did they continue to hope when "Hope seemed none." (Cheers.) In the hour of our triumph, let not these brave hearts be torgotten. One has, as the French happily express it "gone to immortality." But the noble, the admirable survivor, can still enjoy the applause of his fellow citzons, can still know that his name, "is in our flowing cups freshly remembered." (Cheers.) I call upon you, therefore, to pledge me with hearts and voices, with three times three and all the honors. "The principal survivor amongst the native champions of a Free Press, DWARKATAUTH TAGORE," (Much and enthusiastic cheering.) Air,—"For Auld Lang Syne," BABOO RAMNATH TAGORE .- Gentlemen ; in consequence of the departure of Dwarkanauth Tagore from Calcutta, owing to his ill he ilth, I regret extremely he has been unable to join with you to night for the purpose of drinking the health of our distinguished guest, the liberator of the Indian Press. (Cheers.) But as he is absent. I think it is a duty incumbent on me, being hisnearest relation, to return you thanks for the honor you have done him in drinking his health. (Applause) J. F. LEITH, Esq.-Genilemen ; the toast which have the honor to propose, is preceded by the name of a man whom living England conored, and whom dead, India has cause to mourn! To you who know the moral and intellectual condition of the natives of this country the boldness, the independence, the enlightened views of the late Rummohan Roy, (heers.) must be convincing proofs of his superiority over the great mass of his fellow countrymen. While these characteristics command for his memory unfergued respect, they must induce you to admit the appropriateness of coupling his name with the present toast. "The enlightenment of the people of India." (theers.) It is no doubt true, that many of (theers.) It is no doubt true, that many of his youthful fellow-countrymen, with their present advantages, may soon rival him in mere extent of know ledge, but no other will draw to himself that wonder and admiration which Rammohun Roy's advent excited, at a time when, relatively speaking, moral and intellectual darkness spread itself over the length and breadth of the land. His be the praise of having first, by the inherent force of a superior intellect, burst the swadding-bands of prejudice and caste, which keep the mind in a state of helpless infancy, to assume the full stature and to assert the natural prerogatives of a reasonable being, -a thinking man! (Cheers.) His name is linked to his coun'ry's history, and to the cause of freedom, and must, on account of his unweared efforts to improve the political and social condition of the people of India, in after ages. ranked among the most honored names of his country-given his mind, had be now been alive, to have witnessed our meeting this evening, under the auspices of our honored guest, to compremente the liberation of the Indian Press, an object most dear to his heart, and by him petitioned for and advocated! (theers) To have witnessed also he impulse which his been given, by the praiseworthy exertions of Government, of Societies, and of private individuals, to the cause of education, the great means for the enlightenment of the people of India. By promoting education we make some return to the people among whom we live for the riches, which are drawn from their country; for through education we will teach them how to improve the natural, and how to create new sources of wealth, and will raise them, in a moral point of view, in the scale of nations. This is our duty. It ought also to be an object of our animous, as no surer method could be adopted to falsity the prediction, " that were we driven from this country no monument of state or beneficence would be left behind." The enlightenment of the people of India will be a monument of our rule more gigantic and lasting than the Pyramids themselves. They are but a senseless mass to mail the place of sepulture of a lew dead kings, ours will be a living monument to speak to latest ages of the resuscitation of whole people! cheers.) I have only now to request you to drink to the memory of Rammohan Roy, and to be speak your hest wishes and exertions for "the enlightenment of the people of India." (Drank in solemn silence.)

BABOO PROSONNO COUMAN TAGORE .-- Gentlemen : as a friend of the late Rammohun Roy, and one who was glad to participate, though in a minor degree, in the persecutions he suffered, and as a native of India, I rise to oher you my warmest thanks for the honor you have done to the memory of my late lamented. friend, and for the interest you have expressed for the improvement of my country. When you hear that we complain of or ison on the part of Government as regards the improvement of our country and the cause of education, I wish you not to understand that we mean to say, that it has totally neglected to perform its duty, but that it has not done so much in this respect as it ought and could have done. The day when the distinctions of color, caste, and religion, and the difference between conquerors, and conquered will be totally banished, is, I am happy to sav, fast approaching, when we shall he treated not as conquered but as fellow subjects of the Brush crown. (Cheers.)

Some have thought fit to surmise, that by the diffusion of education among the people of India, the contexton between her and England will ultimately be desolved. There people, I say, are quite wrong; because, if gratitude he a feeling inherent in human nature, and if education and colightment tend to cherish that feeling, how can it be ascerted, that if India owe to England, her mother country, a heavy flebt of grantude for her enlightenment, that she will prove an ungrateful daughter! No, on the contrary, education, and allowing to the people of India the exercise of the political privileges regarding the English, as at home, is the surest way of establishing British rule in India on the firmest basis.

Although, gentlemen, you perceive but a small number of my countrymen present this evening to do honor to the occasion, yet I have reason to believe, that it will not be long ere this cause of complaint against them will be removed. The day will soon come when in this half and on such an occasion, your number will not command, so overwhelming a majority, but rather be in the min. rity.

ranked among the most honored names of his countrymen, although during his life it was his fate, like that of thought I have not language sufficient at command to many now to be found occupying proud niches in the express them. I therefore conclude with again returning you my warmest thanks for the honor you have done me by the last toast. (Cheers.)

THE CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen, you have drank to two of the earliest and most staunch supporters of the Press; I have now to appologize for the absence of another old friend of the good cause, James Pattle. Domectic afflictions keep him away, or he most assuredly would have been here (Cheera.)

T. Dickess, Esq., rose and was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, which seemed to affect and embarrass him very much. After a short pause he said . - Gentlemen; your kindness almost overpowers me, I use to purpose to you the "Indian Press," wishing to dwell upon the subject, but I fear I shall be unable to do justice to it Permit me to vivily and personily, as far as the past is concerned, that abstraction which we call the Indian Press, and recall to your memory a few, and but a few, of those whom I have known as its avowed and responsible conductors; all friends, I am proud to say, of my own, and all, as you will admit, worthy of the public esteem. The end and aims of the Piess of India may be well judged of by a bare mention of the names of those who were engaged in it. Let me recall to you those of Ful-latton, of Compton, of John Grant, of William Adam, of James Sutherland, (may I be pordoned for speaking too of my elf as one of those men,) of my friend long since gone, Dr. Abel, whom many of you must remember personally, and most knew by reputation. Many recollections crowed upon and make me, however much I desire it, incapable of doing justice to this toast. From those names of its avow d conductors which I have given you, and to the list many more names equally worthy might be added, every one may judge of what has been the general character of the periodical Press in this country. I give you, gentlemen, the INDIAN Parss. (Loud cheers)

MR. SAMUEL SMITH .- Gentlemen; though labouring under rather severe indisposition, I rise with pleasure to express, as well as I am able, the acknowledgements of the Press, for the toast just proposed by Mr. Diethas, which has been so flatteringly received by this company. After the very eloquent addresses you have listened to from the excellent Chairman, Mr. Clarke, and other highly talented gentlemen, who have said all that can be advanced on the subject, it would be a vain endeavour to address myself to you on the value and importance of a Free Press. I shall not, therefore, make the attempt. Besides, on two former occasions when I had the happiness to meet many of the gentlemen I now see arround me, to commemorate the glorious event of the Emancipation of the Indian Press, I had opportunities of which I availed myself freely and fully to describe the former state of the Piess, and express the deep obligations of its conductors to its honorable and magnanimious liberator. (Cheers.) I shall not, therefore, now detain you by any repetition of the experiences of the olden time, when the unfortunates of the Indian Piess dragged on a shackled existence, disgusting to themselves, and contemptable in the eyes of the public. From these shackles,—we acknowledge the boon with the most grate-ful feelings,—they were freed by the magnanimous Act of Sir Charles Metcalfe. (Loud cheers.)

It is true that we had long enjoyed by sufference, under Lord William Bentinck (and even under Lord Amherst, in a lesser degite,) nearly the same freedom of expression, we have since practised under the law; but none of us knew the day, the hour, when the death, departure or supercession of a liberal Covernor by a Tory Lord, an enemy to liberal measures and freedom of discussion, might again plunge us into the depths of that disgracful thruldom from which we have been liberated by Sir Charles Matecalfe. (Cheers) The new Governor, finding a Press gagging law on the books, might easily enforce it unobstructed by the difficulties which would attend the concocion of a new law. What would then have been our humilating position?

Who that had ever tasted of freedom would again patiently submit to bondage,-to bondage of the worst description,-to bondage of the mind, -to prohibition of the free expression and interchange of opinions between men, by nature and by habit free. Not I, for one, and I had accordingly looked forward gloomily to the daily expected arrival of Lord Haytesbury, and the departure of Sir Charles Metcalfe in 1835. But the bright star of the Indian Press was in the ascendant. Lord Heytesbury came not, and Sir Charles Metcalfe remained our Supreme Governor, long enough to fulfil his noble intention : he passed the glorious where act of 1835, -he gave Freedom by Law to the Press of India. For this one act, if for no other, his memory will live in the grateful recollection of all who prize freedom of thought, freedom of expression, Freedom of Press,-and who does not? England, to which happy land, the head-quarters of the Free Press, our liberator is now proceeding, will receive him with open arms,—will join the friends of freedom in India, in loud acclaim-will hall with joy the arrival on their shores of Sir Charles Metcalle, the Liberator of the Indian Press. (Much applause.)

Gentlemen, as a member of the once shackled, now free Press of India, I thank you for the honorable mention of our tribe,—for your handsome reception of the toast, and I trist that the Press of India will never disgrace the good opinion which, after some years of trial, you appear to entertain of it. (Cheers.)

CAPT. T. J. TAYLOR. - (Madras Army) .- The toast, gentlemen, I have now to propose, requires but few prefaratory remarks on my part, for it is one which will at once strike home to every patriot breast. There is one country dear to every Englishman, -one people for whom our earliest sympathies are enlisted. Need I say that that country is Poland? whose heroic struggles, alike in the past and present century, are above all praise, and from the most touching portion of modern history. (Cheers.) On such an occasion as this, when met to commemorate the anniversary of the day on which, after a long but happly a bloodless struggle, the safeguard of our liberties, the palladium of our rights in this country, the freedom of the Press was achieved, the fate of that unhappy people demands our especial sympathy; for of all the sufferers in the cause of Freedom none have experienced such woes as Poland. (Chers.) Who is not familiar with that tale of wee, and has not mourned over the fate of her gallant defenders? Who has not breathed a heartfelt anathema against the tyrant conquenors of her soil, of her princes, nobles, warriors? How many fell before the oppressor's sword, or expiated on the saffold the crime of having defended their country! (Cheers.) How many were swept away to the snows of Siberia; others thrust into dungeons,—fit tenements only for the adder or the toad, - how many linked in chain-gongs on the ramparts of Warsaw, while others hardly less wretched, and stripped of their possessions, were driven forth in banishment and poverty, to seek subsistence, as they best might, in foreign lands! Such was the treatment the men experienced, the women were treated worse. Every insult and outrage that rage could dictate or ingeouty invent has been wreaked on that ill-fated race. Females even of the poblest blood of Europe, were made to labour on the roads, the scoff of mocking soldiery, exposed to insult, outrage, the chain and the scourge; and of their offspring, sucklings were torn from their mother's breasts and dashed headlong fromthe ramparts of Warsaw, as if in derision of the walls so gallantly defended by their unhappy sires, while others of-larger growth were scot off to Siberta or while others of larger growth were seed on to schema or to military colonies thousand of miles distant, and—hor-rible cruelty!—their names were changed so as to prevent the possibility of tracing, in after years, their present des-tination. And for what were all these miseries inflicted on this noble people, the bravest of the brave, the most injured of the oppressed? For what, but for claiming fulfilment of a constitution guaranteed to them by the most solemn treaties, and for venturing to dream they might yet be tree? They have tailed for a time, and misery has invaded their hearths; but the spirit of that face is yet unbroken and the hour of retribution will surely come. It cannot be, that the moan of the widowed mother, - the cry of the fatheriess child, or the groun of the patriot, calling in dying agony on his fel-lowmen to avenge his death, on his God to save his country, will have ascended to Heaven in vain! hour will yet arrive, when evergrown, bloated Russia, that cradle of treachery and despotism, shall pay in tears of agony and blood for the infamous wrongs she has heaped on Poland. (Nuch applause.) That the hour of reckoning is not far distant; that Sarmatia may resume her proud place among nations, and justice be rendered to her chivalric but suffering sons, is the hope and wish of every true hearted Briton. Up then all classes, and with one heart and one voice let us fervently unite in the patriot's toast-" The Regeneration of Poland." (Much enthusiastic cheering)

" Tyrolese Air."

VICE CHARMAN.—Gentlemen. Would that I could exchange my teeble voice for the inspiring eloquence of one of those old Spanish ballads of chivality, which stirthe heart as with the sound of a tumpet, while I propose to you our next toast. It is "The cause of Consitutional liberty in Spani and Portugal." (Cheers.) That this holy cause will ultimately triumph I cannot doubt, no not for a moment,

" For freedom's battle once begun, Bequeathed by bleeding site to son, Though baffled on is ever won."

But ever while the struggle lasts it affords, if ever earthly events afforded it, an example and a warning to us in this country. The atrocities which have disun-guished this leartil contest are the continual theme of liberty. Whence arise those atrocities? Again I maintain what I have but a short time since upheld, that they have their original chiefly in that state of darkness in which the people of Spain and Portugal have been kept for centuries, until now when their eyes are opened they cannot bear the light. I will put a question. Does any one believe that if by any strange chance, a Free Press had been g atted on the institutions of Spain in the days of Charles the Fifth, when the intellect of the nation was comparatively young; - does any one believe, I say, that in such a case the revolutions of the few past years, or at least what has been most learful and deplorable in those revolutions, would have occurred in the days of Ferdinand and Christina, in the days when the intelles of the nation has arrived at marting in all but the first knowledge of a wholesome liverty! The tining stril me as a mere impossibility. Bloody revolutions are the offspring of grinding abuses, -of abuses even more fearful than the trantic efforts under which they perish. But with a Free Press in Spain and Portugal exposing abuses from the days of Charles the Fifth, there could have been few or none to overthrow in the days of the two queens who now reign in those lands. Is not this a waining and a lesson to us in India? But the night wears and I will not allow myself to dilate upon it; I will only call upon you to drink, with the honor my toast assuredly deserves, "The cause of Constitutional Liberty of Spain and Portugal." (Cheers.)

Dr. JOHN GRANT.—Much more practised speakers than myself have expressed a diffidence of their own powers in addressing you, gentlemen; you may well believe me then, when I declare that it is with the most unaffected distrust of my own capability to do it justice, that in obedience to the command of the chair, I rise to propose a toalt. This is the less surgising, since it is a toast of rather large proportions; reminding me somewhat of the three gentlemen rolled into age. (A laugh.)

I had hoped that I might be permitted to remain a quiet spectator,—a sympathizing listener on this occasion; for though second to no one in the sincerity and warmth of feeling due to it, yet I could have preferred for several reasons giving a silent vote, but one from the bottom of my heart, for the continuance,—the permanent duration of the inestimable boon which we owe to that great and good man, whose presence confers such a deep interest upon, and I may add stamps with a character of solemn parting tendorness, this eve of civic commemoration.

But it may not be; our chairman (who with such rare felicity fulfils his task) has issued his mandate that I should speak, and deeming as I do cheerful obedience to all just behasts of the ruling powers, and a proper respect for constituted authorities, the very basis upon which genuine and rational freedom rests, I bow to the wish of our president. Let me not, however, be misunderstood; no lurking or unmanly timidity as to consequences, -no trimming hesitation in declaring openly and freely my honest opinions when decorously expressed (for such I hold to be my mahenable birthright, of which no man can legally deprive me), -1 say that no such unworthy feeling entered into the reasons that inclined me to be a listener rather than a speaker here, but a downright diffidence of myself, a grave doubt, -a doubt which still oppresses me, of my own power, (all unprepared as 1 am and more especially at such a late hour in the evening) to do justice to the toast which I hold in my hand. appeal to yourselves, gentlemen, if I had not just reason to shrink from the somewnat formidable task of proposing a toast, comprising such a magnitude of interests, such boundless potentiality of good, such sublime aspi-tations of hope for the well-being of universal man as Constitutional freedom and civil religious liberty all over the world? Do I suppose that there is one person in the room, nay in this great city, who would object to drink that toast ! No, certainly, I cannot imagine such a thing possible; I may as readily conceive the weary sojourner in the parched wilderness of this life, preferring the bitter pools of Marah to refreshing draughts from the living rock of I'ruth ! And yet when I look around me, numerous and respectable as this assembly is, I miss many whom I regret not to see among us. Why is this? They differ from us perhaps in mere shades of opinion; and yet I can scarcely conceive but they must concur in the same conclusion, that I am sure all here have arrived at, that constitutional freedom, as civil and religious liberty, cannot co-exist along with a gagged Press. Be that as it may, the a arch of improvement will on, and the time may come when they will, perhaps, be sorry for having absented themselves this evening. In my own case, I frankly contess that I should consider myself a recreant to a noble cause if I had not attended. not merely from respect to the cause itself but from my esteem and affection for the LIBERATOR. (Cheers.) I fear, at this protracted hour, after so many builliant land excellent speeches, to trespass long upon your indulgence, but for this circumstance I should have taken a wide range (for this I might freely claim for the nature of my toast), and have glanced at a far gone epoch when civil and religious liberty were but obscurely understood, inadequately secured, and little practised. Tell me of a country where civil and religious liberty are not under the guardianship of a Free Press, and I will reply, that though mere animal happiness may be found there, yet in that country shall you find no high tone of moral onlightenment; no musculine consistence of character; no intellectual greatness! (heers.) Taking no advantage of the all-over the-world freedom of my toast, did time permit, I might have carried you to Consular Rome. I might have asked of you if she was not continually incoulded to their own selfish purposes by haughty iron-willed aristocrats, glozing, will prators, and factions de-magoger, the people having no Free Press to open their eyes to their true interests, or to keep them broad an ... 13. you to Imperial Rome—and treated you to sundry school boy remniscenes and historical clap-traps. I should have demonstrated to you that where there is no Free Press, public opinion must be a nonentity; for that which is tongueless, bound, and fettered, despotism sees not, licars not, fears not, feels not, until some enthu-iast'dagger or the drugged cup of death gives the first deadfor bout to that tyrant, that he has gone too far! I should have edified you with strictures on the dire cruelties, the na astreless flagitiousness, the mon-trous crimes, the greantic vices, of the masters of the great Babylon and their creatures; I should have rung the changes on sundry Gibboniasine, and endeavour to follow them with illustrations of my own, proving as I went along that these horrors mainly emanated from the want of a Free Press. I should have refreshed your recollection with the sayings and doings of the dark unrelenting Tiberiusthe mad Caligula-the stupid Claudibus-the cruel Nero, the beastly Vitellius-the timid, inhuman Domition and other sons of Belial, whose names have come down through the lapse of ages giving to the moral sense the perception of an oppressive sickening taint of foulest corruption, as hideous as the pestilential vapour of the burning lake of Solom and Gomorrha!

I should then have taken a bound and alighted in merry England. Do you wish to know how she fared when she had no letters, no liberty of the Press ! I content myself with a simple fact recorded by a writer of those times of one of the not worst of her Kings, (albeit) he was rather stingy) Henry VII., in whose reign, the gallows was emphatically said to have decoured one hundred thousand soul-! Think of that; there was no Free Press to suggest turning these poor wretches to better account than langing. Bear in mind that they fell not fighting in battle for their country,-that they were not swallowed up in tempests by the roaring ocean, or swept off even by famine or pestilence. No; they were devoured by the gibbet !

Had time further permitted, I should have a-ked you if many a deed of blood and violence of which England was the scene, would have taken place had there been a Free Press? Whether the executions and the massacre that throughout Europe gave a red glare to the dawning of the reformation would have occurred with even a limitedly Free Press, or at least whether they would not have been greatly modified by that controlling power? I should have applied the same reasoning to the highful massacre of St. Bartholomew and the base revocation of the edict of Nantz. But these things some objector will tell me were done by Catholics! I say that they were done by ignorant and furious men and not by Catholics. because they were Catholics. That they were the doings of a dark and sternage when men were grossly ignorant, tremblingly fearful, and crassilly superstitions, for no-thing is so cruel as bigotry and suspicion in their hour of power. He who with impartial eye scans history will not bandy recriminations with his erring brother Christian, for be it borne in mind, that Protestants too, in their bour of ascendancy, could be suspicious, oppressive and cruel in their turn, as witness certain acts in the time of Elizabeth, and certain doings in England and Ireland that followed in the times of succeeding sovereigns, of the tyrasti Suart dynasty. Oh! no. Both parties, sa lespected hose unhappy proceeding of days past away, should forget and forgive, affilike Lockitt and Peachum. should larger and larger anying " Brother, igother! we in the play, shake hands saying " Brother, igother! we are both in the wrong," What I would have asked are both in the wrong."

to their own rights? I should then perhaps have carried to France and called at court during the neign of Laure the XIV., Louis the XV. and the Regency of O terns. Oh! times of shame and overwhelming miquity, when it was considered distinction by families calling hemselves noble, a brilliant distinction, to have a lovely female of then house a king's harlot; when high peclesisatics and numsters of religion, professing to be servants of the G . I of purity and holiness, cringed at the levees of unblushing courtezaus; and when tout dishonour, and fe-tering corruption polluted the depths of the fourthins of social intercourse, bringing disgrace to every hearth; a monstrous perversion of manners big with lurid horrors to come, but which would have been checked or neutralized by the energy and corrective vigor of a Free Press.

Many of us view war and

But let us pause! pestilence, tempest and earthquake, as special effects, and resulting from an over-tuling first cause. Shall we recognize the Eternal, who though he be the just, is also the merciful. Shall we recognize the omimpotent only in movements of chastisement and terior! Oh, he said that whatever of the blessings of peace and freedom we enjoy, we derive from that everlasting first cause whose essence is love. and who works all second causes to fulfil the councils of his holy will! So believing, am I extravagant in viewing the freedom of the Piess bistowed on us by our late beloved ruler (God bl ss him for the act!) as the gitt of Provilence ! And do I not exceedingly vilus it, so considering it and do you not all ? To be sore I have heard some smister reports respecting its abrogation; but I do not believe them. While a reform ministry is in power - chile a reformer, ave, anultia reformer, as I remember, presides at the India Board while a liberal statesman sits in the chair of India lirection, and while a reformer, and a reforming memer of the council of indicis on his way to watch over he cradle of our young treedom in England - while, I say, Mr. Macculay, a stanneh and declared fiend of the liberty of the Press, lives to speak an I write for us and above all, while we have the liberator of the ladia Piess to be an advocate for us in our dear and common country to which he is about to return, and where I hone he will turn the powers of his masculine understanding and great experien e to public account -- I for one have no fear respecting the freedom or the Prees. We have now substintially enjoyed this blessing for several years - under one ruler by safferance, under another (our distinguished guist) by a free will grint ! The large, ies, octable, and brilliant meeting of this night, I bull of itself a proof that the benefit is properly a,p cented, where is there any good reason why it should be cancelle! While I can legally and without impropriety . so I avail myself of the opportunity to declare, that Life ! convinced it has done, and is effecting a great an of good. The cause of education and the general ening between native and Europeans, has made a more rapid progress within the short period that the Piess has been free, than for many years before. I firmly believe that the repeal of this liberty would be a serious evil, for independent of the side lights that may be derived by authority from the working of the Press, I am convenced that it possesses in itself a latent power—a sovereign virtue of great force, from protecting the tieges in a variety of indefinite ways, for assuaging "the insolence of office, the law's delay and the spurne that patient merit of the unworthy takes," and curbing household are both in the wrong." What I would have asked and neighbour tyranny, and for emcliorating general brought Charles I to the block but the want of a Free demeanor and conduct. Depend upon it, that many a brought Charles I to the block but the want of a Frea demeaner and conduct. Depend upon it, that many a press? I should have also given the usual touch in the choleric man in his ire, and many a quarrelsome one in by-going to the cause for which Hampden bled in the the effervesence of his ill humour, holds back his hand, by-going to the cause for which Hampden bled in the when he recollects that there is Mr. Stocqueler over the summed up with the glorique revolution of 1588. Lightway or Mr. Smith and bethinks him twice how he summed up with the glorique revolution of 1588. Lightway or Mr. Smith and bethinks him twice how he sing the whole as I went along with the liberty of the indulges in undre violence or wrong. But let not our Press there its enslavement! And be assured, (for appreciation of the blessings of a Free, Press evaporate that you truly value it, by holding a public meeting to that effect, and putting and noble minded men have unloosened, and are unyour sentiments solemnly on record. But I have detain ed con too long for which I beg your pardon; I returnyou my best thanks for the kind attention with which you have heard me out; I need not request you to fill a bumper to my toast, since you have already done so; let us drink then with all the honors Constitutional free dom and civil and veligious liberty all over the world. (Much applause.)

THE CHAIRMAN .- Gendemen; I call upon you to drink to a body, second in importance to none in this country-The Merchants of Calcutta. (Cheers.) To them India is is much indebted, for they have greatly aided in effecting all the improvements which have been made here. In fact, the freedom of commerce and the spirit of improvement go hand in hand. You all will join me in drinking to the Freedom of Commerce and the Prosperity of the Merchants of Calcutta. (Cheer:.)

Mr. Patrick returned thanks.

W. P. GRANT E-Q .- Gentlemen ; I am about to propose to you a torst that I have great satisfaction in giving, and it is one I have no do not will be drank with any man who induces a Hindoo to stoop to put his foot into a neit's leather, does service to society; and I am sure that he who prevails upon a Mahomedin to bestride a saddle made of the skin of the unclean beist. deserves the thanks of the community. Gentlemen; I give you the trades of Coleurta and success to those trades.

WILLIAM SPIER, Esq. Gentlemen ; in addressing you on the subject of steam navigation, I shall at this late hour make but few observations, being satisfied that it has your best wishes. Already we experience its advantages in the regularity and rappinty with which the late mails have been received from and transmitted to England; but we regard steam savigation in a broader light, we look upon it as in America, peopling her severs with life and energy, and bringing into connexon the distant points of ner immense territory. We autheip te the same results for India; nay, more, we anticipate steam navigation as traversing the globe, connecting together distint nations, facilitating the intercommunication of thought, and giving a new impetus to the growing improvement of mankind. (Cheers) When we look back upon the listory of our race, we cannot but be struck with the vast strides which have been made during the two preceding cer. aries, by which the earlier world has been left at an immeasurable re. On adverting to the causes of such rapid progress we find the Press in conspicuous operation, (Cheers.) the science of chemistry also, giving new powers to man, -powers so amazing as to be almost apalling. Commerce has done much in promoting civilization, and last of all, in steam navigation, a new principle is coming into play, and giving a fresh impulse to the world : by it nations, the most dissimilar in character are being brought into approximation; the ignorant with the enlightened, the barbarous with the civilized, the cowardly and enslaved with the bold and the free. Individual efforts may fail; the plans of public bodies may be paralyzed; but these mighty agencies bear irresiatibly unward, and carry with them the advancement of the human race. (('heers.)

To those reflecting on this advancement, it is cheering to remark, that these great general causes of improvement are yet in their infency: commerce, chemistry, and steam navigation are but commencing;—the Press, if we observe its condition in most countries is not yet Free ; some unacconmable influence pervading the ilret still wraps it in swaddling bands, -some demon of hvae loosening its bands-and it will be free!

I will only mention in conclusion, that no one can have regarded the state of this country-no one can have listened to the appeal we have just heard on the enlightenment of its inhabitants, without wishing pro-perity to steam navigation, and to every means of communicating k towledge and improvement to India. (Cheers.)

Air - " When Vulcan forged the bolts of Jove."

VICE CHARMAN .- Gentlemen ;" Justice fo: Ireland !" I will not be confined afar of behind my very remote Vice Presidential table. No; I will come forward, as I hope the subject of my toast will come forward, into the midst of you and cry "Justice for Ireland!" (Much cheering.) Ireland one might have thought, had already suffered under every variety of injustice which a nation could endure; but no ' the poisoned chalice is not ver exhaused, and another act of injustice has recently been hit upon of so trange a nature that I wonder it has not existed more univeral attention. Whenever any liberal measure has been carried under any admiinstitution since the passing of the Reform Bill the cry giving, and it note I have no no for will be grank with a great enthusiasm! The Trades of Calcutta, I am sure enemy, nay of many from whom one would expect better they are a very useful body, and the country should be sense, has been, "The had was carried by the Irish greatly indebted to them. I confess, I conceive that Members!" In the name of Heaven what insanty, what tom-foolery is this! What do people mean by Irish members! I know of no Irish members, no Scotch members, no English members; I know only of the British members of the Imperial Parliament, the great council of the British people. (Cheers.) But the cry of "Inch members" of "O' Connell and his tail," and a thousand such absurdities, have gone through England and the same buffaloish, gullable peo-ple, my own countrymen, though they be, whom I found trembling in 1927 lest some half million of quiet English Catholics should rise up and massaice, and burn, put into thumb screws the entire English and Scottish nations, I now find crying out agreed every liberal measure that it is carried by " the linsh mem-Shame on this folly. Hither the union with bers." Ireland is an union in substance as well as form, or it is not. If it is, then are there no Irish members, all are British members of the Imperial Parliament. If it is not, for God's sake dissolve the union and let the Irish people legislate for themselves. (Cheers.) For own my part I shall never thing justice done to I cland until every tittle of right, every privalege, every atom of freedom, every form of municipal and local and general Government, is as fully established and as fately administered in Ireland as in the Irish lagdom. This is the last toast on record for the evenmg; were the words the last I should ever utter in this hall they should be "Justice for Ireland." (Mach and long continued cheering.)

Arr-" Erin go Bragh, and Patrick's day."

"THE CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen; Mr. Parker has just proposed to you the toast of "Justice to Ireland," and admirably and energenically has he depicted the qualities and cambilities of that fine nation which lies on the western hores of Britain. But there is another nation on our western shore more distant in situation, but not less nearly allied, which may be well called the child of England. They themselves term us the old or parent country, and well may we be proud of having such descendants. From us they have sprung, with us they inherit the love of liberty, the attachment to enterprize ; while in the pursuit of all of what a nation should be proud, England has met with a forward rival in America. (Cheering.) She alone of all other states has rivalled us in arts, in the rature in commerce, in wealth, in independence, in gigantic strides towards national power, and fistreely and bravely has she battled with us on the ocean—our own—peculiar element. (Mr. Glaries stopped here for a short time, and then added.) I wished and ought to still bolds the gigantic infairt in his grasp, -but good have said much more, but I have lost my voice from exerting it in filling this large hall; I must therefore apologize, and conclude with a toast which needs no recommendation to such enthusiastic lovers of freedom, prosperity gentlemen, to the United States of America. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

DR. HUPFNAGLE.-I wish, gentlemen, for your satisfaction, that some one else was present to claim an American birthright; as the pleasing duty, however, devolves upon me, accept my sincere acknowledgements. It is hardly necessary to remark that in celebrating an event of such vital importance as that which you have met this evening to commemorate, you would have the hearty concurrence of every American. It has ever been the policy of the United States to facilitate the distribution of public journals, and their circulation there, is perhaps, much more extensive than in any other country; every man in America takes direct interest in political affairs, and every act of Government must daily pass under the public eye. We depend upon the diffusion of knowledge among our citizens for the security of our institutions, and we regard as our protecting " Ægis" the Liberty of the Press (Cheers.) I will not detain you, gentlemen, but while offering you assurances that your friendly feelings are cordially reciprocated, allow me to deerve, that when the line of communication, by means of steam vessels over the western waters shall have been established, our respective nations will be brought comparatively close to each other. The reign of prejudice must then ceasethe bounds of amity and relationship between Great Britain and America which must be strengthened, and the Atlantic which rolls between them must for ever prove a Pacific Ocean. (Loud cheers.)

JOHN GRANT Esq.—Gentlemen; you have already drank to Sir. Charles Metcalfe as the Liberater of the India Press; I now call upon you to drink to him again not as the liberator of the India Press, but as Sir Charles Metculfe, one of the brightest ornaments of his age. (Much cheering).

SIR. CHARIES METCALFF.-Gentlemen, will you do me the favor to fill your glasses to drink to a toast I am about to propose. I give you, gentlemen, with the greatest pleasure, the healths of the talented chairman and stewards. (Theers.) Before taking my leave of you this evening, I cannot refrain from expressing my full concurrence in the various sentiments expressed by the several talented speakers; and from the eloquence, independence and high manly spirit displayed, I look upon the proceedings of this meeting, as one of the greatest importance. (Cheers.) As far as these proceedings relate to myself, I will ever most fondly cherish the recollection of them; and consider this evening as one of the proudest moments of my existence; (Cheers.) and wherever I may pass the rest of my life it shall be my endeavour, in all my future acts and career, to preserve the good opinion, and to continue to merit the degree of estimation which has been expressed for, and shown to me by you all, on so memorable an occasion as the present. (Much cheering.) Gentlemen, I give you the healths of our t lented Chairman and Stewards. (Drank with much cheering.)

The Chairman returned thanks.

About a quarter to one A. M. Su. Charles retired, and the greater part of the party, shortly afterwards, followed

A knot of the party, comprising Messie. Clarke, Leith, Stocqueler, Scott Thomson, Captain Forbes, Captain Harrington, Capt. Vint, Dr. Grant, &c. &c. then took to the high table, and with the help of devilled turkies and champaigne, spun our another hour-one of the "wee short" ones. During this period, Mr. Thomson proposed the health of " Capt. Williams, of the St. George, and a prosperous voyage to the ship that bears Sir Charles Vetcalfe." Mr. Stocqueler proposed the healths of Messrs, Turton and David Hare, and numerous others were drank until the festival was considered complete .-Hurkaru, February 12.

DINNER TO SIR C. T. METCALFE.

About eight the company, which consisted of nearly The health of the Queen Dowager was a 200 persons, having assembled, two of the stewards from the chair, and drank with all the honors. any one entering it before Sir Charles, who was couducted to it by Sir J.P. Grant, the president, and the other stewards. After Sir Charles had entered the hall, the rush to obtain admittance was really so great that those who were in the midst of the throng were involuntarily borne forward. Sir Charles appeared to be in perfect health, and not in the least fittigued by having kept up the previous evening at the Press dinner.

After the company had done justice to the dinner, the president, who sat at the head of the table on the left of Sir Charles, rose and proposed the health of Her Majesty. It was not gound, he observed, to preface the toast of the Sovered with many prefatory observations; on the present occasion he would deviate from that usual course, in consideration of the sex and age of the sovereign; and also because that was the first time on which he had the honor of proposing Her Majesty's health. Her Majesty had been called at a tender age to adminis-Her ballety has been carried a tender age to animale ter the affairs of a great nation; under the advice of able and experienced Ministers: but these Ministers were of her owner gooing. Medesty, prudence, and firmness had already marked Her Majesty's early career, and there was every measure to hope that she would always sustain such a character. The toast was drank with enthusiashe cheers.

The health of the Queen Dowager was next given

In giving the health of the Duke of Sussex and Royal Family, the president adverted to the personal feelings of gratitude he entertained towards that branch of the family, arising from early associations.

Drank with the usual honors and much cheering. The Governor-General of India in Council was next toasted with all the honors.

The health of Sir Charles Matcalfe was proposed by the president in a most eloquent speech, of which the following is a rough sketch. After some preliminary remarks, he said, that it was now about three years since he had the honor of occupying a similar position to the present in this place, except that on that occasion he had to wish Sir Charles a safe passage over the waters of the Ganges; but that now the same wish must be expressed in regard to the boisterous ocean. They had not met to consider the conduct of Sir Charles when he acted as the vice president, nor as the Governor General, nor as the Lieutenant Governor of the north western provinces. His conduct was well known to every class of the community, and each man would express his opinion on it. His conduct would be decided upon by the public, to whose judgment Sir Charles was too bonest a man not to submit. They had assembled in order to bear testimony to his private character; to express their sense of his conduct in all the social relations of life. They had assembled to bear testimony to the fidelity and a body to whom India, like other countries, owed her the other virtues he possessed. They had assembled to bear testimony to that kind indulgence with which he always looked upon the failings of others, whilst himself practised the highest virtues. In short, they had assembled to bear testimony to the great excellence of his character, not as a statesman, but as a man. (Denfening and continued cheers.) Every society of which he had been a member had been promoted, and every individual who approached him in distress received relief. His munificence to every institution in the establishment for the happiness of man was well known. To every one he extended his assistance in relieving his distress to the utmost of his power. These things could not be recollected without considering Sir Charles as one of the best friends of this country; one whose memory should be cherished in the bosom of every man. He wished Sir Charles a safe voyage to England, a happy meeting with his friends, and a long life to enjoy the well cained honors he carries with him. (Deafening cheers repeated.)

Sir Charles returned thanks, and alluded to the splended entertainment, with which he had been honored. and the warmth with which his health had been drank, the recollection of which, after his departure from India, he said, would cheer him through the remainder of his life. He begged the company to accept of his most heartfelt thanks. ((heers.)

The president then proposed the Bishop of Calcutta with a few appropriate remarks. Drank with the usual

The president would next propose the health of one who would gladly have been here if his health had premitted. He meant the Deputy-Governor of Bengal. Drank with all the honors.

he British Navy was the next toast.

Captain Crozier, of the brig Victor, returned thanks in behalf of the Navy, of which, he said, he was but an humble member. He hoped the British Navy would always maintain a high station in the estimation of this community. He hoped she would defend not only the shores of England, but also of all her colonies.

The Army, said the president, required as little preface as the Navy. He would, therefore, simply propose the Commander-in-Chief and the British Indian Army. Sir W. Cotton, as the senior officer in the room, retuined thanks for the Army.

The Bengal Civil Service was the next given, by the president, who alluded to the high talents and integrity of its members. Mr. Rattrary returned thanks.

Mr. R. S. Thomson here sung, "Oh! tell me how to woo the love.

The Ladies of Calcutta was the next toast given from the chair. It was one, said the president, to which every body he was sure would drink with great delight, and one which was well suited to the occasion. He would not enlarge upon their praises; for be feared he would not be able to do justice to the subject. He could not now express himself with so much warmth as he could some years ago. He would, therefore, simply propose, The Ladies of Calcutta.

MR. H.M. PARKER .- He was sure there was not one in the room who would not readily lay down his life for the fair sex; yet it was strange that no one had arisen to speak for them. He would, therefore, try the experiment, though all the oratory he was master of could not come near the elequence of their eyes. After a few more humourous observations, which we could not catch, owing to the great distance at which we sat from the speaker, he concluded by wishing the Ladies of Calcutta, health, happiness, and all the blessings that can follow.

The president would now rise to propose the health of prosperity. Commerce was the cause of mutual intercourse between the different separated branches of the family of man, and of their rivilization. In this city there were two great names connected with commerce. one a European and the other a Hindeo, who would have been here if business had not prevented. He meant Mr. Cockerell and Dwarkanath l'agore. One who had brought his wealth to this country from England; and the other, though a Hiudoo by birth, was possessed of the intelligence and notions of Europe, and had established an agency house. He could not pass over the name of this noble individual, without alluding to his late munificent donation to the District Charitable Society. The president hoped that all the natives as well as Europeans would follow his example. Had he been in Calcutta, the president was sure he would have joined the company in celebrating such an occasion.

After a pause of some minutes, Mr. Johnstone sung the well-known national song .- " Auld Lang Syne."

Success to steam communication between India and England was then given from the president, who adverted to the executions of Lord William Bentinck in this behalf, as one of the instances of that nobleman's devotion to the cause of this country and its future promotion. Commerce, he said, was the bond of union between distant nations, and steam navigation formed a part of the means of carrying it on. He recommended unity among the supporters of the scheme, and that differences should be set aside in this great undertaking. In conclusion, he proposed the health of Lord William Bentinck, and the firm establishment of steam communication .- Drank with loud cheers.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that as Mr. Parker had set the example of returning thanks for the ladies, he would do the same for the steam communication. He had always been an advocate for steam communication in India. His honourable friend, the president, had not, however, explained whether he meant the success of a small experiment, or the establishment of a general system which would open a communication between England and all the three presidencies of India. From the allusion to the exertions of Lord Bentinck in this regard, which were directed to the general scheme, he however concluded, that the torst must mean that, and in that sense he would acknowledge the compliment. He was glad to observe the question of steam introduced into meetings of this kind, for by constant agitation he thought every thing could be gained.

The Marquess of Wellesley was the next toast given from the chair. This was an appropriate toast for the occasion, in consequence of the friendship that subsisted between Sir Charles Metcalfe and his Lordship, whose conduct in India had now become a matter of history. There was, he ever, no man who had done more good to this country than his Lordship. The improvements made to this town were among the proofs of his exertions. But the greatest benefit he had done was to introduca Sir Chailes Metcalfe into the Indian service.

Drank with all the honours.

The Duke of Wellington .- On the political opinions of the Duke, the president would offer no opinion. The military achievements of his grace were well known to all, and also that this was the country in which he was bred to the use of arms. Drank with all the honors.

There was no subject, said the president, which could interest those who came to this country from England more than the improvement of the natives, a cause in which Sir Charles had laboured with others. He gave the advancement of the natives of India in civilization, and their improvement to knowledge and morals. Drank as usual.

jection to the toast I am about to propose, which is a state-man and civilian. He meant Lord Grey, a man very appropriate one to the present occasion. I give, who had devoted his life to the service of his country Liberty all over the world. Drank as usual.

Mr. H. M. Parker proposed the Bar of Calcuna, ville Clarke returned thanks, apologizing for his house-ness, by saving that he lost his voice in a good cause

The president, I challenge any man to state an ob- soldier, would now propose the health of an eminent

Sir Charles Metcalfe proposed the health of the Prewhich was drank with all the honors; and Mr. Longue-sident, the Vice President, and the stewards, which was

METCALFE MEETING.

The meeting at the Town-hall yesterday afternoon was numerously attended, Sir Elward Ryan presiding. The chanman briefly opened the proceedings, stating, in the terms of advertisement, a preliminary meeting had been held at his chambers to consider in what manner all classes of society might best unite in doing honor by a public entertainment to the eminent public and private virtues of Sir Charles Metcalle.

The Hon. Mr. Shakespear proposed a resolution, which was seconded by general Macgregor, and carried, that a public dinner be given, and that Sir J. P. Grant be requested to preside, and Sir W. Cotton to undertake the office of Vice-president.

Mr. H. M. Parker proposed a resolution forming the committee. He stated that the list comprised all classes. He alluded to the proposed dinner to be given to Sir Charles by those who appreciate his measure of freeing the Indian Press. But the dinner now under consideration was district from all political feeling; it was to shew their regard for a great and good man, whose heart was open as day to melting charity, and whose hand was as open as his heart. Mr. R.D. Mangles seconded the resolution, which was carried, following are the names of the stewards.

TheHon, Sir Edward Ryan, Dr. Raleigh, The Hon. H Shakespear, Mr. John Bell, Mr. H Wollaston, Mr. James Pattle, Mr. P. A. Cavorke, General Macgregor, Colonel McLeod. Mr. James Prinsep, Mr. Longueville Clarke, Mr. E. Mollay, Capt. T. J. Taylor, Mr. O'Hanion, Mr. D. Hare, Mr. T. Holloyd. Mr. Alexander Colvin, Mr. W. P. insep, Baboo Prosunnoo Comar Tagore, Captain Harington, Baboo Russomov Datt, Mr. R. S. Thomson, Mr. Rustomjee Cowasjee, Dr. Goodeve, Dr. O'Shambnesey, Capt. D. Dr. Richardson, Mr. H. M. Patker, Dr. Ranken, Mr. Dove, Mr. W. A. Shaw, Mr. M. Johnston, Mr. Wale Byrn, Mr. Patrick.

Mr. T. Holroyd moved that the Bishop of Calcutta, and the committee be requested to form a deputation, to wait on Sir Charles and to ascertain his wishes as to the time. The chairman intimated that the Bishop acquiesced in the proposal.

The proceedings were about to terminate when Mr. L. Clarke requested the attention of the meeting. He perfectly agreed with what had been proposed, but he thought, this was not sufficient. Something more was due in honor of the man whom they all prized as a private individual, as an officer of Government, and as the friend of every class. He proposed, therefore, that a subscription be opened for a piece of place, that Sir Charles may carry from India as a token of our rever-ence, respect, and esteem. Ar. B. S. Choinson seconded the resolution, and it was put and carried by accla-

MILITARY ORPHAN SOCIETY.

Pursuant to advertisement, a meeting of the subscribers to the Military Orphan Society took place, this morning, at the Town-hall. After same discussion the meeting elected vajor Colnet to the Chair.

It was then proposed by the Captain Fitzgerald, and seconded by Captain Thomson, that the report be read." This proposition having been put to the vote was negatived.

Captain Thomson then proposed that the meeting adjourn until Tuesday next at 11 o'clock, which being seconded by the Revol. Mr. Ruspin, was put to the vote and negatived also.

A vote of thanks was then proposed to the chairman for his able conduct in the chair, which was carried unanimously.

In the course of the meeting a proposition of some kind or other was made by Dr. Corbyn, which the chairman declined to put, as it was not consonant to the tenour of the advertisement calling the meeting

The meeting then separated; but it may be as well to explain that the negativing of the proposition that the report he read, was owing to the majority of the meeting being of opinion that they could not proceed to any business, in consequence of the Maddock propositions requiring a quorum of twelve voters, whereas there were only twelve subscribers present altogether, of whom seven or eight had been or were still connected with the management of the institution, and consequently were not entitled to vote.

This is a sorry specimen of the working of the Maildock rules. Ere long we may become converts to the Dake of Wellington's opinion, that public meetings are " all a farce."

As the matter now stands the accounts have not been passed, and moreover they cannot now be passed as the period fixed by the Muddock rules has gone by; the last Wednesday in January is the day fixed upon by the tules; and consequently we presume that the meeting must adjourn to the last Wednesday of January 1839 .-Cal Courier, Jan. 31.

EXAMINATION OF THE NATIVE MORNING FREE SCHOOL.

(From a Correspondent.)

The examination of the above school took place at the Benevolent Institution, Bow Bazar, last Saturday, the 27th instant. There were five or six Europeans present and a large number of native youth and gentlemen.

The boys were examined by Messrs. Delanougerede and Mackenzie in spelling, reading, explanation, grammar, and geography, and acquitted themselves to satistaction, considering the short period they have been under scholastic exercises. Two of the best students recited Cato's soliloquy and Norval's address to Lord Randolph, Their names are Pronkisto Chuckerbutty and Rowsobuck Boraul.

As the public are not aware of any circumstances regarding this school, it may be interesting to state that it was established in August 1836, by the young men from the Oriental Seminary, Baboo Madhob Chunder Bysack and Seeb Chunder Dutt, and has been conducted. with the exception of one teacher from the General Assemby's School, entirely by the pupils of the first named seminary.

A small subscription is monthly raised for the expenses in books, charts, tables, &c. &c.

The school is held in the outer rooms of Baboo Hurry Mohun De's premises in Jorshanko, Ruttun Streat's, Garden street, who has given the use thereof for the purpose free of charge. - Ibid.

BANK OF BENGAL.

pliance with a requisition to take into consideration 'the severe losses and peculiarly hard case' of Ruggoo Ram

On the failure of Palmer & Co. the bank held certain of their notes which the bank had discounted. On four of these notes, principal amount Sa. Rs. 50,000, 40,000, 60,000, and 15,000, Ruggoo Ram's name appeared, and he became bound tor his name. Palmer & Co. were, on their failure, also liable to the bank for certain sums of money advanced on, and secured by, deposits of Company's paper. These advances, with interest, the bank paid itself from the proceeds of the Company's paper, which, conformably to one of the conditions of deposit, the bank sold to satisfy itself. But, after satisfaction of the bank's claim for principal and interest on account of the advance secured by Company's paper, there remained a considerable surplus from the proceeds; between two and three lacs, the Bank claimed to hold, and did hold, by way of set-off, against the discounted promissory notes of Palmer, & Co. in the bank's hands. And the bank proposed to apply the said surplus to, in the first instance, the inquidation of such of Palmer, & Co's, promissory notes as it (the bank) thought the least secured. As this time Ruggoo Ram Gossain came forward to the directors with a representation of his heavy losses by the failure of l'almer & Co. and with a proposition that the directors should, in consideration of those losses, apply, under his guarantee to hold the bank harmless for applying, the surplus proceeds of the Company's paper, to the liquidation in the first instance of three of the four promissory notes bearing his endorsement of Seebuhunder Doss, a man of large property. To this proposition of Ruggoo Ram Gossain the bank agreed, and under his sureties (guaranteed to indemnify the bank for the act, and to pay the fourth note in three years, should Seebchunder Doss not have done so before) applied the tipolus proceeds to the payment of the other notes bearing Ruggo Rugs name. The remainder of the surplus was held against the remaining notes of Palmer and Co. but there still was left a balance due on the aggregate amount of those notes. Meanwhile the assignees of Pelmer and Co. had demanded from the bank for the general creditors of the estate, whole of the surplus proceeds of the Company's paper, and the bank resisting the demand of the assignees, proceeded to an action at law in the Supreme Court, and a verdict was given in favour of the bank. Against this decision the assignees appealed to the Privy Council, by whom the disposed to make the concession, and Ruggeo Ra at liberty to appeal to the meeting now convened,

The chairman, Mr. Pattle, addressed the meeting. As we understood, he was inclined to concede the interest mainly on the ground that the individual most interested is a native, and, therefore, his severe losses are entitled to particular consideration. But Mr. H. T. Priusep took the question on its merits, and proposed a resolution, in substance, that the interest be remitted. This was second-college that the interest be remitted.

SAILORS' HOME SOCIETY.

Last Tuesday evening the half-yearly Last Tuesday evening the half-yearly general of Britain's virtues,—living epistles of her morals meeting of the Sailors' Home Society was held at the land of her glorious faith: Landsmen can exercise Town-hall, Sir J. P. Grant in the chair.

The report, which was a very interesting statement of details, dressed in plain language and somewhat in the phraseology of sailors, having been read,

The Rev. J. Charles rose to move the first resolution. That the report be printed and circulated.

ced to the public that it was in contemplation to establish such an institution, every person of right feelings and correct judgment whom he knew, at once concurred in the desireableness of the project. It appeared to him to be a happy conception, a most felicitous idea. He belived the meeting was already aware that the institution overdits origin, and, in a greet measure, its successful operation, to the worthy secretary (Rev. T. Boaz). For his own part, he regarded the institution as now fully established; and it was matter of congratulation that so much could be said of & within or short a period of its existence. It was matter of surprize with him that the interests of sailors had so long been neglected or so little cared for, both in England and in this country. They are an interesting people, comprising, as he had somewhere read, one-twentieth of the population of the mother country. This simple fact, the reverend gentleman considered, ought to have, awakened on their behalf a deeper and more general spint of philanthropy. But they are not less an important than an interesting class; to them Britain owes her naval glory; through them, the fame of her arms, of her science, of her literature, and of her politics has reached the utmost bounds of the earth. They are the instruments of her commerce. By their means she lays the whole world under contribution to her wants and wishes; they minister to her luxury and to her wealth. They are not, however, generally, what they should be, and what, as a matter of highest duty, we should endeavour to make them,—a fair specimes their influence, at best but over a limited surface, within a defined circle. The conduct of sailors exerts an influence for good or for evil on large classes of men, -men of various nations, kindreds and tribes. l'his influence partakes at present more of the nature of vice: it should be made to bear with the force of moral and religious habits. The reverend gentle-The learned Divine stated, that when it was announ-man after adverting to some particulars stated in the d to the public that it was in contemplation to esta-report, and having repeated his remark that the institution could no longer be considered in the light of an experiment, but as deserving to be ranked among the established Benevolent Institutions of the country, sat down amidst suppressed cheers.

> The resolution seconded by H. Walters, Esq. C. S. was carned unanimously.

> Rev. Mr. Morton proposed the second resolution, appointing a new committee, and returning thanks to God for his blessing, and to the last committee for their

> He considered that there was no question but that the meeting would adopt the sentiments contained in the resolution he had the honour to propose. If the institution has done good —and the report states that it has done much good,—if it is a desirable institution, and the reverend gentleman who preceded him had shewn that it was a desirable institution, and moreover that it was an institution now fully established, -he was of opinion that all the good that has been effected, and all the good that the institution promised to effect, was owing to the exertions of the last committee. . But the resolution in his hands contained more-vist. an expression of thanks to God for what has been done. He behaved that all present would agree in the sentiment with the Church of England, that, "all that is wise, and good, and true, comes from God." A higher authority than the national church has also said, "every good and every perfect gift proceedeth from the father of light." The reverend gentleman felt assured that be made to raise the moral and religious character of none would dissent from these sentiments, and therefore cheerfully and warmly adopt his resolution.

Mr. Morton stated, that he was unexpectedly called upon to take a part in the business of the evening, and that he was not intimately acquainted with the details of the Home. He was not at Calcutta at the time of for the Home. He was not at Calcula at the time of its formation: he had, however, learned a great deal from the report which had just then been read. He considered the existence of such an institution in this country to be a blessing. The reverend gentleman here adverted to the mischief and ailments to which sailors are exposed in this port, and to the unfavourable impression which their conduct has produced, and is calculated to produce, on the native mind. If, said he, we desire to see the native population converted from their debasing superstitions and practices, we should seek to elevate the character of our own countrymen ; and if we are at all concerned for the spiritual welfare of our brethren, consistency requires of us not to neg-lect their temporal comforts. The reverend gentleman stated that, according to the view he took of the subject, he considered that chaplains and missionaries had as great an interest in the welfare of sailors as merchants and ship-captains.

This resolution was seconded by Captain Martin of the Duke of Buccleugh, and carried unanimously.

The thanks of the meeting were proposed and accorded to the chairman.

Sir J. P. Grant rose to say, that he took a very deep interest in the objects of the institution. That institution was yet in its infancy, and he believed the Rev. Mr. Chailes would agree with him in this view, athough he was of opinion that the success of the institution was no longer problematical, and that as such, it required to be nourished and tended and brought into vigorous and healthful exercise. His Lordship fully concurred in the views expressed by bitths. All the departments have prosper Mr. Morton. He considered that exertions should they have been tried. - Englishman, Feb. 8.

the seamen who come to this port. Sailors, said his that the meeting would not only unhesitatingly, but lordship, are exposed to numerous temptations in this country; and not the least of their dangers, is, that they regard the class of the native inhabitants into whose hands they fall to be a simple and ignorant people. We know, his lordship observed, that this is not the case. Cunning and villainy soon tob them of their money and their health. The crimping system too was till lately in active operation to complete their wretchedness. His lordship regarded with cordial pleasure the extent and salutary nature of that influence, which the Home bad exerted, in rescuing sailors from the cunning and power of these landsharks. His lordship congratulated the meeting on what they had heard, and concluded with stating, that though he could not take any very active part in the management of the institution, of which he had been constituted the president, his best wishes attended all its operations. His lordship then proposed thanks to the secretary, Rev. T. Boaz and J. W. Alexander, E-q. and to Or. Maxton for his gratuitous medical advice to the iumates of the Home.

> Mr. Boaz rose and expressed his very grateful sense of the vote of thanks accorded to him. It was his heart's desire to see the institution prosper. He considered its prosperity very much depended on the share the community of merchants and ship captains took in it; with out their hearty aid, he was not very sangume of success. He begged them to come forward to the help of the committee, both from a consideration of their own interests, and of the benevolent objects of the institution.

The meeting was very thinly attended, but a spirit of cheerfulness and deep interest appeared to pervade it.

P. S .- We have the pleasure to state that the num. ber admitted in the 11ome during the last half year was 303, out of which 296 have been provided with births. All the departments have prospered as far as Motions disposed of.

The notice of motion submitted at the last general meeting, proposing to solicit Government to send one of their own yessels to Orahetta for the purpose of bringing a supply of sugar cane, was brought forward and discussed

Moved by Dr. Waltich, accorded by Mr. Storm, and resolved.—That it is not desirable to adopt the measure proposed by Mr. Beatne, sufficient means communications addressed to the secretaries he referred having been already adopted to obtain supplies of to them, and hereaftar embodied in a separate pamphlet.

Notices of Motion.

1st .- Proposed by the Agricultural Committee, Con their report of the 8th February 1838.) That with reference to the particular interest which Dr. Montgo merie of Singapore has taken in the proceedings of this society, by sending from time to time supplies of sugar cane from that island, the society's gold medal be awarded to Dr. Montgomerie.

2d .- Moved by Sir Edward Ryan, That the expense of publishing a pamphlet on the subject of Cochineal, prepared by Mr. Bell, be defrayed by the society.

3d.—Moved by Dr. Wallich. That with reference to a letter from Lieut. Kirke, of Deyrah, a small sum be allowed for the purpose of enabling Lieutenant Kirke, to supply the society with seeds raised in that neighbourhood which are said to be equal to English seed.

Read the following communications:

From Mons, Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden at Bourbon to Dr. Wallich, dated Nov 9th 1837, intimating that under directions from the Bourbon Government, he had despatched by the Alcide, two cases of cactus covered with the cachineal insects.

From Captain Charlton to Dr. Wallish, dtaed 23d January 1838, stating his intention of forwarding a quantity of cochineal insect, in living state brought by him from the Cape of Good Hope, on the ship Sesostris.

The President drew the particular attention of the meeting to these communications, which had given rise to a difference of opinion as to any of the insects, being the true Mexican cochineal or "grana fina."

The insects from Bourbon and the Cape, and arrived in a very satisfactory and healthy state, and had been seen by Mr. G. A. Prinsep, at the Botanic garden, on their arrival, who pronounced them to be all the wild variety, called in Commerce "grana sylvestra."

Mr. Bell had subsequently inspected the insects, and pronounced those from Bourbon to be the true " grana fina," and those from the Cape to be the " grana sulvestra," and as it was considered advisable to have the insects examined by a committee before this time, he (the President) would read a report drawn up, and unanimously adopted by that committee, which, however, did not decide the question at issue, as none of the members had seen the living insect before, and their deductions were drawn only from the remarkable features which charatecrize the two varieties.

The jusects were exhibited at the meeting.

On the report being read, Dr. Duncan Stewart proposed, seconded by A. Dobbs, Es.p., and rasolved, that it be confirmed as the report of the society.

Moved by the president, and resolved, that the committee's report be published, for general information.

Read a letter from John Guilding, Esq., dated Baranagore, January 12th, giving it as his opinion, that the Bourbon insect is he true grant fine of Mexico.

Read a letter from Charles Deverine, Esq , dated the 12th January, stating that the Bourbon insectis different from any living cochineal he has seen in India.

The president mentioned that Mr. Bell had collected some information in elucidation of the question at issue, which he had thrown into a pamphlet, and suggested that its issue should be kept back, until the committee's report could be added thereto, when it would be at the service of the committee, and members who might feel interested in prosecuting enquiry.

Resolved, that the present committee be requested to continue their labours, and that all questions and superior to that before forwarded.

Resolved, that any incidental charges incurred by the secretary, in forming a small experimental No-palarie, he defrayed by the society.

Resolved, that Monsr. Richard he solicited to send the society a supply of the description of cactus, in which the insect has been imported.

Moved by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Jackson, that especial thanks be returned to the Bourbon Government and to Monsr. Richard, for the courtious and prompt manner in which thy have carried into effect the society's wishes in regard to a supply of the cochineal insect, and that their further, co-peration in this important matter be solicited.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Storm, that the special thanks of the society be returned to Captain-Charlton, for having imported from the Cape the cochineal insect which, although of the wild variety had been presented at a moment that renders it an object of valuable and interesting comparison.

Read a note from Mr. Marshman of this date, for warding one capy of vol. 5, Society's Transactions, and promising to send more in the course of the day.

The secretary wished to have the society's sanction to pay the charges of publication.

Moved by Dr. Jackson, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that as Mr. Marchman executes our printing on the most economical scale, the secretary be authourized to pay his bills on presentation, and the receipt of the works for which each bill is made out. Resolved ac-

Read a letter from Monsieur Richard of Bourbon to Dr. Wallich, dated 29th November, advising despach by the "Robert le Diable" of 18 cases of Batavia sugar cane, intended for the society's nursery.

From Dr. Montgomerie, of Singapore, to the secretary, dated 23d December, enclosing a receipt for seven bundles of sugar cane, part of which he presents to the society.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 25th Jan. and 2d Feb., enclo-ing separate reports from Mr. Masters on the sugar canes received from Bourbon and Singapore, which are in good condition.

From His Excellency Sir B. Caple, Naval Commander-in-Chief, dated Trincomalee, 14th January, acknow-ledging receipt of secretary's letter of the 23d December last, requesting his aid in procuring supplies of sugarcane from the island of Otaheite.

States in reply, that he would he most happy to meet the society's wishes, but that the period of his command is so near a close, he can do no more than recommend the measure to his successor Sir E. Maitland.

Read reports of the Agricultural Committee, dated 17th January and 8th February, 1838.

Resolved that these reports be confirmed.

A letter from Major Steeman, dated 18th January. acknowledging receipt of secretary's letter of 15th idem. intimating the result of a resolution of the society, at a general meeting on the 8d Oct, last, having for its object the presentation of the society's gold medal, for the introduction by Major Sleeman of the Otaheite sugar cane. Returns thanks for the same.

Report of a committee, convened at the requisition of the president, Sir Edward Rvan, to examine certain of Bourbon, and the Cape of Good Hope.

PRESENT. - Dr. Strong in the chair.

Dr. Evans, Dr. Goodeve. Mr. W. Storm, Dr. A. R. Jackson, Dr. Huffuagle, Mr. D. W. A. Speed.

Inspected two samples of living insects, the one brought from Bourbon, sent (under directions from the Island Government) by Monsr. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden, on Robert le Diuble, the other brought from the Cape of Good Hope, by Capt. Charlton of the Bengal Service, on the Sesostris.

The committee are of opinion, that a most decided difference exists between the samples before them.

The Bourbon insect is clothed with a coat of powdery substance, is perfect in form, and large, having only a slight appearance of filament about the tail, which rubs to powder between the fingers.

The Cape insect is completely enveloped in down, and has none of the mealy deposit about it, which so strongly marks the character of the other.

As far as your Committee can decide, the insects before them are as distinct as the grana fini of commerce is described to be different from the granu sylvestra.

The Committee beg to annex an extract of a letter from Monsr. Richard to Dr. Wallich, dated St. Dennis, Isle of Bourbon, 29th November, 1837.

"Je suis bien impatient d'aron des nouvelles de nos voyageuses cochenilles. S'il en arrive de vivantes à Calcutta, comme je le pense, elles seront peut été con-vertes deduret, parcequelles auront ête ensermées et pour ainsi dire, privées d'air ; mais ceci ne doit pas vous faire prejuger de leur mauvaise qualité car quand elles sont sur des Nopals, au grandair, elles devienment presque nues lorsquélles son ta leur grousseur."

This extract, your Committee consider fully borne out by the present appearance of the insect, and, although they do not feel competent to say with certainty, that the larger insect is the grana fina, (none of your com-mittee having seen the insect alive) they have observed enough to convince them that it appears far superior to what is described, by the best authors, as the grand sylvestra.

The Committee request that the cochment be left in the hands of Mr. Bell, for further experiment.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL DINNER.

About sixty gentlemen attended the Dinner at the want of co-operation on the part of the Indigo planters, Town Hall on Monday evening, Sir Edward Ryan in in the chair. The chairman immediately after the cloth had been removed proposed (the first public opportunity he had had of doing so) the national foast. He did so alluded on the last occasion, an omission on his part, to with the greatest delight—' The Queen, and God bless which cause alone he hoped he might justly attribute her! The party responded to the chauman's enthu-their indifference. However, he now entreated them to siasm, and the cheers were loud and long continued.

The toasts followed in quick succession. The chairman again rose, an I in proposing the health of the Governor General congratulated the society that in the successor of Lord William Bentinck, of whose services it was not necessary to remind them, they had found another great patron of the institution. Sir Edward prefaced the next toast with what he pleasantly termed "a sittle parish business." He noticed the state of the society's finances, and the successes which have attended their efforts to bring forth the resources of the country. As to the finances, he had good grounds for saying they were in a flourishing condition, exhibiting a large increase on the current year, arising from the rapid at gmentation of the number of members. But if their receipts had increased, so also had their disbursements, for the society did not hoard money. He noticed two large items in the latter, occasioned by the publication of the third and fourth volumes of the Transactions, and the reprint of the first volume, strongly recommending these to notice. As to the number of members, he remembered, he said, something on the last occasion with regard to the little encouragement the society had at that time received from the commercial community of Calcutta. On that occasion his friend opposite (Mr. A. Colvin) had taken to himself the observation, and glad he was to say, if they conveyed any reproach, his friend had since done his best, and the mercantile community had entirely freed themselves of censure. In 1836 there were two mer-chants only on the list; in 1838 there are thirty-two. The civilians had ever shown a warm interest in the society. He had thought it his duty to express this opinion on a former occasion; but if, up to that time, they had done well, they had since done better. In 1836 there were eleven members civilians; in 1837 the number increased to forty-seven. This was matter for congratulation; nevertheless there was another side of the picture, which the Nerbudda. Major Sleeman's opinions have been gave occasion for much regret. He alluded to the adopted by the society. His observations on the who, of all others, the natives excepted, were the most interested in the society's proceedings. He complained of the absence of these gentlemen, to whom he had not alluded on the last occasion, an omission on his part, to add to the number of the society, and expressed a lively hope that they would imitate the example of the mer-chants. It was a subject of much regret that so few natives had joined the society. They were the parties most interested in its success, and though their feelings would not permit them to attend the commemoration of the society's anniver-ary, it was expected they would join and aid the monthly meetings by their subscriptions and influence. He noticed the extension of Auxiliary Societies: last year there were six, at present there were twelve in various parts of India. He noticed the Society's Transactions, alluding particularly to the very valuable papers of Dr. McClelland and Dr. Griffiths. But he would not trouble the party longer with "parish affairs," which was indeed unnecessary, as the whole would be stated in detail by the excellent secretary. In conclusion, the chairman gave " Prosperity to the Agricultural and Horticultural Societies of India.

The next toast was proposed by Dr. Wallich, the vice president. He recurred to his early associates, and feelingly exclaimed " what would Dr. Carey have said had he seen our prosperity, and the improvements our influence has produced?" He entreated the meeting to join in drinking, in solemn silence, the memory of that great and good man.

Mr. Cracroft proposed the health of Sir Edward Ryan, to whose exertions the ociety are not a little indebted for their present flourishing condition. The toast was drank with much applause. Sir Edward returned thanks, and took that opportunity to inform the members present in what manner the medals had been distributed. We regret much we are not in possession of the correspondence between Major Sleeman, and the society on the subject of the Mauritus sugar cane, which, we understand, in consequence of the perseverance of that gallant officer, now shoots up luxuriant on the banks of the Nerbudda. Major Sleeman's opinions have been foreign to the objects of the society. To Major Sleeman is awarded the society's gold medal. To Mr. B.ll, the silver medal for his cultivation of guinea grass, and to Lieutenant H. Vetch a gold medal for his preparation of cauntchour.

In conclusion the chairman noticed the report of the Commutee on Australian Cattle, and a communication from the Royal A-ratic Society requesting information (as we understood,) regarding the " white bullock of Àream.

There were numerous other speeches and toasts during

They did all this in English, Native Infant School, which took place at the Townhall yesterday, seemed to have excited greater interest this year, than the last. The attendance of ladies and gentlemen was decidedly a more respectable one, but very few of the friends and relatives of the pupils, if we could so call them, were seen amongst the audience, perhaps owing to the hour being a little early for Hindoos in general. The number of boys appeared to have been much increased during the past year, and their improvement, indeed exceeded our expectations, in a great measure. Although there was not one amongst them, who was more than six years old, yet the answers they returned to questions put to them, seemed to as-tonish the whole audience. A bit of brass wire being held up, shey described all its properties, namely, that it was flexible, elastic, &c. which few children of their age could do in their own language ; great credit is therefore due to Mr. Perkins and his as-istants for the improvement they have made. They repeated the Bengalli alphabet, and the tables of weight and money current in this country. They sang a number of little infantile songs, and their performance was exceedingly well considering their age, and the time they have been in the institution, which is only a little better than a year old.

The Lord Bishop spoke highly of the regularity of their movements and their correct pronunciation of English, and touching upon the advantages likely to result from such an institution, expressed a hope that the ladies and gentleman present would contribute subscripty's funds, and such decided testimony to the efficiency suffering, and from the horrors of starvation. This evhibition of confidence has not only placed their successi Christian public. sors in a position to relieve, but has also encouraged them to the work; and the state of the country, from the failure of both the khurreef and rubbee crops is such, that both funds and encouragement are amply needed.

The money now available, even under the most economical and judicious application, will scarcely meet three months' demand: the committee therefore enticat a continuance of that reliance which they have hitherto experienced.

To the all-wise God alone, who doth not willingly afflict the children of men, is known the extent to which the present distress will range; appearances indicate a lengthened duration, and unless Christian philanthropy exert its genial influence, the sufferings of the past will not bear contrast with those of the future, the contemplation of which is sufficient to unnerve the sternest mind.

The present is not the time to argue the question whether the establishment of relief societies be desirable or not, (the gratuitous support of the halt, the blind, the decrepid, and the detection of the worthless vagrant, intuitively recommends itself to our best feelings,) but it is the time to act; the labourer is without hire, the energies of life are sinking, and the land is filled with emaciation; casting aside, then, the question of the expediency of such institutions, the committee beg that each individual will, during the present grievous affliction, give a portion of his monthly income to meet the exigency-be it only a fiftieth, if universal, it will be sufficient. They are aware that there are some who, though, they do not throw aught into common fund, distribute for purposes of relief to a great extent: but, it may be asked, how can that charity be discriminating and efficient, by which some receive abundance and others not enough?

The Committee of the Campoon Relief Society have nate alms-giving is often, nay seldom otherwise than much pleasure in submitting to the subscribers, and baneful, and but a very equivocal evidence of benevothe public in general, the report for the past year, pre- lence; that alone is entitled to the dignified name of senting as it does, so favorable an account of the socie- charity which first assures itself of the existence of distrest, and then relieves it ;- examples as numerous as of its operations. The plan of relief hitherto pursued is that of emploving those able to labour in some work of acknowledged public utility, paying to each of the men 4 pice, which, in the present scatcity can barely procure a daily meal, and, to all others, as many cowries according to the load and distance to which is carried, as will enable them, by a little excition, to gain sufficient to supply the demands of nature. The labour has been employed on the public road, parades, and the ground in the neighbourhood of public buildings; and the work now in hand is the excavation of a large tank near the Diagoon and Artillery Hospitals, and the filling up of the low ground in their immediate vicinity. The number of deaths from exposure and starvation, which have come under the cognizance of the society, may be estimated at 600 since the 1st of September last, and including those throughout the station, at 1,200 by the lowest calculation; and the average number relieved daily 1,300.

Seven houses capable of holding 14 individuals have been built during the past year, on the premises of the society, which now can afford shelter to 41 persons.

Respecting their endeavours to suppress vagrancy, the committee have every reason to feel satisfied that they have fully succeeded: the vagrant is known, hiswanderings noted, and his trade checked: all that is required to complete the efficiency of this branch of the society's operations is a reliance on the judgment of the committee, by referring every petitioner unrelieved to them. The system of monthly returns of travelling applicants is maturing, and, will tend materially, combined with the confidence of the public to frustrate the worthless vagrants' speculation. The number of travellers relieved is 32: the number of these considered unworthy 10.

In closing their report the committee desire to express a fervent hope that Almighty God may, of his infinite mercy, bless the means adopted to the attainment of the end designed, and interpose to prevent the aggrava-tion of the present unparralleled suffering from the continuance of the present drought.

To H. T. PRINSLY, Esq. Secy. to Government.

Sir,-I was honored on the afternoon of the 4th ultimo with the receipt of your letter bearing date the 1st of March, and relating to the proposed assignment of a piece of ground in Tank-square for the site of a public library.

As to the mere question of local improvement, it would ill become me to venture an opinion in opposition to the one so strongly intimated by His Lordship, the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, but 1 certainly was not without apprehension, that the sale of the property called Writer's Buildings, which has for a length of time been contemplated, would be materially prejudiced by a structure raised so immediately in front of it.

I have, however, much more forcible objection to sub mit to the consideration of His Lordship, viz that the title to the ground proposed to be granted is (unless they have been divested of it in some way of which both the other member of my family in this country and myself are ignorant) in the trustees of the will of Mr. Richard Barwell, formerly of Calcutta, and of Stansted Park, in the County of Sussex, it will not, I apprehend, be necessary at present for me to disclose this title, further than to state, that up to this time Mr. Richard Barwell's estate, pays the ground rent to Government for upwards of eight beegas north of the tank and south of the great road running in front of the Writer's Buildings, as will appear by entries in the office of the Collector of Calcutta. I also find, on searching among some old papers, that reference is made to an agreement by Thos Lyons (from whom Mr. Barwell purchased the property) not to elect a second range of buildings south of the 19 houses during the lease No. 52, to which Mr. Barwell was bound. This agreement I presume, remained in force during the subsequent tenancy of the buildings by the Company, which tenancy as to the greater part of the premises ceased with the expiration of the last charter.

I have to beg that you will convey to His Lordship, my humble and thankful acknowledgments for the readiness with which he has accorded the request contained in my former letter and hope that the nature of my present communication may be such, as to convince His Lordship, that I have not been guilty of any wanton intrusion upon his valuable time, should be require further information, and be pleased to allow me the honor of an interview, I might perhaps put him in possession of what little I know about the matter, in a shorter time than it would take to commit the same to writing.

In reply the Committee authorize us to solicit that should any difficulty or inconvenience present itself in making over the spot of ground referred to, for the purpose contemplated, that Government will be pleased to point out any other spot where they can accord sufficient room for the erection of the proposed edifice.

To Messus, Cann, Tagont & Co. Secretaries to the Committee for the Mercalfe Library Building.

Gentlemen,—Your letter dated the 2d instant to Mr. Secretary Prinsep having been referred to me to learn whether I can suggest any other ground for the Metcalfe Library Building than the position first proposed for it in Tank-square; previous to making my report to Governmenton this subject I am desirous of being informed whether your committee can point out any situation that would be chibble for such a structure, as I am not aware of any ground belonging to Government, that is not used for public purposes, and the giving up of which would not be attended with inconvenience.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen, Your obedient servant,

CAPT. W. R. FITZGERALD, Civil Architect.

Sir,—We have to apologize for the unaccountable delay which has taken place, in replying to your letter of the 16th August last.

The Committee for the "Metcalfe Library" request us to state with reference to your communication, that they would be content and thankful did the Government permit them to build the proposed edifice on the semicircular space of ground before the Town-hall, or opposite to the Ochterlony monument, immediately to the south of the Durruntollah tank, opening upon the new cross road, or adjoining to the new reservoir near Chandpaul ghaut.

You will oblige us by ascertaining the pleasure of Government on this communication, and informing us at your earliest convenience of its decision.

SIR CHARLES METCALFE'S VISIT TO ALLAHABAD.

Sir Charles Metcalfe and suite reached Allahabad on the 15th instant, and the steamer Megnu having arrived on the following day, and discharged a miscellaneous cargo of matrons, maids and packages, was immediately prepared for his reception. Mr. Chlvin gave a ball to Sir Charles on the evening of the 17th, on leaving which he embarked in the steamer, and sailed early next morning.

We have much pleasure in presenting to our readers the valadictory address of the residents of Allahabad to Sir Charles Metcalfe, and His Honour's reply. A large body attended on the presentation of the address, which was read by Mr. Bird.

Pursuant to resolutions adopted at a meeting held on a former day, for the purpose of considering on a public address to Sir C. Metcalle, on the occasion of his relinquishing his high functions of Lieutenant-Governor of the north western provinces, the residents of Allahabad, comprising all the heads of departments and many of the uncovenanted servants of Government, with some of the officers of the station, proceeded at noon, on the 17th instant, to the Honourable Baronet's tent, which place he had appointed to receive them.

After a tew 'words expressive of his entire approval (individually) of all the Lieutenant-Governor's public acts, and of his pleasure at having been selected as the organ of communicating the sentiments of the meeting, the Chairman (Mr. R. M. Bird) read the following:

ADDRESS.

Howher Sir,—We, the residents of Allahabad and its vicinity, desire to wait upon you on this occasion, with our assurances of regaid for your person, respect for your character, and sorrow for your departure.

for your character, and sorrow for your departure.

The mimediate cause of your withdrawal, in the full vigor of your strength and faculties, from the discharge of those high functions in which you have evinced so deep and constant an interest, we have learned from your published reply to the address of our fellow-countrynaen at Agra, on quitting the sent of your Government. On this point, thus openly declared and set at rest, it would hardly become us to inquire or to remark further.

But under any circumstances, we must deeply regret the loss of an experienced, high-minded, and able Governor, whose established reputation, intimate acquainance with the concerns of every public department, sound and extended policy, and tried administrative skill could not fail to secure to you the fullest confidence of all under your authority, and, especially, to stimulate and encourage those who have been cutrusted with the subordinate conduct of the various branches of the public service.

We begyou to accept our grateful thanks for the hospitality and social virtues displayed during the brief period of your sojourn at this station; for your ready and to every benevolent object; for that kindliness and courtesy, as well in official as in private intercourse, which never fails to conciliate affection, and command esteem, and which will not speedily be effaced from our remembrance.

Your judicious measures for the relief of the distressed pupulation during the present calamitous year, and strenuous exertions to obviate the threatened scourge of the last, form a suitable close to a long career of enlightened benevolence, and cannot, we feel, fail to call down on you the blossings of those who were ready to perish.

We now, with all regard and regret, bid you farewell. We trust you may long be continued to be a blessing to all those within the sphere of your influence. We feel assured that, whether you may again engage in public, or enjoy the quict of private life, you will possess that assurance of the confilence and effection of those over whom you have been called to pressle, and that satisfaction in the recollection of a life spent in the service of mankind, which, to a benevolent mind, is a never-failing spring of pleasing recollection and present enjoyment.

SIR CHARLES METCALFE'S REPLY.
To the Residents of Allahabad.

Sins,—I beg you to accept my warmest thanks for the honour conferred on itself this audiess.

The assurance of approbation and esteem, at the close of a long public life, is the most gratifying reward of honest service. The expression of such sentiments in this conspicuous manner, is a high distinction, and a manifestation of personal regard, for which I must ever be grateful. The recollection of this testimony of your friendly feelings, and of the other marks of kindness which I have received from all classes of the inhabitants of these provinces, on the occassion of my departure, will be a never-failing source of pride and comfort to me, whatever may be may future course of life. The same Cat, Courier, February 6.

would overwhelm me with shame and sorrow, should I ever do any thing unworthy of sentiments which you have so generously expressed.

Among those who have honoured me on this occasion. are some of the most eminent of my fellow servants; who are at the head of the great branches of the public administration in these provinces; and whom I have always regarded as colleagues in the government entrusted to my charge. With such efficient co-operation, the task of administration was easy, and was cheered with every prospect of success. The government is now in the stronger hands of the Governor-General, and I entertain a confident expectation that with his Lordship's beneficent and enlightened views, and with such powerful aid as he will derive from the controlling authorities to whom I have alluded, and from the integrity, zeal and ability pervading every grade of the public service, the prosperty and happiness of these provinces will be greatly advanced; provided, as I humbly hope, it may please the Almighty Giver of all good to grant more favourable seasons, and remove the drought and dearth, which prevail to a most painful extent in some districts; but here, I am happy to see, in a less degree, than in those from

My administration in these provinces has been exclusively civil; I have not had the usual authority of a Governor over the army. It is only, therefore, to those officers, military, as well as civil, who have acted under me in a civil capacity, that I am at liberty to express the thankfulness which I feel, for their valuable assistance and support. Inotice this circumstance, party because it procludes me from paying officially the ribute due to the merits of the military branch of the public service, for which I have always entertained heartfelt respect and affection, and to which we owe the acquisition and preservation of our ladian empire; and partly because I am proud to state, that, notwithstanding the want of those powers which are usually attached to the administration of a Government, I have invariably received from the officers of the army, consideration, attention, and courtesy, to the utmost extent that could have been expected, if the millitary as well as civil powers of government had been vested in me -I may say to a greater extent, for there has been more than mere respect for station-there has been the greatest personal kindness, such as I must ever acknowledge with grati-This grateful feeling, although the expression of it is called forth on the present occasion, by the friendliness which I have experienced in these provinces, extends beyond local limits. It is not confined to one presidency, not to any one branch of the army, nor to any particular description of force. Wherever I have served in India, I have always found, on the part of every portion of the army, without exception, in public duties the most zealous co-operation, and the most hearty desire to uphold the civil power; in social life, uniformly, the atmost hospitality, cordiality, and kindness. The impression made on me by what I have witnessed in these respects, can never be effaced, and I trust that it is not presumptuous in me to avow my sense of it. The greatest part of my life has been passed insituations, in which the society has been for the most part military; and the consequence of the intimate intercourse has been on my part a degree of admiration and attachment, which I cannot adequately describe; but, nevertheless, cannot wholly refrain from declaring, on the last opportunity that I may ever have, of giving public expression to such sentiments.

. I beg you all, gentlemen, again to accept my grateful thanks for your kindness, with my fervent wishes that every blessing may attend you, and that this Country may be rendered prosperous and happy, more and hore, by that devotion to the public interests which does honour to every branch of the public service.— Cal, Courier, February 6.

ENTERTAINMENT TO Æ. R. McDONNEL, Esq.

The public entertainment given to Æ. R. McDontil., Esq., on Saturday last, by the Native Gentlemen of Madras, was in every respect as creditable to them as it must have been most gratilying to their honored guest. We may say without being accused of flattery, since he will have quitted our shores before these remarks appear, that no man ever spent a long life in India more universally and deservedly admired and esteemed by all classes than Mr. McDonill; and the Hindoo community in publicly testifying their approbation of his conduct, have "won golden opinions from all sorts of people."

The fête given to Mr. McDonell, by his numerous Hindoo friends was a "Subscription Nautch," at the residence of C. V. Juggarow, in Vepery.—All the roads leading to the scene of testivity were lit up with torches for the occasion; and the garden and house were one blaze of light. At half past eight o'clock, the guests, European and Native, began to arrive; and in half an hour the hall was pretty full. The European gentlemen were about sixty in number, principally of the civil and military services; and several ladies were present also—The following programme exhibits the order of the entertainment above-stairs.

Programme of the Nautch, given to Mr. McDonell, Feb. 3, 1838.

First.—A set of three Mahommedan dancing-women, dancing in a circular form round the hall.

Second.—A young Hindoo girl dancing on the sharp edges of swords, which are fixed in a ladder, at the same time cutting pieces of sugar applied below her feet.

Third.—A set of eight Hindoo dancing-women, each of whom separately holding a string fixed in the ceiling; dancing in different ways and forming the strings into nets, rapes, &c. at the same time singing and beating time with their feet and hands.

Fourth.—A set of three Hindoo Dancing girls dancing in the Carnatic form.

Fifth.—A Hindoo dancing girl, dancing in the Hindoo form to an English tune.—Music with European Instruments.

Fiddlers, songsters and some dancing girls form the sixth.

About the middle of the entertainment, Mr. McDonell was approached by C. Strenavassay Pillay and G. V. Juggarow, and, whilst the former stood by bearing the cup to be presented to Mr. Mc Donal, G. V. Juggarow addressed that gentleman to the following effect:

"The Hindoos, whom you have this day so highly honoured by your acceptance of the entertainment prepared for you, are proud to number you amongst the warmest of their European friends. It has devolved on me to express the feelings excited by the recollection of your kindness to them. I cannot attempt to say any thing more than simply to allude to the deep regret which pervades our minds at the prospect of being deprived of your presence at Madras, even for a season. In the mean time, however, while we indulge the warmest hopes of seeing you return to us, at no distant period, with increased honours, we beg you will carry with you this trifling memorial of our sincere regard and esteem. We wish you a safe voyage to England, and all possible prosperity." (Loud cheering.)

salver. The cup surmounted with a raven, the family crest, and the coat of arms engraved on one side, with the following inscription on the other as well as on the salver:

PRESENTED

TO Æ R. McDonell, E-q.
BY HIS HINDOO FRIENDS AT MADRAS, ON THE OCCASION OF HIS DEPARTURE FROM INDIA, AS A SLIGHT TOKEN OF THEIR SINCERE REGARD AND ESTERM.
30 FEB. 1838.

Mr. McDonell replied to the following effect

"I regret very much that I cannot sufficiently express my feelings at the entertainment given by my native friends. When a man's heart is full he is unable to utter a word. Nothing could have gratified me in this world more than the honour done me this evening. I have been in India for thirty years, and from the situations I have held in the Revenue department, I have had opportunities of being much associated with the natives, and I have liked them very much. Pray accept my thanks for the piece of plate which you have done me the honor to present to me; and which will be preserved in my family from posterity to posterity."

Almost immediately after the presentation of the cup, G. V. Jurgarow proposed Mr. Me Donell's health in a glass of champaigne, which was drunk by the European friends with enthusiastic and deafening applause, Mr. Mc Donell then proposed the health of C. Strenevassay Pillay and the Hindoo gentlemen of Madras, in a brief but very appropriate speech, which was also drunk by the same portion of the Company, with hearty cheers.

The entertainment was kept up with unbounded hilarity until midnight. Two sets of dancing girls exerted their powers for the amusement of the company, at the same time, in very different costumes and received great applause. To persons who never witnessed the sight before, nothing can be more entertaining than the novelues, and, to some extent, the grace of a Hindoo dance; and, in spite of what has been alleged to the contrary, nothing can contrast more favourably than it does with the legeretté, to use the mildest word of our own Opera-house. It was said that the value of the jewells on three of the girls who were dancing together, could not have been less than ten thousand pagodas! They were literally covered with brilliants, not excepting their noses, which were positively tortured with precious stones.

The rather alarming exhibition of a young girl dancing on the sharp edges of swords, which formed the second act, was repeated late in the evening; but on the second occasion she cut limes with her heels instead of sugar cane. It appears hardly credible that a delicate little girl should be able to stand on the edge of a sharp aword, and at the same time, by pressing with her heel, cut a lime in two on the same instrument.

We must not omit to notice, that throughout the evening the European guests, and especially the ladies, experienced the most polite and unremitting attention from the native gentlemen who gave the entertainment. A room was laid out with every luxury to gratify the palates of our omniverous countrymen—wine cooled to a fault; and, indeed, nothing omitted which could render the entertainment worthy of the occasion.—Herald Feb. 7.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

To the Right Honorable LORD W.C. BENTINCK, G.C. B. M.P. and the Home Committee of the Bengal Steam Fund.

My Lord,-I have the honor of enclosing for your Lordship's perusal, a copy of a letter, which, on the 20th September last, I addressed to the Secretary to the New Bengal Steam Fund, in which you will perceive that I expressed an intention to suspend to my retirement from the service of the subscribers to that fund, until they had been afforded an opportunity of considering the vindication of my conduct, which I had felt it a duty to address to them. I was not then aware of the communication which had been made to you, and reflection upon the nature of that communication has induced me to . judge that a departure from the course which I had designed to persue, will, under these circumstances, be more advisable than an adverence to it.

The Calcutta committee 'nving referred the selection of an agent entirely to your judgment, I feel that it would be improper that I should persevere in any measure that might embarrass your proceedings, or interfere, in the slightest degree, with the most perfect freedom of choice.

I therefore beg leave most respectfully to tender my resignation of the office which I have now exercised under your control for nearly a year and a half, during the whole of which period, it is satisfactory to reflect, that I have had the good fortune to meet with your entire approbation and cordial support.

I take the liberty to enclose a copy of correspondence arising out of some libellous remarks in the Calcutta Courier on my conduct as agent.

> I have the honor to be, my Lord, Your most obedient servant,

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY,

16th Nov. 1837.

Dear Sir,-We have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, in which you tender your resignation as agent to the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, in consequence of the letter lately addressed to us by the committee at Calcutta.

As the mere agents ourselves of that committee, we should have felt bound to have acted upon the instructions conveyed to us, although opposed to our own opinion, if we did not possess information and personal knowledge as to your services to that cause, which the Calcutta committee are anxious to promote, beyond what was, or could be possessed by them at the date of their letter of the 1st of May last; and which we cannot but believe would have occasioned a very different feeling from that by which, under a misapprehension, they seem to have been actuated towards you at that period

Under these circumstances, and with the strong impression we entertain, that when they shall become as thoroughly aware as we are, of the zeal and ability with which you have entleavoured to promote the adoption and success of the comprehensive plan of steam communication direct to each presidency, the Calcutta committee will be anxious to do you full justice; we believe that we best study the interests, and the probable future wishes of our constituents, in declining to accept your resignation, until we shall have an answer to the communication which we shall think it our duty alike to them and to yourself, immediately to address to them on this subject; and in requesting you as a personal kindsecretary.

That we may, however, persue the instructions which we have received from Bengal, so far as they do not make us parties to what appears to us an injustice to yourself, we have to request that you will favor us with a statement of your account with the New Bengal Steam Fund committee, that we may transmit forthwith for their inspection and approval.

We remain, dear Sir, your obedient servants,

Wm. Bentink. Thomas M. Turton. J. Mackillop.

Proceedings of the ninth half-yearly meeting of the Subscribers to the new Bengal Steam Fund, held at the Town Hall, on the 19th day of February, 1838.

WILLIAM SPIERS, Esq. in the Chair.

The Report of the Committee having been read by the Chairman,

It was proposed by Mr. Colvin and seconded by Mr. Smith, and carried unanimously:

That the Report including the accounts, be received, approved and published.

It was then proposed by Mr. Colvin and seconded by Capt. Vint, and carried unanimously:

That Mr. Edward Harding be appointed a member of the Committee in the room of Mr. Benjamin Harding, gone to England.

On the motion of Captain Forbes, seconded by Captain Birch.

The thanks of the meeting were voted to the Chairman.

WM. SPIERS, Chairman.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Feb. 19, 1838.

REPORT.

Of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to the subscribers to the Fund, and to the petitions at the ninth half yearly General Meeting convened under the 19th Regulation of the Original Meeting of the subscribers to the Fund, held on the 22d day of June, 1833.

The Committee of the new Bengal Steam Fund, at this the ninth half yearly Meeting of the subscribers under the 10th Resolution of the original meeting held on the 22d June, 1833, are happy in being able to report that the cause of a comprehensive ateam communication is advancing, if not so speedily as might be wished, yet with certainty towards eventual success.

Since the last report presented to the meeting, held on the 19th August last, the evidence taken before a Select Committee of the House of Commons, obtained by Lord William Bentinck, has been received and reprinted for circulation in India. Consequent on that evidence, and the recommendation of the Select Committee of a "continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of her Majesty's Government and the East India Company," a general meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood was held on the 4th ultiino; at which a renewed petition to the House of Commons, and memorials to the Board of Control were passed, as also an address to the Right Hon'ble Lord Auckland. The petition was entrusted to the Committee to obtain signatures, and to forward to Lord ness to ourselves to continue your valuable services to us William Bentinck for presentation to the Ilouse of and to the cause in the intermediate time as our Commons. Six thousand and nineteen signatures were secretary. affixed to the petition, when it became necessary to despatch it by dik banghy, so that it might be sure of reaching Bombay in time for the Atalanta.

The Hon'ble the Deputy Governor was requested to allow it to be despatched free of charge, with instructions that it might be specially entrusted to the Commander of the Steamer with directors to cause it to be speedily delivered to Colonel Campbell, in order to its certain despatch by the first Alexandria steamer; this was most readily granted. The duplicate copy was at the same time despatched by the Repube. The Committee have addressed Lord William Bentinck, and, according to the tenor of the second resolution of the meeting, of which copy has been forwarded to his Lordship, have solicited his Lordship's continued exertions.

The memorials were forwarded to the Hon'ble the President in Council by the Hon'ble Sir Edward Rya,, the chairman of the meeting, with the request of the meeting, that they might receive such support as the important object might seem to merit. His Honor in Council in reply, has given assurance that they will receive his earnest recommendation. In reply to the address of the inhabitants of Calcutta, Lord Aucklant has expressed himself in terms the most favorable towards the extension of the communications to the three presidencies. The Committee congratulate the subscribers most sincerely on this powerful accession to the cause.

They are happy also to be able to report the deep interest taken in their proceedings in another high and influential quarter. The agents of the Committee at Columbo, Mesus. Partlett and on, report as follows, under date 15th ultimo. "We have deterred addressing you to the present time in order to be enabled to report to you for the information of the Committee, the result of an interview we had on the subject with his Excellency the Governor."

"We beg you will be good enough to state to the Committee that his Excellency has authorized us to communicate that, in the event of the plan of steam communication which they contemplate being matured, his Excellency will recommend that the executive Council of this colony should authorize to Government to bear a proportion of the expenditure. His Excellency further expressed his wish to promote the completion of the comprehensive scheme as far as lay in his power"

The Committee feel assured that it is wholly impossible the home authorities can resist the force of the evidence taken before the late Select Committee of the House of Commons, backed as it is by the united support of all the Indian Governments. They refrain from expressing as they feel, the value of this support, and especially of that of the Governor-General. They know it to be given under a conscientions sense of its being due to the cause; and they feel satisfied that it must be so received at home.

The Committee have also the satisfaction of reporting that the feeling in favour of the extended communication is gaining ground to the Eastward. Messrs. Syme and Co. have requested, with reference to the enquiries made at Singapore, that 50 copies of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet might be sent to them for distribution. Only twenty copies being left; they have, together 50 copies of the evidence taken before the Select Committee, been forwarded to them by the Sylph.

The Committee did not receive any communication by the last mail from the Home Committee, and they are ignorant whether or not it was the intention of Lord William Bentinck to follow up the report of the select Committee by any motion in the House of Commons. They rely, however, entirely on his Lordship's zeal and judgment; and they feel assured that his Lordship's parting pledge to procure the attainment of the object by every means in his power, as it has been so energetically followed up, so it will never he lost sight of until success is achieved.

The accounts are as usual laid on the table for the inspection of the subscribers. The only items on which any remark seems necessary are those for printing and advertising, and especially the latter.

The first item is, Re-1,088 for printing. Of this Re-888 are on account of the reprint of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet, and Re-200 are for the reprint of the evidence taken before the Select Committee of the House of Commons. For this latter a further sum of Re-453,8 will be required.

The advertising charges amount to Rs. 1,587-3-11, and between three and four thousand rupees are still due. This heavy charge has been chiefly incurred in advertising the con titonal scheme throughout India; as well as in giving notice of the reprints of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet, and the evidence taken before the Select Committee of the House of Commons. Measures will be taken hereafter to reduce this charge, should extended advertisements be again required. The actual balance amounts to Rs. 49, 910 12 7, exclusive of £300 in the hands of the Home Committee. The balance, however, is subject to a letter of credit in favour of the Home Committee for £1,000.

By order of the Committee, C. B. Greenlaw, Secretary. Town Hall, Calcutta, Feb. 16, 1831.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical the Library from the Asiatic Society's appartments, Society of Calcutta held at the Aciatic Society apart-should it hereafter be deemed advisable to resort to that ments the 3d Feb. 1838.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read:

From J. Furnell, Esq., requesting to withdraw from the Society, because he could not afford the expense of forwarding the Quarterty Journal to his station.

From the brother of the late Mr. Twining to J. Hutchinson, Esq., expressing the gratitude of himself and family for the marks of respect shewn to the memory of their deceased relative by the Medical Society. The writer requested also that they would furnish his friends in Canada with some memorial of Mr. W. Twining, a collection of his writings, his picture, or some similar token.

It was resolved by the meeting, that a set of the Society's Transactions, a copy of the inscription and drawing the monument erected over the late Secretary's grave, and one of the husts taken after his death, should be forwarded to his brother at Halifax,

The following communications were presented:

Sketch of an epidemic congestive fever that became contagious in a gang of convicts in Macnab, Esq. M. D.

Accounts of the cholera which lately prevailed in the Camp of the 2d thoop 3d Brigade Horse Artillery, during its march from Mhow, by G. Brown, Esq., Surgeon of the troop.

1st. The discussion of the Library question was then resumed, and it war resolved, upon the motion of Dr. C. Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, that it would be better not to form any determination upon the subject until the continuance or abolition of the Quartely Jour-nal shall be decided by the votes of the Mofussil mem-

It was resolved also, that it was not necessary to cousult the Molussil members with respect to the transfer of measure.

The Secretary then stated to the meeting, that in compliance with the resolution passed in January, he had applied to Mr. G. Hill to know upon what terms he would perform the duties of Treasurer to the Society. That gentleman replied that the ordinary terms were ten per cent, upon the collections, but he should prefer a small salary from 25 rupees per month. He steated that he did not wish to make any profit by the office. It was more with a view to increase his connexions that be wished to accept it, and the sum above stated would only suffice to cover his necessary expenses.

The Members present considered that this would be to serve a drain upon the funds for such an object. The Secretary then stated his willingness to resume charge of the duties, which it was proposed to transfer to Mr. Ilm, rather than put the Society to any unnecessary expense, although the Office of Treasurer was by no means the most agreeable part of his avocation, and he would gladly have freed himself of the task if circumstauces had permitted him to do so.

It was proposed by Mr. Egerion seconded by Mr. Corbyn, that Dr. Goodeve's offer be accepted with the thanks.

It was then proposed by Mr. Hutchinson, seconded by Mr. Allan Webb.

That, with a view to restore the Society to its pristine state of prosperity, those members who have ceceded from it up to this period, be invited to rejoin, without being called upon to submit to the formality of a ballot. This was carried unanimously.

Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy's account of the cases, wherein the artery was successfully tied by him, was then read and discussed.

GRAND BALL TO SIR CHARLES METCALFE.

The Metcalfe festivals are at length over, the public and their distinguished fêted one will now have a little rest, and "gentle dulness" will now re-assume her reign in the place of popular excitement. Well, all earthly things, as some grave philosopher has observed, "have their drawback," and Fame has certainly a share, ay more than its share, of disagreeable appendages. To be the lion of season is one of those enviable distinctions exceedingly beauthal in prospect but very harrassing in reality. We think that we shall like it, but find we don't, and fame instead of being a blessing is discovered to be a dead bore. And now could we discourse most excellent wisdoms upon this same subject of popularity, but as it is our business to write about a "ball and supper," we shall bring our morality to a close, leaving the philosophical reader to carry on, in his own mind, the train of speculations here suggested whilst we devote ourselves entirely to L'Allegro.

Three public dinners and a huge omnium gatherum ball we should conceive to be full as much as any mortal being, with ordinary faculties of enjoyment, could go through with satisfaction, to himself in the brief space of one week. We doubt not but that Sir Charles thinks the same, and he must now be cordially rejoired that these things have become matters of retrospect, and that they are now no more of those irk-some affairs hanging over his worthy head. The "grand bill" of Mon layway, as Sir Charles wild at supper, the closing scene of his Indian career. It is very difficult to say whether it were, or were not, the thing that is usually called "a good party." They who esteem quantity above quality must; have been fully satisfied by the aspect of the room about 11 o'clock. We have seldom or never seen the Town-hall more densely crowded at a party of this description, nor do we ever wish to see it so again. It was intended to be a fancy ball but there were very few facey dresses and most of the distingué-4 present were in their ordinary costomes

Sir Charles Metcalfe arrived about 10 o'clock, and was received by a phalanx of stewards who excerted their honourable guest into the ball noom and then opened their ranks for the burra sahis to pass up to his sent at the extremity of the toom. Every third gentleman seemed to be a steward, for wherever we turned our eves we saw a ribband and a round non-descript appendage, with certain letters worked upon it which might have been C.T.M. Dancing commenced immediately after the entrance of Sir Charles Metcalfe, and was kept up "with great spirit," (we believe that is the phrase) till a tinnultuous rush to the supper-eroom about 12 o'clock put a stop to the Terpsichorean proceedings.

We shall take advantage of this break in our narrative to say a few words concerning the two or three fancy dresses which appeared to us with yof notice. There was a clown, who jumped about considerably; a Paul Pry who played on the castanets, and a Neapolinan Minstrel looking gentleman, who played some airs on a gutar. The Fantastic certainly prevailed over the elegist in costume on Tuesday night. Mr. Wynyard was a mirably dressed as Pam, or "his Nob"—in other words he knave of clubs, and looked precisely like the incarnation of that redoubtable card in some Brobdignagian pack. Dr. Evans, as Mother Goose, trotted about on high heeled shoes arm in arm with Moll Fraggon, who found an excellent representative in Doctor Watson. Mr. Aubert was well dressed as Massaroui, or some other conspicuous Brigand. Mr. Henry Palmer in an excellent costume as that arch scoundered Sir Giles Overreach, and Mr. Pigou as that famous gentleman in the Fortunes of Nigel, the monosyllabic Master Jem Vin,

The Metcalfe festivals are at length over, the public and their distinguished fêted one will now have a little st, and "gentle dulness" will now re-assume her reign the place of popular excitement. Well, all earthly ings, as some grave philosopher has observed, "have eir drawback," and Fame has certainly a share, as one teason or other, to be the prevaining notion that it was more distingué to go in ordinary attire, and consequently amongst the multitude assembled there was nore than its share, of disagreeable appendages. To be

The supper was plentifully sufficient to feed a moderate sized aimy after a long march. But we did not see any-body in our neighbourhood attempt to diminish the quantity on the board. A sit-down supper is at best au intolerable nursince, and we had hoped that the system was almost abolished in the City of Palaces. However as it gave the ladies an opportunity of hearing Sir Charles speak in public, perhaps we may find an excuse for it upon this late occasion. Sir Charles sate at a table in the centre of the supper room, somewhat elevated above the others; a small table, which was occupied by some half dozen of the most distinguished denizons of our Indian Community-Miss Ross, Mre. Shakespeare, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. McGiegor, Sir Edward Ryan, Mr. Cameron, and Capt. Prescott. When the assembled numbers had partaken of a little ice, a little jelley, and a glass of champaign, they began to turn their eyes towards the hurra table in expectation of the coming oratorical display. Sir Edward Ryan soon 1050, and, in a fine clear voice, made a speech well adapted to the occasion. People thumped the table and made a noise-generally at the wrong time-and Sir Charles's Health was drank with vociferous acclamations from every side. The honorable Baronet then rose and, labouring under considerable emotion, returned thanks sotto core for the honour conferred upon him, spoke very teelingly upon the subject of parting from so many kind friends, and in conclusion proposed-"The ladies," toast, which uniformly carries with it a considerable degree of self-negation, for it invariably makes all their heads ache, owing to the noise which it always elicits. Shortly after this Captain Taylor drew the attention of the company to a cucumstance in the life of Su Charles which reflects upon him no little honour. Among the many characteristics of their distinguished guest, (said Captain Laylor) to which public attention had been direcied at the recent entertainments in honour of his departure, there was one which had hitherto escaped nouce, a characteristic, which men respect, but which the ludies love, he meant Sir Charles Metcalfe's gallantry. (Applause.) The public would have seen in the papers of the day that Sir Charles had served at the storm of Deeg, but Capt, T. had heard since he entered the room, an anecdote connected with that event, which he thought ought to be publicly stated. In the first Mahratta war in 1804, Lord Lake having been induced to believe that some Livil servants in camp did not sufficiently appreciate the dangers, or had spoken slightingly of the difficulties with which he had to contend, observed one day at dinner that it was all very well for civihans to treat such matters lightly, as they had a precious easy time of it! Sir C. Metcalfe was present at that period, a very young man, and to show Lord Lake that the civil service are not those gentlemen of India who live at home at case, but were made of somewhat sterner stuff than his Lordship seemed to think, he volunteered for the storm of Deeg, and to the admiration of the whole army, entered that fortress aword in hand, among the foremost of the storming party. (Cheers.) Captain T. added, that it was a remarkable fact, and one on which he dwel' with peculiar satisfaction, that the two most distinguished statesmen the Indian civil service had produced, Mr. Elphinstone and Sir Charles Metcalie, had always been soldiers where ever they could be so. (Cheers.) The former, the statesman of Poonah, was a soldier at Assaye,—the latter, the statesman of Delhi, was a soldier at Deeg. (Loud cheers.)
Having mentioned Mr. Elphinstone's name, he might well pursue the parallel between these distinguishad men, for in very many points the resemblance was striking, but that the attempt would lead him to too great-length; on no one point however did they more especially resemble each other than in princely liberality and remarkable amenity of disposition and manner to all classes. It was," said. Captain Taylor, "my good fortune to be present at the entertainment given to Mr. Elphinstone at Bombay, when that gentleman was then to quit India for ever, as Sir Charles Metcalfe is departing now, amidst the regrets, the tears, and blessings of assembled crowds. In respect to Mr.
Elphinstone, it was then well remarked that he had given a useful lesson to all gentlemen who might hereafter use to high stations in public life in India, by showing that universal kindness so far from being incompatible with digained office, is sure to command universal good-will, and that in his own case it would yield him the rare feticity of relinquishing power without the loss of a single friend. (Cheers.) Unless I am greatly mistaken," said Capt. T., "that rate felicity' is not less the portion of our

Sir Charles then rose, but would not "own the soft impeachment," and said that Captain Taylor had been partly misinformed upon the subject, although something of the kind certainly had taken place; however, it did not much signify as Captain Taylor spoke exceedingly well, and the company very vigorously applauded. Shortly after this the supper room was vacated, and we, who decidedly agree with Leigh Hunt, that all writers

REPORT OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE IN AID OF THE SUFFERERS BY THE GREAT FIRES IN CALCUTTA IN 1837.

15th, and 16th May last, subscribers were made aware of the mode of operation determined upon. The Com mittee, divided into several sub-committees, have patiently endeavoured to act up to those resolutions, and to observe the course of proceeding therein laid down: but they have been obliged to proceed with extreme caution and reserve, having from the first met with considerable difficulty from the desire shewn by many of the people burnt out to take advantage of the benevolence of the subscribers, from their apathy even in their own behalf, and from local considerations affecting individual cases. It has been found that many who solicited aid at first proceeded shortly to build buts for themselves, shewing that they were not in real distress. In several parts, especially in the districts of the town, under the first and second sub-committee's, there appears to have been little or no necessity to aid the personal efforts of the inhabitants themselves. The committee at an early date made an arrangement for furnishing tiles in any required quantity to the poor sufferers, a measure by which good materials were placed at their disposal at an uniform and reasonable rate; grants of tiles have been accordingly made to individuals on certificates from the sub-committee, instead of pecuniary assistance, and with beneficial effects.

Finding that the setting in of the rainy season rendered it impossible satisfactorily to carry on their operations, the General Committee resolved the execution of the main object of their association, the erection of tiled huts in place of those burnt down, until a more favorable state of the weather should enable them to resume it.

During the rains the plan pursued was to bestow issistance on such persons as were actually without skelter, to enable them to cover in their huts with any description of available materials, restricting such assistance to those who were in real distress, and only granting the smallest sums uccessary for the object. When the season permitted, the operation of tiling and of substituting tiles for the temporary thatching was resumed.

The committee avail themselves of this opportunity to explain their reasons for not making doans of large amount to individual sufferers: in the first place no applicant for a loan has yet offered any sort of security for the regayment as the money, or for its being made good in case of their decease—besides which, the terms of repayment offered by such individuals, are small instalments

By the publication of the Resolutions of the 9th, 12th, and 16th May last, subscribers were made aware the mode of operation determined upon. The Comittee, divided into several sub-committees, have patientendeavoured to act up to those resolutions, and to serve the course of proceeding therein laid down: to they have been obliged to proceed with extreme for those whose situations in life secure them comfortable ution and reserve, having from the first met with context of the publication of the serve are an arrangement obviously incontented, or three years; an arrangement obviously incontented, they have been it is remembered that the committee, especially when it is remembered that the committee, or three years; an arrangement obviously incontented, they have been obtained and difficult to be entered into on the part of the two, or three years; an arrangement obviously incontented they have been obtained and incontented and difficult to be entered into on the part of the two, or three years; an arrangement obviously incontented they have been obtained and incontented and difficult to be entered into on the part

But the principal consideration with the committee is, that although previous to the rainy season their outlay was not very considerable, owing to the causes above assigned, yet as the rains approached and set in, the people without shelter became more desirons of entring into the views of the General Committee, and latterly the applications for assistance became so numerous, that, after the personal observation which most of the members have had of the extent of distress among the poorest people still remaining to be attended to,—the general committee are persuaded they will require the whole of the means at their command for distribution among that class of the sufferers alone.

Early in January 1838, a sub-committee was appointed for the purpose of enquiring whether it might not be possible advantageously to lay out the remaining fond, in the erection of times of tiled huts, across spaces generally occupied by thatched huts, or in tiling small clusters of thatched huts, still found in spaces chiefly occupied by tiled huts. The sub-committee was composed of the following persons: D. Mc Farlan, Esq., Capt. R. J. II. Birch, Capt. F. W. Birch, Dr. Vos, Capt. Vint, Baboo Russomoy Dutt, Rustomjee Cowasjee, Esq., Mr. Balston, Mr. Lindstedt, and Baboo Ramdhone Glose; and they reported that after having inspected a considerable space occupied by native dwellings in the neighbourhood of Fenwick's Bazar, the Free School, Collingals, and Dhurrumtollah, they were unanimously of opinion.

That the funds at our disposal would not enable the committee to adopt the course proposed in the first alternative in more than one or two considerable spaces occupied by thatched huts, and that the appropriation of the money to such lines would be to give pecuniary advantage to individuals not standing in need of it and generally to appropriate to special localities selected (referring to the time and labour we have to bestow on the subject) mainly by chance what was in-

TRADE OF THE UPPER INDUS.

BY CAPTAIN A. BURNES.

Definition of Derajut.

1st. The country on the right bank of the Indus, below the salt range, till that river is joined by the waters, so designated from the two principal towns in the tract, Dera Ghazee Khan, and Dera Ismal Khan. Derajat being the Arabic plural of the word Deta. The lower part of the tract, bears the local name of Sinde, and the upper that of Damun (or border) from its boidering on the mountains of Sooleeman. The country itself is flat and in many places feitile, particularly in the vicinity of the two Deras, but to the westward of the river, even at a distance of a few miles, there are no wells, and the soil is entirely dependant on rain, and water from the hills, without which, there is no crop. On the opposite bund of the river in Leia, the Indus overflows to the east, and the land which is exceedingly rich, yields heavy crops, and is known by the name of "Cuchee." From Leia the great lerry of Daheeree conducts the merchant beyond the Indus into Deerajat, and as the mountains are crossed by caravan route that lead to Cabool and Candahar. and as it is here that the greatest of the Indian Caravans assemble before passing to the west, the Derajat is invested with a high degree of commercial importance.

Caravan of the Lohances, Camels, &c., -- lis Route.

2d. From Calcuta, by Lucknow, Delhi, Hansee and Bhawulpore: from Bombay, by Paties, Becauser, Bhawulpore, Multan : from Umruts: by Jung and Leis, and from Dhera Grazee Khan itself on the south, by Bhawulpore; all these routes join at the small town of Drabund, about 30 miles west of Dera Ismael Khan. At this point, commences the well known road by the Geomul over to the pass of Geolairee, which is always traversed by the Lohance Afghans, some of them enter the mountains higher up west of Tak, and also by an inferior pass named " Cheeree," lower down ; but all eventually join, about 45 miles from Dratound. These people are pasteral and, migratory, and many of them proceed annually into India to purchase merchandizo, and all assemble here in the end of April, their families having wintered on the banks of the Indus, to pass into Khorasan for the summer. They effect this in fixed Khorasan for the summer. They effect this in fixed order by three divisions or "Kirces," which, I believe, simply mean migrations, and these bear the names of Nasseer Kharoutee, and Meeankhly, which is that of nature of the traffic will be best explained by observing that the custom-house books snew, that 5,140 camels laden with merchandize passed up this year, exclusive of those carrying the tents and baggage of the people, these are rated at the enormous number of 24,000 of the Punjah, is known by the name of Derajat. It is camels, the Nasseers having 17,000, the Mecaukhly 4,000, and the Kharoutce 3,000. The tract which they pass, leads by broken rugged roads, or rather watercourses of the Goodal, through the wild and mountainous country of the Wuzeeres, but the Lohanees that of strangers. They all reach Cabool and Can-dahar by the middle of June, in sufficient time to dispatch their investments to Bokhara and Herat, and in the end of October as winter approaches, they descend with the same arrangements into the plain of the Indus, bringing horses, dyes, truits, and productions of Cabool, in return for the goods of India and Britain. The channel of trade is ancient, for in the year A. D. 1505. we find the Emperor Baber campaigning in the Derajat, and starm; that he had fallen in with Lohance merchants, and plundered there of "a great quantity of white cloth, arona the drugs, sugar (both cardied and in powle) and horses," which me the very articles of trade in these days, though 332 years have since erapsed. It is due to the Corperor to state that if he then plumbered, in his own aille alties, he afterwards cloathed the Lohance merchants in diesses of honor, when firmly estantished on the throne of Cabool.

Other Caravan routes from India.

3d. Having given the routes of the Lohance caravan, I ought now to note the whole of the other roads leading from India to Cabool, but it would be impossible to de justice to the subject by any verbal description. Phone are three great toads leading from India, the first by Libore and Attock, the next from the Darrjat (already described) and the last by the Bolan pass, from Shikarpoor to Candahar, intermediate to these lines lie various toutes, some of which have been used even by large bodies of armed men, and, though, therefore, very important, need not detain us here, as they are not at present and by the morchants. I may only observe of that leading from Dera Ghazee Khan across the Sukhee Surwar, pass, by Boree, to Candahar, that it has been used in molern times by the kings of Cabool to supply the iuxory of mangoes, and that I met persons who had seen the fruit acrive by it at Candahar from the Indus, in 8 or 9 days. The climate of Goree is described in very the branches of the tribes conducting them. The first favorable terms, both by Mr. Elphinstone, and all the is the most numerous, and with it, go from 50 to 60,000 head of ensep, but it is with the last, that Hudon merpassed up to Ghuzai with his force after the campning of Chants and foreigners generally travel. The extensive 1505, already alluded to. His house suffered from the want of grain, but as a caravan route, this seems not about one lac of rupees in value. The dye is inferior inferior to the Golairee pass, and only to have been to that procured in Bhawul Khan's country, but it is deserted of late years; and at the present hour is used cheaper and has a ready sale in Cabool and Bikhara, by couriers Cossids to bring speedy information to and besides being nearer at hand. The cotton of Dirac from India. From Dera Ismiel Khan, north to Pesha- Ghazee Khan is superior, being soft in staple, 25,000 wur, there is no direct traffic. The roads are bad, the people are predatory. From Dera Ghazee Khan, south is cultivated, but in small quantities, and only of late by Dajel and Her and, there are roads leading over low hills to Bag Dadur, and the Bolan pass, which have when writing on that mart, are always spoken of by the people, as two gates of Khorassan.

Dera Ghazee Khan described.

4th. In a neighbourhood so advantageously situated. the merchant exports the native productions of the soil with profit, and the manufacturer converts them, and the imports from other countries into cloth which accompames these and the foreign goods that pass through it in tranat. Dera Ghazee Khan itself is a manufacturing town, but it is surpassed by Multan and Bhawulpoor, which ite in its neighbourhood; on these two marts I shall be silent, as their commerce has engaged the attention of Lieutenant Leech, whose reports will convey every and the turbest information of Dera Ghazee Khau. I need only speak at one time, its trade with the west and even with east, was brisk, and though it does not now exhibit its former prosperity, from the great influx of British goods, its native manufactures are yet healthy and thriving. It is celebrated for its goolbuddons and durners, or striped and plain silken cloths, which being sought for, and admired, are yet annually exported to: Lahore and to Sinde, and considered to surpass those of person who is now Governor of Multan, and it is imevery other country. To the east it sends its silks, deriving the raw material from Bokhara, and the west. To the Golden Khan is exceedingly numerous; they are nearly west it sends its cotton, and the greatest of its exported in the property of the country. manufactures, is course white cloth, which is sent to khoras. san, and yet stands its ground with English cloth, as fir being in a 125 Hindoo temples and 110 mosques, great and goes, though far its inferior in quality. The value of all, these may amount to about one and a half, or two lacs of rupces, and the greater part is exported. A coarse kind of cutlery, swords, scissors, knives (such as are used by sailors) is made at Dera Ghazee Khan and countries bround it, by good roads except those to the exported. The bazar consists of about 1,600 shops; west, where it is necessary to qualify that term: a list of 530 of which are engaged in weaving and selling cloth, the marts or places of note may not be useless, and I may I annex a list of them. 5th. The country around Dera Chazee Khan is very rich; the town is plesantly situated in a lat country about four miles from the Indus and surrounded by garden and lofty trees, among which the date predominates. It is said indeed that there are 80,000 date trees around Dera. Dera Ismael Khan, is in these parts next in importance to Dera Chazee, but is is only a third of its Indus, and on a new site about three miles from the river, the place was held by a Mahomedan Chief, who last out the new town with order and regularity, having wide streets and a good bezar, but the Sheiks po-ses-ed themselves of Dera Ismael, a year ago, and are not likely to work out his plans of improvement, as yet the houses are built of sunburned brick, and the town has an deserted look, but it is said to be a place of much stir and bustle in the winter, when the Athgans return from Khorassan to its neighbourhood. There is a large caravansarai in it, where they transact their business and dispose of much of their goods, for Dera Ismael is their bazar town. It contains 518 shops, but there are no native manufactures here, as in the Lower Dera. The wool of the Lohanee sheep is not sold here, but in Cabool, where an agent, it dispatched, might procure the article in abundance, and, at the same time, the means of transporting it. The transit of coarse white cloth from the Punjah through Dera Ismael to Drabund is great, amounting to no less than 3,000 camel loads a year Each package contains about 600 yards of cloth, the guz and English yard being the same, so that we have an export of 1,80),000 yards of this abric. It is manufactured at Meengana, Jung, &c. also at Rohan, and might be made in Britain. Most of these goods are crossed at the ferry opposite Dera Ismael, and pay much heavier duties than lower down; 21 rupees being ex acted on every maund of weight, while 7 to 10 annas is the demand at Kaheeree, which readily accounts for the caravans crossing at that ferry. The revenue of Dera Ismael Khan amounts to 41 lacs of rupees per aunum, of this 2 lace and 8,000 are derived from the taxes and town duties from Kaheeree south, to Eesa Khyl north, and the rest from the lands subject to Dera Ismael Khan. Grain and the necessaries of life are more expensive than in the Lower Dera, the supplies are also received by the river from Murwut which is a grain country.

The pilgrim boats likewise take in a little cargo, for which I find there is a regulated charge, but as this is unknown to Government, it may be considered a kind of smuggling. So organized however is it, that a weight of 8 maunds may be sent down to the following rates-Dira Ghazee Khan to Mitthen 2 rupees, to Shikapoor or Roree 5 rupees, to Schun 7 rupees, to Hyderabad 9 rupees, and to Gora Baree 12 rupees, all this is indicative that there is a channel of trade by the Indus. The only instance however of upword communication, of a late date, is in a Shikarpooree merdealer. The duties in conveying goods to Khorassan and bringing salt in return. The road distance, is about 250 miles, perhaps a quarter more by the river, and as the swell is near its height, the result in a commercial point of view, is encouraging. In navigating the Indus above Mitthen it will not be omitted in the size, and labours under disalvantages from its position, calculations of the merchant, that both men, and boats About 12 years ago, the town was washel into the may be hired for one half the sum paid in Sinde. Dera Ghazes Khan, June 13, 1837. Gort Gazette, Feb. 12.]

A PETITION TO GOVERNMENT.

We have been informed, that a petition, very nu- | Bengallee as well as in Persian, the only difference being merously signed, the signatures being native, has been that he will be about three times as long in taking down recently, within the last day or two sent in to Government. The prayer of which is that measures be taken to do it in Persian, with the additional advantage of ment. The prayer of which is that measures be taken for the institution of schools to be devoted exclusively to the study of Sanscrit, as a foundation for the formation of one general language, consolidating or supermation of one general language, consonuating of superceding the various dialects of Bengallee which now obtain. This petition, which has been handed over by pulation alarmed and displeased at it; and the labours Government to the Education Committee, is worthy, of the officials about trebled by it, and rendered less we understand, of serious attention, from the great numefficient withal. Under the present system, by which of its signatures, amounting, we are told, (for we have the exertions of the Civilian are taxed, beyond the not seen it) to thousands, and must be taken therefore to be the expression of opinion prevalent with respect to the great evil now to be deplored, i. e. the want in Bengal of one fixed and generally understood language, having one known character and common to all classes of the inhabitants of this vast and fertile district. The answer of the Government to this petition will be of The much interest. Here is a clear admission that in the opinion of many, there is an absolute and crying demand for a national language; we presume, however, that the objects of the petitioners will not be carried into effect; and for many reasons. The new language founded on the Sansort, or rather regulated by it, and consisting as we presume it would of a consolidation of the Bengallee dialects, improved by a larger infusion of Sanscrit than is now traceable in the Bengallee, would be to the many an unknown tongue, and would be open to all the objections now taised against the Persian on this score and to more besides. The Persian is not an unknown tongue; it is on the contrary as familiar as Hindoostance, to a very large portion of the educated Hindoos, and to all or almost all the Mahommedan subjects of Empire. To all that portion, in short, of the innabitants of the country likely from their position, rank and property to constitute the principal suitors in the Cousts of Justice, or likely to be called on to fill situa-tions as officials in these Courts. The only class not likely to know Persian are the lower classes of traders, and the ryots, by far the most numerous, of course, but inasmuch as the new language proposed by the petitioners would be a sealed book to them, to the same extent that Persian now is, we do not see what they would gain by the change, And to the Mahommedan inhabitants, the substitution of the new language for Persian would be a positive evil, as great as the present measure of Government, the substitution of the vernacular in Bengal for Persian. To the poorer class of the population of Bengal, we fear that the present state of education considered, the language of the Coarts of Justice must for a long time to come, remain an unknown tongue, be it Persian, or be it an improved modification of the Bengallee on the Sanscrit model. We are told, moreover, that the people themselves if polled, would be found perfectly indifferent to the change. And that to the majority, the Roobicarry, &c. of a Court of Justice, is about as intelligible in Persian as it would be in Bengallee. The knowledge of the written language in the majority of the poor classes being confined to the limited, familiar and colloquial phraseology, appertaining to the dealings and transactions of their particular calling—and comprehending necessarily but a small section of the words, expressions, and idiom constituting the language itself. That the result therefore of their evidence should be taken down in Persian in a Court of Justice, or written out in Bengallee or Oordoo must be, we suppose, a matter of indifference to them; they must under any circumstances confide in the fidelity of the

there being fewer persons capable of understanding what he may have written. In either case the poor er classes, as it appears to us, gain nothing by the change. The proceedings are lengthened by it; the Mahoumedan popower of performance in very many offices, all that he could do is to exercise an active supervision over his subordinates - for the most part of course natives -as it is, it would appear, that with all the brevity and simplicity of the Persian it is generally admitted, that he can-not check the propensities of his Umlah, &c. to deceive him, and the sunors. How, we will ask, will this supervision in the superior be carried on, when he shall come to have the proceedings of his Court, written in Bengallee or Oordoo? by which his labours of in-spection will be increased nearly threefold; and his attention will be called to instruments, and the minutes of the transactions of the day, written in a character infinitely more complicated than the Persian, and in which in nincteen cases out of twenty, we will venture to say, and we speak on the information of persons well knowing the fact, the Civilian himself, is less well read than in Persian. The correspondent of the Hurharu, X. Y. Z. to whose letter the latter of these observations in some sort apply, has one singular enough argument, upon which he grounds his advocacy of the abolition of the Persian, i. e. that any deficiency, or omissions or mistakes in a Persian document may be concealed from the facility of changing one letter or phrase into another. Now if the credit of the functionary is to depend upon the falsifying of documents, at his pleasure or necessity, to answer the exigencies of a particular case, and that this system of substitution and forgery is the general rule of conduct of officials; it appears to us a matter of indifference in what language the proceedings of the Courts are carried on; because roguety of this sort can be practised in any written character, whether written in a soit of short-hand like the Persian, or in good honest vernacular, such as English or Bengallee. And as the Bengallee character is less generally known than the Persian, we presume detection would be more difficult. This argument, however, if such it must be called, is surely an argument from a particular circumstance, to a general conclusion. Persian documents may have been falsified in some few instances; but the general rule we must presume is that they are not falsified; and to make any thing of this argument it ought to be shewn, that public functionaries generally, are in the habit of concealing gross negligence, by the alteration of the proceedings of their Courts, after they have been registered and signed; and that the practice will be put a stop to only by the substitution of the vernacular for Persian, which vernacular cannot by the same falsifying process be made to exhibit the same result, i.e. the falsification of a document. This is, if we understand the correspondent of the Hurkaru, the amount of his argument in favour of the vernaculars; and we need not say, that to us it appears in the light of nonsence. We do not at all question, that under the the present system, the ends of justice have trequently been frustrated by designing officials; but that the usscribe, without having any control over his version of the Persian is to be held the cause, we cannot adtheir deposition; and if the scribe be disposed to falsify evidence, he can write one thing for another in tem, and not of the language. The mode of taking offact the deposition presented to the Judge, may or may not be the man's evidence. But this evil cannot be the native scube; which is not much affected, we pie- ary 23.

evidence athinded to by K. Y. Z., and liable, as he states, prime, by the chiracter in which he writer, he it Benard we believe states truly, to so much abuse, is in gallee, Persian or English. In conclusion, we will ask itself victous—a mere faire, by which it is pretended any body whom it may concern, how many Civilians that the witness is examined coram judice, when in point or natives fit for emplyment, or canable of carrying on the current business of the country, can write a Roobicarry in the Bengal vernaculars? For that is the cured by the substitution of one language for another, question which most presses at present, and is more A vice increexamination by the magistrate would obviate germane to the measure of substitution then the query of this evil, but this the press of business does not admit the Hurkaru about Bengallee and the understanding of of. The only check then is in the improved morality of the "great bulk of the ropulation." - tourier, Februa-

SUPREME COURT.

(Pefore Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

CONVERTE V. POOROOSONTPUN DO-S AND ANDIHUR.

In this case the bill stated that in 1818, three partners, Toolseram, Mohumoli and Secteram, possessed establishments as bankers and traders at Patna, Calcutta, Muzapore and Cossimbazar. The first mentioned pariner was entitled to a six-anna share, and the other two, who were brothers, to the remaining ten anna share. After the death in 1818 of Wohunfull (who left only a widow surviving a short time) the business was conducted by the two other partners. Secteram died in 1820, leaving three sons, one of whom died without leaving any widow or issue, and the other two, Pooroesoothun Doss and Narain Doss are the defendants in this suit. The survivor of the three original partners, died in 1821, leaving an only son, Conviol, the present complainent, who attrined his full age about 1830. The bill alleged fraud during the minormy of Convioli, mesappropriation by the defendants of a sum amounting to four lars, and a tal-affication of the partineish p accounts, whereby a balance was fasely stated against the complainant. The prayer of the bill was that an account might he decreed, and the title of complainant declared to the original six-anna share of the partnership property.

A plea was filed by the defendant, setting forth an instrument bearing date January 1834, whereby the parties had agreed to a reference to three arbitrators. The plea further alleged that a prior parol agreement between the parties, directing the payment of certain sums of money and settling the respective rights of the parties, was produced before the arburators, who made then verbal award, in February 1836, by which the above agreement was adopted and carried into effect as their solemn award.

This plea having been set down for argument, the case now turned entirely upon its validity.

Mr. Clurke and Mr. Leith for the defendants .-It is difficult to conjecture what precise ground of objection is intended to be raised against the plea. This is, in effect, a that in ber of a verbal award, made by arbitrators duly appointed; and Cox v. Macclesfield, in Dyer's reports, establishes the validity of a verbal award. Then the plea covers the whole bill, because the prayer of the bill is confined to the property which is the subject matter of the award. As to the prayer for a discovery, the right to a discovery is dependant on the title to relief and this plea expressly negatives such title.

The Advecate General for the complainant-The objection to this plea is matter both of form and substance.

or answer. It is quite immaterial whether the instruments set forth be called an award or a ralease; probably the latter term is more correct; but whatever it be, if fraudulent, it cannot be supported. Now fraud positively alleged in the bill, and not being positively contradicted by the plea, must be taken to be admitted. There ought to have been an answer positively neg to tiving fraud. The case of Wright v. Proud, 13 Vesey, lays down the general principle that a transaction will be set aude between parties standing in a certain relation to each other, as guardian and ward, or trustee and costumpe trust, whenever the transaction has arisen out of the influence of that relation. Such has been the case here, and such the relative position of the parties during the infancy of the complainant. But the care chiefly relied upon is Roache v. Morgon, 2 Schooles and Lefroy, where it was held that where fraud is abeged a release pleaded does not prevent the Court from deciceing a new account, noless the defendant by his answer fully meets the charge of fraud, and it is declared to be immaterial that the bill itself does not strue the release. This brings the case preiceely within the analogy of the present.

Mr. Cochrane on the same side .- It is a general princible, which requires no authority, that the result of parties cannot be barred either by a reference to arbitintion or by release, until a full and true account has been rendered. Now it is admitted here that no account has been rendered at all. But further, a distinct and specific charge of fraud is made out. The books reinring to the partnership accounts are alleged to have been tampered with and falsified and to contain fraudulent and forged entries, by means of which a balance is falsely made out against the complamant. Now these are the very books which were produced before the arburators, and upon which their award was founded. That award, therefore, must be void. The case of Helps v. Sproule, I Mylne and Keen, decides that a pleaof a settled account is no bar, unless figual is negatived, and according to Walker v. Simons, 3 Swanston, protection is to be extended after the party has attained majority until proper information has been obtained.

Mr Clarke, in reply .- The case of an award stands upon its own peculiar grounds, and is not touched by any of the arguments advanced or the authorities cited. It is to a certain extent equivalent to a judicial decision. Pitterson v. Peut, 3 Ark., and it is final and binding upon all the parties unless impeached by fraud and col-lusian on the part of the arburators. Now there is no presence or allegation whatsoever of such misconduct in this case.

Sir E. Ryan - Would it not be a good ground for setting aside an award that it had been made upon the authority of false and fraudulent documents?

Sir J. Grant-It surely is law that an award is vi-Although the bill distinctly alleges fraud against the tiated by fraud not only when practised by, but also defendants, these allegations are not met either by plea when practised upon, the arbitrators!

Mr. Clarks—This is admitted. But in such a case it would be necessary to set forth all the particulars of the alleged fraud, and to connect them with the award The bill must be brought expressly to impeach the award and not altempt to get rid of it in this vague and indirect manner. How are the allegations of fraud, connected in any way with the award? It does not appear on the face of these pleadings, but that all the circumstances of the case were fully before the arbitrators; so that even if the books were falsified to any extent there might be other evidence produced before the arbitrators, quite sufficient to enable them to arrive at a just decision An award is of the same force as a judgment or decree, and a plea of judgment recovered would surely never be held bad upon a simple suggestion - a vague assertion that there had been prior fraud. It would be necessary to connect that prior fraud with the subsequent judgment, and show expressly how in influenced such judgment. That is not done here. From the circumstances, therefore, of the present case nothing more can be inferred than the existence of fraud at some prior period; nothing is shewn to affect the validity of the award. The Court, after a short consultation, postponed judgment .- Hurkaru, Feb. 2.

SATURDAY, FRB. 3 1838.

This was the last day of term, but the last cause on the board having been heard on Friday, the Court only took common motions and rose at an early hour. Judgment has not yet been delivered in the appeal case from the Insolvent Court, and some other cases argued during the present term.

MONDAY, FEB. 5, 1838.

Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant-Sittings after First Term of 1838.

John Lucis versus Grorge Kallonias and others.

In this cause a motion was made on notice on behalf of George Kallonias, one of the defendants, aguinst whom an ex-parts decree had been obtained, of the date of the 24th July 1837, for substitution of attornies without payment of costs, and also to set aside the esparts proceedings on payment of all costs by the defendant's solicitor. The motion occupied the court the whole day, and excited great interest.

Mr. Cochrane for Kallonias.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the solicitor, Mr. Shaw.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarks appeared to represent the interests of Lucas, the complainant in the original suit, but were not heard on this motion.

Mr. Cochrane, in support of the motion, put in affidevits of his client and the correspondence which passed between him and his solicitor, Mr. Shaw to prove gross and culpable negligence on the part of the latter. In the early part of the correspondence Mr. Kallonias appeared to be labouring under the impression that he was not within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that there was a conspiracy to draw him within it, but it was alleged that at a subsequent period positive instructions had been given to the solicitor to put in an answer and denied to have been ever received by the solicitor. Mr. Cochrane contended, that there was both direct and circumstantial proof of their receipt. Letters were read from the deputy post master general, and on affidavit of the Post Office peon, by which it appeared that two letters were received at the post office by the Dacca mail about the time in question, with the address named, and delivered accordingly. It was hoped that if these facts were made out to the satisfaction of the Court, the motion would be granted, and the defeudant allowed to come in-and that the Court would not suffer him to be ruined without any dereliction of his own. The lefendant was an ignorant man, unacquainted with the forms and technicalines of law, anxious to defend the suit, and furnished with a complete ground of defence. but burred therefrom entirely by an actiover which he had no control.

Mr. Prinsep for Mr. Shaw, put in counter-affidavits of his clent and of porsons employed in his office, positively and expressly contradicting all the charges and e-pecially denying the receipt of the two letters in question. It appeared, moreover, that several instances nat occurred, and were specifically alluded to, where mistakes in the delivery of letters at Mr. Shaw's onice had taken place. An offer farbitration had been made to Mr. Kallonias, but rejected. As to his alleged ignorance of legal matters, it was proved that he had been in an attoruey's office. Collateral affidavity were also put in, contradicting some of the matters swon to by Mr. Kallonias, and throwing discredit on his statements. Mr. Prinsep was proceeding to answer the case as regarded the charges of corruption and collusion, contained in the affidavit of Kallinias, and asked what possible motive could be assigned for the conduct attributed to his client. A wild notion that all the world is conspiring to injure a man, is frequently a forerunuer and index of incipient insauity!

The Court here intimated that as the only point in the case related to alleged neglect on the part of the solicitor, the charges of corruption must be abandoned.

Alr. Prinsep then went over the correspondence between the parties. The earlier instructions are so vague and contradictory that no one could safely act upon them. First, the party directs that the jurisduc-tion should be pleaded in bar; then that no answer -hould be put in at all ; afterwards, that his solicitor -hould wait until he received further instructions. Nothing definite is contained in any of the letters admitted to have been received. As to the two missing letters, it is not denied that they may have been written, but only that they have ever been received. An agent is not to be mulcted in heavy costs because his client's letter has miscarried. But further, no proof is given of the identity of the letters sworn to have arrived obout the time in question by the Dacca mail. Again the circumstance of an arbitration having been offered and rejected. is a strong pre-unption that the present application is not made in good fath. Surely the Court will not grant uch a motion as the present upon such slender and unsatisfactory grounds.

Mr. Leith, on the same side, was not called upon.

Mr. Cochrane, in reply, admitted that the only point to which the case was now reduced, had reference to the receipt or non-receipt of the two letters in question. The evidence is sufficient to establish their delivery and receipt. If they had not been received, smaly the solitor would have written to enquire the cause of the delay, especially when the consequences to his client were so momentons. The case is not one merely of oath against outh-the whole line of transaction, the whole internal evidence of the case, bear out the statement of Mr. Kallonian. It is not a very usual thing for a single letter to miscarry by the general posts and it is a very strange coincidence that these two important letters proceed regularly in the cause. All the letters which letter to miscarry by the general posts and it is a very passed on both sides were admitted, except two, alleged strange coincidence that these two important letters to have been written and sent by Mr. Kallonias, but should be successively lost. Again, it is a suspicious circumstance that the solicitor's dak-book has not been t produced, that it might have been examined in open court, to ascertain whether no entries had been made.

Sir E. Ryan .- A motion to change the attornies in a cause without payment of costs, being contrary to the usual course of proceeding, can only be granted upon proof of finud or gross-misconduct. The second part of the motion cannot stand on light grounds, but only on strong equitable circumstances; now the charges of collusion and corruption are abandoned, and the only question is whether a case of negligence has been made With reference to the whole admitted correspondence between the parties, no definite instructions whatever appear to have been given to Mr. Shaw, and he is not therefore guilty of any negligence in declining to act upon them. Then the whole question turns upon the two missing letters. Now here one affidavit is consistent with the other, for one party cannot deny that they were written nor the other they were never received. The proof derived from the circumstances of the cause is incomplete, and at all events can never amount to such a probability as to satisfy such a motion as the present. Univers a case is very clear, the Court will never summarily interfere, but leave the parties to their ordinary

Sir J. Grant, entirely concurred in opinion with the learned Chief Justice. Mr. Shaw has fully answered the charge of negligence, and no imputation rests on him whatever.

Motion refused with costs.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1838.

Assignees of Fergusson and Co. v. Dwarbanauth TAGORE AND OTHERS.

The judgment of the Court in this case was delivered this day by the chief justice.

The case was argued in the third term of last year. The action was brought upon a policy of insurance for -Re- 50,000 granted to the insolvent; there was an agreement to prolong or renew the policy if required. After the insolvency of Fergu-son and Co, the policy was renewed to the common assignee, who paid the premium when possession of one cottah and eight chittarks of land, it fell due. The defendants in their plea set off a pro- called the old Jorahbagaun thannah, in the town of missory note, drawn by Fergusson and Co. before their insolvency and indersed to the defendants. To this plea of set-oif there was a general demorrer.

The argument for the plaintiff's was, that the contract upon which the action is brought, is entirely a contract between the assignees and the defendants, whereas the set-off relates to a matter between the insolvents and the defendants, and that such a defence therefore amounts to setting off a debt due from one party against a claim made by another. To this the defendants answered that the assignmes are entirely as the representatives of the insolvents, and that the tenewal of the policy was but a continuance of the original contract and not an entirely new the debt could not be set off, and that there must be judgment for the plaintiff. They cited the cases of Cor v. Listard, I Douglas Rep. Evans v. Mann, Cowper's Rep. Wiff v. Prye, 2 Bingham's reports.

This was an action for work and labour done, and for money paid by the plaintiff in his capacity of attorney for the testator. Judgment had been obtained for want of a plea, and vevidence was now adduced to assess the amount of damages.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant for the plaintiff, were about prove jurisdiction under th New Rules, but the Court said, that this was necessary only when the case was heard exparte in order to obtain a judgment, and not after judgment by delault.

The attorney's bills were put in and proved to have been duly taxed, and copies delivered to the executors who promised to pay the amount.

Verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed sicca rupees 784.-Hurk. Fcb. 7.

WEDNESDAY, FrB. 7, 1838.

Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.

. Dyce versus Dyce.

Mr. Prinsep moved, that this cause should be set down pro forms on the Equity board, with the consent of parties, for the purpose of obtaining an order for the immediate the motion was made, was, that the principal witness, Sir Charles Metcalfe, is about to leave the country immediately.

Motion granted.

BRUCKET VETSUS BRUCKET AND BEEBEE PHICKEY VETSUS HURRANARAIN.

In these cases heard exparte vesterday, the Court intimated this morning that the parties could take nothing by their judgments against the parties in default, on account of the omission to give not ce under the New rules to those of the defendants against whom judgment by default had been obtained, that damages against them would be assessed at the time of trial.

DOE ON THE DEVISE OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY VETERS RAJCOOMAR, SEAT AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate General and Mr. Couchrane for the lessors of the plaintiff.

This was an action of ejectment brought to recover Calcutta. In 1836, an ejectment had been brought for the same premises by the defendants against the present plaintiffs, who then suffered judgment to go by default. and in 1837, the defendants recovered Rs. 1,988 in an action for mesne profits. The Company claimed the premises by virtue of long and uninterrupted possession. but the defendants sought to establish ownership by shewing that their title had been acknowledged by the payment of rent.

Several mannadara and chowkeydars were produced as witnesses, and proved that the thannah had stood where it was for the last half century. This evidence was corroborated by IV. C. Blacquire, Esq. who has been employed in the Police E-tablishment so ce 1789. On cross-examination, it appeared from this gentleman's evidence, that the assessments were paid by the owners of the soil.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Lieth) for the defendants, stated the grounds of their title. He would produce evidence to shew that the defendants were in possession of all the surrounding land, that they had consimually paid the assessments for the identical property in question, and that they had received rent from the Company, who now sought to disprove their title. The receipts for rent unfortunately could not be produced, as in the year 1831 the defendant's cutcherry was robbed, and their encestorial papers and documents lost. Since the death of the father of the present defendants, it was admitted that no rent had been paid, by reason of the defendants being then under age, and the consequent had management of the estate during their infancy. But family of Toraub consisted of three widows and three it was contended that the recovery of the rents and profits, in the action for mesne profits, was equivalent to receipt of rent.

Captain F. Birch, superintendent of police, was called as a witness, and proved the receipts for assessmentfrom the defendants for the land in dispute. The collector of rents and other witnesses were called to prove payment of rent on the part of the Company; but it did not appear distinctly from their evidence whether the rent was paid for the thannah in question, or only for a cookroom attached thereto.

Sir E Ryan.—There must be judgment for the lessors of the planuiff. The proof of the defendant's title has been attempted to be made out; first, by proving that they have paid the assessments to Government, and secondly that they have received rent from the Company, for these premises. Now, as to the first point, it proves nothing. The assessments are made payable by the owners or occupiers of land, by a public Act, 33 Geo III c. 52, and no proof can be drawn from the circumstance that a house has been wrongly assessed. As to the second point, no rent has been proved to have been paid for the thanna, within the last twenty four or twenty five years, to the least, so that during that period there has been a continuing adverse possession against the defendants. The statute of limitations had begun to mediate infancy.

Mr. Clarke then applied for leave to move the Court for a nonsuit, on the ground that the statute of limitations did not apply to Mahammedans and Hindoos at all.

Sir E. Ryan .-- You can move, but we will not reserve leave, as the Court is quite clear on the point.

Judgment for the lessors of the plaintiff.

The next case on the Board is Dead. Jaun Bebes v. Abdootlah Barber .- Hurkaru, February 8.

THURSDAY, FEB. 8, 1838.

DYCE TERSUS DYCE.

Mr. Prinsep applied to the Court for decretal orders, to consolidate the original and cross suits, and to direct made on consent of all partnes. The only two points, which required to be ascertained, were, 1st; whether a certain paper, purporting to be a receipt or acknowledgment was executed by the Begum Sumroo in her life. 2ndly; whether such document was delivered to the complainant in the original suit, as a receipt or acknow-

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant, were instructed to consent on behalf of the other parties interested.

Order granted accordingly.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAUN BEFREE AND OTHERS VETSUS ABDOOLLAH BARBER.

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings in this action of ejectment. There were five counts, laying a joint demise by all the four lessors of the plaintiff, and a several demise by each. ,The premises sought to be recovered, consisted of a house and grounds oppurtenant, and other land situated in Mangoe Lane and in Collingah.

The Advocate-General stated the case. tion turned chiefly on a Mahon medan pedigree. Kaloo Khausamah, the common ancestor, who died about forty years ago, left two sous and a daughter, of whom one sou died unmarried, the other, Forauli, left representatives (who were the plaintiffs in this action) and the daughter married and lette son (the present defendant.) The children, one of whom had since died : two of the widows with the two surviving children, were the lessors of the planniff in the present action. These representatives of lorand claimed two-thirds of the estate; because according to the rules of Mahommedan Law a brother is entitled to double the share of a sister (McNaghten's Mahomedan law of inheritance).

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defendant, did not dispute the pedigree of the plaintiffs. He should adduce evidence to shew, that Toraub, who was very young at the time of his father's death, had always lived extravagantly, and had never had done any thing to increase the ancestorial state, that his mother had paid off his debts on several occasions out of her dower estate. that in lieu of the mairiage settlement to which she was entitled, he had released his right to the property by a deed of gift. That the premies in Mangoe Lane were purchased under a hill of sale, in the name and with the money of the mother, and, finally, that she had duly executed a deed of trust, by which she conveyed the legal proprety shortly before her death to the present delendant.

Evidence to this affect was gone into great length, The deed of gift was held sufficiently proved by calling a subscribing witness, who being blind was unable to swear to his own signature, but proved, that such an instrument has been executed in his presence, and by adthe defendants. The statute of the ancestor of the defendants; strument has been exceeded, that the instrument in question had been uniformly acted upon. It appeared in the course of examination, that one of the lessors of the plaintiff was born before the mairiage of her mother had taken place.

> The Advocate General endeavoured to impeach the deed of gitt executed by shewing fraud.

> But the Court said that this would place him in a peculiar predicament. It was through Toraub that the plaintiff claimed, and even if it was competent for thom to shew fraud against him, it would tend at the utmost to establish a case available only in a Court of Equity.

> The Advocate General then considered the points which had arisen on Mohommedan law, and contended, first that by the law of the Mussulman community, one born out of wedlock, is legitimized by the subsequent marriage of the parents, and is not excluded from the inheritance. This point, however, was not material to the case, as it affected only one of the plaintiffs. The learned counsel then cited McNaghten's Law of Inheritance, to shew, that by the Mahomedan law, a co-heir cannot oust another of the whole of his share of the inheritance without the consent of the latter (which is not likely to be very readily obtained!) and that a testator cannot dispose of a larger proportion of the estate than one-third in legacies and bequest. Upon these grounds, he contended, that the plaintiffs were at all events entitled to a judgment quond part of the property in question.

> Sir E. Ryan .- There must be a verdict for the defendant; but we shall reserve leave to the Advocate General on the point of law to move the Court that judgment, protento, may be entered up for the plaintiffs. The fleed of gitt or release and the instrument of sale are valid and genuine, the deed of trust is admitted to be genuine, but its validity in law is contested. This, therefore, is the only point remaining for consideration. It may be observed, however, that the whole property is not conveyed away in this instance, for some interest is expressly reserved to the whole family, and the defendant, though possessed of the legal estate, is only a trustee in equity.

> Uerdict for the defendant, with leave to move that a verdict may be entered for the lessors of the plaintillages, bear

> Mr. Clarke applied to the Court at its rising , that the case of Walker v. Bruce might be fixed for to morrum as it stood next but one on the board and was likely to occupy the whole day. This case relates to an important question of insurance, and several mercantile gentlemen | will be for the defendants afterwards to take objections have been subprenaed to give evidence. The Court appointed it for Monday, asa case is especially appointed for to-morrow .- Hurk, Feb. 9.

SATURDAY, FIB. 10, 1838.

The Chief Justice come into Court this day at twelve o'clock to take common motions. In the case of Mirza Mahomed Mehudy Musey v. Hadjee Ally Teharaney, a verdict for the plaintiff was taken by a consent. His Lordship afterwards sat in the Insolvent Court.

The case of Wather v. Bruce is specially appointed for Monday. It is on action on the case brought by the consiguees against the insurers for granting a policy of insurance upon goods which were never shipped at all, whereby the plaintiff, were induced to make advances to the pretended consigners. The principle is novel .- Ilurk, Feb. 12.

(Before Sir Edward Ryun, and Sir J. P. Grant.)

DYCE Versus DICE SOMBRE.

Mr. Prinsep moved, that the defendant may be at liberty to examine the Hon. Sir Charles T. Metcalfe, Bart., in Court, on Tuesday next, de bene esse, and that the depositions may be used in the issue directed in this cause.

It was suggested and acquiesced in by the court that this was a motion on the equity side.

Motion granted.

J. A. WALKON AND OTHERS VETSUS W. BRUCE,

RUSTOMJEE COWASJEE, AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate General, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for the plaintiffs.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant for the defendants.

The Advocate General stated the case. The defendants carry on business as Insurers under the tule of the Union Insurance Company. They have boats and peons of their own, and state in their policies that the goods insured have been received on particular vessels under the charge of particular peous. In july 1834, one Dear Christian applied to the plaintiff to advance money on a consignment of saltpetre and other goods, and transmitted at the same time four policies granted by the defendant's agent at Dinapore upon the goods in question, in which the receipt of the goods was acknowledged, and they were stated to be embitked on tour specified vessels, and in charge of particular peons. Upon the faith of these policies the plaintiffs accepted four bills of exchange to the amount of Sa. Ra. 7,500 drawn by Christian, and paid the same when due; but it would be proved that no goods were ever put on board at all, and that the pretended consignor on receiving the money absconded. The plaintiffs therefore brought this special action on the case against the defendance, to indemnify them for the loss costained by reason of the implied guarantes in the policies that the goods in question had been smbarked. Upon these grounds it was contended that the defendants were lia-tile to make good, the loss.

The learned Advocate further contended, that flic plea of the general; issue only put in issue the point whether the goods were or were not embarked on hoard. the vessels, and not any of the facts stated in the into the sufficiency of the proof.

W. C. Blacquiere, Esq., produced the policies of insurance, and letters relating to the transactions, under a subpoena duces tecum. These documents had come into the possession of this gentleman as Justice of the Peace in Calcutta, before whom one of the partners in plaintiffs's house made a charge against Chirstian of obtaining money on false pretences to the amount of Rs- 7,500

W. H. Jone examined, Is agent for the Union Insurance Company at Dinapore. Was very intimate with Dear Christian in the way of business. peons are employed by the Insurance Office, and the number of the particular peon entrusted with the charge of the goods is always specified in the receipt. Witness signed the policies in question on behalf of the Company. The goods in question never were toden on board the vessels, but this he did not learn until the time of Christian's abscording. The reason why he did not immediately notify the intelligence to the consignees, was that he did not know who they were.

Cross-eramined. The hoats are not the property of the Insurance Company, but of the parties applying for policies. Christian was in good credit at the time, and had extensive dealings in the way of business. Witness suffered great personal loses through Christian's default. He had no reason whatever to believe at the time that the goods would not be shipped. He was told that he should be allowed to see the goods weighed, otherwise he should not have granted the policies.

The payment by the plaintiffs of three out of the four bills of exchange was proved.

Several merchants and agents were called to prove the general course of dealing in transactions relating to insurance. It appeared from their evidence that policies are sometimes granted before the goods are shipped; the insurer does not always take the trouble to inquire, but takes it for granted that this is or will be duly performed. His business is only to ascertain that the vessel is seawoithy. The policies are granted according to the terms of the invoice, which generally states to whom the goods are con-igned. By the custom of the Calcutta merchants, policies of in-urance are considered negotiable instruments, but not until adjustment. The insurance office in the event of loss pays the amount to the indorcer, whosoever he may happen to be. Generally speaking, banks decline to discount, until they have ascertained from the Insurance office that they have no claim or set, off against the insured.

Mr. Leith addressed the Court for the defence. There is no evidence either of fraud, mjury or damage. The case amounts to this, that the plaintiffs by the merepresentations of the defendants have been damnified. Now the nature of the instrument is not calculated to mislead any party, and even if the plaintiffs were misled, it was emirely through their own negligence. It never can be supposed percessary for every Insurance office, whenever they grant a policy, to exasine and inquire accurately whether the goods are on board exactly as described. They may do this indeed for their own information and satisfaction; but they are not called upon to guarantee the fidelity of the transaction for the security of third parties. There is no privity whatever between the plaintiffs and the defend-ants. The latter might just as well bring their action against the present plaintiffs, and allege that they were misled by credit being given to this pretended consig or. The plaintiffs so far from being accessary to any fraud, are themselves the dupes. Then as to the injury which Sir F. Ryan said, that the Court would not decide the plaintiffs allege they have suffered, this does before hand what is of is not madessay to be proved, not appear from the avalence address. Non constat The plannife must make out their own case, and it but that Chritian, the defeuter, is at the present moment able to pay the amount which the platific claim. It is submitted, without calling any evidence for the defence, that their must be a verdict for the defendants

Sir Edward Ryan. This is a case of very consider-ble difficulty and importance. We shall give a virdict for the plaintiff, with leave reserved to the defendents' counsel to move the Court to enter a non-uit The objection raised that there is no proof of damage sustained, has no weight with us. A mere possibility that the defaulter has now funds in his hands to meet the claim, amounts to nothing. The question simply is, whether there hasbeen fraudulent or negligent conduct on the part of the defendants. Now we are clealy of opinion that no fraud whatever has been established, the case therefore is reduced to this point, whether there has been such culpable negligence on the part of the defendants as to mislead and damnify the plaintiffs even with the exercise of a due degree of precaution on the part of the latter. The Court is of opinion that there has been such negligence, and that this has caused loss to the plaintiffs. It is clear that the policies were granted without sufficient precaution, and it is equally clear that except upon the faith of those policies the plaintiffs would not have accepted the hills. All that remains, is, whether upon this negligence, without proof of fraud, the action is sustainable. [The Court cited Pasley v. Freeman, 3 Terms Reports 51. Uaycraft v. Creadiu, 2 East Reports. 92]

The payment of only three out of the four bills of exchange was proved by the plaintiffs, owning, to the accidental absence of a witness; but the Court suggested to defendants' counsel, that as it was a quesion of right to be tried, they should admit the fact of payment, provided they were certified of its reality.

Verdict for the plaintiffs, with leave to move for a nonsuit. - Hurk Feb. 13.

Tuesday, Fab. 13, 1838.

(Refore Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

DYCE V. DYCE SOMBRE.

Sir C. T. Metcalfe, whose evidence was to be taken de bene esse in this issue, entered the Court this morning in company with their lordships, and was accommodated with a chair beside the bench. The Court immediately called upon the defendant's counsel to proceed with the examination. Mr. Prinsep requested permission to conter with his client for a few minutes, as the result of the conference might dispense with all necessity for examining Sir C. T. Metcalfe.

After the common motions had been disposed of, Mr. Clarke rose and stated to the Court, that by consent of parties, a verdict for the defendant would be taken in this i-sue, that the cause would be set down on the Equity board, and a decree taken by consent, dismissing the suit.

Sir Charles then retired, their lordships and the bar rising on his leaving Court.

BROWN D. DYCE SOMBRE.

In this suit between General Brown (the executor) and the defendant in the above suit, Mr Leith moved for an attachment for want of answer to the amended bill. No further time for putting in an answer is allowed, after a amending the bill, and by the new Equity rules, a fresh subpenna is unnecessary.

Motion granted.

RAJNARATO ROY D. JADAUB CHUNDER.

very late hour to his own house, after having made merry with some friends, and on getting out of his carriage, was attacked by the defendant, assisted by five or six others. The assaulting party beat him severely with a stick for ten or fifteen minutes, and endeavoured to take a gold chain foroibly from his neck. The plaintiff retired into an adjacent dwelling house, and could not venture out for some time through fear of the defendant's violence. For this outrageous assault, the action was brought.

Two witnessess were called to prove the particulars of the fracus. It appeared that the night in question was very dark. One of the witnesses was himself assaulted, and had brought an action in which he recovered judgment er parte. The plaintiff had been subjected to a similar assault before, but he and the defendant were occasionally on tolerable terms with each other.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defence were not called upon by the Court.

Sir Edward Ryan, - There must be a verdict for the defendant. Mr. Advocate, we do not believe your witnesses.

Verdict for the defendant.

J. WIMBLE V. A. R. JACKSON.

Mr Grant opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the plaintiff's case. This was an action of a sumpsit brought by Captain Wimble, the master of the ship London, against Dr. Jackson for breach of contract. The defendant had agreed to take three cabins to England for the sum of Rs 6,500, and the slip was fixed to sail early in January 1838. On the application of the defendant, who wished to remain until the arrival of Dr. Grant in the Secostris, the day of sailing was afterwards changed to the 12th; but afterwards requiring further time, he again applied to the plaintiff for an extension of the delay, but as a steamer had been already engaged by the plaintiff to tow the vessel down the river, he was unable to comply with this request. After some correspondence on the subject had passed between the parties, the defendant intimated that he should not be able to sail in the London, and Captain Wimble accordingly, with the view of lessoning the sum to which the defendant would be liable, endeavoured to let the vacated cabins. It would be proved that this was done with the sanction of the defendant, who, himself wrote out and paid for the advertisements. One of the cabins was afterwards let, and the plaintiff was, of course, willing to subtract this sum from the whole amount of passage money for which the defendant had agreed. This action was brought to recover the difference.

The correspondence between the parties was put in and read, on admission in the cause.

R. C. Paton was called as a witness.

The Advocate-General endeavoured to establish his incompetency, by a preliminary examination whether he had not given security for costs, but in this he was unsuccesstul.

Witness proved that the vessel was consigned to the old firm of Bagshaw, Ailan and Co. One of the three cabins was afterwards let to Mrs. Liptrap for about £200, on account of Dr. Jackson. Captain Cunning-(the awning cabin) but he had already taken a lower one, which was not afterwards let to any one else. The London sailed after all on the 7th Jonuary, because Captain Wimble was positively informed that De-Jackson did not intend to sail with him., .

Mr. Prince opened to pleadings.

J. H. Storqueler proved that an application was resident at Calcutte. He was returning one night at a ted cabins in the ship London. An advertisement, was Paton and Co. These advertisements were put in and Captain Liptrap proved that one of the cabins was engaged for his lady, on the 28th December. He com municated on the subject with Me-srs. Allan and Paton He was referred by Mr. Stocqueler to Dr. Jackson

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith) then submitted that the Plaintiff must be nonsuited. No ownership whatever has been proved in Captain Wimble, and even if he was part owner, the other owners ought to have been made parties.

Sir E, Ryan .- There are two answers to your objection; in the first place, Captain Wimble has such an interest in the vessel as to enable him to sustain the present action, and no other owners appear upon the face of these proceedings. But again, under the New rules, the only question on these pleadings simply is, whether this contract was entered into between these parties, and whether either had a title to make it.

Sir J. Grant, would say nothing upon the second reason assigned by the learned Chief Justice, but he fully concurred in the first.

The Advocate General then proceeded. It has been proved that the plaintiff agreed to delay until the 12th if not the 15th of January. Now it is absurd to say that this is only an alteration, and not an abandonment of the original agreement. The second contract was clearly entered into, in lieu of the former.

If so, the contract has not been performed by the plaintiffs. The ship sails after all on the 7th of the month, and, moreover, one, if not two of the cabins are let to other patties. By this act of the plaintiff himself, the defendant is absolutely incapacited from fulfilling his part of the agreement. But it is further contended that the contract has been rescinded altogether, and Dr. Jackson wholly released from his responsibility. All the evidence goes to prove that Mr. Paton, in letting the cabin to Liptrap, acted not as the agent of Di. Jackson, but entuely on account of the ship.

The learned Advocate here called witnesses, by whose evidence it appeared that Captain Wimble had been heard to say that he had agreed to remain until the 15th of the month, but he had altered his intention because one of his passengers made violent objections to the delay. It further appeared that Captain Cunningham had paid 800 or 1,000 rupees, in addition to the passage-money for the lower cabin which he had engaged, for leave to occupy the awning cabin vacated by the defendant.

Mr. Prinsep, in reply, contended at considerable length, first, that the second arrangement was no speci fic contract, but merely aprovisional qualification of the former, for the convenience of the defendant. There was no consideration for entering into such an agreement; it was entirely through special favour towards the defendant and upon his making default even after these advantageous terris had been offered, the matter naturally reverted to the oliginal arrangement. Again, there is no proof whatever that the contract was rescinded. All the subsequent arrangements were made on behalf of Dr. Jackson, as being still interested in the matter. The eatin that was let to Liptrap was let under the sanction of the defendant himself. As to the objection that one of the other cabins was let without authority to Cunningham, this rests on very vague proof. But even if it were positively proved that this was the case, that the Captain had let an empty cabiffiguet as the ship was on the point of sailing, surely afterwards inserted in the beginning of January, by Allan, this does not annul the contract altogether. Whatever money Captain Wimble may have received ought at most to be subtracted from the amount of damages. Lastly, it was contended that even if the plaintiff had omitted to perform some minor particulars, it was competent for the defendant to bring a cross action.

> Sir Edward Ryan .- This case is somewhat entangled by the pleadings, but the justice of it is quite clear. There are four issues before the Court arising upon the general plea of non-ussumpsit, and the three special pleas. We think the first i-sue must be for the plaintiff because under the new rules it merely puts in issue the general contract, and that contract has been clearly proved. The 31 issue as to rescision of the contract. and the 4th as to inability on the part of the defendant inrough the plaintiff's own act must be found for the defendant, though we are of opinion that these third and fourth pleas had better not have been pleaded. We next come to the 2d issue, and this raises the real merits of the case. The second plea ought in strictness to have stood alone, and upon this the defendant is entitled to a verdict. If the vessel had remained until the 12th, the plaintiff would have been entitled to recover, but by spiling on the 7th he has damnified the defendant to this extent, that he has deprived him of the opportunity of getting rid of the cabins during the intervening period. It stands thus therefore ;- the first i-sue must be found for the plaintiff, the three others for the defendant, and the defendant is of course entitled to general verdict.

Verdict for the defendant.

At the rising of the Court, the Chief Justice intimated that he should only take motions to-morrow and that the Equity Board would be taken on Thursday and Friday.

The case of Horsechunder Saha v. Macpherson, set down yesterday on the Law Board by special order, is appointed for Saturday, the last day of the Sittings -Hurkaru, February 14.

FRIDAY, FFB. 16, 1838.

(Refore Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Some contested motions, which had stood over, were taken this day, but they involved nothing of public interest.

IN THE MATTER OF JOYKISSEN BYSACK.

The Advocate General moved for a commission de lunatico inquirendo, to be directed to John Farley Leith. and Richard Marnell, Esquires, Barristers-at-law, to enquire concerning the state of Joykissen Bysack Affidavits were put in, stating that this party was a member of a joint Hindon family, that for several years past he has been in a state of mental imbecility, and totally incapable of managing his affairs. The family are jointly entitled to considerable property, and an Equity uit has been long pending, in which Joykissen Bysack, is a party; but no steps can be taken for want of a committee to manage the estate. It may be recollected. that in the recent case of Unnomoney Dosses v. the Bank of Bengal reported in the Hurkuru, witnesses this very individual, who was a party interested, and the nonsuit of the plaintiffs was owing entirely to the unexpected evidence given in this matter.

Motion granted.

The case of Hereschunder, Saho and another, v. Marpherson, is specially appointed for to morrow. Hurk, Fob. 1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUITA.

DEPARTURE OF SIR CHARLES METCALFE. - At 7 o'clock on the evening of the 15th instant, 3ir Charles Metcalfe embarked at the Cooly Bazar, on board the St George, for England, under a salute from the fort. By some mistake H.M. "Cameronians" were drawn up at Chamdpaul-ghaut, where also several gentlemen took their station, to pay the last compliment to the respected i Baronet. A numerous assemblage, however, in spite of a most untoward morning (for the tog was very thick) were ready to receive Sir Charles and accompany him to the beaulish. The scene was most impressive; Sir Charles himself, in wishing his triends "good bye," was completely overpowered, and in many, who might have been supposed to be made of "sterner stuff," there were evident symptoms of the deepest emotion on parting from a long known and valued friend. Here admiration for the state-man, indeed, was lost or forgotten in affection for the man. The feelings seemed too deep for utterance; and, in silence and sudness, the chief ornament of British India, after a distinguished service of near forty years, departed for his native country.

DONATIONS OF SIR C. METCALFE. - Sir Charles Metcalfe has given a donation of one thousand rupees to the. Parental Academic Institution. Sir Charles is patron of that institution, and the Committee of Management, with the sanction of the constituent body, have endowed two "Metcalfe Scholarships" to mark their grateful sense of the warm interest Sir Charles always took in the welfare of that institution. The Metcalia scholars now are, masters Cook and Knox, especially appointed by Sir Charles.

One of Sir Charles Metcalfe 's last acts here, was to bestow one thousand rupees upon the District Charitable Society.

By dak of the 23d instant accounts of the final departure of the St. George from the Sand-heads, on the 17th instant, were received. The following extracts from vessels on the station will show that Sir Charles Metcalfs was konoured to the last moment.

"EASTERN CHANNEL..-On the ship St. George making her appearance, I dressed the * * * in all our flags, and on her passing, manued the yards and fired a salute of fitteen guns, which was acknowledged."

"SAND HEAD .. - I regret to state I could not pay my respects to Sir Charles Metcatfe to the extent I had intended, on account of the state of the weather (blowing hard from the N.W. and being under reefed top-ails). We were, however, enabled to salute him with fifteen guns, under the union jack at the main, which was acknowledged by the ship. The floating light also saluted him with the same number of guns, diessed out in all her flags

ACCIDENT ON THE RIVER .- Capt. Wootton, H.M. 44th, proceeding to join his regiment at Ghazeepoor, had embarked with his I dy on board a pinnace lying at Clive Street ghaut. About one in the morning of the 20th ultimo, he providentially awoke and on putting his foot out of bed, was surprised to find it immersed in water half leg deep. Immediately awakening his wife they rushed out of the cabin, but before they could reach the door, the vessel fell on her beam ends. Both were floating. The gentleman nevertheless lost not his presence of mind, and with great exertion dragged has un-fortunate lady to the side of the vessel above the water, and in a dinghy sent her to a friend's boat alongside himself remaining to try and secure anything that might float up. In the state in which he had left his bed, he remained for two hours on the wreck, till, with his own hands, he secured the vessel with a hawser to the shore, and then rejoined he wife, with the melancholy conviction that everything they possessed in the world was lost. Capt. Wootton had just returned from England via Sydney, and all his outfit and that of Mrs. Wootton, laid in at some expense, was in an instant snatched from him, grateful that their lives were spared. The dandies ran away one and all, and were never seen the whole night. The manjee, it appears, had never slept on board. One wretch, in trying to escape, seeing Mrs. Wootton clinging to the side of the boat, deliberately put his foot on her shoulder as a stepping stone and pushed het under the water, from which her husband shewing funds equal to a dividend of Re- 800 ner officer ruined, after travelling so many thousand miles, by the carelessness of the serang and crew; for it appears stern at the ebb tide, she had grounded by the head, and on the rush of the flood, namediately filled. The serang, though he had tremblingly acknowledged his absence o Capt. Wooton, in the pre-ence of a friend, declared at the police office that he was on board and that the pinnace sunk in consequence of the " bore, when there was none took place that night.

STRAM NAVIGATION -The steam petition, with upwards of 6,000 signatures, was despatched on the 4th the other by the Rapulse. Additional names were in course of being added daily. The Steam Association is progressing rapidly. The shares amount to 2,471 heldby 702 individuals.

INON STEAMERS. - The following is an extract of a letter, dated Jellinghee accommodation boit, off the mouth of the Goomty, thirty miles below Benares, 6th February, 1838. "We left Guazeepore on the evening of the 4th, and brought too a little below the reef of rocks which run across the river above Ghazeepore. We passed these on the morning of the 5th through the only navigable channel now left, and were making excellent progress with fresh easterly wind till 2 r M., when we were run into shoally water about 100 yards below the mouth of the Goomty. The steamer stuck and when her Captain had nearly been successful in extricating her and us, after an hour's exertion, the main shaft of the engine snapt in two, leaving us and her-elf perfectly hors de combat. Had a spare shait been on hoard, we might have proceeded with a few hours' delay; as it is, however, the only alternative left us, is to warp and track the flat up to Benares, there shiting for ourselves in the best way we can.

The freight for Allahabad, it is believed, will be forwarded by hackery from Benares.

February 7th, 10 A. M .- We shall be at Benares this evening, being now only ten miles from it. We have about 500 cooles on our goon. We have had a refreshing shower of rain this morning. The banks of the river from Buxar up to this appear highly cultivated and the crops are very forward."

UNION BANK SHARES. The sale of shares of the new stock of the Bank not claumed by absentees and other parties through neglect or want of means, went off with great spirit on the 16th instant. The business began as noon, and some few of the shares were sold at 310 premium, the bilding, however, rapidly rose to 325 and then steadily, but gradually, advanced to the maximum; the last share was sold at a premium of 370, and several previously at 360 and 365. . The average was 337, and the whole number of shares sold was 48. In many cases parties who were entitled to, and who have lost the opportunity of claiming shares at par, have nobody to blame but themselves, and have done so through mere neglectand wast of ordinary attention to their own interest.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY .- The fourth half yearly meeting of the Commercial Insurance Company, was held on the 19th instant.

The society has been in existence two years. It conthey having neglected to haul the boat out by the anchor sisted at its commencement of one hundred shares of Rs 1,000. At the end of the first year the profits, one fac, were added to the Company's capital, making it two lacs. At the third half yearly meeting a dividend of £50 sterling, payable in England, was declared.

> MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS OF THE SUN INSURANCE -We attended the annual meeting of the proprietors of the Sun Insurance Office on the 31st of January, Mr. W. Bruce was in the chair. Mr. Rustomies Cowasiee, Mr. Erekici Musblen, and several foreign gentlemen composed the meeting, which was conducted in a very bitef business-like manner. The balance sheet of the eighth half year exhibits.

Messrs. W. Bruce, G. Apcar, J. Dc. Dow, K. R. Mackenzie, and Rustomjee Cowasjee were requested to continue their services for the ensuing six months.

Fines .- Several fires have occurred during this month; but, through the activity of the fire-extinguishing department, they have all been put out before they had done any great damage.

PIRE RELIEF COMMITTEE .- The report of the General Committee to aid of the sufferers by the great files in 1837, has been published. It appears that the sum subscribed, including the donation of Rs 20,000 from Government, was little short of Ra- 50,000: but a very small proportion was furnished by the higher class of natives. There are a few honourable exceptions, but compared with the number capable of contributing, they exhibit a contrast most deplorable. The committee have exercised a sound discretion in not making loans of large amounts to individual sufferers, and have done much good. The main object of the subscription was certainly to relieve the poorest, those whose position was not likely to afford the means of saving from their earnings or wages.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY BY CANNON BALLS, - During the practice of the artillery at Dum-Dum, between the hours of ten and three, on the 14th instant, several trees were injured and some houses slightly damaged at the village of Kadity, which is situated to the north-east of Dam-Dura. The number of balls that fell amongst the habitations of men is estimated at about thirty; much risk of life and property was therefore meurred; and, indeed, it is feared that some casualty or ather would peed sibly have taken place, had not all the people, ran out of the village at the eight of the first ball, and placed themselves beyond the reach of the shot. About fitteen or sixteen families have since removed the homesteads. elsewhere, never to return to that village thain.

At about a quarter after eight o'clock r, M. we Arracan, and the consideration of the great expense to entered the rooms and were quite dazzled whit the which the officers are subjected by continually moving blaze of beauty which greeted our sight.

The young Masters and Misses, fancifully dressed excited our highest admiration, and to see them trip through the mazes of the dance, was really a pleasing sight. There were in this picturesque group a few over-grown youths, who presented a sad contrast to the younger dancers, and whose movements only excited our risibilty. The two ball rooms were thickly crowded, almost to sufficiation, by upwards of 1,000 persons, which in convenience was increased by the unusual warmth of the weather.

There were some lovely faces and forms that adorned this assembly; and many who did not covet entertainment from the dance, contented themselves with gazing on features surpassingly fair. We regret to add that there were a few persons, however, who, wishing to procure the utmost for their money, were ever and anon quaffing plentiful potations, the free use of which caused them to conduct themselves in such a brutal manner as to excite this disgust of every body present; and some of these would-be-thought gentlo-men, we have been told, on being turned out, stript and had a very serious warfare with their fists, in the spacious court-yard of the premises. This ci cumstance caused many of the fair damsels to quit the ball room, to the regret of the lovers of dancing.

We are really surprized to find persons who lay claim to the title of gentlemen, and who would be ready to call any person to a serious account for disputing their right thereto, so far brutalize themselves as to behave in the manner in which the individuals we have alluded to did.

> Oh! would some bard the gifti gie us . To see oursel's as others see us.

However exalted or lowly the station of a man may be, it cannot excuse his conduct,—indeed the more exalted the position, the more reprehensible does the misdeed appear.

> Honor or shame from no condition rise-Act well your part, 'tis there the honor lies.

The remainder of the company recired at three A. M. Excepting the very juvenile portion of the assembly, we only perceived two young ladies in fancy dresses. They were in the costume of Swiss per-ant girls; but amongst the gentlemen fancy dresses were more numerous. We noticed the following costumes. Charles the 2d, Orlando, a Greek Peasant, a Vakeal of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlet, the Red Rover, a Sailor, a Spanish Peasant, Glenalvon, some Turks and some in dominos ; but hy far the greater portion of the Company, wore plain full dresses.

to more congenial climates, has induced the Government to more congenial extractes, as induced the Greenment to sanction an expenditure of about Re- 12,000 for the erection of a satisfaction. The site selected by the medical officer is an elevated position contiguous to the sea shore, about two of three miles distant from the station of Akyab, and is considered, after a careful investigation, extremely suitable for so leafrable a purpose.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—A native gentleman by name Nilmoney Day, has forwarded Rs 500 through Government for the use of the poor in the Bindabun, near Muttra. The monies are to be expended in purchasing common food; and this good man has been persuading his intimates to follow his example.

DONATION OF DVCE *SOMBUE, ESQ.,—Dyce Sombre-Esq., has presented the managers of the Parental Academic Institution with a donation of one Thousand Rupers, for which, the only return they have had it in their power to make, has been a letter expressive of grateful acknowledgments for the same.

PRINCELY DONATION .- On the 5th instant, Dwarkanauth Tagore, bestowed upon the District Charitable Society, the magnificent sum of one lac of rupees ! to be secured to the society on good mortgages and placed out at interest for the benefit of the numerous poor who are maintained from the funds of that excellent institution. The donation is to form a separate fund and to be called the "DWARKANAUTH FUND," that the memory of the princely dunor may thus be associated in perpetuity with the noble object he always had THEE SCHOOL,-The report of the free school shows that this most useful and bedevolent institution continues most fully to deserve the patronage of the public. I pwards of 400 children of both sexes, the offspring of indigent Christian parents, are supplied with lodging, food, clothing and instruction. They are admitted between the ages of five and nine years, and are instructced in English grammar, writing, arithmetic, history, geography, and the elements of Christian knowledge; besides which the girls are taught straw bonnet, face and needle work. An unsuccessful application has been made to the Government through the Bishop of Calcutta, to relieve the institution from the expense of the Church attached to it.

THE SATLORS' HOME.—This institution, by the last report, seems to be in a flourishing condition.

PRINCE OF ORANGE. Prince Henry of Orange, arrived from the mofussil on the 13th instant, and left Calcutta for Holland, on the 17th instant.

PRINCE HENRY OF ORANGE. - It is said that His Honour the Deputy Governor has received letters from His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Orange, and from Captain Arriens of the Bellona, off Kedgeree, expressing their acknowledgments, in the warmest terms, for the kind and hospitable reception, both public and private, which their party has experienced. The Primes speaks highly of the attentions which he received from Captain Came, his A.D.C., temperarily appointed during his visit.

COURT MARTIAL. The young officer who was tried at a court-martial in Fort William the other day, and whose case excited considerable interest in the military circles, has been honorably acquitted.

ARTILLERY EXPIRES.—The artillery was reviewed and Dum on the 12th instant, by Major general at Willoughby Cotton, and gave great satisfaction.

suppossing of the suppose dewiver -It is said, what I am about at Worcester; but I have been so in-that Mr. W. Cracroft and Mr. P. Ni-best are the surrapted that I have not time to write to you as I had candidates for the vacancy in the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adamluts, occasioned by the retirement of Mr. C. Harding, one of the Judges of that Court, who proceeds to England on furlough.

THE PROPORT.-The great drought which prevails threatens the most disastrous consequences to the poor The tanks around Calcutta are now as much dried up as they usually are in the month of May, and almost all agricultural operations being suspended, grain is daily rising in price, so that the inhabitants of the suburbs, have the uncheering prospect of experiencing great inconvenience from hunger and thrust during the next warm season.

PAMINE.—The want of rain has caused the most disastrous results throughout the whole of the upper provinces, and a most severe famine prevails. The following is an extract of a letter from Tirhoot on the subject :

" In verity and truth we are threatened with the most calamitous season ever known. Here is the middle of January without a drop of rain since October; with three-fourths of our lands not yet prepared for lack of moisture, vegetation actually withering, and, in short, every prospect not only of no indigo, but really of a famine for want of means to cultivate the first necessal ries of life for the inhabitants. The scarcity is already severely felt, and the natives are crying out that this must be such a season as that of the great famine about twenty-five years ago, when no rice could be sown, and all that was, became inundated before the end of June. I look on this season for planters as one of those that fix an area of-plas! what we meet most unfrequently-unmitigated destruction and ruin."

THE OFTUM SATE.-The second opium sale of the season took place on the 5th instant, at the Exchange, and went off very steadily, although the attendance appeared much less than that of the sale last month, and the number of bidders much fewer. The quantity put up was 1,500 Patns and 800 Benaies, besides six chests Benares of last year's provision: eighty chests Patna and fifty chests Benares of the French privilege, belonging to the January sale this year. - Priets of Patna ranged from 700 to 725 Co. s rupees, Benares from 610 to 615 Co.'s rupees.

THE BLACK ACT .-- The following is an extract of a letter from Mr. Turton, to Mr. Dickens, in reference to the Black Act.

"Things as to the Black Act remain precisely in the state they were three months ago; but I am preparing for my Parliamentary campaign, and hope by next month ro have samething to communicate. I fear it will not be favorable.

I am most authors, as you may suppose, to hear what you and the Compattee think of my attempt to get into Parliament. I sid now going to colleavour to doen the rathement. This toy going to conservour to upon the return at Worcester, a very radical place, and think I should be nearly cartain of being returned for it, if the present election is act aside. Crawfurd, you know, has lost his return for Presion. We the Indians, have been exceedingly unlackly in this occasion. Crawfurd's return would have been a great thing for us; for he is well acquainted with Indian matters, has taken up the Black Act business con amore, and has helped me, without any apparent jelousy and dissatisfaction. I have written a letter to Dwarkanauth, and in it stated rather more fully intended. I am much better in health than I was.

COAL SURVEY. - The survey upon which Mr. Homfray was employed last year, on behalf of Government, to ascertain the practicability of bringing coals from the Coel and Soane river districts, left off with an urgent recommendation for its being continued in the present year, and in hopes from some very promising appearances, of establishing the connexion of the great Palamoo and Coel river coal fields, with several sites along the binks of the Soane both to the north and south of the Coel river. These sites have been again explored, and some of them ascertained to contain coal. The samples which have been duy, although not of the very best description of coal, are said to be sufficient ently so to encourage the continuation of the research in those parts of the country below the range of hills which skirt the south-east bank of the Songe. There are a vast number of distinct deposits of carbonacious black slate with admixtures of coal, in various proportions, on both banks of the Soane. There is also that interesting deposit of the lias, which was also noticed and identified to be the long suspected and true lius lime-tone—perhaps one of the most valuable acquisitions to the present internal resources of this hitherto unexplored country. There is also a hed of thick carbonaceous black slate in the nullah near to Bidjegur, but nothing of the character of true coal has vot been discovered.

SOUTH AMERICAN COPPER. - The practical effect of double legislation is beautifully illustrated by the position of the two American ships, which have lately arrived, and which must away to sea again, under the late order or regulation of the Court of Directors with their cargo unbroken; or, at all wents, if they remus, can only do so, with the most valuable part of it unsold, viz. the South American copper, unless the President in Council will sanction infrigement of the regulation, on the ground of its taking the parties affected so completely by surprise. Indeed it may be questioned whether under the commercial treaty with the United States, which was laid upon the table of both Houses of Parliament, the prohibition against American vessels bringing the produce of other countries can be legally enforced. The case is now before the Government, on the representation of the Collector of Customs for its decision.

A BIRLARIN SHIELD. - It has been stated, that the commander of the ship Strathista, which vessel lately arrived at this port from the Malay coast, brought out a shied, which had been captured from the savages in Torryl's Straits. The shield is in the shape of a tortoise, and in it ate set, in a state of preservation, the heads of the captain of a ship which belonged to this port, and was lost some time since, and seventeen of his crew and passengers. The heads bear all the scars of wounds which were inflicted on them. The captain's head is put in the place representing the head of the tortoise and a boy's is at the tail, and either of the crew's on each side. A facsimils of the horrid shield, as drawn from the original, is in the possession of Messrs. Shelden and Co.

S, 凝 exumition of vegetables.—The show of vegetables at the Town field on the 29th of January far openited anything that could have been expected with reference to the unusualty untavorable season. The calliformer was beatiful and would have vied with any in Covent Garden. The cabbage was also very fide. The pease were excellent, and there were two fine baskets of English or rather Cape broad beams. Carrots from Capeaged were superior to preceding years; onions and larks, though few were large and good and the red beet as twelve lacs of rupees: The assemblage was, as usual, and salid were in good season. Only two baskets of artichokes were visible. Potatoes very fine. Of native vegetables, the pure white and red bringals were most conspicuous; the celery, though good, was not sufficiently blanched. The scene was altogether attractive, and the number of ladies who graced the ball, rendered it doubly so,

In the evening the members of the society diperi together, when several toasts were drunk & speeches made.

ALLINCES ON SHIPMENTS OF GOODS TO EUROPE. -- A report gains ground that the Government are about to resume the system of advances on shipments of goods to Europe.

THE OCHTRULOVY MONUMENT. - Government have sanctioned the estimate completing the plaistering of the Ochterlony monument and repairing it. The amount is about Res 460.

LORD CARDIO IN .- Lord Cardigan forfeited his passage in the Repulse, and took up cabins in the Juliana for Madras, from which place his Lordship and the Countess proceeded disk to Bombay. This change of plan auses from a desire on the part of the Lord to be present at her Majesty's coronation, which he would have in all probability missed, had he sailed in the Repulse.

COLONEL COCK .- Colonel Cock, it appears, has been appointed to the command of the Dinapore division of the army, with the rank of brigadier, during the absence of Major General W. Richards, C.B., or until further Government have come to the resolution of issuing new Company pice and receiving old sicca pice, in exchange for Company supees-sixty-tour of each denomination of pice to the rapec. This will be a great relief to every class of persons who pay or receive money in fractional parts of the rupee. The words and further orders are of course mere words of form, for it would be doubly cruel in the poor ever again to leave them at the mercy of the polars, so long at least as the old defoced pice remain in circulation.

THE COVERNOR'S PRIVATE STREETARY .- The appoint. ment of private secretary to the Deputy Governor, is given to James Hustchiason, Ecq., for whom Ross D. Mangles, Esq., has been hitherto officiating. Mr. Hutchiason, has just returned to Calcutta from the Cape.

Ms. A poeas.—Mr Dobbs, the Master in Equity, has required with his health perfectly restored. This gentleman took the oaths to Her Majesty, and resumed office on the 29th intent.

ANNUE DESCRIPTION AT SAUGORY.—The abundamelah or fair at Bangore, commenced at the end of December and continued up to the 20th of January. A party of the 24 Pergundah indefatigables, an Ruman officer, and the fair general attended. The beat assemblage, and refregentmated at so many as seventy their two thousand, and the number of south at a many as sax hundred thousand; and the number of south at a many as sax hundred thousand; and the same attended to so large an amount security.

compraied of natives of Lahore, Delhi, Oude, Seringapetam, Bombay and the lower provinces, and a great many from the Nepaul and Burmese states. No re-markable accidents occurred beyond a large boat laden with tobacco having suddenly foundered; all lives on board were however saved. No affrays, or assaults have been reported, and from all accounts the melah was conducted very quietly.

PAILURE.—The failure of an eminent Shroffing and Banking House, trading in the Burra Bazar, occurred ou the 1st instant, under the name of Tarachund Day and Madob Churn Day, Their liabilities are reported at twenty lacs of rupees.

QUARANTINE AT MALTA. -The severity of quarantine at Malia is greatly mitigated, indeed done away with, Passengers arriving in the Alexandria steamer, pro-vided they do not land, are shipped into the London steamer, in the port, and proceed at once on their voya.e., raving thus the delay of twenty or thirty days, which is the period for performing quarantine alloted to even clean bills of health.

PECHEBOAUM EXPEDITION .- A letter from Assam states that the commissioner and Major White arrived at Suddea on the 29th of January, and that Lieut. Miller had gone with seventy-five men to endeavour to take the Pechee Gaum, who had been fighting with the Let Garms. It is expected that Lieut. Miller will have some trouble.

AQUEDUCTS.-Just before the Chief Magistrato left Calcutta in November, several estimates for additional aqueducts were submitted to Government through the Military Board; but the one nearly finished in Lyon's Range, New China Bazar Street and Clive Street was especially recommended for sanction, and the chief Magistrate ordered its immediate commencement pending sanction; that it was sanctioned either last Tuesday week or the Council day before it, and the sanction forwarded the other day by the Military Board to the Conservency Department: the Deputy Governor re-jected the remaining projects submitted with the exception of that for an aqueduct along Boltakhana, from Wellington Street to the Circulur Road, but suspended his sauction for that work until he should receive the estimute.

DACOITY.—The treasure belonging to the Stud depôt at Buxar, has been attacked affir carried off by a band of dacoits accompanied by a party of horse. The gang is understood to have amounted to about fifty or sixty men altogether; and the guard allotted for the protection of the treasure being very small, it made no resistance. The attack was quite unex pected, so much so that the sentry was disarmed, and the checkedar who alone offered to oppose the party, was speared in the head, and disarmed. The dacoits, it appears, had been hovering aboutthe town of Buxar for the purpose of carrying off a large sum of money which a Mahajan expected from Patna, and of which the dacoits had received intinantion; but, being disappointed in that, they attached the stud treasure and carried off an iron chest containing twenty thousand rapees in cash, and about five thousand rupees in bank notes belonging to the stud; and about two thousand rupees worth of silver plate, the private property of Captain Thomas, in charge of the depair who had ledged the same in the treature for greator 1. 200

Sheerghootty on the Benares road, in which some European soldiers are implicated. A collision has occurred at Kedgeree between some sailors of H.M.S. Victor and the Custom-house authorities; and the former were kept on shore in confinement during the night. Jack was rather glorious" and pretty considerably pugnacious. The Custom-house officers acted, it is said, with much judgment, having seized their refractory visitors, three in number, and bound them hard and fast in the tent, before they could obtain assistance from the rest of the boat's erew, who put off to the ship, in ignorance of the "durance-vile" of their most unfortunate, and unwary mess-mates.

ACCIDENT .- A dak boat with seventen packets on board, while rowing up to Hooghly on the 29th of Jan. capsized opposite to Bullopore by the violence of the bore. Ten of the packets ware recovered; but no trace of the rest was discovered. It is said the native merchants have lost a good deal of money by this sad accident.

ABOLITION OF PERSIAN .- The use of the Persian language in judical and revenue proceedings, is abblished in the Bengal division of this Presidency, by order of the Deputy Governor under the recent act. The measure is to be carried into effect gradually, but the change is to be completely effected by the 1st January next.

MELANGUOLY ACCIDENT.—One of those distressing accidents which it is but very little to say throw a gloom over the whole meeting, took place on the Race Course on the 31st of January; they really make us wish at the moment that there were no such things as races to permit of the possibility of their occurring. A horse may be spared, butthe highest gratification derived from racing is far too dearly purchased at the expense of a man's life.

After the start for the second heat for the Cup, a loose horse was observed galloping about. Absentes and Lieutenant went round the Course at tremendous speed, were neck and neck past the hospital, and rating it for the turn is, when the horse, which had been gra dually making for that corner, and which some riders had vainly endeavoured to stop, rushed clean across the racers, and the whole three, with the (two) riders, were instantaneously on the ground. The horses recovered themselves, but Hardy, who was riding Licatenant, never moved again. His appearance indicated some dreadful concussion of the brain, and the medical gentleman who first saw him, pronounced him at once dead. MOFUSSIL.

Derni. - Robberies greof daily accurrence in Delhi, and the soldiers are the principal sufferers, some of them having been robbed of property to a large amount.

meentr. An antisprefinary case of proling parturition occurred in the Regimental Bazor at Miceiat recently the wife of a native of the weaver daste, at her weenteder ment gave birth to three children, a main and two females, none of whom survived until the next day.

On the 29th instant, some serious accurate occurred at Marca in the second Brigade of Ilera Arillery, when at heal system is in Commissioned Officer was thrown completely prevent from his borse which failing over him occasioned his being carried off the plain in a senseles taste. One gauser had, while in the act of loading, the extremines of his right, arm expression to carried away and the right and off his face thereings:

affray, attended with loss of life, in the neighbourhood of pitiable state. This accident was at first auributed to the injudicious management of the gunner serving the vent, but the wounded appearance of his thumb, must experted him from the censure justly stached to neglect of duty at his very responsible station.

> saucon. The crops are finer to Saugor this season, than they have been for several years past.

NATIVE STATES.

LUCKNOW.—Advices from Lucknow, of the 26th January, state, that the late Hukeem Meddee has been succeeded in his office of Minister of Oude, by Mowlavce Gholam Ghaya; formerly a moonshee, on a salary of twenty-five rupies. Ahmed Ally Khau, nephew of the late Hukeem, still holds the appointment of General in the Oude service; but being rather on bad terms with the present minister, intend shortly to leave Lucknow for Fultehgurh; but it is questionable whether the King will permit him to do so. The King is carrying on his economical measures, discharging the servants of the state, and clipping the salaries of those that are retained. Nawaub Rowshnoodowleh, the ex-minister and his son, Souhan Ally Khan, are still confined to their houses, but fell confident of being reinstated. The former made an offer to his Majesty of 25 lacs of rupees for a re-appointment to the Premiership; but Lucknow, the King thinks, has had too much of his ministerial measures atready. Nawab Tuhower Jung seems to be enjoying himself. The Resident gave him the use of one of the King's palaces to reside in with etephants, chobdars, &c. He has been to all the palaces, gardens and other places of public resort, and is said to like the city and the people of Lucknow. Un the 19th of January, the Resident introduced him in form to the King, who was surrounded by his principal nobility and gentry. The King showed him much civility and attention, and on his taking leave made valuable presents. Nawab Tuhower Jung, it is said, intends leaving the city shortly, with an intention of visiting the whole of Upper India. The King was so ill that he would not see any one, unless on urgent and pressing state business.

LAHORE. -- It is reported that the Maharajah received letters from Cabul, stating that Captain Burnes was endeavouring to persue Nawab Dolt Mahemed Khan to make peace with Runjeet Sing. The Maharajah hearing the contents was quiet for a time, but afterwards said that he would not make peace with Dost Mahomed Khan unless it. gave Peeliawur as a Nuzuranah.

The Malarajah being desirous of getting obout one hundred European soldiers in his service, asked Mr. Cantell, how he was to process them. Mr. Cantell said that the Maharajah could not entertain them without the sametion of the British Government, agreeable to the existing freaty:

An ursee from the Ukhbar Nuweers, of Cabul, was received, stating that Dost Mahamed Khan, the ruler of Cabul, has an intention of coming over to Pesha-wur. His Majesty said that when he will march against us, some sowars and artillery will be sent, who will prevent him from crossing the river Attock. Deena Nath represented that the Frenchmen of His Majesty's army were a great obstacle to his coming.

HERAT.—By the letters received from Herat, it appears, that the invincible forces of Iran have marched from Mushed and encamped at the fort Kooryan, which is in the territory of the ruler of Herat, where both rulers had a great fight, and the ruler of Irau gained the day. He has established his thanah there. The Buler of Herat fought incredibly well, but being short of amu-nition gave up the field, and retreated into the fort of Herat, to which the Persians have layed seige. It would be well for the Herat chief if he will negociate with them because he is not able to escape, and they will rum him.,

KATRISTAN .-- The customs of the tribe of Kafree are quite different from those of Hindocs and Mussulmen; they are called Atish Purust, fire worshippers; their places of living are the them the hills of Bejore, Teran, but the hills of Bejore, Teran, places or living are in the fills of Bejore, Teran, Budukhshan, &c. &c.; they earned their livelihood by cultiveting those hills; and they were never subject to any people, but a few years ago the son of the Buler of Cabul suddeed them, consequently knowing that they were under subjection, they assembled in a body and but their gates against him and he, has left their boundational to be a subjection of the subject of the subj ies and pitched in tents near a place called Bumean. surgrat. The Government have at length enforced the Salic law in this country, and the Nawab has been installed in security on his throne, in spite of the pertinacious efforts of the Begum to supplant him.

> COURT OF ENQUIRY ON COMMANDER LOWE. -The Court of enquiry on Commander Lowe of the Berenice, has terminated in the honorable acquittal of that officer from all blame. So far from there having been any carelessness in the management of honself and the other officers, the utmost vigilance was displayed by all on board. At the time the vessel struck, the presence of mind of Captain Lowe prevented the accident from assuming a much more serious complexion.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY .- A Frenchman living in Bombay was walking along with a warrant officer of the Artemise from the Apollo bunder to the Fort. They were followed from the bunder by eight paraces, and, when they had got as far as the corner of Forbes-street, close to the office of Messrs. Jeejeebboy Dadabhoy and Co., one of the men laid hold of the former Frenchman, and made a grasp at his pocket. The other parsees surrounded the man, and when he saw his situation and felt himself seized, he raised an umbrella and struck the person who had hold of him. Upon this he was attacked by the whole party and knocked down. A small bag containing money foll out of his pocket, and four rupees which rolled out of it were snatched by one of the parsees. His companion interfered, for his defence and was also knocked down in the attempt, he too loosing several rupees. The pursees after this made off, finding that nething further could be done quietly in the affair. The Frenchman, as well as they could, communicated to two police peons who were standing quietly looking on at a few yards distance from the scene of the scuffle, which had taken place, showed them how they had been treated, and pointed out where they had been attacked. The peons, however, remained where they were, and would not stir a foot to endeavour to ecure the offenders.

EXPORTATION OF SALT PRIE OF DUTY .- It is said, that Government has come to the resolution, pending a reference to the Government of India, of allowing all salt taken for exportation, to any port within the territories included under the Honourable Company's Charter, to be shipped free of duty, or in other words, on the same terms as before the introduction of the new law.

CALCUTTA MONTHLY

ASIATIC NEWS.

my present communication, I am not ignorant that a very able and excellent report on our eastern frontier has been written by Capt. Pemberton, and was published on a limited scale at the expense of the Supreme Government in 1835. It is, therefore, with extreme diffidence, I venture my crude observations before the eye of criticism.

The only value, I may flatter myself, that is likely to be felt for my "pencillings by the way," is the novelty they possess. It is probable that no description of the pass of Aeng has appeared in print since the publication of Capt. P.'s report, and it is on this supposition I send you the communication in hand.

During my progress I took daily notes of every thing worth recording, and, knowing general taste is never satisfied by a mere route description, the physical characteristics of a country, I have endeavoured to blend the amusing with the useful, thus designing the captivation of readers of every calibre.

Those few who have already perused or have in possession Captain Pemberton's description of this celebrated pass, will, I have no doubt, grant me an especial indulgence, and I beg them particularly to consider me, in reference to the captain, as a cockloshell following in the wake of a seventy-four. However, it I cannot be so instructive, my style of description may be more pleasing to the ganeral mass of newspaper readers, than it is possible for on official report to government to render his; he must walk steadily the plank. I may vault from earth to heaven, digress from this point to that, " without any circumstantion whatever," as Mr. Weller senior has it. But a truce with thy nonsense to thy notes, Oh! Mugh.

On the 12th of Dec. L-and your correspondent left Aeng and proceeded on foot towards Jeddinchakain, the first halting place on route to the Youmadong mountains.

Our camp consisted (coolies included) of near 150 men. The cooley of this country is generally of the Keyn tribe, and as coolies they are very useful, neither bullock, not wheeled vehicle of any kind, being procurable. The road for about a mile runs through partially cleared jungle, among which the gurjun and jarool trees flourish as grandees of the forest. After completing this distance, we crossed the Aeng river by a bamboo bridge. The fiver here was not fornable, and the tattons were Aeng, 20th Dec. 1837.—In entering on the subject of most respectable appearance and the host bazar. The v oresent communication, I am not ignorant that a Soggree is himself a Shan, and all the Shan itinerant nerchants bring their goods to the market of the new village, instead of to the old as formerly. The site is, of course, more convenient for all traffickers coming from the east; it not only saves them a trifling distance, but the passage of the river.

> Here we paid a visit to the Soggree, whose person and establishment deserves to be honoured by an elongated paragraph, much more prolix than his worship is likely to receive from me : however, I shall expend a line or two on him, and proceed on my jouney.

> My friend the Soggree, as I have stated, being a native of the Shan country on the north-east frontier of Burmah, has much the appearance of a Chinese. l'hough venerable from apparent age, his person is ridiculous; he looks more like a skeleton vivant than a man (as one in authority should be) prone to obesity. He has further the misfortune to possess but one eye, which gives his cadaverous visage a most grotesque expression, resembling nothing that I know of either in heaven above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth; but if I could not help smiling at the figure the man in office displayed, I was not the less pleased by his activity in procuring us tattors for the journey: this being our principal object in paying him a visit. Whilst the old gentleman was thus usefully employing himself in our behalf, I could not but regard with admiration the commanding presence of his lady, who strutted about to and fro with the dignified demeanour of a Lady Mayoress, little suspecting the sly flirtation carried on betwixt his daughter, a damsel of promise, and a gentleman who shall be nameless. At length the tations were brought, the one for L - bed the semblance of an ancient European saddle on its back; that destined for your humble servant was equipped, according to the most approved primitive, or antidelusian style, on each side dangled two rusty implements probably intended to do the office of stirrups, the base of whose angles I could cover with the breadth of three fingers, and so unsatisfactory was the tout ensemble that I did not on the present occasion attempt to mount, rather preferring to pad the hoof or mount the elephant which accompanied us. Accordingly, we again pushed forward as we had come, for L - was as much inclined to walk as myself.

The road on this march runs over tolerably level ground, but two bridges are required to replace those now in decay over two small nullahs, whose banks are yery precipitous. The road, generally speaking, was good, but impracticable for wheeled carriages for want of bridges over the nullah above noted. We crossed obliged to swim half the diatance, across; in width it apprepared about 100 yards. On the right hank is situated good, but impracticable for wheeled carriages for want the new village of Aeng, by Captain Pemberton denominated Yodowest, but I could find no native who knew the place by this same, they all call it upper or village of Aeng, at a place called Zademow ghaut, but new Aeng; and of the two villages this has by far the the stream was here fordable; on the other side there is a small village peopled by expatriated Burmans. On in many parts forming an arch over the road, which was the line of road, I observed wild plantains and a saturated with dew dripping from the foliage above. portion of bamboo mixed with jungle tree of various sinds, though no other particular change showed itself on the general features of the country. About a mile and a half in advance of Zademow, we again found the river crossing our path at a place bearing the appellation of Khongwa Zukan. Here we exalted ourselves on the elephant, there being no bridge, but the river was not deeper than two or three feet over this passage. About two miles from this place we reached our halting ground, Zennet Chakain, where giving chelter to perhaps one hundred men.

The river runs close by, and a bathe after our journey being determined on, we enjoyed ourselves luxuriously, for the water was clear as crystal, and as cold as we could conveniently bear it. On the reverse side was a high tockey bank, overhung by a luxutiant vegetation, which gratefully shielded us from the rays of the sun. The encamping ground is (including the space covered by the shed,) not larger than two hundred men can convemently bivouac on.

At noon the thermometer was 90° in the sepoys' pall pose of enjoying a little refrigeration, but were soon exclusion of all intruders.

We were now beyond the influence of the tide, and as the old village of Aeng is forty-five miles from the month of the river, I expect the tide, excepting at spring, does not flow many miles above. As it was here I first made the observation, I may as well describe some peculiarities regarding the Kyens, who acted as our coolies. They are a hill tribe and little better than savages; however, they are very useful in carrying burthens up and down hills where men of the plains find a difficulty in carrying themselves. Every article that can be put in a basket is carried in one of an oblong formation, having a loop fixed to the top made of split cane, and a strip of split cane goes round the centre, the former, the Kyen puts over his head, fixing it round his temples, while he fastens the ends of the strip below round his waist, this keeps the basket in a firm and proper position, and gives the man the free use of his hands while travelling. Other articles such as tents, besis, &c, are either slung on a bamboo or carried on a kind of bamboo ladder, supported by two or more men according to the weight.

As soon as night began to approach, I noticed the simple peoplemaking a shed for themselves from the bamboo covered by its leaves, to arrest the heavy dew that invariably falls in this climate. This would be the hest plan for sepoys when marching in this country; to sup-pose a tent can be carried for an army of any size, would be entirely out of the question. The coolies receive here three annas a day, so high is labour on account of the thin population of the province. The encamping ground here posing we desired a substitute of being made available for a regiment, supposing we desired a substitute of being no tents, or at least do not pitch say. The jungle is not of such a nature, but that if every man carried a dow or age of the coun try he might soun cut a convenient place to escource himself in for the night; and, in marching a regiment through this province, it would be desirable that every man should carry a dow on his knapsack : it seems to be a sine que non among the people of the province. At sun-set the thet mometer was at 720.

13th .- Two hours before sunrise ther. at 62°; marched at day break for Surrowah, supposed distance eight miles.

creeper resembling, in all but the aroma, the hop. On We now seeme I to have left what little civilization we the breasts of the hills adjacent, grew a considerable had before seen entirely behind us, for only a single Kyen but perched here and there on the side of a hill, partially cleared of its bamboos and other jungle, was to be observed the whole of this march. We passed two steep ghtuts, one at an encamping ground called Peenozukan, the other immediately on our approach to Surrowah, besides two small hill streams, whose banks were very muddy and precipitous. From Peenozukan we enjoyed an extensive view of the hills around us, embellished with all the beauty of light and shade derived from the I had mounted the elephant at lustre of a rising sun. a shed has been erected capable of receiving and the foot of the last hill that intervened 'twist us and our journey's end, but found the descent so very precipitous on arriving at its summit, that I preferred trusting my own legs for the slippery adventure of descending; the hill being of a red, firm, clay soil, was of considerable advantage, or I might have gone down considerably faster than would have been desirable. At the foot of the descent, we crossed the Surrowah river by a hambeo bridge, though it was fordable, being no where over the part where the bridge was ejected more than four ic this figures to Sorrowah or if quite so deep. Thorrowah, as it is pronounced by the natives. Here the At noon the thermometer was 90° in the sepoys' pall Arracan locals have a post for the protection of the and 85 under the shed. Feeling the heat rather un-inland trade between Arracan and the countries alt pleasent, we made a retreat into the jungle for the pur- the Yoomadong Mountains. A number of Shan travelling merchants were here on our arrival, and I made driven out again by an army of musquitos, who seemed some trifling purchases of cloth, twenty-live hauts for desirous to monopolize the shade themselves to the the rupee, and of Shan pawn boxes at one super cach; these are japanned, with fast, or pucka color, and so perfectly plable to the pressure of the har. The bathing place here I thought preferable to that at Zeunerchakam where the rough pebbles form an uncomfortable footing; here the bottom was composed more of fine sand than pebbles. Here I reheved the old detachment by the new, and right glad were the former to leave the jungle, some having been located here upwards of two years. I found ten sick; these were permitted to proceed in diagies to Aeng; the river being navigable as tar as the Thorrowah, by small boats of this kind, at this season of the year. Her: I showld have ended my labors and have returned, but for curcuinstances which it behoveth me not to mention; at least I am not aware I am at liberty to make public the reason of my advancing further towards the frontier. Thermometer at noon 88°.

14th .- Thermometer at 4 A.M. 729, altitude of Thorrowah 147 feet: march at daylight accompanied by a guard of I havildar, I naick, and twelve sepoys, the our especial protection through the dangerous country we had to pass. At the very commencement, we en-countered a hill that set us all piping, and before f reached its brow I was too glad to ascend the re-me in on the elephant, who was sorely put to it hesself, for instead of walking she bent on each knee at every to upwaids. There were but few tiees of any size in oc seen on this portion of the road, bamboo being piedo.ai-naut every where. About half way on our descent of this vast branch from the great line of the Youmadong mountains, we crossed a hill rivulet well attuated to refresh cattle and the wayward travelter. After the fatigue of the ascent on enther side, crossing this small stream, we still kept descending for half a mile, when we had another steep ascent before us; indeed these ascents and descents formed the principle features of the read on every masch, excepting that we had more of the former than the latter to blod over, ascending on an average one toot in twenty. Two halting places were noticed on the march, both on high ground, but no water, excepting at considerable distances below; on these places grew a few trees, but bamboo jungle ab-orbed the sight as far as the eye could reach. At the I he whole of this march is through a bamboo jungle, last of these open halting spaces called Mengaukon, we had a very extensive and magnificent view of the hills, including parts of the Yoomadong principal range.

The road on this march in many parts was excessively narrow, not more than two or three yards wide in many places. Much clearing is requisite, and my progress on the elephant was considerably retarded by branches of trees and bamboos intercepting the passage. On the descent from Mengzukon, we met about 100 laden bullocks, going to Aeng with merchandize from the Shan country, which lies on the north-east frontier of Burmah. The cattle were in fine condition, but the loads did not appear heavy, and it is usual for the conductors of this trade to be ten or eleven hours on a common stage of ten miles; they make it a custom to rest at almost every convenient spot to smoke, &c. and that they may always stop when they are inclined, they take the necessary precaution of carrying water with them in large hollow bamboos, tied in hundles of three inve; these they take in such quantities as to serve for 'hemselves and cattle for at least as many rests as they equire, where water, as on this road, is a scarce article. About half past eight, arrived at Guatcha or Netzazukan, ... the ridge of a connecting link overlooked by a steep a-cent, on whose summit a large encamping ground is ground, on account of the water being nearer. Descending to the right, I found the spring. Very little water was procurable, but were the rock, which is of a soft slate, scraped, and a cistern formed, enough water would found for the cattle of a convilerable camp.

aporary dam of mud and bamboos alone partially re-' aid a very small pool at the foot of the spring valle for our own use we caught from a split bamboo the set into the fissure, from whence this valuable element sound, or rather drobbled; by this means we increased he thow, and at the same time avoided the contamination re must have incurred by drinking the water from the auddy pool below, into which one of our niggers uncere-... mously tood, disturbing the secreted sediment at the bottom; to say nothing of the agreeable tincture his foot must have given so small a body of aqueous fluid. The descent to this spring is of necessity serpentine in formation, and a mere foot-path through the bamboos, its distance from the road may be computed at about 200 yards. Distance of Guatcha from Sorrowah computed at about five miles. Not even a Keyn hut visible, or one andent inhabitant since leaving Thorrowah. Thermo moter at noon 84°, altitude above the sea according to Pumberton, 1,476 feet.

Scatt at about three P.M. and proceed as far as Waddai or Waddat, immediately at the base of the ascent on leaving Guatcha, a fall of the lall above has tiken place, carrying part of the road with it, and renbegoan, out's however managed so well as so get by whent falling down the precipice on the left. The . As taust be out farther into the side of the hill to make the cie, or on the first shower the mere foot-path now e among will assuredly descend into the deep ravine it is. The ascent after the first part became more g shual, the road running round the shoulder of the vast n the were advancing over; the road was tolerable and passable for artillery excepting at the place above mentioned, where a new road of about fifty or sixty yards must be made. Arrived at Waddai about five o'clock, visited the spring which is on the right of the road; more at undant than at Guatcha, but a greater distance by

Our ground was on the road, as most of the encamp-ing places are; before us for our especial comfort and contemplation, we had the view of a steep ascent, upon whose steep and rugged sides it would behave us to wend our way on the following morning. Face of the country, covered with bamboo unlimited to sight.

find the road little better than a watercourse or ravine. intercepted occasionally by blocks of sand-stone of considerable gravity; on the summit of this elevation is a large open space capable of encamping a brigade, but no water nearer than from whence we came below, or probably at the foot of the hill, in front, among the ravines formed by the inferior roots of the great emi-nences around. The road from this point is much better, and no considerable descent is made. Our old friends, the bamboos, we now remarked, became scarce, and superceded by fine forest trees at about three miles from Waidi. And now, Mr. Editor, while we traverse about two miles of tolerably level road, let us discourse of the sporting qualities of the country. Until we had attained this point, our guns had not once reverberated among the hills, or startled silent nature by a report. This march, however, we took the precaution of leading or heading our small and trusty band, making the baggage follow in the rear, supported by a naick and four. We had just cleared the brow of the hill, when we espied a gallant cock strutting on the verge of the road, but the gaily plumaged hero was wide awake to the villaimous effect of the saltpetie compound, and after a vain pursuit we advauced gun in hand. Alas! there was little use in this, for the only birds that fell in our way afterwards, were four chikores, one of which I sent ever the precipice far into deep jungle, where no mortal foot e'er had or could have trad, save for his own protection. A sportman on this road had better leave his gun in case, for although there are a few fowls and chickores, yet the thick jungle and the steepness of the hills on every side almost pre-vents the possibility of bagging. On leaving the baraboos, we got into a more open jungle, and gradually into a magnificent forest, the altitude of many of the noble trees we saw was immense. Most of these were on the side of the Nodong mountain, around those colossal form our circuit lay. I here note some angiospermous shrub-from whose white bulbs I pressed a number of black round seeds. I regret I have not brought any with me, as the odour of the plant was very agreeable. Here also we made acquaintance with a variety of mosses encasing the trunks of trees and clothing stones with their verdure. A species of palm tree was hore discernible. My geological notes only refer to the nature of the road uself, and that part of the soil which was exposed on the side of each hill around which the road has been cut; at this height about 3,000 feet, in a depth of incision of about four feet, a stratum resembling fuller's earth embraced another of the depth of two feet, consisting of ferruginous soil, winged with slate approximating the appearance of coal; detached masses of this slate rock, by exposure to the air, had become of a lighter complexion. The road requires much clearing, the trunks of several trees now lying across it, inconthe highest part of Nodong, we began to breath much pure air, and it was evident to our sense of respiration, that we had attained a considerable elevation above the close jungle of the minor hills. Here too, we enjoyed a more extensive view than hitherto, shut in only on northeast by the still greater altitude of the Youmadong range and the cone of our supporting height, which intercepted the picture to the south-west. After resting here awhile, we made a considerable descent over a very bad road impracticable for artillery in its present state, but capable of being made available ar no great expense of time or labor.

After overcoming all obstacles without any accident occurring, a gently rising ground brought us to the foot of Natyagain or Naregain, at a halting place called Karowke, at an elevation of 3,165 feet above the level of the sea. Here we found water and a better ground for our camp than that generally used, by making a descent to our left; here we were within 100 yards of the spring; which issued from the interstices of the magnificent 15th.—Thermometer daylight 64°: commence our which issued from the interstices of the magnificent march to Karowkee by winding up the hill before us; Natyagain, beneath whose commanding presence, we were encamped, shaded by the lofty and gorgeous foliage of a forest whose mighty tenants bent gracefully their sun-gilded boughs to the mountain breeze.

But amid romantic scenes, the little wants of life will force themselves upon our recollection, as well as in the crowded city or the solitary cell. Soon therefore had we the satisfaction of watching the arcana of our breakfast preparations, while the truent smoke ascended, courting in wantonness the morning air. Well might human nature be a prey to appetite, after such a walk as we this morning had taken.

After discussing eight or ten eggs mingled with some thin slices of an especial brisket of my own selec tion, and making an addenda of sundry sardines, plum jams, and Wilson's biscuits, confirmed by no given quantity of Bass's imperial, we lit our manifes and began contemplating the ascent of Natzagain, whose lofty and o'ertow'ring brow we had fully determined on ferming an acquaintance with. Accordingly, taking a few men with us we set out about twelve o'clock for the purpose. and here Mr. E., I must confess, I became amenable to the Martin act, id est, had the circumstance occurred in Great Britaid or Ireland. I have no: where stated that I had arged or exacted assistance from the miserable looking tattoo, whose garniture had the honor of my previous notice. But to useend Natzagain I had no alternative, for had I attempted to scramble up, I should (like merry Jack) have so larded the lean earth, that every soul who might attempt to track me, would have made as much progress as a turnspit at work, a squirrel in a trundle-cage, or a gentleman at the tread mill. I determined to mount the aquine quadruped out of mercy to my fat sides, and for stirrups, I supplied my extremities with supports by stringing a small rope double over the saddle; inserting my feet in the dependent loops. Thus the shadow of a Hudibras in hors equipment and person I marched me up the hill, nearly finding my way to the ground, though on more occaleathers, not being properly made fast on the saddle, began trimming like a member of parliament who cannot make up his mind as to which side he may find it his interest to support, first on one side, then on the other, according to my preponderance of pressure. At length, by dint of a most strenuous exertion on the part of my tattoo, who was much better and stronger than his looks at first led to me to suppose, I found myself safe on the summit of the mountain, and 4,590 feet above the sea.

Here a most splendid panorama presented itself, for on one side at a distance, perhaps of sixty miles, like a reflector, interspersed by numerous blemishes, lay the Bay of Combernere, with all its connected estuaits resembling streaks of silver on an emerald ground; above and about its rolled vast volumes of marky clouds, abedient to the alghibess couriers of the air, ever and anon unveiling the mountainous region below to on; wondering gaze. Having satisfied our curiosity on this side the mountain we made an advance over the border' and there we stood, as Moses stood, and viewed the Lindscape o'er, though the atmosphere on this side was misty. We children of the mist' was with admiration the just champaign condity, as it were, flowing with milk and honey before us. The descent on this side is much more precipious than on the other, averaging one that in ten. From the point on which we chested our observation, the Irawaitie and Man rivers with singuishable, gliding through what possessed as appearance of a highly cultivated country. The shake eminences on the Burmeie side axiend but a short distance from the great require, at least by the cour of all with which Lysis obliged to coulent myself, such was the impression effected.

We now returned to our own side the boundary, and drank success to the next war.

The few sepoys we took with us seemed to look with envy on the fine plain of the Irrawattie, so different was the aspects of their own country, compared with what they beheld on the Burmah side.

On the summit of Natzagain, a few posts, and a double trench, still mark where the Burmese had a line of stockade for the defence of the pass, while a hollow, whether natural or artificial, I could not determine, has evidently served for a reservoir for the teten-iou of rain soiler. The only inhabitants of these hills appear in the apes. While we were ascending, we heard them making a kind of backing noise, but did not get a sight of any. The ascent to the summit is carried up the face of the mountain in a sig-zag formation, but is very difficult on account of the loseness of the ground and slate rock, with which it abounds. About half way on the ascent, was a large pile of stones, and every man as he passed by, added to the heap, by throwing a stone on the master. I enquired the reason, and was informed, that it was a species of devotion paid to the spirits of the mountain, by the observance of which they hoped for strength to overcome the difficulties of the ascent. After enjoying ourselves in the cool mountain air for half an hour, we made the best of our time in descending; the only difficulty being in keeping a proper equilibrium, and a sem footing on our precipitous path. Thermometer at moon in tent at Karowkee 70°, sunset 65°. On the 16th at day light 62°, morning teturned to Waddi, but having exhibited the general character of the country on my advance route, and noted every difficulty worth recording that may be expected by others, whose lot it may be to follow this track hereafter, recapitulation is unnecessary and uncalled for, I shall therefore conclude by a few general remarks, with an addenda of some particulars obtained from native report, of a route called the Paine, or Peane road diverging in a north easterly direction from Waddi, across the Yoomadongs into Ava as far as the banks of the Inawattie. In the course of narration I have had occasion to mention a hill tribe called Kyens, but there is one practice current among them which has met with neglect from my ren. In former times, report says, the women of this, tribe possessed an uncommon share of loveliness which tendered them objects of attraction to the oppressors of their country, and led to the abduction of the fairest and most beautiful among them, by the ruthless hands of foreign despots. To prevent these occurrences the chiefs and elders of this oppressed clau devised the cruel operation of tattooing the faces of their female offspring, deeming the beauty of women, as nothing compared with the loveliness of chastity. I made no particular enquiries, but give it as my opinion, that no matron had a voice in the conclave when the tattooing act was passed, and the young ladies were positively excluded. The process of creating fire by friction, also came under my inspection; but a this is an art of savage life very generally comprehended. I merely notice the circumstance in a casual manner, as being a means of ignition generally in use among these, as with savages in other quarters of the globe.

On the inland trade from Shan and other states tributary to the Burmese monarch. I must quote rather from report then occular demonstration. The number of building sonnaily visiting Aeng, or Yowadest averages 10,800. In the imports consisting of the following variety, vis. beest way, called juree, khut, an a stringent asten, with pawin, chownskah, a bark used in the arcana of a lady's tollet apparatus, cotton, kapas, threads, red, black and white, shan pawn boxes, sweet oil, a small sind of enions, talk ka goes; a coarse sugar, Burmese dhaws, for mood outling; silks of various putterns.

some very pretty, and resembling Scotch plaids, mustand deed. The returns are mostly, salt, dried or salted fish and beetlenut.

The silk appears common enough, (not in texture,) for every man who can afford it generally glories in a silk. At Akyah I have noticed chupkuns in addition, made of black velvet, richly flowered, generally worn by the Mughs on high days and holidays; these i presume are imported from China.

Of the road commonly called 'the Paieng road,' I have learnt the following particulars from those who have passed over it, viz. the Shans,

Route from Waddi in Arracan to Choungpropering on the Irrawattie; so pronounced by the natives to me ARRAGAN.

By this route total. 120 Distance from Aeng to Memboo on the Irrawattie via Nazagain

N. B .- In the above distance, both may be made ad. lib., the road being along the bed of the nullah, from which water can be procured in the driest season.

Here are two branches by which two divisions might debouch on the plains of Ava, by regulated marches at, one and the same time. But I have reason to suspect one and the same time. But I have reason to suspect the Paising pass is not practicable for artillery or wheeled carriages of any kind. The Shans, whom I questioned, said it was two rocky way; this we may easily suppose when one half the route has no better claim to the pame of road than what the bed of a hill stream may chance to afford. However, in the case of a rupture with the Barmese, there is every probability that a light division my traverse this route if capable of carrying provisions for twelve days, leaving a depôf at Waddie, where a stockade may be formed, as a support to the advance l divisions on either route. For this purpose, there is a very advantageous site at Waddie, commanding a watering place, and immediately on the main road. The only disadvantage of this position is on account of its being commanded by the steep ridge in its immediate front, though the distance is so great as to be searcely within the range of muskerry. But odee our divisions a-head, there would be no fear of an attack on the depte, in their rear e-pecially, if both the Peang and Natzagain routes are in occupation.

I shall here bring my account to a conclusion by remarking, that the probable expenso requisite to make the Aeng Pass on the Arracan side practicable for the passage of artillery, and to build wooden bridges over five hill streams flowing between Aeng and Surrowah, to obviate the obstruction formed by them at all seasons. would not exceed Rs- 5,000 and it is to be hoped, when an official roport of the present state of the road shall have been made to Government, that honorable body will be sufficiently alive to its own interest, and the pro-tection it naturally owes to its subjects, to accede to the just claims this (politically speaking) important province, has on the distribution of money from the public purse.

MUGII.

DISTRESS IN THE UPPER PROVINCES.

It has rarely, if ever, been our lot to record the proceedings of a meeting so highly honorable in every way to the humanity and public spirit of the inhabitants of Calcurta, as that which took place yesterday afternoon at the Town-hall, having for its object the consideration of the best means of alleviating the distress of the population of the western provinces. Notwithstanding the numerous calls which have been lately made upon the hunness of the community, for worthy and honorable purposes, every budy seemed to feel that the present was an occasion which left no excuse for parsimony, founded upon past liberality and indulgence. But we must briefly record the proceedings the proceedings.

At about half past four the meeting began to assemble, and by five, upwards of one hundred and fifty persons, comprising the principal inhabitants of the town, and a great many netives, had collected.

The Lord Bishop being called to the chair at the instance of Sir Edward Ryan, seconded by Mr. W. W. Hird His Lordship obeyed the call, and addressed the meaning at some length, expanising upon the coadmion of the perishing thousands—stating what the Government had done towards the mitigation of sufficing, and what it now behoved the public at large to do. His Lordship was said to see a main terms as ambied on the account. it now behoved the public of targe to do. His Lordship destructed was glad to see so many natives assembled on the occasion, and in his own simple but impressive manner exhorted them not to be backward in the work of benevolence at a crisis so momentum to thousands of their countrymen. Mr. R. D. slaugles, to whom had been entrusted the first resolution, ro-e when the Bishop had concluded, and, after elicitously adverting to the obligation imposed upon men of all creeds and kinds to per-form the offices of charity to the poor and the lungry, read the following paper, which sufficiently explained what had been done by the Government of the north western previnces, and what was expected from the private bounty of the community at large :

Norm. By J. Thomason, Esq., officiating secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, north western provinces, dated

The efforts of Government for the alleviation of the distress in the north western provinces have been directet :

First .- To a suspension of the demand for the Government jumma.

Secondry .- To the employment of the able bodiest destitute on works of public utility, such as the construcThirdly .- To the preservation of the public peace, and proclaimed and enforced by the Government, and some

First. - The regulation of the demand on behalf of the Government has been left chiefly to the Sudder Board first kist or instalment, and made the two next very light, throwing the weight of the collections on the latter kists. As, however, the year has advanced, the agricultural distress in the centre of the Doab and along the right bank of the Jumna has greatly increased, and of course all attempts to realize the heavier kisis will be abandoned. In the distincts where the settlement has not been revised, the suspended demand will be allowed to he over till the revision of the settlement, and will then be recommended for remission or realized according as the circumstances of each village require. In the districts where the settlement has been revised, an attempt will be made to recover, during the latter years of the leases, the suspended demand of this year, to conformity with the principal on which the settlement was made. . The realization of this expectation evidently, however, depends on circumstances which cannot now be foreseen. Tucavee advances for med grain have also been largely given, and this mode of relief may be bere appropriately mentioned.

Secondly.—The employment of the able-bodied desti-tute, on works of public utility. This was at first reany amount with a view to the support of the people, and not with any expectation of a profitable return for the capital laid out. Inclination to work was in fact adopted as the test of degree of destitution. Gratuitous support of the infirm was not given, as this appeared a more appropriate object for the private charity of individuals, which was generally and liberally bestowed throughout the country.* It did not also appear practicable to lay down rules which should admit of this mode of relief by the Government, without liability to very greatabuse. The officers employed in the construction of the grand trunk road, were also empowered to expend each Re-2,000 per measem, in the employment of the destitute, and a supply of blankets to the most deserving was sauctioned. In the Cawnpore district, where the revenue and magisterial functions are performed by different persons, the deputy collector has been especially empowered to employ the destitute in the distressed perguanaha of his district, as far as may be practicable, in the neighbour-hood of their villages. It is anticipated that this may be advantageously performed through the agency of the tahsealdary establishments, under the personal superiutendence of the deputy collector.

Thirdly.-The preservation of the public peace, and more especially the protection of the trade in grain, extensive disorganization of the agricultural population, has been the natural result of the discress. It first arose in Robitcund, but was checked there by a timely fall of rain. It then broke out in the Allyguriyand Furrucka-bad districts, and last of all in the Delhi division. In the last care it was quickly; and entirely suppressed, but the last case it was quierry and entirely suppressed, our in the former, although its extreme violence lased only for a short time, a frightful increase of crime has continued for a long period. Stores of grain, boats laten with grain, and Brinjerry bullocks have been the main objects of attack; this in many cases, violent and designing men have been able to work on the necessities of their fellow creatures, and engage them in more general schemes of depredation. The natural liability to disorders of this kind was beightened by the freedom of the trade in corn, more especially to the protection of the trade in grain, unaccountable impression which obtained currency amongst the people, that crimes of the kind would be connived at. The distressed districts are mostly counof Revenue, in whose views on the subject, the growing countries, where large quantities of grain are Government coincide. They entirely suspended the usually stored in the several villages by capitalists, who usually stored in the several villages by capitalists, who buy up the surplus produce of plentiful years. An ignorant population were driven to exasperation, when they saw these stores opened before them, and the grain for the want of which they were starving, exported to a better market

> As soon as occurrences of this nature were foreseen or reported, full authority was given to the commissioners to strengthen the police sufficiently to provide for the public peace. The enegertic measures which were consequently adopted, proved successful, and confidence was soon re-established. 🐣

> Subsequently events have confirmed the soundness of this policy. As the season advanced although the distress increased, and prospects became more gloomy, the grain marchants opened their stores as soon as they were assured of protection, and price fell rather than rose. It only remained by affording employment to the destitute to place within the reach of the food which was exposed for sale.

It is hoped that these may have some effect in lessoning the mjury which the country will suffer stricted in amount, but as the distress increased, the ma-from this heavy affliction, and it is gratifying to hear gistrates have been empowered to grant employment to emulating the example of the Government and not merely abstaining from any demand on their tenants, but even expending large sums for their support. It must, however, be some time before the country can recover. The cattle have perished in numbers; the people have emigrated, or been swept off by the diseases which want and exposure engender, and time will necessarily clapse before the cattle can be replaced or the villages re-peopled.

> (Signed) J. Thomason. (A true copy) W. H. Mc NAGUTEN.

Secy. to the Govt. of India with the Govr. Gen.

Mr. Mangles mentioned that the revenue remitted by the Government amounted to not less than sixty lacs of rupees. He added what was now required of society was not grain -for of that there was sufficiency-but money wherewith the local authorities might purchase food for those who were without it. Mr. Mangles neished by proposing the following resolution, which was seconded by Russonov Datt, who earnestly dwelt upon the importance of his countrymen's coming forward on the present occasion. "The Government," said the worthy Baboo, "hes done its duty,"—the Europeans would doubtless do their's :—it was for the netives to shew that they were not backward, when so serious a call was made upon their bounty.

Resolved that authentic information has been received of the existence of the extreme distress, in consequence of the draught in certain parts of the north western previnces, and that, under the orders of the late Light. Governor, measures for the relief of this distress Light. Governor, measures for the feller of the distress have been taken by Government by the remission of suppersion of the public demand for revenue, and by directions given to the civil authorities to afford employment without hait to all persons willing to work. But the Lieut Governor old hot deem it experient to sansage the grant of elsemosynary aid from the public coffees to persons anable to work. That this meeting is of opinion that it is the office of private charity to step in 200, and numerous others 100 rupees and 50 rupees each, young, and to those too infirm to labor."

The resolution having been unanimously carried, Sir J. P. Grant addressed the meeting with his usual good sense, good taste and feeling. He recapulated some part of what had already been laid before the meeting added thereto some facts of which no mention had been made-urged expedition in the collection and transmission of subscriptions, and by way of encoursging all who had the means of contributing in ever so small a degree, not to be deferred by the smallness of their donations : he spoke of the acceptability of the "widow's mite," mentioned two or three instances of large accumulation through trifling donations. Sir John then proposed the following resolution which was seconded by Rushtumjee Cowasiee :

"That with this object, a subscription be opened at both the banks, books be circulated and other measures taken to invite the contributions of the public, and especially of the native community for the relief of the dreadful distress known to exist in the north western provinces."

Baboo Prosonno Comar Tagore proposed the third resolution, prefacing it with the highly gratifying information that his friend Neilmony Day, on hearing of the prevailing distress had sent up to Government 500 rupees, to be applied to the purposes of relief, and the munifi-cent Dwark mauth Tagoie (whose 'bounty is as bound-less as the deep') had authorised the subscription of a similar sun, if any attempt should be made in Calcutta to assist the sufferers in the western provinces.

3d Resolution - That the following gentlemen be requested to form themselves, into a committee to realize the subscriptions, and to dispose of them to the best advantage for the contemplated object :

Mr. Thos. Holroyd, Mr. W. Bird, Capt. Birch, Mr. W. Martin, Mr. Tucker, the Archdeacon. Mr. W. Prinsep. Mr. George Alexander, Rev. Mr. Fisher, Rossomoy Dutt, Prosonno Comar Tagore, Ramconul Seu, Radacant Deb, Nimoney Deb, Rustomjee Cowasjee, Muttyloll Seal, Mr. J. W. Alexander, Mr. Liudeman, Mr. E. Macnaghten, Dr. St. Leger, Rev. Mr. Charles, Mr. Alexander Colvin, and Mr. A. De Souza.

The business of the meeting having now nearly concluded, Sir Edward Ryan proposed, the thanks of the assembly to the respected chairman, our amiable Diocesan, whose promittude to answer the calls of distress, Sir Elward very happily and justly eulogised. Mr. W. Bird seconded the proposal with mucle becoming warmth, and in the course of a well-delivered speech did the Press the honour to acknowledge its instrumentality in directing public attention to the subject which the meeting had assembled to discuss. Sir John Peter Grant then, with much good humour, deposed the Bishop, and usurping the office of Chairman, put the any time he subscribed. He seemed to think, and with resolution of thanks to the vote. The resolution being good reason, that expedition in the present case is half carried by acclaim, the Lord Bishop remarked to the meeting, (which was then dispersing,) that he thought the business of the day could not be better finished, than by every person present putting his name down at once for as much as he felt disposed to subscribe. The Commence of th

We should mention that when Sir Edward Ryan was addressing the meeting, he put in the following paper, containing subscriptions raised by Rushtomjee Cowasjee, the perusal of which elicited loud applause:

When all present had signed the subscription paper, the meeting broke up, Mr. Mangles suggesting that it be an instruction to the committee to send up authority to the relief committees in the interior to draw monies for the purposes of buying grain to the extent that may at any time be subscribed. He seemed to think, and with ne battle.

We are too much pressed for time to go further at present into the question of what is required of the country in this great emergency ; but we shall not fail to re-

We conclude by announcing, for the guidance of such of the committee as were absent at the close of the proceedings, that the committee will meet this afternoon at

MEETING AT THE SAILOR'S HOME.

At about quarter past 9 o'clock the meeting at the Sailor's Home took place where the number present amounted to ten gentlemen, among whom we noticed Messics, Colvin and Cragg, Captain Vint, Balston, Frazer, and the Reverend Mr. Boaz. It was moved by Captain Vint, and seconded by Mr. Colvin, that Captain Frazer be requested to take the chair. It is necessary to say that several others joined afterwards.

Captain Frazer opened the proceedings of the day, by observing that when he was last in Calcutta, about three years ago, when an establishment like the Sailor's Home was acknowledged by many of his nautical friends to be greatly needed, and it rejoiced him considerably to find on his recent arrival, that a Home had actually been established. This intelligence was the more acceptable under the peculiar circumstances which brought him to Calcutta. The men of that unfortunate ship the Royal William, lately commanded by him, had now a comfortable home to receive them, where they were perfectly happy, and from whence they might hope to obtain respectable employment. He would not trespass further upon the time of the meeting with any observations on the utility of such an establishment, to which he was happy in giving his personal testimony.

Mr. Colvin stated that to give stability to such an institution, and successfully and permanently to promote its interests and usefulness, required the mutual cooperation of the commanders, owners and agents of vessels. That an unanimous determination on the part of commanders would render the assistance of others of secondary importance, and he hoped to find them associated together for this exceedingly useful and beneficial purpose.

The Reverend Mr. Boaz conceived that before proceeding any further in the business for which the meeting had assembled, a brief relation of the causes which induced the establishment of the Home, would be of service to it, and profitably occupy the attention of the gentlemen present. Long before the successful establishment of the Home, his attention was directed to those sinks of corruption denominated Punch Houses; which, with the pernicious system of crimping, extensively prevailed in Calcutta. fostering the demoralizing effects of idleness, the natural bent of the human mind occasion,-Hurk. under temptation, and its uncontrolled indulgence in the use of artlent spirits. He determined to make the attempt of establishing a Sailor's Home, and was glad to say, that with the assistance of his fellow creatures and under Divine blessing, he had been enabled to carry his intention into effect. The success which had attended similar establishments in London, Liverpool, Leith, Boston and other sea-port towns, it was to be hoped would also crown their endeavours. In fact he had no doubt of the result, if the Home received the support of the mercantile and shipping community, whose well doing as well as that of the sailor depended upon its continued and respectable existence. Already he was happy to announce, one of the principal punch houses had been induced to close its doors, and he hoped that before the close of another year, all the minor sinks would cease to exist. From a statement which he held, drawn out from the police reports, it appeared that within the last six months, or from June to December, out of about 700 seamen, who had been living on shore, 386 were accommodated in punch houses, 303 at the Home, and the rest it might be supposed were in hospital, or straggling about the town. As a satisfactory evidence of the great utility of the establishment, and the benders derivable from its operations, it was worthy of remark, the men who had resorted to the Home, were generally of good character and sober habits, and consequently when employed, invariably found capable of undertaking the performance of active duties, whereas men obtained through crimps, or from the purlieus of Loll Bazar and other places, had from long indulgence in liquor, and other debilitating vices, become so nervous, irritable, and shameless, that it was with difficulty they were made to keep to their engagement, while they proved unfit to do any manner of work, for some time after they had been on boardship.

Qur time and space will not permit us to proceed as minutely into matters as we could desire; we shall therefore close this imperfect, but we nevertheless hope, acceptable report, with merely stating, that a general disposition to support the excellent institution seemed to prevail, and which practically carried into effect, cannot but permanantly benefit the seamen of the port, and secure the interests of owners and commanders of vessels. We shall again revert to the subject on some future

THE FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SOCIETY CONNECTED WITH THE PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

The above meeting was held on Thursday evening, ! the 1st instant, and consisted of about fifty gentlemen, chiefly subscribers to the institution and parents and guardians of the pupils.

On the motion of Mr. M. Crow, seconded by Mr. C. F. Byın, the Rev. Mr. Boaz was called to the chair; and with a few usual prelatory remarks, called on the secretary to read the report. This document commenced by lamenting the loss which the institution had sustained during the year in the death of Mr. Lonmer, the head teacher of the school. It then went on to detail the arrangements that had, in consequence, been necessarily adopted; one of which was, that everal of the pupils of this school, who had been for years engaged in the work of education, had been promoted. This practice was followed by other public schools in Calcutta, and it was a cause of great satisfaction to the committee to think that the institution was enabled, to a very great extent, to look to itself for instruments for carrying on the work of education. The quarterly examinations had been held at the stated periods, and the annual examination took place on the 15th of December last. The report then enumerated the various branches of education in which the pupils had been examined, which was followed by extracts from the new-papers giving an account of the examination. The improvement in the tone of education pursued at this and other similar institutions was adverted to and mention made that this was the oldest institution of its kind, and had a large share in producing that improvement. A list of the prizes awarded at the last examination, with the names of the successful candidates next followed. On the 28th ultimo, the number or pupils in the -chool amounted to 213. resignation of Dr. Halliday, of the medical charge of the school, in consequence of his departure from Calcutta, and the appointment of Dr. F. Corbyn in his to in, were noticed, and the reports of these gentlemen regarding the health of the pupils, which went to establish that the children had been remarkably healthy, in consequence of the great care and vigilance exercised over the culmary, the clothing, and other departments connected with their comforts. The pecumary difficulties of the institution were the next points noticed; but a sub-committee had been formed to remedy the evil, and its arrangements had effected great savings, so that it was hoped this measure, added to the realization of the cutstanding balances, would, in some degree, relieve the institution. The departure of Sir C. T. Metcalle, and his parting liberal donation of a Re-1,000 to the institution, as well annother thousand from D. O. D. Sombre, Esq., formed the last topic of comment in the report, and it concluded with expressions of gratitude to all the supporters of the institution.

Mr. Kirkpatrick .- This institution is one of the first of the kind, and had, at its commencement, struggled with great difficulties; but it has successfully overcome them, which must be a source of satisfaction to all connected with it. The report had made allusion to the progress of the other seminaries, every one of which was, like horses in a race, endeavouring to gain the vantage ground in obtaining favour. Under such circumstances, and with a disinterested public, industry alone could command success. They would patrouize the best candidate for their favor, leaving alone those that were going back-institution. It has been progressing onward, which in it self is an evidence in its favor. The meeting were not now called upon to record an opinion formed on the spot by the perusal of the report, but an opinion formed long before from other circumstances. Mr. Kirkpatrick alluded to the death of Mr. Lorimer, and to his zeal and undivided energy in behalf of the school. Considering the small recompense he got, how he wrote out his constitution in performing the duties of this seminary, he might be justly sail to have fallen a victim to the cause of education. The annual exhibition was not, he thought, sufficient to enable the public to form a proper estimate of the qualifications of the pupils, he would suggest a plan followed in academies in England, which was to select one or two of the higher classes for examination, and propose to them a series of questions which had been tegistered, and record the answers which might be elicited in the course of examination. This would not only enable those who were present to form an opinion but the published report embodying these answers would quable those at a distance to judge of the school.

He then moved, that the report now read be approved and published for general information. Seconded by Mr. S. Chill, carried unaumously.

The chairman, in putting the question, remarked that Mr. Kukpatrick had compared the schools to race horses; but he thought that a school to do well, required, like a horse, to be let well. The meeting, therefore, could not properly approve of the report without doing something towards wiping off the debts of the school. He had been lately at a meeting of the Sailor's Home. where, under similar cocumstances, every one present had subscribed, which example be expected would be tollowed here. The Wesleyan Societies in America, always kept them-clyes a little in debt in order to stimulate public charity; but he for one did not approve of debts, and would like to see the whole wiped off, and if the others subscribed he would add his mite at the end.

A subscription paper was here handed round, and we observed several put down their names; but we have not been able to ascertain the amount subscribed.

Mr. C. Pote expected nothing but unanimity on the resolution he was about to put. It was not necessary to talk on a subject which had been completely exhausted by having been spoken of in every possible term of eulogium. The name of Sir Charles Metcalfe (Cheers) recommends him to all India, nay to all the intellectual world, which has regarded his career, and borne testmony to his usefulness. Mr. Pote would, therefore, simply read the resolution, and expect the unanimous concurrence of the meeting. He would, however, submit one observation which had that moment occurred to him. The long experience of Sir Charles Metcalfe in India, and his mature judgment were well known to all. Now this great, good, and experienced man had marked out the Parental Institution for his especial patronage, which cucumstance was an evidence in its favor, and the example of so great and good a man ought to be followed by all who have the good of India at heart. Indied such an example could not tail to produce its due offect's the Chairman had already pointed out the means and it ward. By this an estimate could be formed of this was for the meeting and the public to follow it up.

Alluding to the paucity of examiners at the annual exami-! seminary to support it with their purse. The resolution nation, he regretted the circumstance; but singled out was carried unanimously. Dr. Corbyn as an individual who, notwithstanding his arduous professional avocations, had always been at his post for the ten or twelve years part, and performed this public duty. The institution he therefore thought, owed a great obligation to Dr. Corbyn. The following resolution was then moved by Mr. I'ole, and seconded by Mr. H. Andrews, and carried unanimously, with enthusiastic cheers, every one present standing up,

That concurring fully in the observations embodied in their report, this meeting desires respectfully to record its grateful sense of the liberal and encouraging disposition so uniformly evinced by Su C. T. Metcalfe towards the institution.

The chairman related an anerdote of Dr. Dodridge. The Doctor had been to see a good girl on the bed of sickness, and observed to her as a consolation that every body loved her: she, in the simplicity of her heart, replied, because she loved every body. The same might be said of Sir Charles; every body loved him because he loved every body.

Dr. Corbyn, had some experience in the progress of education on this side of India; and looked upon some of the leading public seminaries as doing the greatest good: but this institution he regarded as the principal among them. Here education was given in all its most useful branches, and civil and religious liberty formed the great foundation of the structure. The education was solid: the pupils learnt not by rote, but their understanding was cultivated. Their compositions had astonished many Englishmen. A gentleman who had closely examined the classes at the last annual exhibition, had lately met him and expressed his astonishment at the answers which the boys had given to his questions in Latin. This was Mr. Picans, a man fully capable of judging on such a subject. This was the reason that Sir Charles Metcalfe patronized this seminary; he had told Dr. Corbyn, that he considered this institution of great service to the public, not only as a source from which well qualified public servants could be obtained, but also as a means of encouraging morality in society, by making useful men of so many who with out education would have proved an evil to the community. These were the causes of the general patronage add good-will which this institution enjoyed. He moved the following resolution :

That this meeting begs to offer its best acknowledgments to his friends and supporters of the institution for the continuance of their aid in promoting its interests.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell, in seconding the resolution, observed, that this institution had laid the public under great obligation, by giving the first impulse to scholastic education in India. The first discoverer was always entitled to greater praise then those who followed up his footsteps. We had neard of objections to the variety and extent of studies pursued in this school; but considering the comparatively short time which children were kept in school in this country, he thought it was necessary to give them information on a variety of subjects. Schools and universities only laid a foundation.

After a good deal of desultory conversal the finish could be given by individual exertions afterwards. He adverted to the arrears not paid up by parents and guardwars, and said they ought to be ashamed of it. This institution he suid was based on liberty and Christianity, and served as a neucles for the diffusion of Knowledge to the most parts distant provinces of India to

On the motion of Mr. P. S. De Rozario, seconded by Mr. C. Kerr, it was resolved unanimously, that Mr. W. Byrn and other gentlemen forming the committee of management, be re-elected for the ensuing year, and that Mr. Byrn be requested to continue in the office of secretary to the institution.

The secretary then announced that Messes. D'Costa and Sturmer had resigned their seats in the committee, and Mr. II. B. Gardner said, that he had been authorized by Mr. James Wood to say, that he also begged to withdraw, in order to make room for others who might give to the committee a fresh impulse. He said Europeans as well as East Indians were supporters of the institution; but the committee consisted exclusively of the latter, he would, therefore, propose that the Rev. Mr. Boaz, now in the chair, should be added to the list of its members.

Mr. M. Crow, adverting to Mr. Gardner's remark on the resignation of Mr. Wood, observed, that as one of the management, it was not his intention to address the chair, but an opportunity having presented itself he would take advantage of it. An observation similar to that of Mr. Gardner had been made at the last annual meeting, on which occasion it was stated, that new blood ought to be infused into the exhausted veins of the committee, in order to give fresh impulse to its motions, In consequence of this observation, some new members had been added to the committee, and that, he (Mr. Crow) was selected as one of the number. The report he said, adverted to certain improvements made in the course of the year in the important department of finance, by a sub-committee of the management. He begged to state distinctly, that none of the new members were in this sub-committee, and that, therefore, in the credit due to its measures of economy; the new members had no further share than that of approving of those measures. Mr. Crow concluded by proposing, that Messis, P. S. De Rozaio and J. Graham be added to the committee.

Mr. Kirkpatrick observed, that Mr. Graham was at that time absent from Calcutta and could not, therefore, enter upon his labours as a member of the committee; he therefore proposed that Mr. Wood continue to occupy his seat until Mr. Graham's arrival.

Mr. Pote commented at some length upon the infuion of new blood into the exhausted veins of the commitree, and, we believe, proved that it was good or better than that of any new member who could be chosen.

The Rev. Mr. Boaz and Mr. P. S. De Rozario were hen duly elected.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, supported by Mr. Gardner, requested that a statement of the funds be laid on the table.

Mr. Crow observed, that there could be no objection to the measure itself; but that it was informal and out of order, in asmuch as it was contrary to a standing law of the society, the purport of which was, that none but subscribers to the institution were eligible to take a share in the financial management, and that the present meeting, being composed of many who were not subscribers,

After a good deal of desultory conversation on this subject, the proposition was withdrawn, and an abstract of the accounts having been placed on the table, and of the accounts saving and Gordon expressing themselves satisfied, the proposition was withdrawn satisfied out by Mr. Crow.

which young men brought up here would resort. He thanks of the meeting were then voted to the thought it a duty of those who had been educated at this chairman, and its members betted.—Hurk. March 3.

DWARKANATH TAGORE.

As some misrepresentation appears to have gone ! abroad in respect to the nature of Dwarkanath Tagore's munificent bequest to the District Charitable Society, we have sought and obtained information upon the subject, and now beg to lay it before our readers, in the shape of a copy of the letter of the trustees to the society:

The Hon. SIR EDWARD RYAN, KT, &c &c. &c.

President of the District Charitable Society. Honorable Sir, Our friend Dwarkanath Tagore prior to his leaving Calcutta, requested that we would undertake for him the necessary arrangements connected with the disposal of one lac of rupees, which sum it is his desire to appropriate to the accomplishment of some charitable object in this city. Dwarkanath desired that the dishursement of the amount so to be appropriated, might be in some measure connected with the operations and objects of that excellent institution, the District Charitable Society, and for that purpose he requested us to place ourselves in communication with the president. In now soliciting your permission to do so, we have the satisfaction of knowing, that we could not apply for advice or aid to enable us to carry the present bequest into effect to any one so well qualified to afford both in the most valuable degree or more capable of entering into the charitable views and benevolent intentions of our friend. It is the desire of Dwarkanath Tagore that, to whatever branch of charity the fund may ultimately be appropriated, it should be called Dwarkanath Tagore's Fund. The interest on the one lac of rupees before mentioned will be devoted to the maintenance of this fund, the principal to be invested in good mortgages in the name of certain trustees; the detailed wishes of the donor on these points are in our possion.

In conversation with ourselves, Dwarkanath Tagore appeared to be under an impression, that one class of indigent persons in this city, vis. the poor blind, were | - Englishman, March 4.

peculiarly objects for charitable consideration, next indeed to the lepers; and there seemed a feeling on his mind that the amount already adverted to might with the greatest benefit to humanity be principally, if not solely, devoted to the relief of the class in question. Oa this point, however, nothing need now be determined, but as it would doubtless be desirable to consult the wishes of Dwarkanath Tagore in the appropriation of his gift, and he may continue to entertain in the sentiment he expressed to us, touching regular alms or a kind of Asylum for the destitute blind, we shall feel greatly obliged, if you would give directions, for our being furnished with any information which the records of the District Charitable Society can afford, respecting the state of the poorest class of blind persons in Calcutta. The means the poorest class have of obtaining assistance in the progress of diseases of the eyes; and the numbers and condition of such as, deriving no benefit from the aid afforded, are ultimately deprived of the blessing of sight-We need scarcely add that we shall at all times be happy to do ourselves the bonor of waiting upon you personally respecting any matter connected with the donation, the nature and extent of which, we request you will do us the favor to announce to the District Charitable Society.

We have the honor to remain, Hon. Sir. Your obedient humble servants. (Signed) II. M. PARKER. W. PRINSEP.

PROSUNNOOCOMAR TAGORE. Calcutta, Feb. 20, 1838.

We are informed that upon the receipt of the above. the District Charitable Society resolved to endeavour to obtain accurate knowledge regarding the condition of the blind poor in Calcutta, and in the mean time nominated a sub-committee to confer with the central committee, as to the best mode of appropriating the money.

COURT MARTIAL ON CORNET ROCHE.

The court-martial on Cornet Roche, which has lately been published to the army, calls, in our opinion, for some commentary, with the view of placing that young officer's case on a footing even more creditable to him than what his essentially full acquittal makes it appear, although backed by the opinion of the Commander-in Chief, which leaves no slur attachable to the Cornet's character. We are well acquainted with the facts of the case, as given in swidence, and nothing can show more strongly how impossible it is for even the most mild and the best conducted officer (in all social relations) to pass through his professional life without being subjected to trial by court-martial. Here is an instance of a young man of quiet, gentlemanly, and extremely inoffensive manners, dragged before a tribunal of military justice, at the very outset of his career, because he was subjected to the outrageous abuse of an ill-mannered mate of a chip, and, after much forbear-auce, received it by knocking the offender down, as the charge sileges, but by only, as the fact was, push-ing him off from him indignantly with his open hand. There was not only not the slightest aggression on Mr. Reche's part towards his ralger abuser, but there was not the close arrest—nearly as close as a felon's could be even such instant chastisement as the usual infirmity of human temper would have excused, for the insult; and yet Mr. Roche has been made the object of what it is not too weighty a description of term, persecution for several months, on shipboard and shore together. He was a passenger on the Thomas Grenville, coming out with several officers, including one of the lieutenant colonels of his regiment, to join; and it appears from official docurrents which we have seen, that he was kept in close arrest, and not allowed to come upon deck when any other of the passengers were there, nor before nightfall. nor after eight in the morning, and all this for no reason, other than that he had resented a rude man's insolence, to the extent we have described - having never given the slightest provocation to call the insolence forth! Mr. Roche had only just entered the service before he sailed from England, so that he was totally without experience, and therefore, when the vessel touched at the Cape, he did not know how to seek the protection of the Governor or Commander-in-Chief there, and it seems, Sir Benjaor Commander-in-Unier there, and the misinformed, amin D'Urban (we must suppose either misinformed, and min D'Urban (we must suppose either misinformed). strangely misunderstanding the true statement) enforce

-so that it absolutely required the Doctor's canction; my native soil, I shall see you all happy and contented." for the prisoner's taking the air on deck. It is very surprising to us how the court-martial could have sentenced Cornet Roche to even a reprimand upon the evidence which we know was before it; for to say nothing of the! extenuation, for even undue warmth (had any been diswas the strong evidence not only of the respectable passengers, male and female, and of the captain of the ship, i but of some of the witnesses for the prosecution, that the demeanour of the accused had been uniformly mild and concilerting to every one, and that he was the last? person on board whom any of them would believe disposed to give offence to a human being. There was also proof that such were the character and disposition he had been noted for, before he entered the army at all, and among those who had good opportunities of appreciating both; for, in a newspaper which happened to be on the files of the Cameronians' mess, or library, (the Cork Constitution of July, 1837,) was a testimony of that nature which it gives us much pleasure to lay before our readers

At a meeting of the firmers, tradespeople, &c., of

The following address was unanimously resolved on : JOHN CALLAGUAN, Chairman.

TO EDMOND ROCHE, ESQ., THIRD LIGHT DRACOONS.

Sir .- The farmers, tradespeople, &c., of the parishes ings of regret. Your accustomed urbanity of temper, deared your memory indelibly in their hearts.

We sincerely wish you every success, and trust that Divine Providence will prolong your existence, and that they will have again the pleasure of beholding an individual whom they shall ever respect and love.

ANSWER.

. It is with the greatest pleasure I have read your addiess. I regret exceedingly that my income did not permit me to be more liberal to the poor of your neighbouryou the blessings of plenty, and that, when I again visit man, March 4.

July 28.

In addition to all that, we have the avowed opinion of the court that the accused only struck (the verdict, very rightly, does not find the knocking down) the mate 'after great and continued provocation;' and yet he is played) to be found in youth and inexperience, there sentenced to be severely reprimanded,—this young and naturally peaceful man, - because his spirit could not brook the wanton and protracted abuse heaped on both his countrymen and himself. We do think it was very thoughtless in the court to brand a young officer, under these circumstances, with such a penalty on the very threshold of his professional life; and we rejoice to find inferential evidence to the fact that the Commander-in-Chief did really deem the sentence unnecessarily barsh, though he does not seem to have thought disapproval to be politic-perhaps with reference to the regimental situation of the virtual prosecutor. His Excellency confines his formal reprimand to the mere acquiescence in the court's desire to that effect, but remarks, that 'the interference of the 3d mate of the Thomas Grentille with Cornet Roche, and the gross and volgar language used be nim, both with reference to the Irish generally, and the parishes of Corkbegg and Trabolgan, on the 27th to the Cornet personally, go far in extenuation of the instruct. Much approving of the tenor of that observation, we think we can fairly object to the use of the phrase 'misconduct,' with which it terminates, His Excellency, we know, not unfrequently employs words in their originally strict ense, which have come, in ordinary parlance, to convey stronger sentiments than, perhaps, they always did (there are many instances of such terms, in our language) and the word misconduct of Corkberg and Trabolgan, have heard of your intended such terms, in our language) and the word intsconduct departure from amongst them, with the most acute feel, its, in military cases especially, understood to convey the impression of some very hemous course of action, and and your uniform charitable disposition to all-have entropy to such only is it ordinarily applied. In the case before us, we believe neither civil nor military society will proneunce it to be atrocious in any one to act as Cornet Boche acted; and we are quite certain, that neither the purely military, nor the gentlemanly, teelings of Sir Henry Fane are dissatisfied with his conduct, because, if such had been the sentiment, the reprimand would have been properly couched in terms of indignation. We have scarcely any personal acquaintance with Coinct Roche, nor with any one who knows him; and we are nctuated in these remarks solely by a desire to set a young officer quite right with the Indian community, at hood. I trust that Divine Providence will bestow on his first starting as one of their social members .- English-

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 3d March 1838.

L. T. Watson, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, by H. Chapman, E-q., seconded by Mr. R. O'shaughnessy.

· Maxwell, Esq., of the Madias Service, by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read:
1st. Tiem the secretary of the Asiano Society, returning thanks for the 4th and 6th numbers of the Society's journal.

2d. From Messes. Arbuthnot and Co., the Sqciety's Agents at Madras, forwarding their account ourrent and stating that they had a balance in their hands in the society's favour of 674 rupces.

3d. From D. Macnab, Esq., forwarding a communication upon dysentry and other algine fluxes produced.

by bad rice.
The following works were presented to the library:

1st. Report of Mr. Bruce upon the culture of tea in Assam by the tea committee, through their secretary Lit. Wallich

2d. Report of the coal committee by their secretary Dr. Mac Clellaud.

2d. Journal de Medicine de Societé Royale de Medicine de Bordeaux, for May 1837.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy took the opportunity of informing the Society, that, after many attempts he had succeeded in finding loding in the confeval of the salt-water lake. We had previou-ly examined a great number of the plants of that and other salt-water morasses, and found them all destitute of this substance. The conteval is however, nicher in iodine than any of the algre fuci, he had ever examited or read of. It contained about a grain of iodine to the seer (2018.) of the most weed. The confeval could now be obtained to the amount of hundreds of tons on the surface of the salt-water lake. The process of preparation is very ample. The confeval is gathered and dried before the sun, then burned, and from the sebes soda and iodine are obtainable in such quantities, that the soda will pay the expense of the manufacture, and give the iodine for nothing.

Mr. MacNab's paper on congestive fever was then read and discussed. II. H. Goodeve.

METCALFE TESTIMONIAL MEETING.

Town Hall, 19rn February, 1838.

At a public meeting of the subscribers and intending subscribers to the Metcalfe Testimonial.

JAMES PATTLE, Esq. in the chair.

Proposed by H. T. Prinsep, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Grant.

Resolved.—That this meeting enters cordially into the feelings expressed by the meeting of the British inhabitants at Agra, in their resolution expressing their desire to erect a statue in honor of Sir C. T. Metcalfe, and to present him with a service of plate, and doubts not, that the community of British India will co-operate effectually in the promotion of these objects.

Proposed by Mr. Longueville Clarke and seconded by Dr. J. R. Martin.

Resolved.—That by combining together the different public subscriptions. (which are now raising.) to offer estimonials to Sir C. I. Metcalfe, it would enable the whole Indian community to express in a more distinguished manner their appreciation of the merits, and esteem for the character of that eminent man.

Proposed by Mr. II. T. Prinsep, and seconded by Mr. William Patrick.

Resolved.—That a committee consisting of the following gentlemen: the Ilon, the Chief Justice, General McGregor, Mr. H. M. Parker, Mr. C. R. Prinsep, Dr. John Grant, Captain T. J. Taylor, Mr. Longueville Clarke, Mr. R. J. Bagshaw, be formed, to collect the subscriptions of the residents in Calcutta, and put themselves to communication with the committees formed or to be formed at the other presidencies and stations, in order to receive the sums that may be forwarded; and that it be an instruction to the committee to call another meeting on some convenient day, after not less than two months, and to report the amount available for the purposes in view, with their recommendation as to its disposal, in order that a final resolution may then be come to in repect to the appropriation of the funds.

The committee have the gratification of announcing that a public meeting was held at Agra on the 20th of February, the day after the meeting at the Town-hall, when the following resolution was passed:

Copy of resolution passed at a meeting held at Agra on Tuesday, the 20th February 1838:

"R. D. Duncan, Esq., in the chair. It was resolved that, with reference to a second public meeting at Calcutta, on the subject of a testimonial to Sir Charles Metcalfe, held on the 6th instant, when in amendment of the decision of a previous meeting limiting the measure to the inhabitants of Calcutta, resolution was passed to the effect that measures should be taken to render it general for all India. This meeting view such resolution with pleasure; heresponding to the disappointment to the supporters of a general measure which the result of the former Calcutta meeting was calculated to produce. That this manly combination and unity of effort throughout India on the part of sall interested in the measure, was the object mainly simed at in the resolution of the public meeting held at Agra, on the 30th November last, and the same that has invariably guided the Agra committee in their subsequent proceedings, there especially in their addresses to influential parties at the above resolution: though from circumstances too late probably to be brought forward or attended to at the above Calcutta meetings. That this virtual adoption by the Calcutta community of the same principle of general combination and union, sanctions the auticipation that, throughout India, a sum may be raised (proba-bly seventy or eighty thousand rupees) equal to both objects suggested in the above Agra resolution, and that this meeting therefore, with the greater confidence, still earnestly recommends both the erection of a statue and the presentation of a service of plate. That, however, should the voice of the subscribers in other parts of India be in favour of any other testimonial of a character of more direct utility than a statue, the Agra subscribers will readily defer to their views, and be prepared to forward accordingly the amounts of their subscriptions—at present about Rs 13,000 to the committee at Calcutta, with whom, from their metropolitan locality and influence, it is understood, must rest the duty of carrying such measure as may be adopted into final effect. Also, that this resolution, with a copy of that passed on the 30th November last, be forwarded to the chairman of the Calcutta committee, with the request that they be submitted for their consideration."

Resolution of the 30th November referred to above.

That this meeting is of opinion, that in acknowledge ment of the distinguished services rendered by the Hon. Sir C. T. Metcalfe, Baronet, to the whole of British India, as well as of his administration of the affairs of those provinces, both a statue should be exected in his honor and a service of plate presented to him; but that the erection of a statue is the primary object to be accomplished. As the adoption of one or both of these measures must depend upon the co-operation of the inhabitants of other parts of India, as well as upon considerations which it is impossible now to foresee, the final appropriation of the sums raised at this station must be placed at the disposal of a local committee. It should be made a direction to the committee to aim primarity at accomplishing both of the above objects, or otherwise to carry into effect the wishes of this meeting to the best of their ability, and for this purpose to place themselves in communication with other boiles of individuals, who may elsewhere interest themselves in the same cause.

The following is a copy of a letter circulated by the directions of the Calculta committee throughout the presidencies of Madrae and Bombay, and the different stations of India, and the committee now publish it in this form, that it may become more generally known, and in the hope that it will be acted on even in stations, where it may not have been received.

Calcutta, 27th February, 1838.

SIR,—The committee appointed at the public meeting at Calcutta of the subscribers and intending subscribers to the Metcalfe Testimonial, have directed me to forward to you the following copy of the resolutions passed at the Town-hall on the 9th instant, and also a list of the subscriptions. Anxious to give effect to the first resolution, the committee desire me to solicit the favor of your assistance, and hope that this appeal to the community of all India will be circulated by you through your district or station. The committee likewise begs, that should any subscriptions be obtained, you would favor them by returning this list to me, and likewise assist them in the remission of the funds in any way most convenient to yourself.

EXAMINATION OF THE HINDOO FREE SCHOOL.

Town Hall, Saturday, the 24th March, 1838.

DAVID HARE, ESQ. IN THE CHAIR.

This institution was established in December 1834 by Gobind Chunder Bysack, of Bhanstullah, Burrah Bazar, but is now conducted by Chunder Molun Bysack. It educates about 130 boys in the rudiments of English Grammar, History, Arithmetic and other useful qualifications. The pupils are divided into six classes.

At this as at the two last meetings not a native of wealth or influence appeared; this apathy is particular, and those zealous in the cause of promoting the ealightenment of the natives of India, should stir their native friends to take some interest in these institutions. The ex-students of the College may be very well qualified to instruct their countrymen, but their efforts unaided must prove unavailing.

Besides Messis. D. Haie and R. Dias and Rajah Kalee Kissen we knew nobody else. The examination was conducted by the three gentlemen above named.

The eixth class spelt out of No. 1 of The Spelling Book, but were very backward indeed.

The 5th class read out of No. 2 of the above book, as badly as the former class.

The 4th class read of No.—Reader, No. 2 Spelling Book went through exercises in English Grammar and Arithmetic.

The 3d class read very correctly out of No. 2 of The Reader, and acquitted themselves in Grammar, Geography and Arithmetic to the satisfaction of all present.

The 2d class read from No. 3 of the Reader, Clifts' Geography, and answered Grammatical and Geographical questions with aptness and facility.

The lat class read remarkably well out of No. 1 of The Poetical Reader, answered Geographical and Arithmetical questions, gave historical references with quickness, and acquitted themselves very creditably.

The prizes were distributed by the chairman, and the pupils seemed proud of every mark of distinction conferred on them by our philanthropist.

After the examination the following recitations were delivered with correct emphasis and anunciation by the boys named below.

Fortune	Bejoy Chunder Bose.
Night	Omes Chunder Bose.
Virtue	Omes Chunder Bose.
The Cigar	Khutter Mohen Bysack

Mr. Hare addressed the meeting, stating that his friend the Rajah was indisposed, but desired Mr. Hare to say, he was pleased with what he had witnessed. Mr. Hare then said he had attended three of the examinations by the pupils of the institution, and he was glad to say that during that period several of the elder boys had qualified themselves and are in employment. He hoped that at the next examination he would be able to say as much. "Education," said Mr. Hare, "is making great progress among the natives," and he hoped its ardent benefits will be felt by the influential gentlemen, and urge them to render some assistance to the efforts that have been made to improve the intellectual condition of the Bengallees.

A native gentleman then returned thanks on behalf of the proprietors of the institution, and trusted they would continue to ment the support that had been bestowed on them.—Hurk. March, 26.

The visitors dispersed at 1-30 p. m.

EXAMINATION—HINDOO BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

BISHOP'S PALACE, TUESDAY, MARCII 13, 1838.

The Right Rev. Daniel Wilson, M. D., in the chair.
The annual examination of the pupils of this institution commenced about 30 after 11 a. m. this day.
Among the visiters, we recognized, the Venerable the Arch Deacon, Cappain Marshall, Doctor Webb, the Reverend Mr. Fisher, Messrs. David Hare, A. F. Smith and several other gentlemen. We cannot help expressing great surprise at the absonce of the natives of influence, save Rajahs Kallee Khrishen and Radahcant Deb.

The examination was conducted by the Venerable the Arch Deacon, Mesers. D. Hare, R. Dias, Rev. Mr. Fisher, Rajah Kallee Khrishen, and some of the exatudents of the Hindoo College.

This institution was established in 1831, by Baboa Shurdabpershad Bhose, at present, the head teacher of the Company's School at Bajeshye. That Baboo at first supported the institution. The expenses are, however, now paid by subscriptions from both the Christian and native communities. It is now conducted by Battery Kissen Hurry Bhose. It contains about 225 pixils who are instructed in the Classics, History, Mathematics, Geography, English Grammar and the Bengallee any of the books exhibited. About 150 prizes were dislanguage.

The 4th class went through No. 3 of the English Reader, Murray's Abridgement of Grammar, Geography, Arithmetic and short translations from English into Bengallee.

The 3d class read from No. 4 of the English Reader, No. 1 of the Poetical, Murray's Grammar, Arithmetic, translation, parsing and the History of India.

The 2d class read parts of No. 5 of the English Reader, portions of Gay's Fables, the History of Greece, English Grammar, Geography, Mechanics, and Geometry.

The 1st class read Book 3.1 of Homer's Illiad, Enfield's Speaker, answered questions in Roman History, went through English Grammar and the exercises.

This class evinced great efficiency in Geometry, Algehra. Arithmetic, Mechanic's Astronomy and Geogra-

After the examination, the following recitations were delivered exceedingly well by the youths named a

After the english recitations, a scene from Rajah Viektain of Gour, in Bengallee, was gone through by a few lade, much to the entertainment of the English gentlemen present, and we may add that the novelty of the thing look better then any thing else, though we though it occupied too much time.

Some excellent specimens of penmanship were laid on the table, and did credit to the boys. Their hand wit ting appeared very bold, and we did not find erasures in tors retired, -Hurkaru, March 14.

tributed among the most efficient scholars, and we learnt that they were procured by subscription among the everal committees in Calcutta.

he Right Rev. Chairman than addressed the assembly, saying he was much gratified at the examination and that the several classes had acquitted themselves re. markably well in the different branches of their studies. The present efforts of the pupils indicated their future eminence, and His Lordship felt assured that if the work of knowledge be preserved in as has been done, the natives of India may hope for a speedy release from those yokes which ignorance and superstitution had burthened them with. The prizes bestowed this day, were so many stores of knowledge, which, when attentively looked into, would answer in the places of wealth, and if promulgated carefully among their brethren, would be memorials of the struggles of the present generation for the welfare of thosewho will hereafter succeed them,

There is no sight, said His Lordship, more gratifying than the promotion of knowledge in this great country Hindustan, and those natives of wealth who aid in this praiseworthy duty, ought to feel proud of being the reformers of their country; and while engaged in the emulating and difficult undertaking, his Lord-hip was of opinion they ought not to lorget to in, alchte religion and morality, the aids of all knowledge. As the sun rises after the darkness of night, so will knowledge rise transcendant and throw down all impediment. His Lordship strongly impressed upon the minds of the pupils, the strictest adherence to love, benevolence, charity and honesty in all their dealings, and if the pupils practised those virtues in their search after knowledge, they will of themselves discover how necessary Christianny has been to the welfare of mankind in general. His Lordship concluded by thanking the visitors, and expressed a hope that they whald annually observe the progress in the efforts of the institution.

Rajah Kalee Krishen, in behalf of the managers, reurned thanks to the Right Rev. Chairman for His Patronage and the annual use of the palace, and hoped the rising character of the institution will always entitle it to His Lordship's consideration.

The examinatrion concluded at 3 P. M., when the visia .

THE AGRA BANK.

Annexed we give the report of the directors of the Agia bank for the half-year ending December 1837, together with an abstract of the bank accounts for the same period. The whole shows that the establishment is in a state of high prosperity and rapidily advancing in public estimation.

REPORT of the Directors read to the Proprietors of the Agra Bank at a General Meeting held on the 1st of March 1838.

After more de than we could have desired, or than is likely to occar on further similar occasions, we have now to report the result of the operations of the bank, during the half yearly period ending on 31st December

The bringing up of the books has been retarded by the difficulty of recruiting with skilful hands, an establishment that has for some time been found quite inadequate to the increasing importance and multiplicity of the bank's transactions, and has been still further Magert by the repeated indisposition of some of the most ethicient office assistants.

Means have been taken, and others are now under consideration, which will have the effect of simplifying the accounts generally, as well as placing them on such a footing as will greatly tacilitate a resumption of the practice of publishing, with the strictest accuracy, the prescribed periodical statement.

At our last general meeting the correspondence with the Lieutenant Governor of Agra on the subject of a bank note circulation, was laid before you. The question has been referred by the Governor General to the Home authorities; and, allied as it is to other propositions regarding banking in India, that have been long before the Court of Directors, we may expect ere many mouths elapse to learn their decision on the matter.

The state of credit generally during the period under review has been particularly inauspicious to our liopes of rendering the bank extensivel suseful to commerce; and, looking to security as out first object, we have not hesitated to forego some portion of profit, rather than employ any part of the funds at our disposal, in business attended with apparent risk. But, though considerable

The new stock, the holders of which will share in the profits of the half year, commencing with the 1st of January, amounts to Rs. 500,000.

Having negatived the proposition that was made to you by the secretary to take to the bank fifty shares that were reserved for that purpose, by the Oriental Life Insurance Company, with the view of obtaining for the directors of the bank, the privilege of at once deciding, on application for insurance, without incurring the delay of a reference to Calcutta, we were in danger of losing altogether the important advantage to the bank of such a concession. Five of our number, however, with the secretary and assistant secretary, having become proprietors of the greater part of those shares, the Oriental Company have agreed to constitute them into a committee for the purpose originally proposed, and thus a very great accommodation has been obtained for constituents, as well as much facility in conducting its business without any responsibility on the part of the bank, which, we trust, will meet with your approbation.

With so large a paid-up capital, it appears to us useless, as well as inconsistent with the practice of similar institutions, to hold reserved funds beyond what may suffice to cover all doubtful delts.

Hitherto there have been none that can be properly considered as of that description; but, as in the various transactions of the bank there may possibly turn out to be some losses, we would still recommend that, after setting fiside Rs. 80,000 for a dividend at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum, the balance should be reserved to meet any such unforeseen casualties.

The following statement of the assets and responsibilities of the bank, and of profit and loss from 30th June to 31st December last, will shew that the sum to be thus reserved, amounts to Rs. 13.179-3-5.

Visitors :- Messrs. Brockman and Stafford introduced by Dr. Strong, Wm. Deat and C. Brownlow, Esqrs.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meetng, were elected members of the society.

W. Moran, Thos. Parker, and J. H. Savi, Esqrs.; The Rev. C. E. Driberg; Thos. Bracken and Chas. Oman, Esqrs.; J. Louis, Esq.; C. S.; J. B. Ediot, Esq., C. S.; R. Scott Thompson, Esq.; Capt. J. H. Wood; Wm. Rushton and T. O. Moriell, Esqrs.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members:

Geo. Palmer, Esq., (Purneah) proposed by J. F. Cathcart, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

Major-General Oglander, proposed by Lieut. Sibley, and seconded by the secretary.

F. L. Beaufort, Esq., C. S., proposed by Col. Mc-Leod, and seconded by the secretary.

Thos. Brae, Esq., proposed by Thos. Leach, Esq., and seconded by W. Kettlewell, Esq.

H. Fitzgerald, Esq. (Tirhoot), proposed by the secretary, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Geo. Osborne, Esq., (Chunar) proposed by the secretary, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

W. Hudson, Esq., proposed by the secretary, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

W. Dent, Esq., C. S., propo and seconded by Captain Forbes. proposed by Dr. Wallich.

The proceedings of the last general meeting were read and confirmed.

Motions of which notice was given at last meeting, disposed of :

No 1 .- The Agricultural Committee's recommendation to present Dr. Montgomerie of Singapore with the society's geld medal, was brought forward and discussed.

· Mr. C. K. Robison proposed as an amendment, seconded by Mr. A. Grant, that the silver medal be substituted for the gold medal, which amendment being put to the vote was carried.

No. 2 .- The president's motion that the expense incurred by the secretary in publishing a pamphlet on cochineal, be defrayed by the society. Resolved, that the society bear the expense;

N~ 3. Dr. Wallich's motion, recommending that a case, is supposed as the disposal of Lieutenant Kirke, of Deyrah Dhoon, was next brought forward.

A general meeting of this society was held at the Dr. Wallich informed the meeting that he had been Town-Hall, on Wednesday morning, the 14th of reminded by the secretary of an offer made by Dr. Campbell, of Nepal, similar to that for which he sought the aid of the society in behalf of Deviah Doon, which had remained in abeyance, waiting the decision of the committee. Dr. Campbell's letter, and Dr. Wallich's notice of motion had, therefore, been before, committee since last meeting, and the result was a recommendation that a trial should be given to the valley of Nepal, as well as that of Devrah Dhoon.

> Proposed by Mr. Robison, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that this motion of Dr. Wallich, in its amended form, as recommended by the Agricultural Committee, be discussed and settled at the next general meeting. Agreed accordingly.

Notices of motion,

No. 1 .- Dr. Wallich's original motion, No. 3, of last month's proceedings, with the amendment recom mended by the committee, ris.

That 200 rupers be placed at the disposal of Dr. Campbell, of Nepal, and the same sum at the disposal of Lieut. Kirke, of Deviah Dhoon, for the purpose of enabling those gentlemen to furnish this society with seeds, plants and grafts of European vegetables and fruit trees, in an acclimated state as an experiment, to be discontinued if the trial does not succeed.

No. 2 .- Proposed by C. K. Robison, Usq., seconded by W. Keir Ewart, Esq., That his society make some acknowledgment to Signor Mutti, for his exertious amidst many difficulties in cultivating the white mulberry tree, in the Deccan, by which the production of silk has been rendered emmently successful, both in quality and cheapness, and that for this purpose the gold medal of the society be awarded to him.

Read reports of the Agricultural Committee, on meetings held on the 26th February and 10th March.

The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting that a vacancy existed in the committee appointed to conduct enquiry respecting the cochineal lately imported, and the pre-ident having named Dr. Spry, that gentleman agreed to act.

The secretary read to the meeting a report drawn up by him, respecting the two varieties of cochineal com-mitted to his off by the society, and on the wild insect common in India, which he has brought under cultivation, to contrast with those imported from Bourbon and the Cape.

Proposed by Mr. Robison, seconded by Dr. Strong, that this report he made over to the committee.

Proposed by Sir E. Ryan, that as the attention of the society has lately been given to the improvement of wool, the assistance of their visitors (Messrs. Brockman and Stafford, who are now about to depart for Australia) should be requested towards importing merino rams from that colony, and that the matter be referred to the latter committee for the arragement of details, &c.

Resolved accordingly.

Notice.-A meeting for this purpose will be held on Saturday morning the 17th instant, at half past 90 clock, and the attention of the committees is urgently request-

Read the amended rules of the society, as revised by the committee of papers, under directions from the society, which having undergone a few slight verbal alterations, while discussed.

From Senhor G. Muttie, dated Bombay, 31st January, 1838, presenting to the society a copy of his guide to the silk "culture in the Deccan."

From J. Lutle, Esq., dated Bombay, 9th February, 1838, presenting on the part of the Agricultural Society of Western India, two copies of Senhor Mutti's silk culture guido.

From Dr. Wallich, dated March 9th, presenting a copy of the same guide.

From Dr. II. II. Spry, dated 7th March, presenting to the society a copy of his work on " Modern India.'

From the same, dated 9th March, requesting to be furnished with a supply of Otaheite sugar cane for trial at Russapugla, the soil in that quarter being considered well adapted for its growth.

From H. Pridington, Esq., dated 16th February, offering to forward a French translation from the Spanish, of a valuable pamphlet in his possession, on the subject of cochineal.

Memo. - The secretary had since received the pamphlet, a part of which Mr. Piddington had translated into English for the use of this society in 1825, and Mr. Bell had completed the translation which was this day

From Monsieur Parquin, dated 23d February, stating that after a careful examination of the cochineal insects lately received from Bourbon and the Cape, he can affirm that the Bourbon in-ect is the true grana fina.

From the same, dated 1st March, presenting to the society a quantity of American mare, and a stocking made from the nankin or Siam cotton.

From Mr. Assistant Surgeon J. T. Pearson, to Sir E. Ryan, dated 24th February (Jaumpore), on the subject of cochinent.

Resolved .- That the pampirlet, Mr. Parquin's and Mr. Pearson's communications, be handed over to the committee.

From Lieuténant C. Brown, dated Jubbulpore, 15th December 1837, forwarding the promised Otaheite Sugarcane cuttings from Major Sleeman's plantation.

From Dr. Wallich dated 23d February, enclosing a report by Mr. Masters, on the condition of the sugarcanes received from Jubbulnore.

These cane-, 1,147 in number, are reported in most excellent condition, not a single failure; the canes had been carefully packed in bundles of 10 each, and bound from end to end with hay bands, and kept constantly moistened with water.

The average length of these canes was 9 feet-the average circumferance 6 inches.

From W. Forster, Esq., to the secretary, dated "Melville, Mauritius, December 26," advising the despatch per Moira of 4 casks containing sugar-cane tops which have been transmitted for the use of the society, at the request of the Hou'ble W. H. L. Mel-

From Dr. Wallich, dated 2d March, enclosing Mr. Master's Report on the sugar-cane tops received from the Mauritius, which states that they have arrived in a living though very weak and sickly condition. Memo.

—These cane tops were packed in dry sand, but too many were packed in each cask.

From G. U. Adam, Esq., dated 24th February, en- a small parcel of a very singular description of cast closing copy of a letter from Mr. N. Savy, dated Port seed, grown at Dholboon, a village about 90 miles Louis, 26th November, 1837, to the address of Messre. the N. W. of Midnapore, together with a sample of Scot and Co., of Maurithus, which intimates the corn, and giving a short account of them.

and resolved, that the same be confirmed and adopted, as the rules of the Agricultural Society of India.

From Senhor G. Muttie, dated Rombay, 31st Janu. have arrived by the "Moira."

From Dr. Wallich, dated 20th February, enclosing a letter from Mons. Parquin, presenting to the society a paper containing hints respecting the management, &c, of sugar-cane in the Islands of Mauritius and Bourbon.

From Rajah Kalikrishna Bahadoor, dated 23d February, forwarding for presentation to the society, a sugar-cane, called " Pooree Ook"—16 feet in length, and 5 inches in circumference.

From Lieutenant Vetch, dated Tezpore, 13th February, advising the despatch of a maund of caoutchouc; giving some intermation as to the method pursued in preparing it, and offering to render any further assistance on the subject.

From J. F. Royle, Esq., M. D., to H. H. Spry, Esq., M. D., dated London, 12th July 1837. Enclosing a sheet of his forth-coming work, entitled " Illu-trations of the Botany of the Himalaya Mountains, which affords information respecting caoutchouc yielding trees found in the districts of Assam and Sythet. Adding further information as to the best mode to be adopted in the collection of caoutchouc.

From Captain F. Jenkins, dated Rungpore. Upper Assam, 3d February. In reply to the secretary's letter on the subject of area-cocoons, states his intention of having a quantity of the living cocoons and eggs forwarded for further experiment. Enquiring if sugar-cane can be propagated by means of seed? Acknowledging receipt of books, cotton, &c. seeds.

From W. Keer Ewart, Esq., dated 27th February 1838, forwarding some cocoons received from Senhor Mutti, of Bombay.

From Major E. Gwatkin, superintendent of the H. Co's. stud. Baupper, dated 7th February, acknowledging receipt through the Military Board, of a quantity of guinea grass seed, and oak seed sent by the society.

Stating that he has made experiments both in the huskless onts and Italian rye-grass received some time ago from the society that he has failed with the former, but succeeded with the latter, offering to forward some oat seed the produce of a small quantity received from the Cape.

From R. Lowther, Esq., dated 14th February, acknowledging the receipt of secretary's letter of the 18th December last, on the subject of transmitting sugar-cane from Jubbulpore.

Advises despatch of two letters of mangel wurzel seed, recently received from England, gives an unfavourable account of the vegetation of the American cotton seed sent up by the society last year, and distributed by Mr. Turner in the Bundlecund and Allahabad districts, owing, it is supposed, to the unprecedented drought.

From Baboo Pearychund Mittre, dated 26th February, forwarding a small sample of the wild cochineal insect, received from Bancoorah, as picked indiscriminately from the jungle.

From F. Campbell, Esq., secretary to the Branch Agricultural Society of Midnapore, dated 22d February, giving an unfavorable account of the vegetation of the several varieties of cotton seed, received from the seciely, and distributed by him in that district.

From the same, dated also 22d February, forwarding a small parcel of a very singular discription of catton From Ross D. Mangles, Esq., secretary to Government, revenue department, dated 26th February, acknowledging receipt of eight copies of vol. 5. Transactions of this Society, for the use of Government, and asking for two complete copies of vols. 1 to 4.

From Baboo Rajkissore Mookerjie, dated Hazaree-baugh, 22d February, forwarding a sample of cotton, the produce of Sea Island seed, received from the Society, and asking for further supplies for his distribution in that district.

From Colonel L. R. Stacy, dated Dacca, March 4th, intiniating his intention of establishing a small experimental garden at that station, and requesting a supply of plants, seeds, &c.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 6th March, forwarding 39 copies (one copy previously sent) of Mr. Bruce's "account of the manufacture of the black tea, as at present practised at Suddya."

From Dr. A. R. Jackson, dated 17th February, acknowledging receipt of, and promising to have delivered to their respective addlesses, several more parcels containing copies of the transactions of this society intended for societies in England and Scotland.

The following presentations, in addition to those already voted, were submitted.

From the Coal Committee—A copy of "Reports of a Committee for investigating the Coal and Mineral resources of India."

From Mr. G. Pratt, a specimen of cochineal which had been in his possession 18 years.

From Don Ramon dela Sogra, through Dr. Wallich, the prospectus of a work about to be published by him to be entitled, "The Physical, Political and Natural History of the Isle of Cuba."

From W. F. Gibbon, Esq., two samples of wool, viz. one from an important merino ram; one from a lamb of five months.

Mr. R. Smith, submitted at the meeting, an artificial hive, full of bees, and invites those interested in the question, to visit his garden in Park Street, any morning between seven and nine o'clock, where they may be seen working.

Dr. Strong presented a bag of buckum wood, grown at Russapughla, together with some seed of the same.

Dr. Huffnagle presented some leaves of American maize grown in his garden very prettily variegated.

Mr. Brownlow, prevented a bottle containing seeds of the ficus elastica, but they appeared to be all spoiled. The thanks of the society were ordered to be offered for all these communications and presentations.

REPORT OF THE COAL AND MINERAL COMMITTEE.

One of the last measures of Lord William Bentinck's active administration was, the appointment of a committee to investigate the mineral resources of the country, more particularly with reference to inland steam navigation. One half the expense of this invaluable improvement, which the country owns likewise to that enlightened Governor General—is absorbed in the price of coal. It was, therefore, self evident, that until this item of expenditure could be reduced, economy in other departments of the undertaking could be beneficial only to a very limited extent. The object to which the attention of the committee was directed was to ascertain whether other mines lying nearer to the main line of inland communication than the Burdwan mines, could not be wrought to advantage, so as to furnish this article at a cheaper rate. The committee divided the different fields of investigation among each other, and appointed Dr. McClelland their secretary. The present report, which is the result of their labors, has been drawn up under his direction.

The exertions of the committee, consisting of six gentlemen, engrossed with public duties in Calcutta, have necessarily been confined to the examination and arrangement of the documents which have been furnished them from the archives of Government, or through the researches of individuals. The active measures which the committee have underken are these. First, Mr. Homfray, the best practical miner in India, was deputed to survey and report on the Palamow field of coal. His report is unfavourable as far as it relates to the supply of steam vessels on the Ganges from this source. Secondly, The committee encouraged Mr. Erskine, of Elambuzar, to re-open three or four coal seams connected with the great Burdwan basin, situated nearer to the Adji than to the Damooder, and 2,000 maunds of this coal have been delivered at the deput at Cutwa, at four annas the maund. Thirdly, Mr. G. Loch, of the Civil Service, has despatched a thousand maunds of Chirra Pronjee coal to Dinapore, at six annas the maund, under the auspices of the committee. Fourthly, A supply of coal from the Chilmary Hills, on the western face of the Ganges, has been secured, and will be despatched when the season permits. Fifthly. The committee have ascertained that the coal which the Rajmahal Hills promised to furnish has not turned out according to expectation. Other localities of coal have been discovered, if not through the instrumentality of the committee at least during their existence. I'his report of labors, on which we shall subsequently offer a few remarks, closes with a list of all the sites of coal at present known in India.

The first section of the report contains general remarks, which wind up with these valuable observations :

" In the foregoing situations coal has been traced from Burdwan to the westward, across the Valley of Palamow, and from thence through the district of Sohagpore to Jubbulpore, and the neighbourhood of the Sak, and the Tow, a river in the Narbudda territories, 420 miles distant from Burdwan. Observing nearly the same parallel of latitude, it is found in the province of Cutch, whilst it is extended in the same line across the centre of India to the N. E. extremely of Awam, forming a zone. that stretches from 69 to 93, E. longitude, embraced in an opposite direction between the 20 and 25 N. latitude. Chanda on the Warda river, Cuttack and Arracan being its southern boundary, whilst the Vale of Callinger west of Allahabad, the Teesta river at the base of the Sikim Mountains, and Upper Assam, from the northern limit.

"There are, however, two situations in which coal has been found distinct from this extensive and well defined belt, namely, Hurdwar and Attok; the first near the source of the Ganges, and the second near that of the Indus. Although situated in the plains, yet both these situations appear to be too closely connected with the Himalaya, and too much detached from the tract now under consideration, to allow of their being considered in common with it. In the researches of infancy of this nature, for such we must as yet consider the state of our information upon the subject of coal, it would be wrong to attach exclusive importance to the peculiar distribution of the mineral just noticed, further than to observe, that this distribution appears to be highly tayourable to all these objects for which coal is desnable.

' Cutch, the extreme western limit of what here might be named the carboniferous zone, is placed in the most tion of the Indus, the coast of Malabar, and the Red Sea. The Nerbudda river extends 700 miles along the very centre of this zone, and coal in three situations is already found on its banks. The Soane, the Ganges, and the Hooghley, are each intersected by it, and the Braniaputra, and probably the Irrawaddi, are extended parallel to it throughout their navigable extent.

" Now, on the other hand, this belt had been extended from the punjah towards the south, scarcely a navigable river, but the Indus alone would, in such cases, be approached by it, and the interests of navigation would be as little benefited by the presence of a carboniferous zone, as if the valuable production by which it is distinguished were harried beneath the table-lands of the Hinalaya, $\int_{is}$ therefore, sufficiently encouraging in this early stage of the enquiry to find the general distribution of coal so favourable, nor need we, as is evident from the Attok and Hurdwar coal, despair of finding supplies available for the navigation of the northern portions of the Ganges and Indus as soon as enquiries are directed in those remote quarters to the object here in

The second section contains a very valuable geological disquisition on the difference of level in Indian coal fields, it is too long for quotation, and too strictly scientific for the general reader.

The third section refers to Silhet coal district, which account of its accessibility,-for the distance of its locality from navigable streams, has as yet prevented its being brought into use .- But on account of its superior excellence, it is the finest coal hitherto discovered in India, being found to be 10 per cent, superior to the Buidwan coal, Mr. Colebrooke first directed the attention of Government to it, in 1813, and Mr. James was soon after sent to explore the mines. But the Khassta Hills had not then come into the possession of the British, and the valuable mines concealed in their bosom were unknown. Various indications of coal at the base of the hills were discovered by Mr. James and by Mr. Stark, but from that time to the present no attempt has been made to survey those localities, or to ascertain by what means the coal they contain may be turned to the benifit of the country. The Chirra coal was discovered in 1831, about a mile distant from the Sanatarium, forming a large portion of a percepice. It may be delivered at the foot of the Hills, or at Pundua, at four annas the maund, which is the usual charge for porterage by the Khassyas. report says, " If the demand for this coal were sufficient. the expense of conveyance might be much lessened by carting it from the pit to the brow of the mountain, and for the remainder of the distance employing either mules or bullocks, except at the more difficult passes, where a man might be stationed to receive the loads: such improvements in the mode of conveyance would imply a certain outlay in forming better roads; but even without this, Mr. G. Loch has afforded a practical proof of its value by the delivery of 1,000 maunds of this coal at Dinapore, including all charges, and under every disadvantage, for 425 rupees the thousand maunds, being 350 rupees less than the contract price." Why the committee doubt that the demand for this coal is insufficient to encourage exertion, we are at a loss to comprehend. It is unquestonably the very best coal in India, and the demand for it must, therefore, always be great. If it can be conveyed by a very circuitous route from Chirra to Dinapore for six annas the maund, we do not see why it could not be transmitted by a more direct route to Culcutta, at the same rate; and Chirra coal for the steam engines in Calcutta, at six areas the maund, would be universally preferred to Burdwan coal at five annas. But placing the manufacturies in Calcutta out of the question, after the experiment so successfully made by Mr. Loch, this mine of coal ought, above all others, to draw the immediate and close attention of Governfavourable situation for yielding supplies for the navigation, for the purposes of inland navigation. If the coal can be delivered at Dinapore, which the committee admit, at sir annas the maund cheaper than the coal now conveyed to that place from Calcutta, it can be delivered at six annas the maund cheaper at every depôt above Dinapore, as far as Allahabad, and for a still less sum at every depôt below that station, down to the point where this coal, coming from the eastward, enters the Ganges. This is by far the most important discovery which has been made under the auspices of the committee, and Government will shew a great disregard of their own interest and the welfare of the country, if the question is allowed to lie dormant. We have not the documents before us from which we lately drew up the abstract of receipts and expenditure, in connexion with inland steam navigation, but we should think that a reduction of six annas the maund on all the coal that is used between Rajmahal and Allahabad, would effect a saving of twenty-five thousand rupees a year, upon the present consumption. In addition to this advantage in price, the coal would be ten per cent, superior to that which is now used. Here then is a field for the exertions of the committee, in which an abundant harvest of benefit may be immediately reaped. But why, in the prospect of such advantages, should not officers of Government be employed in discovering some cheaper plan of conveying the coal from the mine to the river, than the barbarous and primarval mode of carrying it upon human shoulders, which is now in use? Just at the committee places first in point of importance, not on this juncture, we have a body of suppers and miners, and of scientific officers engaged in the neighbourhood the instrumentality of the officers now engaged on the of Chirra in constructing a military road to Mumpore road means could be created by the construction of a good road, of diminishing by one half, the engineer establishment, before they quit this part of the price of this coal, as it reaches the point of embarkamon, country, be set to discover a more scientific mode of would not the whole expense thus incurred be refunded conveying this coal to the liver? We hope the question in two years, even if the establishment of steam vessels will attract notice in the highest quarter. If through should not be doubled?—Friend of India, March 16.

MILITARY FUND.

The directors beg to submit to the subscribers of the the regulations of the late Bengal Military Fund afford Bengal Military Fund, the case of Mrs. Mangaret Kel- any assistance to Mrs. Browne, late Mis. Colonel Morly, widow of the late Major Kelly of Her Majesty's 24th | gan. regiment of foot.

A claim was made by this Lady on the 19th January 1836, to be re-admitted to the benefit of the persion she enjoyed from the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund, in right of her first husband (Captain John Graham of the cavalry, see No. 1.) but, as the rule of that institution (see No. 2) only granted pensions during continuance in widowhood, she was informed with others situated like herself (see cases No. 3) that her claim was inadmissible.

Major Adair of Her Majesty's 24th foot in a letter dated Dumfries, 20th April 1837, (see No 4) having solicited an appeal to the subscribers from this decision, which having been approved of by three directors, it is therefore submitted to the subscribers for their decision, in doing which the directors will briefly state the grounds on which this and other ladies' claims to re-admission on subsequent widowhood, who were annuitants of the late fund have been rejected.

The late fund was established in the year 1804, from which period to 1st November 1824, when it was incorporated with the present fund, not a single application was made for re-admission on second widowhood. the establishment, however, of the present fund rule 24 of which (see No. 5) admitting an annutant to the benefit of the pension, she may have enjoyed in right of her first husband's sub-cription on subsequent widowhood, several claims were preferred by annuitants of the late fund for re-admission, but rejected by the directors atheir re-admission was inconsistent with the rules and practice of the late fund, which only granted pensions during continuance in widowhood, whereas there is an express rule in the present fund for re-admir ion on subsequent widowhood, to the benefit of which parties whose husbands died before the present tund, was established, or the said rule adopted could not be entitled.

Thirty-eight annuitants of the late fund have re-married and if the precedent of this nature is once admitted, it may prove detrimental to the interests of the fund.

By order of the directors.

Gentleben, Mis. Hind, late Mrs. Thornton, widow of the late Major Phornton, and late a pensioner of the late Bengal Military Willows' Fund, is not agreeably to the rules of that in-titution entitled to be re-admitted to its benefits. The rule (26) of the military fund un-der which the executors of the late Colonel Hind (who never subscribed either to the old or the present fund) have claimed her re-admission, is only applicable to the widows of the subscribers of the military fund established the 1st November 1824, nearly fifteen years after the decease of the late Major Thornton, you are, therefore, requested to discontinue the payment of a Major's widows' pension to that lady, and recover from her such sums as you may have paid to her.

> (No. 617) To Mas .-

Madam,-The directors regret that agreeably to the rules of the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund to which your former husband was a subscriber, you are not enti-iled to be re-admitted to its benefits. The rule quoted by you, article 26 of the Bengal Military Fund, is not applicable to you as Cartain Campbell died on the 22d November 1818, and the Military Fund was established on the 1st November 1824.

(No. 4)

To H. MARINDELL, Esq. Secretary Bengal Military Fund.

Sin,-Your letter to Mrs. Kelly, under date the -, was duly received by that lady; she is much concerned to learn from it, that her re-admission to a pension from the Widows' Fund, had not been sanctioned by the directors. Upon the reasons which are assigned for this judgment, 112." that such pensions continue only during widowhood and are not claimable upon subsequent widowhood," at the request of Mrs. Kelly, I crave permission to remark on her part, that although the original rule 17 of the Widows' Fund decreed a suspension of the stipend upon re-marriage, it contained no prohibition against its renewal upon second widowhood. Its terms on the contrary are general, that the pension shall con-tinue "during widowhood," and apply to any and every occasion during which the claimant may be so left. limit its duration to first widowhood is an extension of the rule unwarranted by its letter, and quite against the spirit of the institution, which intends not only the (partial and temporary) relief, but the continuing support, while ne-cessary, of the "Widows of Officers." On the revision of the fund rules, which took place in 1821, the wording of the relative articles 25 and 29 continued equally strong and general, the phrases then used are "during continuance in wadowhood," and "in a state of widowkood."

law, is, that where a deprivation or penalty is intended it shall be expressed, and in such cases, the affidavit on which depends the continuance of the indulgence to the widow, declares that ever since the husband's decease she has continued and then is a widow.

In what may be called the sister fund, of the Indian since the death of her aforesaid husband. The meaning here is well defined and cannot be mistaken; what is intended is declared, that a marriage would involve the forfeiture of the pension.

The practice of the British army is very different from that which the judgment of the Military Fund directors has for the first time made known to Mrs. Kelly. compassionate allowance or Royal Bounty to the widow of an officer is not (See His Majesty's Warrant, 13th June 1836,) forfested on her re-marriage, but continues during every subsequent coverture and widowhood, nor is it like the pension of the wislow, of the Indian Officer, purchased by high subscriptions during his life, but it is a free and gratis grant.

The late Captain Graham subscribed to the widows' fund from its commencement to his death in February 1816, a period of nearly 11 years-all the return for this long subscription which his widow has hitherto received is her pension for barely two years. If the directors would but recollect the large amount of capital, nearly 13 lacs of sicca rupees transferred in 1824 from the Old Widows' to the New Military Fund, the claim to some share in the benefit thereof of the widow of an officer, who so contributed to it, would, I believe, be found deserving of further and favorable consideration. This principle, that the benefit of the continued support and increased rate of interest then promised by the Court of Duectors should not be limited to the parties connected with the new institution has already been largely acted upon when they increased by one-third, the pensions of the old fund incumbents; by that increase a majority of those widows now receive larger pensions from the new fund than it grants to its own subscribers, - when therefore what is asked is not preference but equality, involves an innovation but proceeds on existing usage, and incurs but a paltry expense for a praiseworthy end. I cannot but think that a respectful appeal to the long well-known liberality of the Bengal army will not be made in vain when the very dependent state of their petitioner is thus brought under their notice. I beg, therefore, that the directors will permit the reference of this distressing case to the compassionate consideration of the army, should the present communication not suffice to establish in their opinion the claim of Mrs, Kelly to restoration of her pen-

ated sometime previously, upwards of two hundred of the pat respectable zemindars assembled last Monday

In pursuance of a requisition which had been circu- caunth Roy, Raj Narain, Radacaunth Bahadoor, Kaly ed sometime previously, upwards of two hundred of Kishen Bahadoor, Baboos Prosonnocomar Tagore, and other members respectable zemindars assembled last Monday Ramcomul Sen, Ramanath Tagore, and other members at 42. s. at the Town hall. Among these we perceived of the Tagore Family, Baboos Lukhinarain Mookerjee, the tellewing distinguished addividuals, Rajahs Borada-Abhoy Churn Banerjee, Promothonath Deb, Ram dhery, Sottychurn Ghosal, Mothooranath attend the meeting. We likewise observed several European gentlemen, among whom were Mr. T. Dickens, Mr. Geo. Prinsep, Mr. David Hare, and several other distinguished members of the community. The whole of the proceedings, with the exception of what fell from Mr. Dickens, was in Bengally, and, although considera-ble difficulty was experienced by us in preparing this our first report of proceedings conducted in that language, yet by the obliging assistance of a kind and talented friend, we can assure the reader that the substance of the speeches will be found fully given and as accurately reported as under circumstances it was possible.

Rajah Radhacaunth Bahadoor being called to the chair, stated that the honor which had been conferred on him was due in the first instance to the Rajah of Nuddeah, whose family was the most ancient among the zemindars of Bengal; but this Rajah, although he had been expected, was not present at the meeting. In his absence he thought the chair was due to Rajah Baradacaunth Roy, whose family stood next in point of antiquity; but as the meeting had done him the honor of calling him to the chair, he would thankfully accept it. Under the British rule, he observed, the people had continued to live happily, until certain regulations, connected with the resumption operations, had been promulgated, which made all very anxious, and a gloom has been cast on the landholders. On the other hand, what good had the Government done for the people? When, some years ago, inundation laid waste the southern parts of the country the Government suspended its demand, for some time, but afterwards recovered it with interest, which measure ruined many estates and gave considera-ble trouble to the people. The resumption of rent-freelands was, however, the greatest glievance they had to complain of, and circumstances pointed out the expedience of forming a society. The benefits of such a society would be felt not only by those who resided in Calcutta, but all over the country, by forming communications with the different districts and this society. Representations were always necessary to be made to Government. in these proceedings; if any one adopted an erroneous course, the society afforded a ready means of correction, and through it grievances could be easily brought to the notice of the proper authorities. It was a common saying among the people 'that straw could be easily broken by the finger when in separate blades : but if several blades be united together and formed into a rope, it was capable of confining even a wild elephant and reducing it into subjection. Union among the people was, therefore, highly necessary, and the establishment of such a society was much called for, in order to keep a watel over the measures of Government and its functionaries, and for the purpose of making representations to it.

Rajah Kaly Kishen Bahadoor expressed his full concurrence in the opinions of the chairman, and moved that a society be formed to be called the Landholders' This resolution was seconded by Rajah Raj-Narain Roy, who also expressed his full concurrence in the views of the chairman. Carried unanimously.

Mr. Dickens stated, that he' had been requested by the chairman to read the prospectus of the Society in English, for the information of those who understood that language, and that a Bengally version of it would afterwards be read and explained by some one who better understood that language than he did. He then read the prospectus which will be found in the Hurkaru of the 17th instant.

Rutton Roy, Oodychund Bysak, Raj Kishen Chow- Bhobanichurn Mitter and himself, a provisional commit-Mullik, tee, for the purpose of preparing the rules of the projected Moonshy Ameer, Mahommed Ameer, and the Mooktears society, which he would now read for the benefit of of several opulent rajahs and zemindars, who could not those who had not understood the English version of it, which had just been read by Mr. Dickens.

He then read the prospectus in Bengally, calling the attention of the meeting to those parts of the rules which required their immediate attention.

Moved by Rajah Rajnarain Roy, seconded by Rajah Kaly Kishen Bahadoor:

"That the rules now read be adopted as the rules of he society.

After the 2d resolution was moved, Mr. Dickens came forward and spoke :

Gentlemen: I congratulate you upon the occasion of our meeting, and upon the carrying of the resolutions already moved, which give existence and consistency to our society. As already an incipient jealousy of it has been displayed, I think it necessary to speak of my own reasons for coming forward, which otherwise, I should not have touched upon; I do not appear here in the character of a political agitator; still less in that of an advocate of any opinions, except my own, and those which I trust we have all in common. I am a proprietor of indigo factories of considerable value; I am besides by the grant of Government, a proprietor of lands in the zillah of Goruckpore, which, I trust, I shall be enabled by care and the assistance which I have secured to render productive, and bequeath as a valuable in-heritance to my children. Thus should I chance to leave this country, my connexion with it will remain, and I am sure you will rejoice with me, when you reflect that from the change of policy which enables Enghishmen to acquire property here, this is not likely to be a solitary example; but the connexion between both countries must needs become daily closing in all things, to the increase of knowledge, of kindliness of feeling, and, I trust, to the improvement of both classes.

I join you, therefore, as one having an earnest and friendly feeling and a common interest, and disposed with all my power, with heart and head and hand to aid in the one common object, which we have all in view.

I congratulate you, gentlemen, on the formation of the first society for political objects which has ever been organized by the natives of India with large and liberal views, without exclusiveness, and with ends and aims of extensive utility. I see in it the gem of great things, and I am satisfied that the care and prudence which will be required to conduct these beginnings to fitting ends, will not be wanting.

I have said, gentlemen, that a jealousy respecting our objects has been already displayed, I but guard myself curefully from attributing such a sentiment to the governing power : I am satisfied that there no such feeling exists. But though the last charter has been called a " Charter of Freedom" for India, I cannot, I own, perceive that much extension of political liberty has been granted by it to any class, or that any thing like what we ought to call a guarantee for civil rights has been conceded to the natives of India, or to any class of its inhabitants. I do not profess to be an admirer of that charter,-I am no admirer of it, nor of the men who framed it; but though I may not deem them possessed of deep sagacity, nor of that fore-knowledge which could embrace all the consequences of their own acts, yet I am bound in candour to suppose that they must have foreseen some of those consequences, and must be pleased at seeing their anticipa-tions verified by the event. If they did not (and they certainly did not) provide any guarantees for the rights of the governed, they at least promulgated the principle. The chairmen then stated, that previous to this, a meeting of several respectable zemindars and others had all men should be equal before the law, and equal in the eye of the state; and they gave attentice training above. Prosonauconar Tagore, Ram Comul Sen, abstract principle, which first, for any practical purposes consequences of their own acts. This meeting, gentleed in the pursuit of their common interests, and we accept the professions of the charter in the full confidence that the practice will be agreeable to the professions if we are watchful enough to take care of ourselves.

We meet, gentlemen, because you conceive that you may have pelitions to prefer to the Government which ought to be listened to, and grievances that may be reduessed, and nothing can be more reasonable than to unite for such purposes when the end and aims are common to ali. It is not my intention here to enter into a detailed examination of the various questions connected with the regulations for the resumption of rent-free tenures. I shall content myself with asking a few questions and making a few observations concerning them of a very from Government in this its quality of landlord you general nature, but by the necessary answer to these have doubtless guevances to endure, but, after all, questions it will be apparent we do not meet without a though heavy enough, such grievances are light comsufficient reason. I shall assume in addressing you, that pared with those that you might apprehend, if you the special deputy collectors, the Collectors and the could suppose a portion of the press which treats of Special Commissioners of Government, are such a body such subjects and any authority for the principles to Special Commissioners of Government, are such a body such subjects and any authority for the principles to of judges as this world never saw before: that they possess an absolute abdegation of all self-interest, a perfect nance from authority. A portion of the press of this pre-independence of all considerations of advancement, a sidency and of the Motiusi from time to time, the stern judicial impartiality unequalled in any country or question of the best means of laising a land revenue age; but, no,— all this might, perhaps, be supposed to in India has been argued, as if it were still in Bengal savour of saicasm, as being exaggerated praise; I will an abstract and open question, and on grounds destructurely the properties of the properties of the properties of the best three of our history, that they are equal to English and man, and of all the ties which bind men together judges in the best three of our history, that they are in civilized communities. We are perpetually referred men to shew the titles of their estates or cheir title to that such questions were judged, as between the go-bly the best informed of the conditions, and acting with vornors and the governed, by a body of men removable a forethought and deliberation commonly but little used ed for the specific purpose and for a short and uncertain the permanent settlement of the land revenue of Bengal, may conceive that they would say, and to cut matters short, they would say in plain words, gentlemen; that this was not fair trial. And so say we, gendemen; and therefore, as well as for other reasons, we are met together this day; for if Englishmen would not be satisfied with such a trial neither ought you, for by the last charter you will not forgot that we are all equal before the law, and the law itself ought to be, and we presume as we hope, it will be, equal to the best. You will bear in mind, gentlemen, as we go along, that I do not unpute blame or evil motives to any class and still less to Government. I assume always that the intentions of all are right, and most especially the intentions of the governing class but still, it is reasonable we may be permitted to think that a buter sufe guard should be provided, and, therefore feeling that in the union of many, for a common and reasonable object there is strength. we meet together. I had almost forgotten to notice one peculiarity of the revening proceedings now in pro-gress very worthy of note. I need not enlarge upon what such a people as the English or any civilized people would think of a general inquisition into the titles to all men's estates on which government had claims; but let us suppose that it had issued and then let us suppose day been taught the secret that union is power. That that when the government as plaintiff and the individual is a lesson not to be unlearned, and the power you will as defandant were once in court, the defendant should thus acquire I doubt not you will keep and wisely use.

or extensive application, had its birth in the National to prove his title to exemption from all claim, and that Convention of France, and they were doubtless sincere in the government had no right to call him there on pent of what they were about, if they did not fully foresce the forfeiture or ascessment. Let us further suppose that a prescriptive right of sixty or seventy years was held men, is one of those consequences which they might have torescen, for one good tendency of their legislation, at all events, was to amalgamate all classes of the governthus forced upon him, what would an Englishman fresh from Europe say to all this? would he not say that all ordinary judicial maxims were here reversed, and that if these were rules of right, or of legal philosophy, he must unlearn all that he had been taught to hold as reasonable or regard as just?

I cannot too frequently repeat in this place, that in what I have said and am about to say respecting the causes of our fears, we do not impute blame to Govern-ment in either its legislative or case unve capacity. We must divide and distinguish between Government in such capacities, and Government in its capacity of owner of the soil and landlord claiming its yearly reut; equal to French judges in modern France, to the judges to the necessity which has no law, to the injustice which in the United States of America. Let us then suppose is done to any portion of a state, more heavily taxed than that in England, or France, or America, a general war another, to the inconvenience of the exemptions of Bengal, rant was issued by the executive power calling upon Bahar and Ori-sa If ever there was a solemn public compactentered into between the governor, and the governed, exemptions from any impost, and then let us suppose the latter ignorant, the former civilized and incompanaat pleasure, promoted at pleasure, many of them appoints even in such though the weightiest public affairs, it was period, and none of them having the smallest responsi- Bahar and Orissa by Lord Cornwallis: if ever there bility to the governed: what, I ask, would the Eng- was an act which did honor to an individual governor, lishman, the Frenchman, or the American of the United or made a conquering government worthy of esteem to States say to this? Why, among many other things we all posterity, it was the permanent settlement, but now it is openly and covertly assailed by maxims which I think it better not to characterize by any epithets. According to the logic of the writers to which I allude, it was unjust in Lord Cornwallis, in 1793, to make a compact to hmit the land rents of Bengal, because the north-west provinces, which were acquired to 1803, or 1805, some eight or ten years after, do, in 1808, require a large expenditure, or because Madias or Bombay may exhibit an increasing deficit, why, after all, gentlemen, Bengal pays for all, and surely pays enough if it pays yearly much more than it costs. According to the reasoning of this portion of the press you are bound in justice to pay for each new conquest in the precise into of its inutility and costliness. Euch calculations lead further than the writers think. Satisfied as I am that there was good reason for your meeting, I rejoice, gentlemen, that you have met. The framers of the charter, I have said; you have met. The framers of the charter, I have said, must, if gifted with the forethought and wisdom for which I am content here to give them credit, have been pre-pared for such results, and prepared too to rejoice at them. You have learned, gentlemen, from the charter that the native subjects of the Crown in India are and ought to be the equals of Englishmen, and you have this find his situation suddenly reversed and he called upon You meet openly, which is a pledge of your good intention. The Union for purposes that are avowed is | Maha Rajah Raj Bullub Raeen Roy, safe, that which is secret is dangerous, and this, too, Go- Khoshal Chund, and Maha Rajah Nobokishen Bahavernment will not fail to perceive; you have made a step in advance in the career of political improvement, and I doubt not you will persevere in the good work in which his Lordship was engaged. was then put and carried unanimously.

Baboo Ramcomul Sen observed, that those who had informed and benefitted; but, as it was intended to publish the whole of the proceedings of this meeting in Bengally, it was needless for him now to enter into the sub-ject. He then movel, seconded by Roy Kalynauth Chowdbry, that the following gentlemen be elected as a committee for the present year, viz. Messrs. T. Dickens and G. Prinsep, Baboos Prosonogonar Tagore, Dwarkanauth Tagore, Rajah Rajnarah Roy, Rajah Kaly Kishun Bahadoor, Baboos Ashotos Deb, Ram-rotton Roy, Ramcomal Sen, Moonshee Ameer, Cowar Suttichurn Ghosal, and Rajah Radhacanth Deb, carried nem. con.

Baboo Suttichurn Ghosal stated, that all here present being sensible of the benefits of the projected association, were unanimously desirous that it should be established; but as such an association could not be carried on without pecumary aid, he would propose that a book be opened in which all persons wishing to become members subscribe their names.

This was seconded by Roy Calynath Chowdry, who observed that many had subscribed for the construction of roads for the convenience of travellers, others for the support of schools to educate people, and, again, others for charitable purposes in order to relieve the poor: but none had subscribed his name in support of an institution whose object was to protect our political rights and privileges? The effects of such an institution would be felt not only by ourselves but our posterity. Let charity He concluded by seconding the resolubegin at home. tion, which had been proposed. Carried unanimously

The chairman here observed, that the present meeting ought on no account to be considered as in any way opposed to the Government; on the contrary, if the object of Government be the good of the people, and this society subserved that end, it was evident that Government could not but consider it as beneficial both to itself and to the country at large.

Rajah Kaly Kisnen Bahadoor then came forward and read a document which contained his speech, and of which the following is the substance : .

Although he was unaccustomed to address public meetings; yet, considering this as a great assembly, convened for the purpose of carrying on a great object, it afforded him so much satisfaction that he was induced to offer a few remarks. The produce of the soil being the chief support of man, and his most permanent source of wealth, its ruin was the destruction, not only of our temporal comforts, but also of the means wherewith future bliss can be secured. It was to secure such property that this society was about to be established. was, therefore, an object which every one could pursue with a satisfaction of consequence. Form the first place if the root be cherished, the enjoyment of the fruit must necessarily follow, or in other words, when any difficulty will arise to the interest of the landholders, they will be able to petition the Supreme Council for a remedy against the pending evil: Secondly, the Right Hon ble Lord Clive, on the occasion of his proceeding to the Upper Provinces, among other nobles of India, confer-red considerable rank, honor, and fortune of Maha Rajah Dalkob Roy, Sitab Roy, Rajah door. These favors were conferred on them, on account of their consciencious support of the great political causa sion of the war they were prepared to sacrifice their body and soul. All these facts are noted in the Government records. The people of this country, who are naturally the means to offer you assistance more able and powerful loyal subjects, and patiently suffer the oppressions of than my own.

Government, should receive some consideration from that The resolution proposed by Rajah Rajnarain Roy (Government, as the saying is, 'the strong is the support of the weak.' Thirdly, owing to the differences of opinion among our countrymen, it was difficult to unite them in a common cause: but in the present instance, union understood the last speaker, had, no doubt, been much without releasance to the distinctions of caste, evidently indicated future welfare to the country, and would prove as powerful as a rope formed of weak blades of grass, which when united could confine even a wild elephant, and keep him in order. For this great union thanks were due to Baboo Prosonno Comar Tagore and Baboo Ramcomul Sen. It was, therefore, the ardent desire of the Rejah, that this society exist permanently; and concountry.

Town Hall, Monday, March 12, 1838.

The annual examination of the pupils of this instituand the sciences.

Among the visitors we recognized Capt. D. L. Richardson, Mr. D. Hare, and a few more gentlemen; but were surprised to observe the absence of the popular native gentlemen of wealth. We heard that Prospano cutta. In its infancy, it had the exclusive support of cuttary Tagora promised to be present, and believe some several students of the College, but its usefulness becoming apparent, it was deemed advantageous for the purposes of education to make it dependent on the public for popular support, and since 1835 it has been open to subscriptions and donations from those interested in the advancement of the natives of India. It begun with about 80 pupils, but now educates so large a number as 200 boys and upwards.

The boys are taught the rudiments of the English and the vernacular languages, and are instructed in the various branches of useful education. The first class seem to have a familiar insight in English History, and appeared to have been carefully taught the Latin. They read and parsed through some sentences of Dryden's Virgil with facility and the whole of the classes evinced proficiency and talent.

The examination was conducted by Captain Richardson, Messrs. Hare, James Middleton and R. Dias, and Rajah Kale Krishen made himself very useful in the Bengally examinations. The Rajah was supported by Baboo Moteeloll Seal, and one or two other native gentlemen.

The tutors attached to the institution are Isserchunder Shaha, Joychunder Bhose, Nundcoomar Bhose, Koilaschunder Bhose and others.

The 9th class read out of the English Spelling Book and explained the meaning of the words in Bengally.

The 8th class read out of an abridged edition of the English Reader, published by the School Book Society of Calcutta.

The 7th class read out of the same book, but in a more advanced page. These two classes could also explain the sentences in Bengally.

T 6th class read out of No. 2, of the English Reader and explained themselves very aptly in Bengally.

The 5th class read lessons from No. 3, of the above book, and explained themselves very satisfactorily.

The 4th class read and explained themselves from No. 4 of the Reader, in English.

The 3d class read from No. 1, of the Poetical English Reader and explained themselves also in English. They parsed very well too.

The 2d class evinced great efficiency in the Political Reader No. 2, they explained themselves well. This class answered questions in Geography and Roman History much to the satisfaction of those present.

The 1st class read several sentences from the first four Books of Virgil's Ænias, and answered questions in English History, geography, mathematics and grammar, with considerable aptitude.

About fifty books were distributed as prizes among those boys who had given general satisfaction to their tutors, and in the attainments of their studies, after which the visitors retired, much pleased with all they had witnessed.

At the close of the examination Rajah Kalee Krishen addressed the youths in the Bengally language. Mr. Middleton of the Hindu College then rose, and stated that he had watched the progress of the institution for the last five years, and had observed a regular advance in the proficiency of the students. He regretted to observe so few respectable natives present on this occasion, and he was compelled to confess that he regarded it as a characteristic indication of their apathetic indifference to the intellectual advancement of their countrymen. There were some noble exceptions, he said, to the applicability of this reproach, but they were very few. He concluded by congratulating the institution on its success. Captain Richardson next rose, and said that he was happy to express his concurrence in all that Mr. Middleton had said in favor of the institution. He (Captain R.) had privately examined the first classes, and had been highly gratified with the manner in which they had acquitted themselves. It was always, he observed, a most pleasing spectacle, to see so many Hindoo youths exhibiting a knowledge of the language and sciences of England, but the present occasion was one of peculiar interest from the circumstance of the teachers being themselves Hindoo youths, who had received instruction at our public institutions, and who devoted their time and labour gratuitously to the benefit of their countrymen. These teachers had other fixed duties to attend to, but they generously gave up all their leisure time, which they would have devoted to idle amusements, to the instruction of their pupils. It would be impossible for him (Capt. R.) to say how much he admired the conduct of these generous young men, and he hoped that when it became more generally known, that so noble an example would be followed by others of their countrymen. Mr. David Hare next addressed the meeting, and after explaining how he had watched the institution from its very commencement, expressed the deep interest which he felt in its success, and observed how much he had been gratified by the examination which had just taken place.—Hurk, Murch 13.

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.

MARCH 26, 1838.

Fourth half yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Steam Tug Association, rendered special as per following advertisement:

PRESENT.

J. Cullen, Esq.,
Charles Dearie, Esq.,
Alby (tor Dr. Burt.)
Captain Somerville.
Captain Thompson,
J. W. Cragg, Esq.,
George Hill, Esq.,
James Hill, Esq.,
James Hill, Esq.,
Radanath Dutt.

Mn. Sim being called to the chair.

The half yearly report of the committee and secretaries having been read, it was resolved unanimously,

That the report be received and recorded, and the accounts attached thereto be passed.

Proposed by Mr. Cragg, and seconded by Mr. Dearie, and carried,

That all shareholders of the original stock subscribed in sicca rupees, be entitled to receive, whether in cash or as a set-off against whatever new stock they may take in the enlarged subscription, the difference of value of each share between the old and new coin, viz. Co.'s Re-66-10-8 per share:

Upon consideration of that part of the report which refers to reduction of the establishment.

Captain Thompson stated his reasons for calling a special meeting of proprietors for determination upon this question, which were forcibly urged by him to the effect that the vessels had worked well upon the present footing and were paying well, and that he conceived the proposed reductions would save a mere trifle to the esse-ciation, while the keeping up of the same cstablishments as heretofore would secure the more active and zeasous conduct of those employed.

Read a letter from Captain Cunningham, of the Forbes, much to the same effect.

Proposed by Mr. Cullen and seconded by Mr. Mackenzie, and carried,

That it is not expedient to reduce the establishments of the present tugs, below the statement of their late equipment (laid upon the table), as regards present incumbents, but that the committee be requested on vacancies taking place, to use their best exertions to promote economy consistent with the full efficiency of the vessels.

Proposed by Mr. James Hill and seconded by Mi. Ciagg, and carried,

That the committee be requested to enquire into with a view of ascertaining whether a better method of supplying the fuel for the steamers cannot be found, and whether the appointment of an efficient superiotendent at the coal depots might not be desirable.

Proposed by Mr. Cragg and seconded by Mr. G. A Prinsep, and carried.

That a dividend of 50 Company's rupees per share be advertised for immediate payment.

Proposed by Mr. G. A. Prinsep and seconded by Mr. A. McGregor, and carried,

That the measures taken by the committee and referred to in the report for the construction of the two new vessels, and for the procuring their engines from England, are confirmed, and the thanks of the proprietors be conveyed to Captain Henderson for his active and zealous and on behalf of the association.

Read a draft of the additional articles prepared by the legal advisers of the association for embracing the 200 additional shares.

Proposed by Mr. W. Prinsep and seconded by Mr. Cullen, and carried,

That the admitional articles referred to, be engrossed as an appendix to the deed of co-putnership, and the signatures of all new subscribers be procured thereto.

With reference to the 18th clause of the deed of copartnership, requiring the annual election of the committee of management.

It is Resolved ananimously.

That the gentlemen who were upon the late committee be re-elected, and that Jomes Cullen, E-q., be elected to the room of John Stewart, E-q., deceased.

That the thanks be given to the chanman.

DISTURBANCE AT DUM-DUM.

We learn that a disturbance, or rather a difference, but of a somewhat serious nature, has, within the past week, taken place among the troop-establishments of the Horse Artiflery at Dun-Duni. The facts and generally understood causes are thus represented to us: "The troop in question arrived from Kurnaul in the month of January last; and, not aware of any claim which the syces and grass-cutters had, or conceived themselves to have, to a higher rate of pay, in consequence of their location at regimental head-quarters, than they before received while cantoned in the upper provinces or on the march down, the commanding officer drew for them in his abstracts for that and the suc ceeding month at the old and general rate of four rupees a syce and 3-8 for each grass-cutter, and these rates were duly passed and pant to him in the proper departments. On pay-day, however, the men refused to receive these sums, alleging that they (the syces) were entitled to five rupees, the grass-cutters to four tupees each, and that the establishments of the relieved troop and its predecessor had, ever since 1828, received such higher rates which were specially authorized for the presidency station. The circumstance was reported through the Commandant to Major General Sir Willoughby Cotton, commanding the division. Whether in consequence of instructions to such effect from that quarter, or acting upon his own judgment, we know not precisely, but Brigadier Faithful had the manasembled and ordered them to take their pay, that is the lower rate, which they did. Subsequently, however, when the ordinary stable duties came to be demanded of them by the troop officer, the great majority were not forthcoming, and after several meffectual bugie calls only some fifty or sixty could be mustered for the service of the horses. In more than one instance the complaints of the treatment which they had received, and their refusal to resume their duties were "improper in form and insubordinate in expression." And thus the matter stands for the present.

We are advised that this belief on the part of these men originates thus: The scale of pay claimed by them was sanctioned for similar establishments of the horse autiliery depôt of instruction (which existed at Duin-Dum, from the end of 1825 until the beginning of 1830) and is the same as received by the syces and grass-cutters of the Governor-General's body guard at the presi-dency. Two years previously to the abolition of such depôt, by Lord Wm. Bentinck, a troop of horse artillery was for the first time stationed at Dum-Dum, and (we suppose because it would have been an absurd anomaly that the same classes of servants in the same arm of the service should recoive different rates of pay at the -ame station), to the establishments thereof, so long as they should continue at Dum-Dum, were sonctioned the allowances before authorized for those of the depôt. As, although a relief of the horse artillery at the station nas since taken place more than once, it has never extended to the troop horses, the syces and grass-cutters have remained stationary until the plesent year, when the relieving troop brought down all its material equipment, horse, draft and native establishments, while those of the relieved troop accompanied in like manner its recent march to Upper India, having received until the last the high rates of pay allowed to them nine years before. Aware of what their predecessors had received at Dum-Dum, expecting that this was the local rate, and not a special grant, under temporary circumstances to the establishments of a particular troop, the syces and grass-cutters of Captain Wood's troop of horse artillery have claimed the same. Thus it will be seen that they have some ground for their belief, some show of reason for their expectation. But it will, of course, remain with the Government, to whom the matter has already been referred, to decide on the ments of the men's claim, as to whether the rate hitherto sanctioned is to continue in force at Dum-Dum with this, and all future troops. or to terminate with the departure of the men in whose favour the increase was specially made.

So much for the history of this little offair, on which, ! as in many more or loss similar cases, since the unfortunate total abolition of corpo al punishment in the native army, our readers will, is ourselves, be compelled with regret to observe the extreme helple-mess of commanding officers, whenever their legitimate authority is, as here, disputed by their native soldiery and regimental esta-blishments. Orders the disobeved, duties unperformed, wholesome control impracticable, because the European officer knows, that if he brings an offender to a courtmartial, that court will and must pronounce the very sentence to obtain which the offence was committed, and moderate, punishment for the two offences to There are not, there cannot be, intermediate and secondary punishments of any officacy in the native army. It was, therefore, a most erroneous liberality - the evil effects of which are becoming year by year more and more apparent, -to remove the one old barrier of restraint, to prohibit any the slightest and most necessary flogging, the aread possibility, the distant terrors of which had most salutary effects upon the discipline and respectfulness of the sepoy. Rively resorted to, and then as a prelimimay to permanent and ignominious discharge, it was not abused, it was not as elsewhere and of old a horror to hamanity, but a needful and proper, because efficient and moderate, punishment for the two offences to which

The committee authorized Mr. Dickens to secure the services of a European secretary for the Society, upon the understanding that the gentleman selected shall take fund of the institution shall enable the committee to illot a reasonable allowance to him.

Proposed by the P. Secretary, that as a division of labour is unquestionably found to be of great advantage to a great undertaking, and also in anticipation of other penetits, it be resolved that for each three districts of Bengil there he two gentlemen of the committee appointed special corresponding members, with a view of attracting new members to the Society from those districts, and endeavouring to establish Branch Societies there as re. commended by rule xxxiv. of the Society, as well as to promote the general objects of the Society, and it was carned unanimously.

Proposed by Rijah Kalle Kissen Babadoor, and secomfed by Rojah Rajnarain Roy, and carried, that notifications in English and Bengally be inserted in the new-papers, that any party desirous to become a member of the Society may send his name to the secretary, and the amount subscription to the Union Bank.

Proposed by the P. Secretary and carried nem con. hat the rules of the Society and the proceedings of the first day's meeting be preated in English and Bengally, and in English and Oordoo, 1,000 copies each, and 200 copies also in English, and on thin prest paper, the former for distribution in the Mofussal, and the latter for despatch to England.

Proposed also by the P. Secretary, and carried, that notices of motions on all subjects be given by the member who proposes to move at one ordinary meeting, to be discussed and decided in the following one.

Proposed by the P. Secretary and carried, that a respectful letter be addressed to the Government informing if of the establishment of the Society, and soliciting that it will comman! the service of the Society whenever required on all judicial, revenue and police matters, or any thing connected with the general welfare of the country, in the same manner as the Government now does with the Chamber of Commerce, in all points of a commercial nature.

The P. Seceretary submitted an application from certain individuals requesting the Society to memorialize the Government to introduce the vernacular language in the proceedings of the Sudder Dewany Adamiut instead of Oordoo, as contemplated by the Judges of that Court, in substitution of Persian. It is ordered that, with reference to the preceding resolution on the consideration of this subject, it be postponed till next meeting.

It is resolved, that at present, every Monday at 4. P.M. a meeting of the committee be held until otherwise directed.

SUPREME COURT.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant).

lowing cases which stood over.

CONTRIBLE AND OTHERS ASSIGNIES OF PALMER AND CO. DETSMS THEODORE DICKENS AND OTHERS.

Sir E. Ryan said, that this was a demurrer to a bill in equity, and was argued before his Lordship sitting alone in the 4th term of last year. The court now allowed the demurrer.

The learned Chief Justice here went over the facts stated in the bill at great length; they are shortly as follow :- An Armenian merchant, deceased, resident in Batavia, was a creditor of a large amount of the firm of Palmer and Co. His interests are represented by the present defendants, the Registrar of the Supreme Court being the administrator in this country with the will annexed, and the other defendants being parties beneficially entitled under the will. Upon the insolvency of Palmer's firm the registrar of the Supreme Court as administrator cum testamento annero, proved the debt due to the deceased creditor from the firm, and obtained payment of the rateable dividends. About the same period, however, a certain public body in Batavia, called the Orphan Chamber, who had been appointed by the will to act as executors and trustees for the deceased creditor in that country, instituted a suit in the courts of Batavia against certain property (a plantation) in which the firm of Palmer and Co. was interested. This suit being decreed in their favour, the property in question was ordered to be sold, and the proceeds directed to be paidover to the Chamber as executors and trustees for the deceased creditor. The whole amount thus received by the e-tate of this creditor of Palmer and Co., greatly exceeded the dividend received by the other creditors. Accordingly the present suit was instituted by the assignees of Polmer and Co., to compel the defendants (as being the only representatives of the party, who were subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Calcutta) to refund the dividends which were paid over to them in agnorance of the proceedings instituted in Batavia, so as to make the amount received altogether by the state of this particular cieditor not more than equal to the dividend pand to the other creditors.

The learned Chief Justice stated, that no authority precisely in point had been cited by the counsel who argued the case at the bar, although the question had been argued with great acuteness and ability. Hunter v. Potts, 4th l'erm Reports, and Phillips v. Hunter, 2d Henry Blackstone, had been cited but there was no analogy between those cases and the present. The principle there laid down was that personal property passes under the assignment, wheresoever situated, and it had been contended that this property therefore in Batter passed to the assignees, and that the creditor or his representatives must either bring it into hetchpotch, or relinquish their claim, against the general dividends. But the property in the case before the court was not personal property; for a foreign court of competentjurisdiction had decided the contrary. The assignees had there set up their title, which the court abroad refused to acknowledge. Now, it had been laid down by Lord Loughborough that the law of bankruptcy will not interfere with the law of other countries with respect to property situate there. This subject had been well considered in Chief Justice Story's Commentaries on the conflict of Laws. p. 345. It was true that the Bankrupt Law, professed to be founded on justice and equality, and it was equally undeniable that this prin-one creditor would be allowed to receive more than the rest. But this unequal distribution depended on the (Before Sir Edward Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant).

decision of a court of competent jurisdiction abroad,
Their Lordships gave judgment this day in the foljudging in conformity with the laws which prevailed there, and it was impossible for the Supreme Court of Calculta to remedy the inequality. The case must be admitted to be one of doubt and difficulty, but the court had come to the conclusion that the complainants had shown no ground for relief. The demurrer therefore must be allowed and the bill dismissed.

Bill dismissed accordingly.

The Chief Justice intimated, however, that each party must pay their own costs, because the case was undoubtedly one of sufficient difficulty to justify the complainants in taking the opinion of the court.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the complainants. The Advocate General and Mr. Grant for the demurrer.

IN THE MATTER OF DAVID FAIRLIE CLARKE AND OTHERS,

OU-LIV AND MACHAGHTEN ASSIGNERS OF FERGUSSON AND Co. versus GRIGSON AND OTHERS, Assignees.

The report of the argument in this case may be found in the Hurkaru of the 29th January last.

Sir Edward Ryan, This is a petition of appeal from a decision in the Insolvent Court, of our lamented colleague, Sir Benjamin II. Malkin. I should have gone fully into my reasons, if I had seen any ground to differ from the judgment appealed from, but on the fullest consideration of the circumstances, I am clearly of opinion that the fearned Judge decided correctly. The circumstance that the house was insolvent at the period when the retiring pattner quitted it, is not suffi-cient, the transaction, it otherwise bona fide. The whole question turns on the existence or non-existence of fraud ; er-parts Meaks in the 1st vol. of Maddock's Reports, governs the present case; it was there held that knowledge of the insolvency alone, without other circumstances to evidence fraud, was not sufficient. The decision which I formerly gave in the case arising from the insolvency of Palmer and Co. and the decision of Mr. Justice Grant in the case of Mackintosh and Co. in the Insolvent Court, are both distinguishable from the present. There the transactions were effected by fraud. In the present instance, looking at the whole of the evidence, I am of opinion that the arrangement was fairly and honestly made. The order must be discharged, and with Costs.

Sir J. P. Grant .- The present appeal has made it necessary for me to re-consider the decision which I pronounced when sitting alone in the Insolvent Court, in the case relating to Mackintosh and Co. I have not changed the opinion I then formed, and if the circumstances of the present case had been the same, I should have given a similar decision. But all these cases must depend on their own peculiar circumstances,; and fraud, which existed in that case and which was expressed to be the ground of that decision, is absent here. There is no reason to doubt that the statement of their retirement, was not made in good faith. Although there was a deficiency of assets, they might reasonably suppose that this would be subsequently made up. I think the case cited in-1st Maddock is precisely in point; and Anderson v. Muttby cited for the desendant differs from the present case, because there the circumstances showed equality, and it was equally undeniable that this prin-that the partner retired solely from the conviction that the house was insolvent at the time. The appellants have shewn no ground for disturbing the decision. Discharged with costs.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the Appellants. Mr. Clarke and Mr. Grant for the Respondents.

RAJA BURRODOCAUNT ROY BETSUS JUGGUTCHUNDER MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS.

The argument of this case is briefly reported in the Hur carn of the 31st of January.

Sir Edward Ryan .- This is a very singular case, and I do not recollect one similar to it in this court. The original decretal order, which was merely ad computandum was obtained in 1835, but the fin I decree was not until November 1837. Now the present supplemental bill was filed in the interval, and prays for an account of the estate, and that an injunction may issue to prevent waste. It is established by Smith v. Eyles, 2 Atkyn's Reports, that an interlocutory decree does not take effect, until the final decree has been pronounced. Since, therefore, we cannot look at the final decree, which was of posterior date, it follows that there is no equity to support the complainant's case.

Sir J. P. Grant concurred.

Bill dismissed.

Mr. Clark and Mr. Lieth for the complainant.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Cochrane for the defendants.

A rule for a nonsuit will be moved for on Monday in the case of Walker v. Bruce, on the liberty reserved.

The Insolvent Court sits this day, (Saturday.) -Ilur-Laru, March 3.

Monday, March 5.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir. J. P. Grant.)

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAUN BETHE DETSUS ABDOOLAG

The Advocate-General mentioned this case to the Court in which liberty had been reserved to move to set aside the verdict, upon certain points of Mahommedan law. The learned counsel was not prepared upon the argument, but he mentioned the case, because this was the last of the four initial days of term allowed for the moving of new trials.

The court gave leave to move for a rule on a future day.

SREEKISSEN SING U. GOVINDCHUNDER BUNDOPADRYA.

The Advocate-General moved for a rule to show cause why damages to the amount of Rs. 1,365-3 should not be substituted for the verdict of one rupee, nominal damages, entered for the plaintiff. This was a special action brought for the breach of an agreement for the purchase of several maunds of miligo, and it was tried as an undefended cause last term, when nominal damages were given for the plaintiff. The court then said that in estimating damages, the period when the breach occurred. must furnish the standard of computation. Now the agreement was, that the defendant would weigh the indigo within ten days, and pay the full amount, and remove the property; or, if failure took place within that period, that he would pay interest at 9 per cent. It is contended that the breach took place, not at the expiration of the ten days, but at the time of action brought, and it was proved that a re-sale could not have been then effected without great loss. The learned counsel further stated that if account for goods bargained and sold had been being allowed to withdraw the consent, which would put added to the special count, the plaintiff would have been the parties in statu quo.

not only entitled to a verdict, but entitled to recover the full purchase-money, and for this position he cited Dunmore v. Taylor, Peake 56. Now it was entirely through the operation of the new rules of pleading that the plaintiff had been debarred from inserting such a count in the present instance; it was hoped, therefore, that if the court should be hostile on the first point, leave would be given to the plaintiff to discontinue this action on payment of costs.

Sir Edward Ryan, - Take your rule upon both points.

Rule granted accordingly.

J. A. WALKER AND OTHERS V. W. BRUCE AND OTHERS. Mr. Leith moved for a rule to show cause why the verdict for the plaintiff in this case should not be set aside, and a nonsuit cutered instead. The learned counsel said that the liberty reserved was for a nonsuit, but he should submit that he was entitled to move for a verdict for the defendant.

Sir Edward Ryan .- State the points very shortly which you mean to take on argument, because you will be entitled, of course, to a rule nisi.

Mr. Leith,-The first point relates to matter of form : negligence is the foundation of this action, and yet there is no duty alleged from the breach of which negligence may be inferred, Max v. Roberts. 12 East's Reports. Secondly, we shall contend, on the merits of the case, that the action cannot be maintained unless there be fraud on the part of the defendant, and in support of this we shall rely on Pasley v. Freeman. 3 Term Reports, Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East. Ashlin v. White, Holt's nisiprius cases. Tapp v. Lee. 3 Bosanquet and Puller. Scott v. Lura, Peake. Ames v. Milward. 8 Taunton. The third objection which we intend to advance is, that the injury is too remote. Vicars v. Wilcox. 3 East. Ward v. Weeks. 7 Bingham. And, lastly, we shall rely on the laches and negligence of the plaintiff himself, by which he would be barred from recovering even if this action were maintainable on principle. But-terfield v. Forrester. 11 East. Vernon v. Keyis. 4 Taun-

Sir Edward Ryan,-Your rule must be for a nonsuit. and not that a verdict may be entered for the defendant, Rule granted.

SREFMUTTY NIBBUNMONEY DABLY DETSUS SHAMYLOLL TAGORE AND HURREBLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Leith made an application to the court on behalf of the defendant Hurreefoll, to strike out certain words in a decretal order drawn up in this case. A motion had been formerly made by Mr. Prinsep, to let in two creditors to prove against the testator's estate before the Master (see the report in the Hurkaru of February 15th) and this was granted conditionally by the court, the terms being subsequently accepted by the counsel for the creditors. Mr. Leith stated, that he had then, as counsel for Hurreeloli, consented to the motion upon a common consent paper put into his hands that morning in court, but affidavits were now put in, to the effect that the terms of the order varied from the original metion, and that this alteration was made without any communication with the party, his counsel, or attorney; it was, therefore, complained that the consent of the party had been entered upon an order to which he never intended to consent at all.

Sir E. Ryan .- If a consent paper is put into counsel's hands, and the motion afterwards takes a different turn, the counsel ought either to exercise his own discretion, or consult with his client, before he consents.

Mr. Leith then offered to pay all the costs, upon

Sir E. Ryan,-It seems that the attornies here, bequest contained in the second. It is observable that ignorant of the change in the terms of the motion. Why is there not an affidavit by Mr. Hedger ?

Mr. Leith stated that that gentleman had been absent at Buidwan, and was present only upon one of the days when the application was before the court.

Sir Edward Ryan .- There must be an affidavit by Mr. Hedger of all the facts, and the matter must stand over in the meantime. Notice to one of the firm would be equivalent to notice to all. But if the consent was eally given improperly, it is clear that the court has not the power of imposing terms concluding this party behind his back : he ought to have an opportunity of shewing cause against the order itself.

Ordered to stand over.

BISSUN SOONDUNNEY DABFY LETSUS RAJAH BURRODI CAUNT ROY.

The Advocate-General moved for an injunction to stay the proceedings in this suit. An application had been made to the late Mr. Justice Malkin, to alter certain sums incorrectly set forth in the final report of the Master, which was refused as an irregular proceeding. The present motion was made on a bill of review brought to rectify the error in the final decree made in the cause.

Mr. Clarke took a preliminary objection to the application. This is the state of the case. We have got a decree for thiry-eight lacs of rupees; the opposite party wish to after this sum by the subtraction of three lacand in the meanwhile to stay our execution. By then own shewing, therefore, we are entitled to five and thirty lacs, and yet no money is brought into court.

The court said, that this objection could not be go

Mr. Clurke stated, that he was willing to make an offer. If the other side paid in the thirty-five lacs his clients would be very happy on their part to remit the disputed three lacs without further opposition!

Motion refused.

JOYGOPAL BYSACK D. SRIEMUTTY NUBBUNGO DOSSIE.

This was a demurrer to a bill in equity. tion raised was, whether a certain legacy given by the testator to his two daughters was a contingent bequest, or vested and absolute.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Grant for the heir.

Mr Clark .- There are four distinct legacies in the will, the first is the bequest of all of the testator's pro perty to his son - the second, which is admitted to be contingent, is the bequest of Re- 30,000 to his widow, receivable in the event of the son dying under age. The third is the disputed legacy of Rs 20,000 to each of his daughter with an additional sum of Rs 10,000 to be shared between them for the purchase of a house; and lastly, the residuary clause in favour of his brother, the executor. Of these the first is simple and distinct, and the second is compatible with it, because the latter is contingent on the failure of the former; we contend, that unless the third is construed to be contingent also, the wholo will is utterly inconsistent and un-intelligible. It is true that there are no words in the second member of the clause of bequest to the widow and daughters repeating the contingent event, but from all the circumstances it is clear that the contingency expressed in the first member is intended to govern the Heitger and Smalley) are in partnership, here was a mistake in the original translation of the will There is only an affidavit of Mr. Smalley that he was in respect of the Bengally word "An." This word commences the second member of the sentence, and is explained to mean, "and," other," further," or "moreover." Now whichever of these expressions be used in the interpretation, the inference is obvious that the two members of the sentence are intended to be connected together, and to be governed by the self-ame contingency. But, faither, if the constitution contended for by the other side were to prevail, it must also extend by parity of reasoning to the fourth bequest, so that the whole property would be devised away absolutely to the executor, and the son (to whom the will sets out by giving all) would be entitled, upon coming of age, to nothing more than the lapsed legicy to the widow. This would be absurd. The object of the testator is evident:—he wished to give all to the son, it he survived his minority, as the head of the joint and undivided Hindoo family If the son lived, he was expected to take care of his mother and sisters, and if he died, the will was to pro. vide for them. In the constituction of wills there are four general rules applicable to the present case, and which the court ought to consider in pronouncing their decision. 1st, That where there is both a particular intent and a general one, the former must be sacrificed to the latter. Robinson v. Robinson, 1 Butrow. Doe v. Harrey, 6. B. and C. 2dty, The construction of the will is to be made on the entire instrument, and each part is to be considered with reference to the others. 3dly, Where expressions inconsistent are used in a will, it is not necessarily to be inferred that the nrst is to be overthrown. Jesson v. Wright, 2 Bligh. Lastly, that an express disposition cannot be avoided by mere interrence and argument drawn from other parts of the will. Laurence v. Laurence, 1 Vesey Junior.

> Mr. Grant followed on the same side, and dwelt chiefly on the gr mmatical necessity for considering this legacy a contingent bequest, as an authority for which he cited " Horne Tooke on conjunctions!".

Mr. Prinsen and Mr. Leith contra. The view taken by the learned counsel is more acute than just. new reading which is so much relied on, appears more favourable to our construction. All the general principles laid down with espect to the interpretation of wills are feely granted in the abstract, but then applicab lity is defined. One, indeed, is a strong argument in our favour, viz that an express disposition cannot be varied by reference to other parts of the will. Now, here is an express and absolute disposition on the face of it, in favour of the daughters, and it is sought to qualify this by reference to the former clause Wright v. Compton, 9 East. There is nothing in the argument Mr. Princep and Mr. Leith in support of the demure that our construction, if allowed at all, must be extend-That bequest is ed to the bequest to the executor. residuary, that is, a bequest, intended to take effect, according to the essence of residuary clauses in general, after the payment of all legacies previously specified whether vested or contingent. The intention of the testator clearly was to give this legacy to his daughters absolutely: for he speaks of their being given in marriage, and these sums were intended for a marriage portion.

Mr. Clarke replied.

Sir Edward Ryan.—I have no doubt in my mind on this case. The court is of opinion that the upon this case. testator's intention is clear to give these specific sums to his daughters contingently, only upon the decease of the son under age. Upon any other construction the will is unintelligible.

Demurrer overruled—but without costs.

The Advocate-General moved for a rule to snew cause why the judgment by default against the defendant in this action should not be set aside. A fidavits were put in, certifying that there was a good defence on the ments, and stating that a negociation between the parties had been pending to some time previously to the signing of the judgment, the whole matter being intended to be referred to arbitration, and finally settled out of court.

Sir E. Ryan on looking over the affidavits, said, that they were insufficient, because they only stated the expectation of the defendant, and did not shew any positive duty on the part of the plaintiff to delay entering up judgment after the usual time.

The bill and the answer of Gopaulioll having been opened by Messis. Sandes and Grant, the Advocate-General rose and stated to the court, that the parties were willing to effect an amicable arrangement, which would render the further hearing unnecessary. It was hoped, therefore, that the prayer of the bill would be granted, and the rights of the parties decreed.

The court said, that an account might be decreed, but that it was impossible to decree the rights of the parties until some evidence was given concerning those rights,

All the necessary parts of the evidence were then put in and read, and the court accordingly directed a decree for an account, and declared the rights and shares to which the parties were severally entitled under the will of the testator Khoondooroololl.

The Advocats-General moved for a rule to shew cause why the verdict for the defendant should not be set aside, and a verdict entered either for the whole, or pro tanto, for the lessors of the plaintiff. This ejectment case was tried last sittings, and a verdict being found for the defendant, leave was reserved to the plaintiff to move upon certain points of Mahommedan law. The learned counsel shortly stated the points which he intended to take on argument. First, that the instrument under which the defendant claimed was nothing more than a witting declaring the proprietorship of the party axecuting it, and that it was therefore inoperative altogether. Secondly, that a legacy cannot be left to one heir without the consent of the co-heir. (McNaghten's Mahom-medan law, pp. 53, 121.) And lastly, that the instrument in question, if it was operative at all, operated as a will, because all charitable gifts are taken to be legacies, and follow the same rules of construction, (D'Huson's Tableaux de l'Empire Ottoman), and that therefore according to the rules of Mussulman law the testator could not by will legally alienate more than onethird of his whole estate. Mr. Clarke submitted that there ought also to be an affidavit by the defendant Hurryloll himself. WALKER C. BRUCE.

The court was occupied from eleven o'clock until tions. The defendant, by accepting the bill by procurahalf past four, in hearing the argument in this case, the facts of which are well known.

The defendant, by accepting the bill by procuration made himself a party to it, and this alone removed facts of which are well known.

The Advocate General, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for the plaintiffs, shewed cause against the rule nisi obtained by Mr. Lieth for entering a nonsuit.

The learned counsel first directed attention to the question of evidence, and contended that there was suffi cient proof that the defendants were aware of the fact that the goods were not on board at the time of granting the policies, and that they had no right, therefore, to grant the policies under those circumstances, or at least to certify that the goods were actually laden. The case was like giving a receipt or acknowledgment for money when no money was received. It was not intended to advance any argument inconsistent with the finding of the court as a jury, but although they had neg tived moral fraud, it was still open to shew that there had been fraud in law. Crassa negligentia aquiparatur dolo. The learned counsel were proceeding to shew that the act of Jones, the agent, must be taken in every respect to be the age of the defendants, his principals. But the court said, it was quite unnecessary to cite cases upon this point, because nothing could be more clear than that a principal was civilly responsible for all the acts of his agent done within the scope of his business and employment.

The learned counsel then considered the cases which had been cited when this rule mist was obtained, and they expressed their surprise that Pasly v. Freeman, Haycraft v. Creasey, Tapp v. Lee, and others of a similar tendency should have been adduced in support of the defence, when the principle on which they proceeded was in favour of the plaintiff. The case of Foster v. Charles, 6 Bingham's Reports, and Corbett v. Brown, 7 Bingham, sufficiently established the distinction between moral fraud or fraud in fact and constructive fraud or fraud in law. These cases lay down the posi-tion that the motive is immaterial altogether, that it is not necessary for the party to have collected with any other, or to have derived personal benefit from the false representation, and that it is simply sufficient to support the action, wherever a false representation has been actually made, provided that it was known at the time to be untrue by the party making such representation. Nay, further, that it was not absolutely necessary the party should know it to be fulse, it was enough if he did not know it to be true, and injury subsequently account therefrom. But the case upon which they principally relied was Polhill v. Walter, 3 Burnewall, and Adolphus's Reports, (K. B.) 114. There the defendant had accepted a bill of exchange per procuration, and an indorsee, on the faith of such implied guaranty having sued the supposing acceptor, and having been non-suited for want of proof of authority to accept, brought the action against the defendant for falsely and deceitfully representing that he was authorized to accept by procuration; and the action was held sustainable notwithstanding that the jury had negatived all fraud in fact.

Mr. Lieth and Mr. Grant, contra, in support of the rule, contended that none of the cases cited in the least degree touched the main objections urged against the present action. It had been asked why the cases on the question of fraud had been adduced in support of the defence, the reason was that that entire series of cases established that fraud was the essence of the action,

The court here intimated an ominion that they considered (the case of Polhill v. Walter) as bearing the most strongly against the defendants.

The learned counsel submitted that the case was clearly distinguishable. Bills of exchange and promissory notes stand upon their own peculiar footing, and are liable to rules of construction not applicable to other transactions. The defendant, by accepting the bill by procurathe main objection which exists, in the case before the court. Every subsequent indorsee, acquired a right of action against the defendant, because all subsequent parties to a bill are by a restrospective operation referred back to the date of the creation of the instrument, so that there was a privity between them and the defendant, just as much as if he had contracted with each specifically and by name. No case had yet been cited in which either of these two objections had been got over, first, that the communication was not made directly to the plaintiff, and secondly, that there was no sort of intention at the time of performing the act in question, and no probability that the defendants could perceive, of causing injury to the plaintiff in particular, or indeed to any party at all. It was an act in which no one but the delendants and the party insured were in the least degree concerned, and it was the plaintiff's own gratuitous act to step in and act upon the faith of matters which had on reference to him whatever. The doctrine would be most mischievous in its consequences. In effect it would compelan Insurance Office to take upon themselves not only the duty of insuring the safe arrival of goods, which was their appropriate business, but also the burthen of guaranteeing the due shipping of those goods for the protection of consignees of whom they know nothing.

Other arguments were urged by the learned counsel for the defendants, but not dwelt upon at so much length. It was contended that here the plaintfis' own negligence had barred them from recovering. Even between party and party (where the objection of want of privity did not exist), a plaintiff could not recover, unless he took sufficient precaution to protect his own interests, and surely the present plaintiffs exercised very little caution, indeed in relying so implicitly upon the faith of an act done by third persons, with whom they had no connextion, and who were not in the least degree called upon to protect their interests. Again, the injury is too remote and consequential. Authorities abundantly shew that the injury complained of must result as a direct and natural consequence from the alleged wrongful act, and surely it was not a very direct or probable consequence from the granting of a policy of insurance, expressing that the goods were shipped on board, that strangers would be forthwith induced to advance money on what turned out to be fictitious consignment. The learned counsel also said, that they by no means conceded the point that the defendants knew at the time of granting the policies that no goods were shipped. The defendants were in fact themsalves the dupes, equally with the plaintiffs; the real tort-feasor had escaped, and now one of his dupes sought to make good his losses by claiming compensation from the

CHARLES MORELL V. HENRY T. SHELDON.

Mr. Marnell opened the pleadings. This was an action of assumption two bills of exchange. The first was for £68 10s, drawn in 1834, by one John Lewis, at Swin River upon the Lords of Her Maieste's treasure at 30 days' sight. The other was similar bill for £285. The present plaintiff was the last undersee ambilder, and the defendant was one of seven prior inderers. To these counts were added the common money counts. Defendant pleaded want of due notice, the dishonoured bills not having been presented for payment to the indorser until December 1837.

The Advocate General stated the case for the plaintiff He presumed that the plea dispensed with all necessity for proving the making the indorsements, the dishonour and protest; he should, therefore, confine himself to a statement of the facts relating to the alleged want of notice and show that the notice, though apparently late, was given within a reasonable time. The plaintiff was a mer-chant then resident at Calcutta; and, having consigned certain goods to the Mauritius, received the present bills. amongst others in payment, and shortly afterwards transinitied them to England for realization. The bills were duly accepted by the Treasury; but, on being presented for payment, were refused, and, in due course, protested The reason why the Treasury refused to pay these billwas, that the prior indoser had made the instruments payable to the order of Henry Sheldon, while the defendant (who was the party intended by that indorsement) indorsed them over, under the signature of Henry T. Sheldon. The non-payment, therefore, arose from an pregularity, and that caused by the defendant's act. It was an exceedingly hard case for the plaintiff, and Mr. Sheldon might, at any time, if he chose, cause the bills to be altered and the mistake to be rectified, without prejudice. The delay in giving due notice of dishonour was thus explained :- Mr Morell had left India for Europe before the dishonoured bills were returned to this country, nor was he aware of the fact until Messis Coutts and Co., the London Agents, approxed him of it by letter while he was sojourning to Paris, whereupon he immedrately took active steps and wrote on the subject to In the meantime the protested bills had been received in Calcutta by Messrs. Cantor and Co., who were not acting as agents, but as personal friends, of Mr. Morell, and these gentlemen not knowing anything about the defendant, (who was a wanderer upon the face of the earth 1) waited until they received directions from Mr. Morell himself. Mr. Morell's letter reached them in June 1837, and they immediately wrote to the Miuritius concerning the whereabouts of the defendant, but were unable to meet with him until December 1837 The defendant then, on being applied to for payment, positively refused. The learned counsel contended, that under these circum-tances, although certainly a long period had intervened, the notice of dishonour was, in fact, given to the defendant within a rea-onable time, and as soon as the state of things would admit, and he cited Bayley on Bills to shew that the reasonableness of the time must always be judged of by the particular circumstances of the case.

It appeared in evidence from the cross-examination of Mr. Cantor himself, that Morell had appointed the firm to act during his absence from India by a general power of attorney, but the power had never been acted upon at all, and had since been returned at the request of Morell. The defendant was proved to have been in Calcutta about December 1836, but he received no notice until a year afterwards. In December 1837, when applied to for payment, he objected to the want of notice of dishonour, and refused; but he called several times at Messrs. Cantor's office, and was apparent y anxi ous to compromise the matter, offering to get the billnegociated for the plaintiffs and proposing to alter his signature in the indorsement. The dishonoured bills were received in Calcutta in June 1830. Mr. Canton said that the reason why he had not sent the dishonoured bills to the Mauritius or Australia in search of the defendant or some of the prior parties was, that the sets were incomplete.

The plaintiffs case having closed.

Mr. Prinsep was proceeding to address, the court, but was stopped by their Lordships.

So Edward Ryan .- We do not think it necessary to call upon the defendent's counsel, because the want of sufficient notice bars this action. These bills were returned, dishonoured and protested, to Messrs. Cantor and Co. in June 1836, now they held a general power of ittorney, sufficient to authorize them to take the nec-aerry steps and to act as the plaintiff's agents. But what do they do ! they make no enquiries and take no steps whatever until the June of the following year. If they had made enquiries they would, in all probability, have found the detendant, who is proved to have been in Calcutte at an intervening date, namely in December 1836. When the address of a party is not known, it is sufficient to use a due degree of diligence in inquiring for it, and to give the notice when he is discovered; but we are of opinion in this instance due diligence was not used.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAUN BERBEE, versus ABDOOL-LAIL BARBER.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith shewed cause in this case against the rule which had been obtained on the points of Mahommedan law. They admitted all the law and suthornies cited and relied on by the opposite side, but contended that they were not applicable. This is not a bequest in extremis, for the instrument was executed two years before the death of the party, and the terms are very different from a will or last testament. This instrument is a wunf, or donation for charitable pur-poses, and such endowments, according to the 2d vol. of the Hindaya (Hanulton's Translation, p. 334) follow different rules of construction, and the restriction requiring the con-ent of coheirs to the alienation of a larger proportion than one-third does not apply. The donor had appointed herself matwallee or trustee during her life-time, and had named others to act after her death. such an appropriation of the property destroyed its neritable qualities, and os long as the trusts were performed, the trustees could not be removed. The learned counsel referred to a French work, quoted by the Advo-ate-General when moving for the rule, D'Husson's l'ableau de l'Empire, Ottoman, which they said was a ealed book to them, and the authoriety of which they onsidered dubious.

The Advocate-General, in support of the rule, contended, that this instrument was to all intents and purposes a donation in contemplation of death, and it was sitely inimaterial how long before the decease of the party it was executed. It was contended that this was an indeed, to be nothing more than the opinion of a learned and able man, reasoning from what he had seen or heard. But what more was Mr. Hamilton's opinion. or Sir F. Macnaghten's? they were opinions certainly entitled to consolerable weight. Nay, what was the Hadaya itself? Undoubtedly a book of authorny, when the meaning could be discovered, but the writers of that work appeared to resemble the ancient scholiasts, who used to houst that they could maintain any question equally well on either sided.

The Court at the conclusion of the argument said, that they should consider the case, and deliver judgment on a future day. In the course of the argument Sir E Ryan intunated that in motions for new trials, or to set ande verdicts, notice ought always to be given to the clerk of the papers, by the party intending to make the motion, in order that the exhibits produced in evidence at the trial, might be brought into court.

NIBBUNMONBY DABRY V. SHAMYLOIT. TAGORE AND HURRYLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Letth and Mr. Grant renewed the application previously made to the court, that the order, in which the consent of the defendant Hurryloll, had been inserted through mistake, might be altered. The necessary affidavies both of the attorney and of liveryloll were now put in, deposing that neither the party nor his attorney were in court at the time that the afteration was made in the terms of the order.

contended that the consent ought not to be withdrawn. It was either a lapse of counsel, or a dereliction of duty in the attorney, and the client was bound. If a consent paper is put in, it is the duty of the counsel or the attorney to exercise their discretion, whether under an altered state of circumstances the consent ought to be withheld or not. It is too late to object abernaids, and the retraction involves an innocent party in great hardship and expense, at all events the parry in making the present application ought to pry not only the full costs of the application itself, but all the costof the reference which had been going on in the interim in the master's office.

The Advocate-General also opposed the application, appearing on behalf of Shamyloll the co-defendant, but he did not speak of costs, as his client could not be

Mr. Clarke, as counsel for the complaint in the suit, said that it a was matter of indifference to him whether the disputed consent was given or withdrawn; but he had found it necessary to watch the proceedings in order that the disputes of the other parties might not have the effect of delaying his client in obtaining the benefit of his decree. It was for this reason that he had considered it to be his duty to urge upon the court that the reference ought not to be suspended in the Master's office during the continuance of these proceedings.

This was a writ of inquity to assess damages, the action being in assumpsit for supees 656, with interest at 12 per cent., lent by the plaintiff to the defendant. A written instrument was put in, and the signature duly proved. The case did not fall within 21 of the new intes of pleading which directs that in certain actions Mr Prinsep, on behalf of the creditors, strenuously brought for re-payment of money only, the prothonotray shall compute principal and interest.

The Court assessed the damages at the full amount claimed.

BIEBEF HOORUN V. SHAIR KHYROOLI AH.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith were for the plaintiff-no counsel appeared for the defendant, who had allowed judgment to pass by default, and against whom the damages were now assessed.

The action was assumptit, on a special agreement, instituted by a wife against her husband. This agreement was a formal post-nuptual settlement, by which the husband undertook to pay a marriage-portion of Sa. Rs 4,000, one moiety immediately, and the other during wedlock; and, further, to find tood and raiment for his wife, and not to many a second wife without her consent and approbation. The bleaches were, 1st, the nonpayment of the stipulated marriage portion; 2dly, lefault in providing for and maintaining the wife; 3dly, magiying a second wile without the consent of the plaintiff; and lastly, marrying a third wife.

The Court at first questioned whether an agreement not to marry a plurality of wives (that privilege being recognized by Mahommedan law) was not allegal, as being against public policy, and in restraint of marriage in general; but its legality was afterwards admitted.

The deed of marriage settlement was put in and proved by the attesting witness and by the Mullah, who appaxplain contents.

SRITKISSEN SING LETSUS GOVINDERUNDER BUNDOPADHYA.

The Advocate General on a former day had obtained a rule nise to set aside the nominal veider given at the trial of this case, and to enter a verdict for Rs 33,653, instead. The action was for not accepting, and paving for 155 maunds of indigo agreed to be purchased at Sa. Res 248 per maund. The agreement was entered into on the 16th July, 1837, and the defendants undertook to weigh the judge within ten days, to remove it from the premises of the plaintiffs, and to pay the full amount of the purchase-money, or on default to payment interest on the whole at the rate of 9 per cent. This the defendant failed to do, and, in September, they endeavoured to compromise the matter, and to obtain a remission of the price, as the value of indigo was likely to be considerably deteriorated. From the evidence adduced at the trial, it appeared, that indigo began to fall in the month of September, and that the greatest depreciation occurred in the following month, and that no sales in fact took place between July and December.

> Sir E. Ryan. - Yes, there would. As soon as the goods were weighed an action might have been brought for their value immediately, as the property would be changed by the act, and the goods would thenceforth fremain at the risk of the purchaser.

> The Advecate General then urged his main ground of argument, viz , that this was a continuing contract, and that the time of performance was not limited to the ten lays, becaule the payment of interest was the penalty to which the defendants were to submit for the privilege of enlarging the time. The defendants treated it as in open contract by the negotiation which they kept on toot, and their application in September to have the price remitted. Again, it appears from the evid neethat there were no sales of indigo between the months of July and December; this is a sufficient explanation of crated for a long period. The pure could not be said to have either risen or 'allen, because, in fact, no sale could have been effected at all.

Mr. Prinsep followed on the same side.

Sir Edward Ryan, -- There is no doubt whatever of the justice of this case; nevertheless, we are of opinion, that the form of action ought in strictness to have been for goods, bargained and sold. The plaintiffs would then have been entitled to recover the full contract price, and they might have maintained that action in July, as soon as the limited period of ten days had expired. In the present form they are field down to proving the precise amount of damages which they sustained by the defendants' nonfulfilmant, and it is clear, that if the marketprice was not lower than the contract price at the time when the contract ought to have been performed, the plaintiffs actually suffered no loss, and are entitled only to nominal damages. However, we think the verdict ought to be increased on a different ground. According to the evidence, although the price was sustained for a long time, no sales were effected at all until after the fall had taken place. For this reason we shall allow the plaintiff damages at the rate of Sa. Rs 20 per maund, but we cannot give them the costs of the present application.

The councel for the plaintiffs urged another applicato the court, in the event of the first being refused, viz. tion they are bound to shew what precise amount of da-mages they sustained by the breach of contract. SUMBOOCHUNDUR MOCKERJEE AND OTHERS VETSUS NUBBOO CHUNDER CHATIFRILE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Birwell, for the plaintiff-) shewed cause against a rule obtained by Mr. Prinsep, for setting aside proceedings for irregularity. The plaintiffs had obtained a judgment in the original action, and several of the parties, plaintiff and defendants, having since died off, writs of scire facias, and alia scire facias were successively issued at different periods to revived the judgment. The revived proceedings were against the representatives of all the defendants, and the rule mai was obtained on the ground that the judgment ought to have been revived against the representativeof the survivor only. Now there is no authority to be found in the books precisely in point, but it is contended that, as the rule of English law allows execution under a scire facius against the personal and real representatives of the survivor, and against the real representatives of the deceased, in this country where there is no distinction between real and personal representatives, the judgment ought to be revised indiscriminately against the general representatives both of the survivor and the deceased.

The Court inquired whether counsel recollected the decision given upon this point, or an analogous point, in the Tagore's case in March 1835.

Mr. Prinsep as counsel for the defendants, and Mr. Grant is Amicus Curia, mentioned that, in the case in question, the court held, after long deliberation, that the scire facias ought to be against the representatives of the survivor only.

Mr. Clarke said, that if that were really the case, he should not take up the time of the court by pressing the argument further, but he apprehended the decision would be found to be not quite in point.

The Court, after some further discussion, ordered the matter to stand over, for the purpose of ascertaining the former decision.

The judgment had been entered up on this same warrant of attorney.

The learned counsel also applied to the court for a special order that service of the rule nisi on the attorney of the plaintiffs might be deemed good service; but he shewed no grounds.

WALKER D. BRUCE.

The court this morning delivered judgment in this

Sir Edward Ryan. - This was an action on the case for an injury alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiffs, by means of a false and fraudulent representation on the part of the defendants. It will be necessary for me to state the ficis at some length, as several questions were raised during the argument, concerning the facts which really were or were not proved at the trial.

The plaintiffs are merchants in Calcutta, and the defendants carry on business as insurers at the same place, under the style and firm of the Umon Insurance Com-One Dear Christian applied to Jones, the agent of the defendants, to grant a policy on certain goods intended to be consigned from Dinapore to Calcutta. The policies were accordingly made out by this agent, who sent peous on board, with directions to take charge of the goods laden on board the boats. It was proved that according to the custom of trade, the peons were always the servants of the In-mance Company, and distinguished by particular numbers, but the boats were supplied by the party maured. Me was further proved, that in general, the policies are not made out and given to the party, until it is ascertained that the goods have been actually shipped; and that, therefore, the agent ought not to have previously parted with the policies. Now, Jones was aware, at the time, that he granted the policies, that the goods were not on board; but, he himself swears, that he would not have parted with them, had it not been for his confidence in Christian's integrity and good faith. In these policies the goods are expressed to be taden on board. There was also an indorsement, (never seen, however, by Jones), in the hand-writing of Christian, empowering the present plain-tiffs to adjust in the event of loss. Christian, on obtaining the policies, transmitted them to the plaintiffs, advising them at the same time that he had consigned to them the goods mentioned therein, and that he had drawn bills against the proceeds. These bills were arcepted by the plaintiffs, and paid when due, but the goods, prevented to be consigned, never arrived, having never been shipped on board at all. Christian, after succes-fully practising this fraud, absconds, and the consignors bring their action for the consequential injury they allege themselves to have sustained, through the representation made on the part of the Insurance Company. At the trial, we were of opinion, that the plaintiffs would not have accepted the bills, but for the representation made by the detendants, at the same time, however, we negatived all traudulent intention in general and, therefore, by implication, any intent to defraud the plaintiffs individually. Under these circumstances we found a verdict for the plaintiffs, reserving liberty to move for a nonsuit. This rule having been obtained, and argued before us in the course of the present term, we are now of opinion that it must be made absolute.

The earlier cases clearly do not affect the present question, as they all proceeded upon the ground of posi-ove fraud. These are Palsy v. Freeman, Papp v. Lee, Haycroft v. Creasy, Ashllin v. White, and Scott v. Lara. But two decisions of a more recent date approach nearer and afford some ground of argument for the defendant These are Foster v. Charles. 7 Bingham's reports, and Corbett v. Brown, 8 Bing. By these cases a distinction is taken between moral fraud, and fraud in law, and it is held that a statement, false within his own knowledge, made bythe defendant to the plaintiff, and occasioning an injury to the latter, will furnish a ground of action, without proof of any interested or malicious motive. The distinction, however, consists in this, that in all the cases relied on for the plaintiffs, the false representation was made directly to he plaintiffs, and with an intention to induce them to act upon the faith of it. The strongest case of all is Pulhitt v. Walter, 3 Barnewall, and Adolphus's Reports, p. 114, yet it is no exception to the previously established rule. In that case, the defendant had, in good furth, accepted a bill of exchange by procuration for the drawec, but without any authority from the latter, and an endorsee, having been nonsuited in his action against the drawee, brought an action for the consequential injury thus sustained through the wrongful representation of the defendant, that he was duly authonized to accept by procuration. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, because the defendant had to effect made the representation to each party to the bill individually, and the giving credit to such representation, was, according to the ordinary course of business and dealing, and was a natural and necessary result. If in the case before the Court, the insurers had express ly represented to the plaintiffs in particular that the goods were on board, and if the giving credit to the statement had been a matter within the ordinary course of dealing in the commercial world, the case would not have been distinguishable from Pollult v. Welter, and our judgment must have been for the plaintiffs. But we do not in the least degree interfere with the principle established by the cases adverted to. Our decision proceeds upon the principle that a man can only be hable for the natural and necessary results, and not for the remore and indirect con-equences of his acts.

Sir John Grant fully concurred with the Chief Justice: His Lordsup went over the facts, and stated at considerable length, the reasons upon which he grounded his judgment.

1st Question.—Whether, according to Mahoinmedan law, an endowment to charitable uses is valid, when qualified by a reservation of the rents and profits to the donor himself during his life?

2d Question — Whether delivery of the property is essential, to render an endowment valid, according to the rule which governs other gifts?

4th Question .- Whether a female can lawfully be Mutawallee?

5th Question,—Whether the instrument in question is a will, or a deed of endowment?

BRODEAH BIBEE VERSUS RUSSUM TUNDELL.

Mr. Cochrane opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case for the plaintiff. This was an action of trover to recover twenty-nine gold molure. The plaintiff was a widow, and being about to proceed to Chittagong, entrusted to the charge of the defendant, a box under long lock and key containing forty gold molurs, and several gold and silver ornaments. On her return after an absence of two years, the ornaments were duly returned, but the box in question was found to contain ouly eleven gold molurs. The learned counsel apprehended that it would be for the defendant to explain how the deficiency occurred, when it had been proved for the plaintiff that the specified coins had been committed to the defendant's custody, and that the defendant had accepted the trust.

Two sepoys having been examined in support of the plaintiff's case, it appeared from their testimony that the box had been broken open by the defendant, and the money abstracted. The court then interrupted the examination, and enquired how the case could be proceeded with when it appeared from the plaintiff's own witnesses that (if trust at all) the alleged cause of action amounted to a felony.

The plaintiff's counsel admitted that they could not get over the objection.

RAMPHYAL BUCKET V. RAMHET BICKET AND OTHERS.

The particulars of this case are reported in the Hurkarn of February 7th. The action was brought to recover the sum of 1,000 tupies for money lent. Judgment had been obtained by default against some of the defendants, and the case was heard ex-purte against the others, last term. A vendet was then obtained for the amount claimed and judgment entered up, but no notice of assessment of damages having been given to those of the defendants who had allowed judgment to pass by default, the court intimated the next day that the plaintiff could take nothing by his judgment

The case was again heard er-part day, and the damages were now assessed upon due names.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane for the plaintiff.

ROBLET WALKER V. THOMAS REEVES.

Mr. Prinsep opened the pleadings. This was an action in trespass, for pulling down and destroying plaintiffs wall, and throwing the bricks upon his premises, and committing other violence. The defendant had pleaded the general issue to all the tre-passes except the demolition of the wall, which he justified upon the ground that his windows were ancient windows, and the plaintiff by building the wall had obstructed the light. The replication traversed the averment that the wall obstructed the light, and also that the windows were ancient.

The Advocate-General stated the case. These parties lived in adjacent dwelling-houses. From the windows in question, which overlooked plaintiff's premises, defendant's servants had been in the habit of throwing rubbish, against which nuisance plaintiff had remonstrated in vain. He accordingly built this wall for his own protection and defendant, with the aid of his servants, had taken upon himself forcibly to distroy it, and to throw the bricks about on the plaintiff's premises, by which the servants of the latter had been materially injured. It would be for the other side to prove that the windows were ancient, and it they succeeded, the question would still remain whether the wall was built high eaough to obstrust the light. The learned counset submitted that it would be necessary for the defendant to shew also come ownership in the house, in order to give him a right to abate the alleged nuisance.

From the cross examination of the witnesses called for the plaintiff himself, it appeared that the windows were ancient windows, i. e. existing more than twenty years, and that the wall was of such a height, and placed in such a position, as to cause an obstruction to the light. This was of course sufficient to establish the defendant's justification; but the pleas having unnecessarily taken issue on certain allegations on which the plaintiff would be entitled to a nominal verdict. The court suggested that it appeared a fit case to be referred to the arbitration of some gentleman at the bar. After some discussion this was agreed to. The hesitation on the part of the defendant arose from the circumstance that there were other parties not on the record, who were interested as partners of the defendant. These parties had commenced actions of the case against the present plaintiff for obstructing the incient lights, and the decision of the court could only bind those whose names appear as parties on the record.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clurke and Mr. Leith for the defendant.

Verdict for the plaintiff for norminal damages, subject to reference of all matters of dispute between the parties.

Costs of the action, and of the award to be within the discretion of the arbitrators.

WILLIAM BARRETT V. WILLIAM TULLOH FRASER.

Mr. Grant opened the pleading. This was an action for an assult, and the defendant had pleaded the general issue.

Mr. Clarke stated the case. The plaintiff is the head clerk in the Calcutta Lottery office, and the defendant is a partner in the firm of Messrs. Moore and Hickey. auctioneers. Some time since, the plaintiff purchased a lot of shawls by auction, and gave them in custody to the strear at the auction room, to be put aside until removed. On inquring for them subsequently, he discovered that one of the most valuable was missing, and an interior shawl substituted. This matter he represented to the defendant, requesting that the shawl might be restored, or the purchase cancelled altogether. detendant decimed both alternatives, saying that no exchange of snawls had taken place, and that he would sooner trust the word of his sirear than of the plaintiff. Upon this, the plaintiff being irritated replied that the auctioneers seemed to keep sirears for the express purpose of cheating their customers! Defendant thereupon struck plaintiff a violent blow over the eye, in-omuch that he was unable to attend to his business for some time, and was obliged to call in medical and! The learned counsel said that the case was one of importance to the public. Trade-men were not to be permitted with impunity to insult their customers, by instauations against the truth of the assertions, and then follow up in-olence by committing an outrageous a-sault.

Mr. Da.ling, of Messrs. Moore and Hickey's establishment; called as a witness. Defendant was standing at his desk at the time. There was a rail between him and plaintiff. The latter used absive expressions, and found fault with the smallness of the establishment and of the tad management. The shawl in question had been knocked down for forty supecs; the difference between the two shawls was that one was a native shawl, the other a company's; can swear that he saw no blow struck, and that the defendant's fist was not clenched. The defendant motioned the plaintiff away with his hand, and, in doing so, he might have patted him on the face.

Mr. H. S. Mercer attended the plaintiff. His eye was slightly red, and he complained of a head-ache

Two natives in the employment of Messrs. Moore, and thekey were called, and deposed that the defendant did strike the plannoff, but it was with his hand open, while waving him back, and saying to the durwan, "turn this man out."

Mr. Clarke then said, that it would be useless for him to call any more witnesses, as they were all evidently, hostile.

The Astrocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith, for the defence), submitted that no assault had been proved. It is true that the slightest blow or touch is an assault in law, but it must be done with an intention to assault.

Sir Edward Ryan said that the court was of opinion that an assault had been proved, but that the case was a very trumpery one, and the smallest com would be a sufficient recompense.

IN THE MATTER OF -

Mr. Prinsep had moved the court vesterday for a commission de lunatico inquirendo in the case of a certain party, a Hudon, alleged to be of unsound mind. This person eppeared to be connected with some wealthy native families, but the only affidavits on which the application was made, were those of a khansamah and a native doctor.

Sir J. P. Grant, this morning, said that stronger grounds must be shewn before a commission could be directed. The court would exercise a species of discretion and control, like that vested in a Grand Jury. This party was connected with wealthy families, yet the only affidavits were those of a khansamah, and a native doctor. The learned judge did not intend to imply that these depouents had not sworn to the real truth, but the former was in an inferior station of life, and of the latter the court had no means of judging concerning the clucation, experience or competency. There ought to be adduced the evidence of some relative or near connexion, or else of a European medical practitioner, visiting the party for the purpose of examining his state of mind. This Lordship said, that he should adopt the course which he used formerly to pursue at Bombay, and take examinations in such matters at chambers, that the private affairs of the party might not become matter of public notoriety.

(Refore Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.

SHAIR MAHOMED MASOON AND ALOTHER TETSUS HAJJEL RUJUB ALLY.

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings. This was an action on the common counts, to recover two sums, amounting together to Res 2,334 with interest

The Advocate-General stated the case. The plaintiffs are merchants and general dealers, and have been in the habit of lending different sums, and sending good at different times, to the defendant. In 1836 the defendant signed written acknowledgments of the sums in question being due, these acknowledgments were appended to certain entries and statements of account-between the parties.

A Moonslice was called to prove the writing and signing of the acknowledgments of the debt.

The sirear of the plaintiffs deposed, that he had kepther accounts for several years, that they had had several dealings with the defendant, and that he had acknowledged these debts due. Of the plaintiffs, who are partners, one resides at Calcutta and the other at Madras. The defendant, a short time since, obtained a decrea against one of the present plantiffs, and property wassized in execution under it. [This witness was crossexammed at considerable length, in reference to other suits and actions between the parties, and also a reference to arbitration]

The court inquired what was the object proposed by all this cross examination.

The defendant's counsel replied, that it was to impeach the testimony of the witnesses, and to show that these entries were false and fraudulent altogether.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Leith, for the defence) addressed the court. This case depends entirely on the credibility of the witnesses, and it is on that account that matters apparently ir elevant have been gone into. One witness said that the knew nothing of the action formerly brought by the present defendant, while another proved that he was waiting in court with the former on subpoenas to give evidence in that very action. The present claims were utterly fictitious. The defence was not in the nature of a plea of payment or set-off, which would be inadmissible on the present pleadings, but it is founded on the suspicion and fraud presented by the transaction. Former actions and arbitrations have been instituted between the parties, and it is for the court to consider whether the setting up of pre-existing cross-demands long after the prior disputes had been settled is not a circumstance of strong suspicion. It is pretended that these entires were signed by the defendant, but it will be proved that he is scarcely able to read or write at all.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the grounds of defence appeared inconsistent. At one time it was alteged that the present claims had been adduced before arbitrators, and, consequently, already settled, which, however, admitted their genuineness, and at another time it was attempted to impeach them altogether.

Mr. Prinsep said, that these claims had been advanced before, but were then rejected, and that they were now urged again with the fiesh aids of pretended signatures, and fictuous witnesses. He submitted that the whole case was one of fraud and imposture.

A Mogul horse-dealer, who had been one of the arbitrators, was called as a witness, and the question was put whether the entires in question had been seen by him before, and whether they were now in the same state.

The Advocate-General objected to this question, on the ground that the award, if relied upon, ought to have been specially pleaded.

So E. Ruan. -- An award certainly cannot be relied on in our of the action, as a settlement of all disputes between the parties, unless pleaded specially. But this question is put with a totally different object, and it is quite competent to use the evidence as a presumption of fraud, and to prove that the Jebt never existed.

The above question was then put to this witness, and another Moguit witness, and they both swore that certain diterations had been made in the outries since the time when they had first seen them. These witnesses were subjected to a rigorous cross-examination with the view of impeaching their evidence, and shewing discrepancies in the testimony of one and the other.

The Advocate-General was then called upon, and replied in a speech of considerable length, and great acuteness, in which he endeavoured to reconcile the evidence adduced for the plaintiffs and to show the improbability of the tale which the defendant had set up.

The court, after a short consultation, said, that the learned advocate in his address, had urged everything for his client's case that could posibly be aid in its support, but their opinion remained unchanged, and there must be a verdict for the defendant. This opinion was founded chiefly on the discrepancies in the evidence of the plaintiffs, own witnesses. Besides, the matter of the arbitration could not be got over, unless the plaintiffs meant to say that the whole was an ideal and actitious scene, invented from beginning to end for the purposes cause (standing next on the board) a verdict should be of the present defence. The plaintiffs now supported entered by consent for the plaintiff, subject to a refertheir case by more than one witness, and yet they had ence to arbitration. not pretended to shew that one of their witnesses had been called when the same claims were before the arbitrators.

duties of a Deputy Collector, under regulation 1X, of 1833, may occur, whether by death or leave of absence.

No. 21 .- From an extract of a letter from Mr. officiating secretary F. J. Holliday, dated the 30th January 1838. It appears that his honor the Deputy Governor has reason to believe that the rule laid down in Mr. Secretary Mangle's letter of the 12th July 1836, for referring to the statement committee all additions and alterations to periodical statements in the revenue department, has not been very regularly observed, and in an extract from a letter addressed to the committee for the revision and consolidation of periodical returns, it is remarked, that a rule founded on these principles must be circulated for the guidance of all the authorities subordinate to the Sudder Board, and that they would be requested not to direct the submission of any periodical return, nor to alter any statement after it shall have been revised and approved by the committee, without the previous canction of government.

The Board have promulgated the above orders to all the revenue commissioners.

IMPORTANT TO GRANTARS.

Our readers must have observed the report of the case of Moonshee Mahommed Ameer versus Mr. McDongall, published in our paper of the 5th instant, regarding an alleged claim to a portion of Sounderbun land in the possession of the defendant. The Principal Sudder Ameen entertained the case against all the arguments urged on the defence. The consequence is, that the defendant's pleader, Mr. R. Dias, called on the present commissioner, Mr. Wilham Dampier, and submitted the hardship to which both Messis. Macpherson and McDougall, as government grantees, were subjected to by the support given to the zemindars by the civil courts. That experenced and intelligent officer immediately concurred that the civil courts had no jurisdiction in either of the cases, but that they should have been instituted before the special commissioners. Mr. Dampier immediately ordered a rooboocarry to be forwarded to the vakeel of government, to appear at the principal Sudder Ameen's Court, and bar his jurisdiction in the two cases. The vakeel appeared at the court on the 6th instant, and desired to be furnished with a copy of the plaint for the above purpose. --- Hurk, March 14.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28.

Although this was the last day of the second term, Although this was the last day of the second term, "He, however, ordered the original proceedings to be the business of the morning was finished in less than half produced before him that he may be able to judge better an hour.

A rule obtained by Mr. Clarke, on the plea side, against which the Advocate-General was to have shewn cause, was enlarged by consent, until a future day, when it is to be heard as of the last day of term.

Ten causes are set down on the Common Law Board for the Sittings, which commence to-morrow,, Thursday (this day.)

(Before W. Cracroft, Esq.)

This day the Judge heard several petitions, from amongst which we select these as being worthy of Barasut, that the parties against whom he had complained had come forcibly anned with clubs, and accompanied by others into his fields and had bezten him and the persons employed by him in cultivating his fields, and cut and carried away his corn; and yet the Magiswe believe, will proceed to his own a pointment .- Hurk., trate had relused to award him any sum from the parties against whom he had complained as a compensation for the loss of his grain. The Judge observed, that he believed the petitioner, if he had proved the injury he had sustained by he defandant's acts, must sue the parties in a civil court for damages, and not in a criminal suit. of this matter.

In this case the petitioner complained that aparty against whom he had an action in the Magistrate's Court at Barasut, had given in the names of several persons as his witnesses in that case, amongst the rest the name of the petitioner's father, who is not residing in the house where the petitioner resides, but has gone some years ago on a pilgrimage to Benares, where he believes he has subsequently died. Three of the witnesses named by the party have already been examined, but he still persisting that this petitioner's father is concealed in his house, and he therefore cannot serve the subjects on him. The Magistrate has therefore deputed the Nazir of his court to First. In this case the petitioner wished to appear go to the village where this petitioner resides and enquire from the decision of the Magistrate of Barasut. He said into this matter and the Nazir, in compliance with this that he had proved in his suit before the Magistrate at order has proceeded to the village and placed peons at either entering or queting his house. Their domestic arrangements are completely disorganized. The shrishtadar brought to the nonce of the Judge that the Moonsiff at How, the had blowne complemed in this case, and stated to the Judge that the Magistrate had ordered his ambas to appear before him to this case, and that they have now been for some days at his court, and the Magi-trate had confined some of them, consequently his humans is it a stand and the cases are accumulating in his office.

this petitioner's doo, to prevent any person from Barasut calling on him to explain his proceedings and report to him on this case fully.

In the mofussil courts it appears, that noney which may have been deposited in realization of any suit is paid to any creditor in the suit, unless one of the vakeels or officials attached to the court certifies that the money is the identical plaintiff in the suit, his having been generally known by all the amlahs in court for years as the person who his managed the suit, and that he is the person he represents himself to be, is of no avail without this The Judge observed that it was very irregular in the blentification, added to which he must have witnesses Magistrate to confine any of his amlahs without first to attest the payment of the money to him, his own poseing the engunistance to him; he therefore ordered beerigt not being considered sufficient without this attes-

THE CHITPORE ROAD AQUEDUCE .- I'WO WEAlthy In tive gentlemen, Baboos Murty Loll Seal and Madhub Dutt, have taken upon themselves the expense of continuing the Chitpore road aqueduct along new Colootolla road, as far as the central road, the former with a view of supplying the small, and not over cleanly tank, belonging to the public, on the east side of his house, with good and wholesome water, and the latter for the improvement of his Bazar, situated at the junction of the new Colootolla and central roads by an increased supply of the necessary element.

RAJAH PERTAUB CHAUND .- The soi disant maha rajah Pertanb Chaund, embarked on board a Budgerow at Burra Bazar on the 17th instant to proceed, as report says, to Burdwans He moved from a house at Fouj-dary Balakhana, where he had taken up his residence for some months, at ended by a numerous retinue of peons armed with sticks. He was followed to the ghaut by an immense crowd of natives. It is worthy of remark, that the belief of this individual being the real Pertaub Chaund, still continues unshaken in the minds of the credulous portion of the native community.

STATE OF HEATTH .- Pever and cholers are raging in and about Calcutta with a great degree of virulence, and especially the latter, most of the cases of which prove fatal, and affect the European community in some measure. Scarcely a native is to be met with that is not labouring under a cold; and they, almost without exception attribute the unhealthiness of the weather to the Governor-General, with a few attendants, will prothe water of the new Canal being allowed lately by

DISTURBANCES IN ASSAM .-- Disturbances have lately cutta for the Cape, to the regret of all the lovers of taken place in Assam. It appears that Lieut. Villar, -econd in command of the Assam Light Infantry, had Fires have occurred every day during the locen sent out, with a party of his corps and some ringueeck in different party of the town, and much property lar soldiers from the Brega Gaoin, a native chief, for the purpose of driving one Peshee Gaom from the Company's territories, in consequence of repeated disturninces which he had occasioned. On the 4th February, Lieut. Millar arrived within a few miles of Peshee Gaom's village with his detachment, but was suddenly attacked, a fire having been opened from a breast-work thrown acress a gorge on the top of a hill. Only a lew shots were fired, but these had the effect of completely routing the Berga Gaom's men and the rest of the Singphoos. The sepoys of the Assam Light Infantry however remained firm, and Lieut. Millar intended to attack the stockade, but could find no road. These men being very much dispirited from having no power of seeing their enemy, he returned to the camp to acquire every information possible. He afterwards ascended the place, but found it deserted, and from an excellent spy he learnt that Peshee Gaom had fled to Bomgong, The Bessa and Luttra chiefs had proved Bomgong. The Bessa and Luttra chiefs had proved false in their professions of friendship to the British Government. It appears that the Duffa chief had also told the King of Ava that our Government intended at attack on Hookum, and Tharrawaddi in consequence had sent a party about three hundred soldiers to that place. The Duffa Gaom had also collected a small force. Lieut. Millar had stockaded himselfin the hills, taking soli ary necturnal rambles, would do well to which are of the most rocky description, the jungle dense provide themselves with good sticks, as the "stand and no roads of any kind. The difficulty of fighting in easily conceived. Lient. Millar had been assured by those whom every one considered to be the best informed, that there was no chance of an attack, but he nevertheless took every precaution, posting sentires, &c.

The stockade being extremely small, and much crowded. a party of Singphoos were allowed to sleep in a hut just outside the stockade at their earnest entreaty. Early on the morning of the 10th February a homble yell was heard from the direction of this but, and it was found twenty-one of these poor wretches, men and women, had been butchered in their beds!! It had been raining hard all night, and the morning was consequently extremely dark, but a fire was instantly opened in the direction which the villains took, and from marks of blood having been tracted for some distance through the jungle, it is believed that some were wounded. From a prisoner subsequently taken it was learnt, that these murde ers had been hired by the Peshee, that the party consisted of one hundred and were only armed with dhaws. The only object appears to have been blood, for nothing was missed, except one or two muskets. It is possible that the Peshee, muddened with revenge, may not so easily leave the Company's territories; and it is understood, stockades and barricades have been erected. Lieut. Miliar's stockade was su-rounded by spies; in clear nights they could distinctly see the Peslice Gaom's movement-, who doubtless, when a favourable moment occurred, intended to commence the attack. In these thickets our trops fight under the greatest disadvantage, the enemy firing from ambuscade and then flying off in different directions in small parties. Major White was not far off, and had proceeded to join Lieut. Millar, with a party of 90 men, and had also ordered another officer to follow him, with a company of the Assam Light Infantry.

NEFTING OF PODARS—PICE.—It is said that there has been a general meeting of the podars in Calcutta, whereat it was determined to drain the mint office, with a view to storing up—the pice, and, in—the consequent scarcity, disposing of them at a manifest dissafvantage to the public. The annoyance entailed by the practices of these people, which are now reduced to a system, calls for the raterposition of authority.

WANT OF WATER. -- Great distress is experienced in the country from the scarcity of water, occasioned by the extreme drought this season.

Distribution of alms.—On the 23d instant, Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore distributed alms to beggars, between fifty and sixty thousand in number eight between fifty and sixty thousand in number eight annas each to the privileged order, numely the Bramms, and four annas to others, without distinction of castecreed or age; on the occasion of his mother's shrand, which took place the day before. There were women seen amongst the crowd with children scarcety more than a very few days old, but no accident occurred. The beggars were first of all put in native houses, having the largest squares, from one end of the town to the other, which being done, about four in the morning, the distribution commenced, and was over before ten.

ASSAM—PROSPECTS OF WAR.—Letters have been received from Akyab to the 16th instant. All then waquiet on the frontier; but the writer of the epistle doubts, in most poetic phrase, whether "it be not the calm which proceeds the storm," "the quiet which pervades the grass-covered volcapo, while the fiery elements with in air raging to burst forth," or

" The torrent's smoothness, ere it dash below." *

Tharrawadie has ordered a general "counting" of arms to be made throughout his dominions, and return-to be made of the numbers capable of bearing them. It appears to be the Burmese custom never to embody an army, until it is actually required for service; so it is impossible to say, when the tempest will burst.

ACCOMMODATION IN PRESCH STRANGIA.—The following is an extract from a letter dated Malfa, the 12th of lanuary last, and completely sets at rest the rumours iffoat in regard to the bad accommodation and worse are to be found on board the French steamers.

"I came from Alexandria by the French line of steamers. Splendid ships and fitted up in the most beautiful manner, with pannels of the raiest woods, inlaid in a sivle that might suit a royal yacht better than a steam packet. The accommodations of the private cabins are capital, and the table kept after a very respectable fashion; in short the richest man in Europe, could not a few years ago traverse the Mediterranean, with the luxury of expedition and confort, that a private person can now command for a few sovereigns."

THE HINDU HOLIDAY DARBUNIE CHOLLRA .-- This is a celebrated bathing festival, at which thousands of Hindus repair to Tremance ghant, a few miles above Houghly, for the purpose of purification. This year the holiday occurred on the 23d ultimo. For two days previous, the roads leading to the ghant were crowded with peaple, and at one time there were not less than probably 30,000 assembled at, and near the ghauts. The rush to the river was so impetuous that great numbers were with difficulty rescued from drowning by the activity of the police. The greater number of those who went to Pribance on Saturday last, came from distant parts, there being very few Bengalis among them. In going to and returning from Tribance, these people slept by the road side, so that the roads for miles were lined with them. Exposed to the vicissitudes of the present remarkable season, thousands of them have been seized with cholera and many have already fallen victims so that fatal

THE BORE-The bore during last springs was very evere and caused several accidents to the craft on the tiver. Two vessels, the names of which we have not been able to ascertain, were torn from their moorings, and one of them had the side of her poop and her jib-boum smashed; - the other also, we are told, received some slight injury. Many boats were swamped on both sides of the river, and others severely damaged by being dashed against one another. A gentleman who was going over to Seebpore in a bauleah, was caught by the bore, when about three parts of the way across the river, and although the boat's head was promptly turned to the foaming surge, she was capsized, and every body on board obliged to swim for their lives. All, however, luckily escaped, with merely a good drenching. Another gentleman was overtaken by the flood, near Gollahdunga ghaut, and had his jolly-boat dashed to pieces and two of his men much hurt : he, however, e-caped aninjured himself. We have been informed that three dinghee-wallahs perished through the bore gelih pate being caught near the Sumatra sand and buried in the waves. Parties crossing the wate during the full and new moon, should be extremely vigilant, or they will stand a chance of losing their lives. The best way to escape the force of the bore, is by pulling into the middle of the stream, when they see or hear it coming, and rowing down the river, with the boat's head opposed to the ad. vaucing tide; and then, immediately after the first suif has passed, they should pull in as far as possible to within fifty or eighty yards of the shore, where their boat will easily bound over the two back surfs, and they may afterwards land, with ease, in perfect safety.

The bore on the nights of the 26th, 27th and 28th ultimo, was very violent and did much mischief to the banks and boats on the Howrah side of the water. We learn that on the with of the 28th, the chains of the Bethel were snapped usunder, and that several vessels dragged their anchors. A pariah sloop was stranded and several boats swamped.

ORIENTAL LIFE INQUINANCE OFFICE. -At the meeting of the share-holders of the Or entil Lafe Insurance Office, held on the first instant, agreeable to advertisement, the superintendent employed in the cultivation of ter at several proportions submitted by the directors were unanimously adopted. The shares of this institution are at a considerable premium on the amount subscribed The principal features in the alterations in the practice of the society proposed by the directors, - at least the one most interesting to the public, is, -that by an altered scale of premiums now adopted, military and naval lives are in-urable on the same charge as civil lives, which has been the case hitherto in the long established The lead which the Chinese use in the picking of their laudable societies only.

EXPORTATION OF COOLIES -It appears that the exportation of coolies from Bengal to Mauritius is to be put Nothing is said about a stop to until further notice. those who have been shipped off for the Mauritius since the commencement of 1838; but, perhaps, when they arrive at the Mauritius they will be allowed to land. This is interesting intelligence to the shippers here.

noxps .-- The new line of communication called the Burdway and Benates road, commencing from Sulkea, even in its present unfinished state, is the best that has ever been travelled on in India, and when finished will indeed constitute a splendid testimony of the liberality of British rule. It was commenced upon in October 1832, is to be 340 miles long,—to cross over two ferries, the Guiges and the Soane, and seven fords,-the Bolance Modhui (two branches) Leela-gam, Mohanna and the Barakha twice-to have altogether 40 bridge: and 600 drains. The road is 30 feet wide at the top, the average height is three feet, but on the Ramghui Hills it is only one toot high, - and between them and the Ganges two feet. The cost may be estimated at Rs. 3,50,000 The line of road which it has been de termined to construct between Cachar and Munuipou is fast progressing, and is likely to be soon completed, to the great convenience of the troops that may be required to advance for any infiltrity operations. The coperation of the political authorities and the Munippin Government are contributing greatly to facilitate the completion of that undertaking.

ZEMINDARY ASSOCIATION .- At four o'clock on the 25th ultime, a second meeting of the zemudais resident at and about Calcutta, was held at the Hindoo College, at which Rajahs Kalikissen, Radhakant and Rajahaiu, and Baboos Kamanauth Tagore, Prosonno Coomar Tagore, Ralmauth Roy and many other respectable native gentlemen, were present. The proceedings were conducted in Bengally, and Rajah Rudhakaunt president in the chair. A resolution was passed for the purpose of calling a public meeting at the Town half which, our informant states, will take place in the course of the current month. Much cothusiasm was displayed by all present, and the formation of a society under the above name is now beyond a doubt.

A NEW STRAND ROAD. - Before long the in habitants of this City of Palaces are likely to have a new strind road, as it is stated that Government has in contempla-tion the making of one. The alluvials on the banks of the river from Hautcolah down to their southern extrinity, have already been surveyed, and it has been ascertained what would be she probable amount to be realized by selling them off. This our informant adds has been found to be sufficient to cover the expenses to be incurred by the measure.

A NEW SOCILTY .- A society is about to be established in Calcutta under the name of "The Society for the acquisition of General Knowledge." The projectors of it are certain native gentleman famous for their extensive knowledge of English, and of thexceptionable character in every other respect.

appointed secretary of the Theatre, in loco Mr. Farmer, in the Chitpore road, a little above the Laul Bazar who retues.

CULTIVITION OF TEA AT ASSAM. - It is stated that the Assam, has recently furnished some samples to the comouttee, which on trial have been pronounced by that body, and the Government, to be sufficiently good to constitute a merchantable commodity. The only great lifficulty which the Committee have to overcome is, to upon the most advisable means of package, securing it from the effects and changes of climate and landing it as fresh in England as it has been received by them cases, is of a peculiar description, and some time must elapse before the native work men, however skilful they may be, are able to manufacture it.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO UNCOVENANTED ASSISTANTS. The following rules have been drawn up by the Sudder Board of Revenue, for granting leave of absence to uncovenanted servants:

- " 1. If an uncovenanted assistant shall obtain leave of absence from his office for any period not exceeding one month, on a medical certificate granted by a medical officer of Government, and declaring that he is disqualified by sickness from attending office and performing his duties, he shall not be hable to any deduction from his alary.
- " 2. If his term of absence on medical cerificate shall exceed one, but shall not exceed 3 months he shall be hable to a deduction of one sixth of his salary for the whole of the term of absence.

But it shall not be competent to a collector to grant leave on private affairs for a period exceeding fifteen days, nor to a commissioner, or civil or session judge to grant similar leave for a period exceeding one month, without the sanction of the Sudder Board of Revenue or the Sudder Dewanny Adamiut of Vizamut Adawlut respectively, as the case may be. 10, Fifteen days during the year shall be the limit to which leave of absence in private affairs shall be granted to any uncovenanted assistant free of deduction of salary.

STABUING. - About 10 o'clock on the night of the 4th MR. CHESTER .- It is said that Mr. Chester, has been | instant, a European seamen wounded two Mosulmans thannah, one of them named Bucka-oollah in the belly, Bucka-oollah, died the next day, his intestines having protruded from the wound. The other man is out of danger. The circumstances were, that the aggressor and a companion of his had purchased some segars a little before, and a Bengally happening to throw the same down accidentally from the hands of the former, he ran after him with a knife in his hand, but could not overtake him, being much under the influence of liquor. The Bengally managed to get into a house and shut himself in it. The police then coming up to take the sailor into custody, he got more exasperated, and attempting to stab them, they were obliged to retreat. time the individuals in question were passing along the street quietly and were attacked by the inchricat. The street quietly and were attacked by the inchriest. case has been tried before the Coroner, and, in consequence of the witnesses not being able to identify the homicide, a veidict of wilful murder was retuined against some person or persons unknown.

DACOITY .- A native arrived from Barasat, states that a dacoity had taken place in that zillah during the las week. About midnight the house of one Jugget Caunder, sirear, a resident in the village of Kankhara, purgunnah Haulishahur, was stormed by a gang of dacoits who besides carrying off 600 tupees cash, and gold and silver ornaments, &c. to the amount of about two hun-dred rupees, inflicted severe wounds upon one of the inmates.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE .- The veteran sportsman, Brigadier Showers, has given up racing, and his worthy jockey, Ifall, is expected shortly at Calcutta, with twelve of the Brigadier's best horses for sale.

THE CHIFFORE ROAD WATERING FUND .- We understand that the Government have directed a meeting of the subscribers to the Chitpore Road Watering Fund to be called without delay, for the purpose of determining upon the best mode of using the amount subscribed.

GOOMSUR. - Extract from a letter of Captain Campbell, dated Goomsur, 25th February, 1838:

"I have been most fortunate in my late expedition among the wild Konds of Goomsur, and have rescued no less than one hundred and three children of various ages. who were intended for sacrifice by these barbarians, and that without the application of force:-these children are now at head-quarters, and form a most interesting group, happy such as were aware of their situation, in having escaped the fate which awaited them."

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY ,- At the monthly meeting of the proprietors of, and subscribers to, the Public Library, on the 3d instant, a report was made of the number of new books purchased or presented during February, and of the number circulated in the course of the month. latter amount to seven hundred and fifty-three. Seven new subscribers have been added to the list, and two have withdrawn on account of their leaving Calcutta; Mr. Cameron has presented Rs 100 to the vested fund, thus raising that fund to Re- 3443; and the whole return of the pecuniary affairs of the institution indicates a gradual and steady advance towards prosperity and permanence.

CAPTURE OF DACOITS .- Between nine and ten o'clock on the night of the 27th of February last, a gang of dacoits were captured at the ghant of Gopeegunge, within the thannah of Culmeejole. They were sixteen in number, and were noticed by the chokeedars of the place, on their crossing the Damooda. The chokeedars discovered that they were provided with arms of almost every kind. The chokeedars attempted to stop them, and the other in the breast. Both were taken to the | but the number of the latter being greater than that of Chandney Native Hospital, for medical assistance; but the former, they had very nearly succeeded in making their escape, when the chokeedars giving the alarm by beat of drum, many of the inhabitants of the village assembled, and by their assistance twelve of the ruffianwere secured, together with their weapons. On investigation being made by the darogali of the division subsequently, it has transpired that the prisoners were all inhibitants of Calcutta, and it was supposed that they, perhaps being aware of Rs- 2,000 being sent from thence to Mr. Watson's factory at Ghautal, were proceeding thither for the purpose of robbing that factory.

> OVERLAND MAILS .- At a meeting of the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce on the 8th instant, it was determined to address the Government respecting the delay in the arrival of the Bombay dak; and to urge the expediency of entertaining extra runners to convey the overland mail; the appearance of which at Bombay can now be calculated with precision.

> It was proposed also, to request the Government to take measures, so that the communication with England viá the Red Sea shall be continued without any interruption, even under the contingency of steamers being despatched to he Persian Gulph.

COVERNMENT CHANGE SHOPS .- In older to do away effectually with the complaint so generally made of the difficulty experienced in obtaining change at the Government shops, and to prevent the extortion of the Bazar podais, both in giving and receiving change, the Government, at the recommendation of the mint-master, have come to the resolution of granting licences to individuals who will be furnished with pice from the mint, at the rate of 66 for the rupee, and required to retail the same in the market, at the rate of 64, thus getting two pice on every rupee as remunication for trouble, -and yet give the public what is now only obtainable at the Government change shops. On the other hand parties desirous of obtaining rupees in change for pice at the licenced shops, will get one of the former by paying 65 for the latter.

MURDER .- A boy about seven years of age was murdered on the night of 27th ultimo, within the third division, by the paramour of his mother. A verdict of wilful murder has been returned against the assassin.

NEPAL WAR .- A correspondent of the Hurkaru hints. that there is a likelihood of a brush with our friends the Nepaulese, who are now busily engaged in fortifying themselves.

ASSISTANT ROAD-MAKERS. - Government has been pleased to sanction a monthly salary of 200 rupees each, to Lieutenants Sale and Allardyce, of Engineers, and to any other officer who may be employed under Captain Guthrie, as an assistant in the construction of roads upon the eastern frontier. It is in contemplation to appoint, besides the individuals named above, other European agents: the extent of the road, the nature and probable donation of the work being such as to require this additional superintendence.

MR. FARMPR'S BENBEIT PLAY .- The play for Mr. Farmer's benefit was a complete failure. The elements were most unpropitiously disposed towards the ex-secretary. The only part of the play that was effective, was the deluge, which was by accident, we suppose, with mentioned in the programme. The wind blew the rain poured, and the water covered the interior of the theatre, and made the boxites fly for shelter under the seat of the gods.

ACCIDENT AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE BY LIGHTNING .- The Government House was struck by lightning during the The lightning seems to have been attracted by the figure of Britannia on the top of the dome or rather by the spear in her hand-which it shivered to pieces and threw down. The marks left by the lightning are visible on its broken point. After demolishing the spear it seems to have passed down the upper part of the dome and penetrated in some invisible manner in o the Ball Room of the House in three separate places. NEW DEFFORMS. - Printed circulars have been issued by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief containing his new arrangements for the uniforms of the staff and regimental officers. Respecting the staff, there are great and not very gratifying alterations. Some departments now distinguished by the decorations of the blue cuffs and collar, are to wear regimental uniforms only. The members of the Medical Board are no longer to appear in plain diesses, but in the military habilements of their rank, which according to the present arrange-ment, is particularly plain. Superintending Surgeons are merely distinguished from Staff Surgeons by the epaulettes, and all other departments are equally simple and plain.

DEATH OF DR. TYTLER -Intelligence was received on the 27th ultimo, of the death of the celebrated Dr. Robert Fytler. The worthy doctor was, on his way to Gwalior, to confirm by personal observation an interesting scientific discovery which he believed he had made, when he was taken ill.

MOTUSSIL.

Anna .- The indications of rain have entirely disappeared without a drop having fallen. The most gloomy apprehensions for the fate of the spring crop prevail in consequence; and sickness has agrin broken out severely in this city.

Influenza has recently made its appearance in the station, but has attacked only a of the residents.

Starvation to a fearful extent prevails in the city and suburbs. Scattered over the latter are found the bodies of persons who have dropped down and expired from absolute exhaustion through want of food.

There is a report that the post office department of the north western provinces, will be separated from that of Bengal, the Governor-General having discovered that the Calcutta branch know nothing of the department as in operation in these provinces.

One part is employed in directing the main stream of the river under the town-a large tank is about to be formed in contonuents in thelaige hallow near Messis. Monro and Co's round which trees are to be planted. though their repair seems in lifferently attended to Another reservoir is about to be formed near the Session ravine in that quarter the bottom of which is below the level of the river. It is proposed to open a communication by means of pipes between it and the river by which the tank may be supplied or emplied at pleasure. This will add materially to the comfort of the twon's people.

> A number of persons supposed to have been concerned in the daring datoity that took place at the Lohamundee, in October last, have been seized in the Juepoor district, near a village called Kutawice, and been brought into Agra; they were traced to the spot, and a strong body of police were sent in pursuit-one of whom and a horse were killed in effecting the arrest of the gang.

> DEULER. - So great is the scarcity of money in the Deblee Treasury, that the King's allowance has been allowed to run in arrears for three months. The widow of the executed conrderer Shumsoodeen, has been awarded two l. ces and a half of supres out of her husband's property, being the amount of her marriage settlement.

> ALLYGURA. - A few slight showers fell in this district. Wheat is selling at seventeen seers per rupee, and gram at sixteen, a degree of dearness unprecedented in the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

> DINAPORE. - A letter from Dinapoore, dated 23d ultimo, announces the arrival of the steamer, with Dwarkanauth Pagore and Capt. and Mis. Cockerell on board. Dwarkanauth landed and visited the Deegth farm, and expressed houself much pleased with all he saw, but especially with the chinate which he finds quite bracing .

A REFRACTORY CHIFFTAIN .- The 39th and 49th regiments of native infantry, and the 4th local horse are ordered to march immediately from Neemuch against a refractory Chieftain of the Oudypore state, who resideat a stronghold, called Joora, 15 coss to the west of the city of Oudypore, in the heart of the Bheethills and jungles.

The chief is said to have declared himself independent. and refused the payment of the usual tribute; and to be loud in protestations that he will not yield as long as his head remains on his shoulders.

Native exaggeration magnifies his followers to 20,000 men; and that the affan is of some consequence, may be gathered from the fact that the Deesa Force is expected to co-operate, from the west, with Marwar troops, from the east.

The theatre of operations is a terra incognita on our maps! but from the descriptions we have received of the proposed site of junction of our troops, it must be somewhere in the vicinity of Mount Abboo, which, if the contest be a all prolonged, as is not improbable from the nature of the country, and the character of the enemy, will thus be rendered a rather insecure sanatarium for the invalid officers and their ladies who have proposed passing the hot season on its summit.

RAJPOOTANAH .- Accounts from Rajpootanah mention, that the small-pox was carrying off numbers of the population of Mairwara, and the cantonments of Beawr in particular. Pallee was still suffering from the pestilence, and the town is now nearly deserted.

At Ajmere, Nusseerabad and Neemuch there had been a considerable quantity of sickness from colds, coughs, fevers, agues, small-pox and similar unwelcome. because unseasonable, maladies, which the vor populi, with one consent, lays to the charge of the air.

Whatever crops are raised in Rajpootana this spring will be entirely owing to irrigation; and the poor villagers affirm that to afford any return, each field must be watered eight or ten times. By constant labour at the wells a limited but oasis of cultivation now surrounds most of the villages in those parts, beyond which the boundless plains present an aspect of the most hopeless andity! Travellers report, notwithstanding albthis, that the agricultural state of Rajpootana, is considerably superior to that of the Dooab.

CAWNFOOR .- A Field Officer has been put in arrest at this station.

ASSAM. - A report has been received by Government of a fire having broke out on the 6th instant in Goalparah, (Assam,) by which the whole of the cutcherry, treasury and jail, and nearly the entire town have been consumed.

PRINCE HENRY OF GRANGE. - Prince Henry of Orange, reached Madras on the Bellona, on the 1st instant, ind was to have landed on the next day.

On the 13th ult. His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Orange, took his departure from our shores homeward nound, after having experienced and appreciated the hospitality and attention his high rank and mild and attractive manners so eminently entitled him to. He expressed himself much pleased and gratified with his visit to this presidency, which has, since his arrival, been a continual scene of garety.

nurmers war .- It was lately stated that II. M. 63.1 regiment had been ordered over to Moulinein forthwith by the Supreme Government. Report has since stated surther orders to have been received by our local authorities, for their holding four native corps available for prompt transmission of Rangoon in case of a necessity trising. This betokens a desire, however tardily aroused. to place our relations with the Court of Ava upon a less questionable footing than they have held since the usurpation of Tharrawaddie. The only matter for apprehension is, that the moment of decision may have arrived too late to effect the quantum of good desired at the least possible cost, - that the time shall have passed by when the idea of attack upon us might have been overawed, and we be, perhaps, left now to resist and overcome hostilities already commenced to our disad-

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT .- A melancholy accident occurred between 10 and 11 o'clock of the 9th instant, in the Government gardens. It appears that one of the intelopes made its way into the place where they were busy preparing the fireworks for the grand display. In attempting to driv him out, the animal overturned a lantern amongst the gunpowder, which immediately exploded, setting fire at the same time to all the freworks prepared. Two unfortunate men, we deeply lament to say, were killed on the spot, two more were frightfully burnt and expired shortly afterwards, and two more received severe injury from the effects of this deplorable

THE MASTER ATTENDANT. - This officer proceeded on board the Bellone, on the 1st instant, and on returning to the shore was met by a note from the Deputy Master Attendant recommending him not to land, as the surf was very high. The signal "there is too much surf to land" was also dying. He accordingly went on board one of the ships in the roads, where he remained antil the warning signal was taken down, the surf having moderated. On the boat reaching the outer surf, it

The boat did not upset, and a peon who remained in it came safely on shore. Capt. Dalrymple when brought on shore appeared much exhausted, and has, we understand, since suffered a good deal from the effects of the accident.

BOMBAY.

THE BUEELS. - It is said that the Bheels have mustered in some force to the northward, and that, in consequence, several companies of the troops stationed at Baroda, which have been out on detachment, have been ordered back to head quarters, that an attack might be concerted against the marauders. The Bheels are said to be pretty tormidable in point of number.

THE HYDERABAD RESIDENCY .- The Hyderabad risidency 19, it seems, in want of an incumbent, although the appointment seems to be but little coveted by those to whom it has been offered, Colonel Alves has positively refused it, and the services of Major Sutherland have been most earnestly desiderated, but as yet without any prospect of success.

KANDISH INDICO. - The indigo of Kandish is said to be in all respects, when properly manufactured, equal to the best that can be produced in Bengal. Several samples were sent to Bombay, and were considered to contain all the properties of the finest indigo. Some samples have been sent to London for a report as to their market value, and a most favourable one is confidently anticipated.

NEW SCHOONERS .- Two schooners are building in the port under instructions from the Court of Directors, which when completed promise to be perfect models of that mode of construction. The rivalry of the master builders of England is brought into play, the model on which one of them is to be built having been furnished by Sir Robert Seppings, and of the other by Captain Symonds. As these vessels are described, they will eclipse almost any thing of the kind which has yet appeared in our Docks, and are intended for running up and down the coast.

Ward, attended by Mr. Patch, Registrar of the Consistory Court; after which, the acting Archdeacon, addressing his Lordship, stated that he had the honor by order of the Governor in Council, to announce his Lordship as the Bishop of the Diocese of Bombay. Agreeable to the form of worship observed in cathedrals, the jubilate Deo was chanted instead of being rehearsed. After the communion service, the Bishop ascended the pulpit, and delivered his charge to the clergy.

RELIEF TO SUFFERERS OF THE UPPER PROVINCES.

Government appears, at length, to have taken into their learnet those periodical famines that visit the countrymost serious consideration, the distressed state of the u .per provinces, and are now a liministering very extensive relief in all quarters. At Agra, upwards of 25,000 people are employed; at Futteliguth and Cawapore a nearly equal number, and at other stations proportionate bodies. To so great an extent does this ail operate, that, in one district (Futtchguih), we learn distress has almost entirely disappeared, and it is perceptibly dimi-nishing in others. This extensive relief as fir as we learn, is intended to be continued as long as it may be required, or until the means of Government are exhausted. To supply the latter, there is, we understand, a crore of rupeed available, all of which Government are prepared to disburse, if necessary.* In addition to these exertions there have been advances made to the resident agricultural classes, and a discriminative remission of revenue. Had, however, even a part of this extensive liberality been exhibited in the proper time, at the time we urged it, the aspect of the country would have been far different from what it is, and an earlier termantion to the distress in all probability been provided for, than we can now look forward to. Had Government afforded assistance to the agricultural classes in November and December, to enable them to sow their lands and irrigate, much and lasting misery would have been prevented. By the late application of rehef we have not only more misery to aid, but our assistance does not in any way tend to put an end to it, which aid earlier afforded would have done. Had we assisted the cultivators of the affected districts at the commencement of the season, the increase of produce, consequently, on the rubee crop would have materially ameliorated the condition of the country. But as we have managed, the very liberal aid we afford produces no effect beyond the day that passes over us; it operates in no way towards abridging the duration of famme, which now entirely depends on the late or early setting in of the rains. To that alone must we now look for effectual relief, and if it be late, the dead weight of feeding a whole people must prove unequal even to Government. Let all, then, look with confidence to their early appearance, and in that spirit subscribe liberally towards preserving the population through the intermediate period.

We have, as we said above, allowed the proper period to pass, when relief would have produced the greatest quantity of benefit-now an irretrievable error; but the question ought to impress Government with a sense of the imperative duty of considering how the country may, in future, be preserved from such afflicting visitations. In the present rude state of Indian agriculture, an untoward season must give rise to suffering more or less, and, until it is improved, we cannot effectually coun-

* Report has it that there are three crores in the General Treasury, two of which are to be reserved for contingencies—such as a war with Burmah, or other places, becomes more fixed and definite, agriculture will improve, and the country be, to a great extent, preserved against the calamitous consequences of such seasons as the present. This improvement is not indeed advancing with very arpid strides; but, while it is slowly, if imperceptibly approaching, much may be done by Government towards the same end, -we mean towards alleviating the distress caused by these failures. One important means for effecting this is even now being resorted to — we mean a reduction of the revenue, but whether to a sufficient extent, or not, is very doubtful. Adam Smith and the Economists lay it down as a rule, that on the proportion between the produce required to replace capital and revenue depends the general character of the inhabitants of a country as to industry or idleness. When the former is considerable and bears a large proportion to the latter, the funds for the employment or maintenance of productive labour are abundant, such as we see in England and all rich countries. Here, on the contrary, the produce required for revenue, bears an enormous proportion to that required to replace capital, and the consequence is, that there are not sufficient means for the employment of productive labour—the immediate cause of the present general destitution. There is no want of food but a wint of money to purchase it, and this from the scarcity of employment, is beyond the command of the poor. To reduce the large proportion revenue bear to the produce required to replace capital, is one of those direct measures that can alone prevent, extentively, the disastrous effects of such seasons as those seasons which we know recur trequently. The produce required to replace capital beyond all proportion small, and must be so as long as the demands of Government absorb nearly the whole of it. Such a system carries with it heavy and unceasing depression-it found the country poor at first and keeps it so; and, unless Government are prepared to make a present sacrifice of revenue, the distress around us will recur, in the same intensity with the recurrence of similar seasons, till time shall be no more. The charity of Government will be called for again, and again be granted, and the country having "got over" the famine, will be in the same state it was before or perhaps worse. Better than such charity were Government to reduce their revenue even by the amount of such charity, for small as it would be, it would, at least, generate slowly a better order of things; while the elemosynary aid granted under the present system, is just sufficient to the day thereof. The new settlement now in progress, will, no doubt, materially improve the condition of the country;

† Not only does the amount of revenue operate against the non-employment of labour, but the universal belief that Government, even in untoward seasons, will exact the full amount of it, provents the small capitalists from expending even a little of their funds in extra irregation: liberality alone will dissipate this feeling calamity, in connexion with the revenue remissions they are now making, if possible to increase them. Nothing but a diminution of it to some extent will save the country from the retrogression it must constantly under-go from untoward seasons. A second indirect cause of the quantity of unemployed labour in the country—the direct one of the distress -is a want of specie. A heavy drainage of coin has for some time taken place in the general must for re-coinage, which Government have not been sufficiently active in replacing, by sending the new issue by their steamers, and opening the up-country treasuries, by granting drafts on them to parties drawing against their Calcutta, consignments. This combined with an actual scarcity of food—not however amounting to a dearth-will account for much of the immediate distress. The attention, then, of Government should, in future, be more closely directed to preserving a due equi-librium between specie and the traffic of the country, for disturbed as it now appears to be, it aggravates the na-tural calamites of the seasons. To these and other artificial causes are clearly traceable, much of the misery now visible, for there is no actual scarcity of food. want of labour is the immediate cause, produced by the combined operation of a too heavy revenue, want of proper confidence in Government, and scarcity of specie, as well, of course, by the almost total failure of the rain crops. The former must be removed by Government, and by their removal the country will be able to sustain, with comparatively slight injury, the latter.

but Government ought to view the present national cause a lower price of grain. We have our volumes of Smith, Ricardo, Walthus, and others, and yet we maintain that Government should have done so. The principles of these philosophers would not exactly have suited the state of society in Utopia or Ell Dorado; and though this country does not differ so widely from the rest of the world, as these creations of the mind do, vet we contend it does so sufficiently to affect the application of many of the rules of political economy to it. Will the following anecdote, selected from a thousand, not shew this? We know a rich grain merchant who is now selling wheat ten years old at thirty seers per rupee, and even at that price reluctantly parts with it. Now this wheat could not be sold at a remunerating price for, say, one rupee per seer, if we take into calculation the prime cost, interest, damage, &c. &c. Yet this is the usual practice of the trade, and it is to such the Calcutta propers talk of political economy. An English trader, for whom the science was framed, would manage these things somewhat differently. Again, had Government themselves imported grain in the commecement of the season they would have reduced the price of it, increased the quantity available for food, enabled consequently the zameendars to support more of their cultivators, and, above all, have proved to the country that they had its relief at heart - a feeling that would have inspired the villagers into making greater exertious, and sowing and irrigating more ground than they have. The Calcutta cockne, s would, however, adhere to a science never intended for a people of whom they know nothing ; and what has been Our Calcutta friends, we see, persist in imputing the result? famine, death, disease, and coime to an appalling extent. But, the la Science, come what biding that Government ought to have interfered to may.—Harkaru, April 3.

Calcutta, April 2, 1838.

PROCEEDINGS OF ..

Relief Society, held at the house of G. J. Gordon, Leg., 5th March, 1838.

Chambers and Mr. Wooliaston,

A statement of the accounts of the past month having been read, it was resolved :

That as the daily average of starving paupers for the last month (February) was 3,800, involving a monthly expenditure of Co.'s Rs 2,483-12, and as this average during the present month is likely to be nearly doubled, with a prospect of future increase; and as the monthly subscription amounts only to Rs 770, with about Rs 3,000 at present in hand, an immediate and urgent appeal he made to the residents of Agra to increase their subscriptions, and that a statement of the funds of the society, and of this resolution, be printed and circulated to every station in this presidency not affected by the famine, as also to Madras and Hombay, requesting their assistance in furtherance of the objects of the society, and urging speedy remittances; the subscriptions to be appropriated to the poor collected in the city of Agra, which contains one-seventh of the population of the entire district,

The Agra Relief Committee in making this appeal to the residents of other stations, are aware that there are other parts of these provinces suffering almost to an equal extent with this district; but they deem it advisable to leave the residents of such stations to adopt their own, measures, and make their own appeal to the charitable public; at the same time they beg to state, that they will be happy to be the medium of conveying An emergent meeting of the committee of the Agra any portion of subscriptions raised at other stations, tosuch parts in these provinces as the subscribers may direct.

II. That a copy be forwarded to Government, in furtherance of the resolution of the meeting of the 27th ultimo, to solicit them to afford the society monthly assistance for the next six mouths, to an extent equal to the fixed monthly subscription, or such portion as the Government may deem proper. It is guident, from the amount of the demands on the funds of the society, that without large and immediate assistance in the present distress, they must soon cease to supply relief to three-fourths of those who are now dependant on the Society for actual existence.

III. Mr. Mansel, the magistrate, stated that he would receive working paupers to any extent which the Relief Society might be able to send; and also authorized the secretary to send, in future, the able-bodied daily, firstead of twice a week as heretofore, by which arrangement a saving will be caused to the Society's expenditure.

The meeting having voted thanks to the president, adjourned.

portant aid which has probably arrested in some conderable degree the downward course into which the ntire population seemed at first to be rapidly falling, ne private native benevolence has contributed, as I uppose, when their means and future prospects are onsidered, with much liberality to aid their distressed ountrymen; yet it must be obvious to even a cursory bserver, that ample scope remains for the intervention I those, who, at a distance, can only in faint imaginaion picture to themselves an outline of the sad reality.

I would wish to guard you from the mistake, supposng that the accompanying statement regarding the named purgunas has any connexion with the immediate scene of operation, in which our committee are engaged, as all which we have within regarding Cawnpore is reparate and distinct from it. As we have thankully acknowledged your intended donation of Re-3,000 of which 500 has been transmitted to Mr. M. at Menfieghat, we shall probably need to retain the remainder of that sum to supply our wants here; but we can, with the aid of Mr. R., distribute any sum you may entrust to us with a view to alleviate the pressure which weighs so heavily in these purgunnas, ere the follorn class which, on account of their extreme misery, is excluded, because unable to work, from Government employment.

It would, doubtless, he a great encouragement to these kind zemindars, when they find their most distant countrymen thus coming forward to their aid; and so far from their own endeavours being allowed to flag on this account, they would, doubtless; the more strenously exert themselves as they would then have good grounds to lope that the final issue of their efforts would be successful.

Extract from a memorandum enclosed in the Society's letter .- " The distress in the western part of the district amounts to actual famine. No rain, with the exception of a slight shower in June, has fallen in Bethoor and Rupoolabad since March last. The country has since that time been a bairen waste. Negatively relief was afforded by withholding the Government claims for revenue, positively charitable aid, by employment on the Grand Trunk Road, and in the district of kurruckabad, to which many resorted, by employment on its roads.

In some villages there were substantial managers between the cultivators and Government; the malgootars have, to this day, actually fed the cultivators: in those where the land is minutely subdivided, all being equally impovenished, have emigrated to the Saugor provinces, or sought for labour in the neighbouring districts. CORONER'S INQUEST.

An inquest was held yesterday at the residence of the Coroner, touching the death of Dookoo, a young native woman, resident of Chore Bagiun. The deposition of . Dr. Bain, the police Surgeon, declared, that on his dissecting the corpse, a quantity of yellow arsenic was found lodged therein, and he was borne out in the identity of the poison by Dr. O's haughnessy, who analyzed it in his presence. Dr. B. was of opinion that she died from the effects of the deadly drug in question. The examinations of the brother and sister of the deceased (the farmer being the person who first made mention of the untimely death of his sister to the thannadar of the division), shewed no evidence that the same was administered by any person, nor was proof deducible that she had taken it voluntarily. They also deposed, that the deceased and her husband lived very happily. They suspected no one of having administered the drug to their deceased

The landlord and also a neighbour of the deceased, both coroborated the statements of the previous witnesses; the Coronor clearly recapitulated the evidence, and the Jury instantly returned a verdict to the following effect : "Died from the effects of poison, no evidence of her having taken it voluntarily, nor of its having been adminis-tered to her."

The Coroner took the deposition of the constable entrusted with the delivery of a summons to Mr. Charles Marriott. The constable stated, that he delivered the summons to Mr. M. between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock. at the Military Board Office, when and where he was informed by Mr. M., that having received a previous summons from the Sheriff to serve at the next sessions as a petit juror, he has relieved him from the obligation of performing the duty now required of him on Her Majesty's behalf by the Coroner! On the conclusion of the constable's statement, the Coroner very pleasantly re-marked, that he did not quite understand the validity of Mr. Marriott's objection, as the next Sessions of Overand Terminer and Gaol Delivery opened on the 17th instant, and even if Mr. M.'s attendance was required on the Sheriff's summons for the next day, his obedience to the summons of Her Majesty's Coroner was imperative, and that he having written to Mr. Marriott to that effect, received his rejoinder, wherein Mr. M. presented his compliments to Her Majesty's Coroner, and desired to be excused complying with the present requisition as a previous and positive engagement, would prevent him from so doing, but he declared his willingness to attend on a future occasion.

The Coroner, after perusing Mr. M.'s reply, shewed the inconveniences this line of conduct engendered; but he did not intimate, what, if any, steps he intended taking ton face a recurrence of similar proceedings.—Hurk. Count.

MEETING OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF BENGAL.

At a meeting of the members of the Australian Association !

1st .- Moved by Mr. Patrick and seconded by Mr.

Resolved-That the report of the committee just read be adopted.

2d .- Moved by Mr. Pigou and seconded by Mr. Brae. Resolved .- That Mesers, Patrick and Cracroft be requested to put themselves in communication with Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. to sift the complaints of the passengets of the Emerald Isle.

3d .- Moved by Mr. Cracroft and seconded by Mr.

Resolved-That the blame laid on the unpaid secretary in the passengers protest, addressed to Capt. Driver, dated at Madias, 16th March, 1838, is utterly unjust, groundless and undeserved. The supply of provisions having been left entirely to Mesers. Carr, Tagore and Co. the owners, and to Capt. Driver acting under their directions, the secretary having had nothing to do with it further than laying the samples sent by Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co, before the passengers at a tiffin, where they were fully approved of.

J. Sawers, Chairman.

The meeting of the Australian , ssociation at the Town-Hall, last Saturday, was not very well attended: after the chair was taken by Dr. Sawers, the secretary read the following report of the committee:

The second report of the committee of the Australian association of Bengal.

Before entering upon the general affairs of the association, your committee feel themselves called upon at length, on the 20th November, engaged for the first to explain the reason of their not having convened the regular quarterly meeting on the 31st December The disappointment of the first engagement for the Juliana, and the difficulty in finding a substitute delayed the departure of the first ship to a late period in December, when there was an immediate necessity to make fresh arrangements for the second voyage: this, with the secretary's other occupations, rendered it impossible for your committee to have met the sub-scribers as they intended with a statement of past operations, and made it expedient to delay the meeting till they were prepared with the accounts of both expedi-

Your committee have had to content with more difficulty in procuring vessels on charter than they anticipated in the state of the market, and these difficulties were not overcome without great exections and some personal sacrifice.

The first ship engaged by the association was the Juliana of 550 tons. The charter was already drafted and about to be executed, when it was discovered that the mortgages in England had sent out powers to foreclose the mortgage and despatch the ship to England. This discovery put an end to the engagement, and made it necessary to look out for a new one. With the greatest exertions of your committee favoured by the low rate of freight, it was found impossible to procure a suitable vessel till the latter end of November, the costs of setting up cabins and accommodation between decks, which are rarely to be found in vessels occupied in the country trade being a sufficient discouragement to the ship owners of Calcutta, and ships owned in Europe, being for the most part restricted in their voyages, voyage at the rate of 4,000 rupees a month; but being a future voyages; and there is every hope will be continucountry ship without cabins between decks, and those ed by the owners in this line of navigation. of the poop requiring to be altered, she could not be got ready for despatch earlier than the 16th December, although the most unremitting exertions were made by all concerned in the vessel, and so meretorious in particular were those of Mr. Gardyne, the chief officer, that your committee thought themselves bound to mark their sense of his labours by a gratuity of Re- 300 which he richly merited.

The Gaillardon of 400 tone, Captain Rapson, was

The Gaillurdon sailed on the 16th December, quite full of passengers and freight, and though your committee were disappointed in her capacity for cargo, it will be seen by the accompanying accounts that there is every probability of a surplus to the association on her charter. She was destined for Sydney, touching at the Swan, Arclaide, and Hobart Town, and, on her return voyage, at such ports as our agent at Sydney may require. Your committee have the satisfaction to state that letters have been received from the vessel dated 31st Decembe-, all well, and crossing the line with a fine breeze.

The Baboo was engaged for the second voyage of January, but not making her appearance in time to fulfil her engagement, your committee were again compelled to find a substitute, and, after much delay, were enabled by the kind and liberal assistance of Mesers. Carr. Tagore and Co., to secure the new ship Emerald Isle, of 500 tons, Captain Thomas Driver, at a freight of Res 5,000 per month. But again there was the same necessity of erecting cabins between decks, besides which she had to be new rigged and fitted in almost every particular and still greater delay was thus unfortunately inevitable.

The Emerald Isle sailed with a full cargo and pas-"agers on the 25th February, for her first destination, adras, for the passengers and convicts there, and her mal at that place on the 16th instant is announced.

The accounts of this adventure are less encouraging be, has those of the Gaillardon; but the measures by your committee to secure a return freight, will, it is hoped, cover the outlay; the cause of this less favourable prospertia the addition of 1,000 rupees per month on the charter-party freight, and the lower rate procured on her dead weight, in consequence of unlooked for competition.

Your committee regret that the necessity of new fittings for both the vessels already despatched (which the failure of their previous contracts had made indispensable), was productive of much inconvenience to shippers and passengers, which was felt and complained of by several of the party on board; they have further been blamed for despatching the vessel in a crowded state, and such was undoubtedly the case; but they have little to accuse themselves of on this score, the fault having been, for the most part, with the passengers themselves, an i the unusual quantity of their personal baggage, of which due notice was not given, and for which provision had accordingly not been made. The only alternative was to refuse admission to the baggage which would have given still greater dissatisfaction. They have, however, devised measures for preventing the like inconvenience in future, though they despair of entirely semoving it. It is one that emigrant ships are necessarily exposed to more than others.

On the whole, notwithstanding the untoward circumatances above detailed, your committee congratulate the subscribers on the favourable commencement already made, and the prospect of increased communica-tion with Australia which the example already set, appears now to hold out. The number of vessels advertized to sail to that part of the world is greater now than at any former period, and the inquirers for freight provisions as we may use without endangering our and passage, and for purposes of emigration, are increasing health, and that of our children, from the gross instensionly. Your committee are happy to say, that the ion that has existed in supplying the ship. Most of ressels already despatched are fitted in all respects for the passengers, as you must be aware, have hitherte

On board the Emerald Isle, off Magras, 16th March. 1838.

TO CAPTAIN DRIVER.

DEAR Sin,-We, the undersigned passengels Emerald Isle, having understood from the words of the published prospectus of the Bengal Australian Emigrant Association, "that we should be furnished with an abundance of the usual sea supplies of the best description, beg to draw your particular attention to what cannot have escaped your own observation, viv. the very inferior quality of the greater part of the cuddy stores, and the utter unfitness of some of them for use, an hope that you will not leave Madras without taking such steps as may be requisite for reincilying the serious evils we have to complain of. Imprime we long to complain of the rice, which from its inferior quality or newness has constantly caused sickness to those who have partaken of it, particularly the children. We have also to complain of the want of a proper oven and good flour. whereby the baker is entirely prevented from turnishing even the smallest supply of bread, an evil the more serious as the ship's biscuits are declared by all to be extremely bad, one kind being haid and sour and the othe, nevilly, The badness of the tea we are less inclined to dwell upon, as it may in part arise from the want of efficient means for preparing it; although not disposed to swell our list of grievances by enumerating all the deficiencies of material and attendants, which last may arise from our confined cuddy not allowing of a sufficient number of servants, yet we must again draw your attention to the extreme inferiority of the wines and liquors, the best proof of the badness of the claret is, that a first taste has been sufficient for every person, the same remark in a great degree applies to the sherry, which is fiery and of the worst kind; the brandy also has been found undeniably bad; this is the more surprising, as an abundance for our small expenditure of good quality might have been procured in Calcutta at very moderate cost. The port wine appears to be some Calcutta manufacture; the beer indeed is flut, and as it appears to be the least unwholesome beverage, it was, from the extreme badness of the wine, almost exclusively used, but only until a supply of portable beer was pro-cured from an individual on board, when it became still more exclusively the sole beverage. We trust, therefore, that at Madras you will lay in a sufficient supply of drinkable beer, port and sherry or Madeira wine, with a few cases of French brandy, and such wholesome provisions as we may use without endangering our-depended on their private stores for wine and spirits an biscuits, and some other small articles which w had every right to expect from the cuddy. We have observed that from the number of persons, horses, cattle stock, plants, &c. &c. &c. on board, the consumption of water amounts to nearly a butt perdiem, but as we have already experienced the inconvenience of being or our allowance, we trust that some arrangement for an additional supply of this indispensable necessary will be made. We feel that there are several other points or which we might justly complain, but as we are satisfied that you have done all in your power to render our situ ation as comfortable as circumstances would admit of. we abstain from alluding to them. We must, however advert to the water-closets with which the ship is fitter up; the vessel, we believe, is a new and strong one, and all these conveniences are recently up, but owing to haste or bad workmanship, or both, nearly all in the ship are so completely unserviceable, that we trust that you will get them set to rights before we proceed further on our voyage, as the cabins are already more closely packed than is convenient, and, as we think, steerage passengers should have room for their clothes, and that there should be soon for the servants and passengers to pass along. We protest against the taking on board of any farther parcels or packages, more particularly as the boats, rigging and decks are still so much lumber-ed with numerous packages of various kinds, and bales of hay, &c. &c.

We are, &c.

Remarks upon the protest of the passengers of the EMERALDISLE.

Captain Driver was requested by us to give in arestmate of the full quartity of every kind of cuidly store which might be required for such a voyage, and for third sities at the cuidly table, being particularly chosen acommander, because it was supposed that he understood this kind of thing better than others, who had no habitually carried passengers, and being instructed to do the thing in the best manuer. He had no interesthis voyage in the passage-money, and having gone to Messis. Payne and Co- to provide almost the whole ohis stores, we are at a loss to understand why the attelesshould not be plentiful and of the best discription, or how we could have taken greater precautions to secure the entire satisfaction of the passengers.

The Beer and Wine.—With regard to the beer and wine we selected them ourselves, partly from our own goldown, partly from Messrs. Eginton, McClure and Co., and musters of each were laid before the committee and fully approved. We may add, the same claret is still drank at the tables of many in Calcutta. The port was from Wardell and Co. and is highly approved; some good French brandy was also put on board by ourselves, and Capt. Driver carried also a small quantity of British brandy of his own.

The Rice.—We have searched through the bill to find who furnished the table rice according to Capt. D.'s estimate, but we do not find it in any of them, and it is not impossible that it may have been forgotten, and that Capt. D. has given the common bailum rice laid in for the lasear crew: we cannot explain this.

Brack.—There is no excuse for Capt, D. if he did not get the oven properly prepared. The flour provided was from Haworth, Hardman and Co. and not from hunty and Co. as stated by mistake. The ship bisuits were from McCulloch's new bakery, the others from Payne and Co.

Tea. - Was purchased of Rustomjee, was of the first quality, as such as we use in our own families.

Attendance.—The same room and the same attendance cannot be expected in a ship of this class, as will be found in the large passenger ships running to England.

Water.—In a ship of this kind carrying so many persons and animals must be served out with care and upon allowance; a very full provision was laid in on purpose under concurrence with the committee as to quantity.

Water closets.—The Docking Company must be responsible to us for the bad filling of these machines, for we have paid immensely for the work, but some allowance must be for the extreme haste we were called upon to urge by the terms of our chaiter with the knowledge of the charterer.

CARR, TAGORE AND Co.

Other letters were read, and we have been supplied with extracts for publication. In respect to the crowded state of the ship, Capt. Driver writes from Kedgeree, it perfectly agree with you in all and every particular respecting the crowded state of the ship; the passengers have brought such a large quantity of things that cannot go into their capins and the servants who attend them, such a number of chests, that the cvil they complain of is their own act, and not the fault of any one but themselves."

Messrs, Cari, Tagore and Co. further explain in letters to the secretary:

"We have the pleasure of replying to your letter of his date, returning Messrs. Binny and Co.'s letter by stating, that we are replying to these gentlemen by this lay's dawk, having received a similar letter from them; ending a survey report on both the port and claret held his day at our office, pronouncing them both to be cund and excellent, and calling for the descriptive marks if those landed at Mairas which we observe in their eport is not given," and in another letter from Messis, larr, Tagore and Co." It will be sufficient perhaps, I we state, that after looking over carefully, we find hat Payne and Co. supplied to Capt. Driver, under us own inspection, the greater part of the cuddy stores. The cabin biscuits and superfine flour was supplied ly Haweith, Hardman and Co. and we sent herewith unsters from the same batch of baking, for their boiler saving burst, they have not been working since they state. The sherry was part of a batch received from Liverpool in bottles, excellent wine for immediate use, and the rest, a cask of Wardell's, bottled off by us on purpose: we put on board some good French brandy, and Capt. Driver also furnished some of his own British brandy which he stated to be superior."

The flour and biscuits alluded to in the above extract, was on the table and pronounced good by the meeting. some observations were made on the unjustifiable step taken by one of the passengers, to deter the passengers, to Madras from proceeding on the ship, in writing of from Kedgeree to Madras without giving the parties attacked any opportunity of defending themselves, or orrecting the mischief, and in the uncandid spirit of the protest addressed to Capt. Driver, in which no cllusion was made to the public tiffin which, at any rate, would have shewn that the committee were anxious to supply the ship with good provisions and wines and beer.

Extracts were read from the letters of two of the passungers who attended the tiffin, and who also signed the protest, written several days after they had been on boardship. One of them says, " that they had every thing of the best and no stint, and they only wanted a hitle elbow room to be very comfortable." Another, after alluding to the tediousness of the passage down the river; " but at the same time as to the cuddy concerns we are very comfortable;" this is difficult to reconcile with "the first taste of the claret was sufficient for every person," for no doubt the claret was tasted during the seven days the ship was in the river, and had any complaint been made on this score the matter would seen to this .- Hurkaru, April 10. have had immediate attention.

Some of the gentlemen at the meeting seemed to think that Capt. Driver was not altogether blamcless; it appears he has left Madras without writing to the secretary or the committee, though one would have supposed from the existence of the complaints he would have made assents of reporting on the wines and ha quors Besides it is quite clear that he is responsible for not supplying the ship with bread and good tea, for neither his owners or the association would have the great satisfaction of those who have felt the impediments and inconveniences it has occasioned to the free transaction of business. In the city the effects of the festival are insignificant when compared to its character over the ditch. The Mohurium vacation continues for a space of fifteen days, during which the whole of the civil courts continue closed, and hardly a coin exchanges hands. Visit the courts and you find the benches of the judges empty; nothing but the platform and a few chairs appear, where the aumlah and the requisite corruptives practised their tricks. In the subordinate courts the guiddees of the honest moulvees display marks of the burthers they were obliged to endure. The magistrates' courts are merely nominally open, the nazirs look drowsy, and the sherishtadars and peshcars keep snapping their fingers for the want of lucre. To prove this picture, we recommend the curious to visit Allipore during the week.

Having pointed out the Mofussil inconveniences of the Mohurrum, we shall now proceed to describe the manner of its celebration in the city. The preliminary Matum we shall pass over, and at once take the reader to the occurrences of the Kuttel-ca-Raut. We stood at the top of the Bostaconnah Road, and, at the distance of about a mile, descried a great light moving to the sound of music; as we approached closer, we heard a buz and a few steps made the words Eah Hossein quite audible to our ears. About two hundred shawls is flag-beaters, led the way, then followed the bearers of some colours on which the sufferings of the Pargamburs were inscribed in letters of gold and silver in the Arabic character. Next came the Soonees dressed in green muslin, and leading the second van we recognized Mirza Mhendi Mislikey, supported by Hajee Karboli Maltommed and Muza Mhendy Isphahandy. Two high caste Arabs obliged to give leg bail .- Hurkaru, April 12.

This festival concluded on Fiday, the 6th, perhaps to | capatisoned in velvet and valuable coins, pranced proudly on with the funeral of their late illustrious riders. The horses were led by Aga Kazim and another Mogul gentleman, with whose name we are not familiar, The sceas were attired in mourning. The procession was evidently imposing by the beating of breasts. Every thump came down in regular time, and the naked breasts of the pentents appeared not to have been dealt with in the most tender way.

> The sound of drums next attracted our attention. The drammers preceded a mossoleum four stories high, of the Mosaic order. It was constructed of bamboos and ornamented with cotton of various colours. The taj of Hosein was suspended on the top. This belonged to the dhoomes, or the cotton refiners of Burrah Bazar. Immediately after it followed another made of the same materials, but ornamented with tinsel and illuminated with blue light. It had five stories, one above the other, and was carried like a castle through the mass of people on the road. A little below Moullaly Durgah two bodies of men, comprising about 500 on each side, marched facing each other with tojes constructed of several shields. On inquiry we learnt that one party consisted of syces belonging to Cook and Co.'s stables, and the others to Hunter and Co., Hooker, and some other livery stable keepers. In a moment the scene was confusion, the men lost all possession of themselves, and, seizing every thing they found in their way, laid it thick and three fold on their neighbours. The police interfered, but to little purpose; for if the police had been a thousand strong, they would have had to contend with ten thousand mad men, as the dispute originated for room, and terminated with the sects Seeas and Soonies. One of the combatants was killed and another seriously wounded, and the upshot was that Cook and Co.'s syces were

Resolved, that the replies when received be handed over to the committee for consideration and publication, if necessary, for the information of the Royal Asiatre Society.

Motions of which notice was given at last general meeting disposed of, viz.

Nos. 1 and 2 carried.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

No. 1.—Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Spry, "That, with a view to the advancement of agricultural knowledge and the development of the resources of British India, it appears desirable to extend the list of rewards and prizes already held out by the Society, by adding a number of others of a more specific nature, and that a pecuniary reward, not exceeding 2,000 rupees, nor less than 1,000 rupees, and the Society's gold medal, be awarded to the best practical agricultural treatise, founded on local experience, on any of the undermentioned subjects, vis. cereal grains, sugar, cotton, iodigo, silk, tobacco, coffee, and dyes generally; to these may, perhaps, be added vegetable fibre gums and extracts and resinous substances, oils, eaoutchouc, sochineal, with some modifications.

"The conditions of the above rewards will, of course, have to be considered hereafter in detail, it may not, however, be out of place to submit the following outline of them."

1st.-As to the time in which the treatises are to be sent in.

2d.—The successful treatise to be the property of Society, upless the author engages to publish in this country within — months, or in England within —; with an agreement to provide the Society, at cost price, with any number that may be required, of which timely notice to be given to the author.

3d.—The Society reserves to itself the right of rejection, without assigning any reason, restoring, of course, any treatise so rejected to the author.

4th.—The Society likewise to have the privilege of dividing the pecuniary reward allotted to any one subject between two or more competitors, who may be deemed to have equal claims to it, in which case the reward is to be computed at the maximum rate (of 2,000 rupees) and the gold medal presented to each of the candidates.

Motion, No. 2.—Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Bell, that a reward of ten rupees be given to Mr. N. Alexander's gardener for producing such fine artichokes.

Motion, No. 3.—Proposed by the secretary, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that a leward of five rupees be given to Mr. E. Preston's gardener for producing such fine parsuips.

Memo. - Both the artichokes and paranips were highly approved of at the meeting.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 13th March, forwarding a small sample of indigo, sent down by Capt. Jenkins, manufactured in Assam by Mr. Grose, from a plant closely allied to the Ruellia plant.

From W. F. Fergusson, Esq., extract from a letter to the secretary, dated 7th April, presenting a small bag of thing of seed, gathered by Dr. Campbell on the banks of the Nile. Dr. Campbell describes the leaves of the plant as larger and looking richer than those of this country.

From Capt. Bogle, dated Akyab, March 8th, advising despatch of a sample of salt, together with several specimens of caoutchoue collected in the neighbourhood.

Promising to forward specimens of the several varieties of timber common in the district. Asks for supplies of cotton, paddy, &c. seed.

From Baboo Rajnarain Day, dated March 17th, presenting to the Society an "Essay on the Agriculture of Bengal," of which he is the author.

From Colonel Caulfield, dated Berhampore, March 9th, forwarding samples of Uplan I Georgia cotton, and Sandoway tobacco, produced in the experimental garden at that station.

From H. Cope, Esq., secretary Agricultural Society of Meeret, dated March 11th, advising despatch of samples of Upland Georgia, Egyptian, &c. cotton reared in their garden at that station from seed supplied by this Society. Asking for copies of the Society's transactions.

From the same, dated March 31st, intimating the despatch of cotton which was delayed, owing to the secretary being ill.

From Monneur Perottet to Dr. Wallich, dated Kattee, Neilgheiries, March 16.

Monsieur Perottet, who has published a treatise on the wild cochineal, assures Dr. Wallich, that the insect sent by Mossieur Richard to this society, is really, the fine cochineal, called "Mesteque" or grana fine, and that the plant on which the insect arrived, is the true "Napal of the Castalians."

Monsieur P. saw both at Beurbon, on his way to India, and begged of AIr. Richard to forward a small supply to him at Pondicherry, but they arrived when he was in the Neilgherries, and the native gardeners to whom they were entrusted allowed both the insect and plant to die.

Monsieur Perottet refers Dr. Wallich to Monar. Delissert, a naturalist, for a corroboration of his parfect conviction, which he says, admits of no death, as to the insect being the true grans fina.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 23d March, forwarded for presentation to the society, on behalf of Captain Jenkins, a specimen of a sort of hemp called "Rheea," and a specimen of Indian coin grown by the Merts.

From the same, dated April 4th, presenting, in the name of Captain Jenkins, a copy of the fifth report of the Hon'ille Society of Cornwall, and a copy of the proceedings of the annual meeting of 1837, of the Royal Institution of Cornwall.

From the same, dated March 15th; enclosing a letter from Lieutenant Brown, forwarding a further supply of 900 Otaheite canes, from Major Steeman's plantation at Jubbulpore. Annexing Mr. Master's report on the canes, shewing that they were all in excellent condition.

From Major Archer to Dr. Wallich, dated Bourbon, forwarding four cases containing sugar-cane tops.

From Mr. C. N. Vallet, dated Cape Town, January 16th, 10 reply to screetary's letter of the 16th October last, on the subject of the society's annual indent for seeds, promises to forward the quantity ordered, so as to reach Calcutta by the middle of August.

From B. Hodgson Esq, dated Napal, March 13th, offering to forward a supply of red and white clonen seed, and asking for some fresh European vegetable seeds.

From Major Moore, dated Hyderabad, March 12th, advising despatch of four potatoes produced in his garden.

From R. Smith, E-q., dated March 22d, offering a few remarks on the domestication of the wild honey bee.

From II. Piddington, Esq., dated March 26th, forwarding for distribution a small quantity of delichos, asparagus, beaus.

From W. Brockman, E-q., dated Calcutta, March 28th, acknowledging receipt of seeds and the transactions of the society, and promising to be the medium of opening a correspondence between the Western Australian Agricultu al Society and this institution.

From J. Vaughan, Esq., libratian of the American Philosophical Society, dated Philadelphia, October 13th, 1837, transmitting a copy of Part 2d, vol. 4th transactions of that society.

From Mr. Masters, forwarding ten seers of Egyptian cotton seed, and a quantity of Sorghum vulgares, and Persian tomato seeds, grown in the Society's nursery.

From the same, dated April 7th, enclosing a paper containing some remarks on the propagation of plants.

From J. C. Maishman, Esq., dated Serampore, March 23tl, stating his inability from untoward circumstances, to continue the publication of the Society's transactions.

From the Rev. J. Thomas, superintendent of the Baptist Mission Press, to the secretary, dated March 27th, expressing his willingness to undertake the printing of the Society's transactions at a certain rate.

Capt. Hullock, of the Donna Pascoa, presented twelve casks and nine half casks of sugar-cans tops, which he brought from the Mauritius, but which excepting a few in the half casks, were all dead.

From lieut. Vetch, a chest containing caoutchouc, which comprised the condition of awarding the gold medal to that gentleman.

From Capt. H. J. Wood, samples of wool of the Jeypoor sheep.

From Dr. Campbell, a box containing a variety of agricultural productions of the valley of Nepal, adverted to in his letter of the 28th January.

From J. P. Marcus, Esq., a sample of wild cochineal collected by him in 1837, and a supply of roosa grass oil seed, with some living plants of the same.

From Mr. Waghorn, a case of Egyptian cotton seed, referred to in his letter to the Society of the 22d October, 1837.

N. B.—The produce of former supplies from Mr. Waghorn, having been favorably reported upon, and mistaken in one or two instances for Sca Island cotton, by good judges, those disposed to cultivate this cotton, are recommended to make early application.

From W. A. Harris, a small quantity of cotton grown in the Soonderbuns, said to be from Sea Island seed.

The American plough, so much spoken of at Bombay, and of which a model had been received, together with three spare shares and iron work complete, excepting the wood work.

The secretary had, with the concurrence of the agricultural Committee, disposed of two of these shares to Messis. Lyall, Matheson and Co. for prime cost and charges, and had but the complete plough, as a pattern for the wood part, one share remains at disposal.

As Mr. Harris expressed a wish to make a trial of the complete plough, it was proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by the secretary and resolved, that the plough should be placed at Mr. Harris' disposal, on that gentleman engaging to give the Society the result of the trial.

Mr. N. Alexander submitted some very fine specimens of artichokes, produced in his garden.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Cracroft, that Mr. Alexander be solicited to favour the society, with a memorandum as to the mode used by him in cultivating his artichokes.

Mr. E. Preston presented a basket of very large parsnips, produced in his garden from Cape seed.

Dr. Spry presented a specimen of caoutchouc on behalf of Lieut. Wemys, of the Assam local battalion.

Mr. Owen J. Elias presented a bottle of arrow-root, nade up to the usual process.

Read a note from Mr. Ridsdale, superintendent of the Bishop's College Press, enclosing an estimate of the expense of printing the society's transactions.

Resolved, that the secretary on reference to Mr. Thomas' terms of printing, be requested to treat further on the subject; and that the secretary shall make such arrangements with either Press, as he may deem judicious

The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting, the suggestion which had been made by him to the committee of papers, in December last (vide appendix vol. 5, page 106), and which had not yet been sauctioned, viz. to have the monthly proceedings as published in the papers, circulated in the shape of a pamphlet, to corresponding and all similar insututions to members generally, and all others who take an interest in the objects of this Society. The secretary had alteady printed the proceedings of January, February and March, and now with reference to Mr. Marshman's estimate of the charge, wished the society to sanction the expense, as it would be the means of maintaining a constant and regular source of information.

The president observed, that this ought to be a requiar motion, but, as the utility of the measure would be apparent to all, and the expense so trifing, he thought, it no objection was taken to it, the present meeting might dispose of the question to enable the secretary to piint off the proceeding without delay. Resolved nem. con.

The thanks of the society were ordered to be offered for all the foregoing communications and presentations.

John Bell, Secretary.

THE STORM ON THE EIGHTH APRIL.

life and property by this storm was very great. The loss stated at Kootghutta is above 250 lives, and all the way up the injuries have been of a dreadful nature. At Bycant. topore and on to Ramnaghur in the 24-Perguanahs the villages have been laid desolate, as more than 2,000 huts and several brick built houses have been levelled to the ground, burying under them from 3 to 4 lives each, on an average, a few of whom only lived to relate the fate of the other sufferers. Trees of 30, or 40 years' standing are now lying on the soil that once supported them. From the canal several large boats were raised to a from one quarter w height of about 30 feet and left on high land. The gold 80 feet long.

We have been very credibly informed, that the loss of , boatmen became victims from the fall of the timbe depôts on them, and the labourers who felt their habitations insecure, fell dead under the shower of hail. Those who escaped into houses met with a similar fate. Among the greatest pecuniary native sufferers are Buxoo, mistry, Ramchand Oully and Seebnath, buttachargee, to the amount of upwards of 30,000 rupees. The petty mahujuns are left pennyless. Mr. G. Prinsep is, we also hear, a considerable loser.

gunalis, have suffered morethan the rest, men, women, and children have died without number and so has cattle of every description. Puckah houses and trees have been torn up by their roots; as for hute, it would be impossible to count their number. The worthy magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs have issued every instruction in his power for the relief of such as are left to tell the sufferings of their neighbours. Mr. Flood, the Supervisor, and his son, the Clerk attached to the magistracy, with a native doctor, have been sent to the spot to render every possible relief, and send on as many as possible near us, and so much within our means to the Allipore Hospital. The removal of the dead, we are the best of our power.—Hank. April 13.

We are just informed that 2 more villages of great informed, will be attended with difficulty, as the number extent at Gurreeah and Putterghuttah, in the 24-Per- is great. Mr. Patton is now exerting all the aid within his jurisdiction to make the relief as prompt as possible. We trust his exertions will be useful, as we suppose they will be. We know the local subordinate authorities will see that there is no excuse and will answer with him in this case; he ought to direct, all the European officers to the different divisions and desire them to represent every instance of proceastmation as well as neglect. The joint magistrate of Barraset and the chief magistrate of Calcutta ought also to send out as much assistance as they have available, no time is to be lost in a cause so near us, and so much within our means to alleviate to

The majority of votes appearing in favour of Messrs. John Grant and C. C. Egetton, the first was declared elected, and the second re-elected as managers to fill existing vacancies.

A majority of subscribers having declared for a referrence to a professional actuary for opinion as to the basis of the fund calculations, Dr. A. R. Jackson (who has proceeded to England), has been empowered to consult one on his arrival in England, and furnished with a bill of exchange for £50 as the actuary's feet. The instructions furnished to Dr. Jackson are contained in the following resolution passed at the monthly meeting of the committee of management, held on the 29th January

Resolved-That Dr. Jackson be furnished with a bill of exchange on London for £50, to defray expenses of the reference; that a printed copy of the original rules of the fund as drawn up by the central committee of Agra, and a copy of the same as revised by the committee of management of Calcutta, as also a copy of the fund-deed, together with a pamphlet containing "Plans and documents connected with the proposed Medical Fund published at Agra in 1832, by order of the central committee," and a copy of the proceedings of the quarterly general meetings held on the 30th October last, and 8th January, instant, be put up under cover and delivered to Dr. Jackson. From these documents the Actuary will receive precise information as to the views and objects of establishing the Medical Retiring Fund, and he can determine whether or not the current sul-ment communicated in the committee's quarterly report, scriptions of each year, without a separate permanent . fund, are sufficient to continue from year to year the grant of 6 new annuities, besides maintaining the liabilities for annuities already on the fund. Should it appear, on investigation, that the current subscriptions even at the maximum rate are insufficient to support this double hability, the actuary is required to suggest such modification as will, consistently with the principles and objects of the fund, make it equal to its engagement, and at the least possible cost to the subscribers, having in view that no gains are required beyond covering habilities, and meeting the expense of management. The present object of the fund, it will be seen, is, to give 6 annuaties, and to grant to all annuities during life £300 per annum, on their contributing, by subscription, or purchase the half value of such annuity, calculated at 6 per cent, per annum according to the probabilities of the duration of human life at Northampton, according to Dr. Price's table. The current contributions, therefore, unaided by any accumulated capital, are not only to provide for six annuities, but to keep up, under provision of section xxxvii. of the fund-deed, an annual credit to "APPROPRIATED PUND," equal to the value of annuities at the ages of the existing annuitants, according to the rates specified in table annexed to section xxiii. of the fund-deed.

> All information as to the probability of human life in India can be readily obtained by reference to Mr. Christie, actuary of the London branch of the Umversal Life Assurance Company, as that gentleman has recently prepared for that office tables of rates of premiums payable in India, from data obtained from Captain II. B. Henderson's tables of mortality printed in the Asiatic Researches, volume XX., published by the Asiatic Society of Bengal. Rates of subscriptions to the fund not being regulated by age but from official rank, and standing in the gradation list of the medical service, the income of the fund can be determined by ascertaining at the India-house what is the regulated complement of the medical service in each grade when complete. It is understood that an augmentation of the medical establishment is contemplated, and every information connected with such augmentation may be obtained by reference to the India-house, Leadenhallstreet, London.

> The committee received a requisition from seven subscribers at Cownpore, dated the 20th January last, suggesting that the rates of sub-cription be raised to the maximum amount, and subscribers in arrears called upon to inquidate. The requisitionists were informed in reply, that, as the cellections of the fund at the present rate of subscriptions with arrears under recovery, will be sufficiently ample, it is expected to offer more than the regulated number of annuities this year, and probably more than there will be applications for, as anticipation of the boon being granted induces some to defer acceptance of the annuity until result of the memorial praying for the boon is definitively known, the committee did not deem it expedient immediately to raise the sub-criptions. The present, however, would be a favorable opportunity to have an accumlated fund from maximum subscriptions, which whould go a great way to absorb the annuities now in arrear: but as the committee conceive that the measure of raising the subscription will not be generally acceptable, they feel reluctant to adopt it, until the collection of arrears and subscriptions fall short of the amount required to give six annuities. Every exertion is making to collect the arrears due from subscribers, and the committee are happy to communicate that the call is readily reciprocated to by those in arrear.

The following resolution fixing a graduated scale of penalty for all future admissions is now in circulation for the vote of subscribers.

The committee have received intination in officiating secretary Lieutenant Colonel Stuart's letter, dated the 12th ultimo, that the Hon, the Court of Directors, in their military letter, dated the 2th December last, decline to depart from the rules limiting the number to three annuities of each year, payable through their home treasury, in favor of the committee of management's request, preferred through the local Government on the 30th November, 1836, that payment of all sir annutics granted annually from this fund be paid from the Company's treasury in London, to obviate the necessity of employing private agency. The committee have made arrangements with the house of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart. and Co. of London (who have been appointed agents of the fund as communicated in quarterly report of the 10th October 1836) to pay the remaining three annuities, so that no disappointment or irregularity in receipt of annuities shall occur to the annuitants, who will not receive their annuity at the India-house. Of the six annuities granted by this fund annually, those certificates numbered I to Jeach year will be paid at the India-house, and those numbeted 4 to 6 by the agents of the fund to London.

The sum of sicca rupees 87,048 0.0, or Co.'s Rs. 92,851-3-2 has been transferred since last quarterly meeting from credit of the fund to that of Appropriate 10ND under provision of section xxvii. of the fund-dect, being the value of the ananties granted to Superintenting Surgeon Geo. Gunning Campbell and Surgeons John Turner, and Thomas M. Muno, M. D.

By order of the committee of management.

Resolved.—That the report of the proceedings of the commutee of management for the past quarter just read, be confirmed and adopted.

Resolved—That in consequence of loss having accrued to the fund from difficulty of recovering arrears of subscriptions from the estate of lapsed members, the committee of management be requested to represent the matter to the Hon, the President of the Council of India in Council in the hope of the authority of Government being issued, authorizing pay-masters and other disbursing officers to deduct monthly the amount of subscriptions from the pay abstract of all subscribers to the fund in every case the same as is done in respect to the Orphan Fund subscription.

Resolved—That as it appears that some few members of the Medical Service who, although they have intimated their desire to become members of the Medical Retiring Fund, have not formally signed the fund-deed either in person or by attorney, and have not continued the payment of the subscription, the secretary to the fund be directed to inform such gentlemen that the provisions of rule will will be strictly acted up in their case unless they immediately sign the fund-deed, in due form, and continue their contribution to the fund.

Dr. Grant submitted to the meeting a memorial that he had altered from one drawn up at Agra, reiterating the prayer of the medical service to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company that the boon granted to all the departments of the army for pension according to length of service instead of rank, I ment to unable them to draw up the necessary memobe extended to the medical service.

Resolved - That the secretary to the Medical Retiring Fund do circulate to the several superintending surgeons the amended draft of the memorial just submitted by Dr. Grant, with the request that they take the sense thereon of the medical officers in their respective divisions of superintendency, and communicate the result for the information of the commutee of managerial for signature of the medical service for transmission home through the Supreme Government by the earliest opportunity.

Resolved, -That the thanks of this meeting be voted to Dr. Vos. for his conduct as chairman.

At a Meeting of Proprietors of the Bink of Bengal, held this day, pursuant to the advertisement in the Government Gazetto of the 7th instant, of which copy is in the margin,

Mr. H. T. Prinsep was called to the Chair.

Read the requisition for this meeting.

Moved by Mr. E. Mac-Naphten, seconded by Mr. A. Colvin, and resolved,

That it is expedient to increase the capital stock of the Bank of Bengal.

Moved by Mr. G. Collier, seconded by Mr. Allan and resolved,

That it is expedient that the increase should be of such amount as to allow upon each share a proportion of new stock that may be expressed in even thousand, vis. upon the share of Ra 4,000 an increase of one-fourth or one-half or three-fourths.

Moved by Mr. J. W. Cragg, seconded by Mr. A. Colvia and resolved.

That in the opinion of the meeting it is desirable (whether or not the Government relinquish its share of the new stock) that the capital should be increased one-half, so that in case the Government should determine to take its share of new stock, that the capital be increased by the sum of Res 3,750,000 and in the event of Government declining (as on the late augmentation) to take its share the capital be increased by the sum of Res 3,200,000.

An amendment moved by Mr. C.R. Prinsep; seconded by Mr. McFarlane and gesolved,

That, in order to prevent the capital exceeding one cross of rupees, the increase be one-quarter of each existing share and not one-half.

Moved by Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Bagshaw and resolved,

That the holders of fractions of the present share of Rs- 4,000 be received in their share of the proposed increase by an auction sale for their benefit.

· Moved by Mr. Mangles, seconded by Mr. Cragg, and resolved, that the proprietors whether absent or present shall, as in the last increase have eighteen months from the date of the sanction of such increase of stock by the Governor-General-in-Council, to pay the value of the shares they may respectively become entitled to; but in as much as it is expedient that the Bank should have immediate use and benefit of such portion of such increased capital as can be supplied without detriment to the interests of absent proprietors resolved, that all proprietors shall have the option of paying into the Bank the amount of the value of the new stock they may respectively become entitled to, immediately such sanction of Government has been obtained, and that they shall be entitled to receive their half yearly dividend on such new stock, to be calculated from the 1st day of July, or the 1st day of January (as the case may be) next after they may have made such

Moved by Mr. Mangles, seconded by Mr. Leach, and resolved, that our directors be requested to take into consideration the possibility of making ariangements for the payment of dividends to proprietors in England and to report the result of their deliberating to the next general meeting.

The chairman then stated, that, with reference to the proposition agreed to at the last meeting of proprietors, for increasing the sum at disposal for establishment, the majority of directors had come to a resolution to apply to Government to obtain a deputy secretary to be appointed from amongst its servants, but had received a reply from the President in Council, refusing to appoint a civil servant to the office. To this resolution four directors were dissentient, and three minutes are recorded. The chairman added that no further steps had yet been taken by the directors to appropriate the aurplus funds voted.

After a few observation from Mr. Cragg, in favour of appointing a deputy from persons unconnected with the Government, it was resolved nem. con., that the directors should take such measures as they might deem necessary and proper to provide for the increasing business of the Bank, and report the same to the next meeting. Thanks were then voted to the chairman and the meeting broke up.

BANK OF BENGAL.

There was a meeting of proprietors of the Bank of Bengal yesterday, to consider the propriety of petitioning the Governor General to authorize the increase of the capital stock. H. T. Prinsep, E-q. in the chair; the following gentlemen present:—Messia, Bracken, Leach, W. F. Fergusson, A. Colvin, McKilligen, Mangles, E. Macnaghten, Collier, Martin, Newcomen, Fitzgerald, W. Storm, McFarlane, Hurry, W. Prinsep, Rabbeth, P. Tagore, Ciagg, Lyall, C. Prinsep, H. M. Paiker, Allan, Colquhoun, Bagshaw, Waddington, &c.

After a few words from Mr. Bagshaw, regarding the absence of a statement showing the necessity for a proposed increase of capital, Mr. E. Macnaghten moved the first resolution in substance, as follows:

"Resolved, that it is expedient to increase the capital of the Bank of Bengal."

Mr. A. Colvin seconded the resolution, Mr. Cragg opposed it. He did not see that such increase was necessary, and, with reference to anticipated profits, the result of increased discount transactions, he thought it very probable that the rate may be in four mouth-reduced from ten to six per cent. Mr. Mangles said, the argument of Mr. Crarg was precisely the same as that made use of by the shareholders when the last increase of the capital was proposed, and which, it was now entirely unnecessary to remnad the shareholders, had been proved erroneous. His opinion was that the maximum amount of capital now required for the purposes of the Bank, would, in a few years, be the minimum amount required, and that too without much diminution in the rate of discount. But should be be wrong in his opinion, he for one, and there were others for whom he could answer, would prefer having a small interest toa large capital than a large interest for a small capital invested in the Bank of Bengal. He took occasion to say, that the proposed increase was not brought forward at the present moment in consequence of demonstrations in other quarters, the proposal had been long contemplated by Mr. E. Macnaghten, and by himself. Mr. Cragg thought it might be as well before the business was further entered into, to inquire if any arrangements had been made with reference to the establishment of branch banks. The chairman replied, there had not, in consequence of there being employment to the Bank's capital in Calcutta. Mr. C. Prinsep thought it would be a kind of suicide to admit the public to participate in the profits of the Bank by increasing the capital. As to the argument that the course proposed would stay the establishment of other banks; he said, so long as the Bank of Bengal had exclusive privileges in the circulation of their notes, the more numerous other banks the better for the proprietors; other banks could only operate as feeders, taking off their notes, which were the main source of profit. Mr. Mangles reminded the meeting that they had committed suicide two years ago by increasing their capital, and he had not any doubt but that the contemplated measure would produce similar advantages. Mr. Leach thought the note circulation had reached its maximum, and if they were taken off by the feeders it would be to return them to the Bank, Mr. II. T. Prinsep, as a Government director treated the proposed increase as a matter of indifference, and so he thought the Government would look at it; but as a private shareholder be much doubted the expediency of the measure. The contemplated increase of profit must alise out de an increased discount business; the proposed additional capital would not add to the note circulation, or to the number of deposits. Now, partie who were content to employ their capitals in discounts nught do so in their own offices. Mr. Mangles said he could not turn his office into a discount shop, and he much doubted if the chairman would be so efficient as public servant were he to convert his office into a rendezvous for brokers. Mr. H. T. Prinsep wished to be understood as not opposing the proposal now before the inceting, but he thought the consequence would be that, in a few months, the greater part of the increased capital would be invested in Company's paper. Nevertheless, the motion, if carried, would not be entirely useless; there was a prestige in a crore of rupees, both here and at home, which would keep mad projects out of the market. Mr. Bracken thought the words "mad projects" required explanation. Mr. H. T. Prinsep assured Mr. Bracken that they did not apply to the Bank of India; and Mr. Mangles added, that they could be so applied in the Pickwickian sense only. Mr. Braken declared that his only reason for opposing the resolution was that it affected the interests of absent proprietors.

After some further discussion, the resolution was put from the chair, when there appeared for the motion 177, against it.

Mr. Collier proposed the second resolution as follows:

"That it is expedient the increase should be of such amount as to allow upon each share a proportion of new stock that may be expressed in even thousande, riz, upon shares of Rs. 4,000 an increase of one-fourth,—or one-half,—or three-fourths."

Mr. J. Allan seconded the resolution, which was carned, no one opposing.

Mr. Cragg moved the third resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Colvin, and carried,

"That in the opinion of this meeting it is desirable (whether or not Government relinquish its share of the new stock) that the capital should be increased one-half, so that in case the Government should determine to take its share, that the capital be increased by the sum of Ks. 375,000; and in the event of Government declining to take its share, the capital be increased by the sum of Rs. 3,2 00,000."

After a few words from Mr. W. F. Fergusson, who expressed himself unfavourable to the proposed increase, Mr. C. Prinsep proposed an amendment, in substance to limit the amount to one quarter the sum proposed. The amendment was lost by a majority of 22 to 12.

Mr. Mangles moved the following resolution, which was seconded and carried,

"That the proprietors, whether absent or present, shall have eighteen mouths from the date of the sanction of such ingrease of stock by the Governor General in Council, to pay the value of the shares they may espectively become entitled to, but inasmuch as it is expedient that the Bank should have the immediate use and benefit of such portion of such increased capital as can be supplied without detriment to the interests of absent proprietors. Resolved, that all proprietors shall Secy. to Goot. in the Genl. Dept.

Sir,-We beg leave to bring through your medium to the notice of the Honourable the Deputy Governor of Bengal and Vice President of the Council of India, the formation of a Society of the landholders of Bengal, the object of which is to promote co-operation and mutual assistance in all matters relative to the landed interests of the community.

Having observed the utility of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce to the commercial interests of the country, they think that similar good may result from their own efforte, if they can be permitted to address the Government, through the medium of their secretary, in the same manner as is done by the Chamber of Commerce, and they also include the hope that the Government will condescend to communicate with them through the same

The Society will, at all times, be ready to offer their services to Government in communicating any information respecting the working of judicial, revenue, or police establishments in the interior, the condition of the labouring classes and the state of agriculture, which it may be enabled to furnish.

The enclosed prospectus will fully explain the objects of the Society, to which we beg to refer you.

We are, Sir, your most obedt. servants,

W.C. HURRY. (Signed)

Calcutta, April 7, 1838.

The following answerwas received from Government: No. 501.

> To WM. Cobb HURRY, Esq and BAROO PROSSONOCOOMAR TAGORE.

Gentlemen. - I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 7th instant, enclosing the prospectus of a Society to be called the Landholders' Society, and requesting permission to address the Government through the me tium of the Society's secretary in the same manner as is done by the Chamber of Commerce.

In reply, I am directed to state, that the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor or Bengal, will always be disposed to receive and consider the representations of any class of the inhabitants affecting their own interests or the good of The communications of the Landthe community holders' Society upon matters connected with the land revenue and judicial departments of Government, must be addressed in due course through the secretary of these departments.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedt. servant, (Signed) H.T. PRINSER, Secy. to the Gott. of Bengal.

General Department,

Fort William, 11th April, 1838. Resolved, that the proceedings of this day's meeting, as well as the above correspondence with the Government, be published.

Ordered that the translations of the proceedings of the general meeting held at the Town-hall be sent to the Bishop's College to be printed.

SUPREME COURT.

Sittings after 2d term- Plea Side.

Sreemutty Russickchunder Neoghy v. Sreemutty Hurrymony Dossee.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Prinsep) supported a rule which he had obtained on a former day, for the postponement of the trial of this issue until next term, on the ground of the alleged concealment of a material witness in the house of the defendant.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) shewed cause, on affidavits denying the alleged concealment of the witness, but he said that he should not oppose the postponement of the trial, or payment of costs by the other side.

Rule absolute on payment of costs.

Sreemutty Dossee v. Rajnarain Day.

Mr. Cochrune opened the pleadings. This was an action of trover, to recover certain goldmohus and rupees in specie, and some silver bullion, amounting in value altogether to about Rs 10,000. The plea was the general issue.

Mr. Advacate General. The plaintiff is the widow and executrix of one Rambury Ghose, who, in his lite time, adopted a son, called Baneywadub Ghose. Disputes had taken place at different times concerning the property left by the testator, the adopted son wishing to obtain it in the life-time of the widow, though he was not entitled until her death, when he would inherit as next heir. On one occasion, the son, in conjunction with the present defendant and other parties, broke open the house of the plaintiff, and assaulted her, for which she preferred an indictment, and the parties were convicted. The property in question was carried by the son, and deposited with the present defendant, in whose gustody it still remains.

Witnesses were called to prove the above facts. The gold moliurs were in a re-l purse, and the rupees in an iron chest, which appeared to have been bloken open. The adopted son had absconded.

Mr. Clarke, for the desence called no witnesses, but objected, that either there was no conversion proved on the part of the present desendant, or else that the plaintiff's own witnesses had shewn that the civil claim was merged in a solony. As to the latter point, he said that the chest was proved to have been forcibly carried away and broken open, and an action of trover was tried has term, in which the plaintiff was nonsuited on similar evidence. But he relied chiefly on the first objection, wir. the wast of proof of conversion, and he admitted shat these two grounds of desence were not quite consistent with each other. The plaintiff ought to have proved a demand and refusal to support this action, for the property had been carried away by another party, and deposited with this desendant. He contended thaty as far as the proof affected the resent desendant, there was nothing to shew either a wrongful taking, or an illegal detention.

The Court, however, were of opinion, that neither objection would hold. In estimating damages, a didiculty arose about the value of the bullion, proof being given of nine lumps of silver being among the property, weighing 320 siccas, but there was no evidence of its yalue. The court computed this at so many rupees, but they said that the defendant would be relieved by giving up the property.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Sreemutty Sibboosoondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Comulmoney Dossee.

This is a feigned issue out of Chancery to try the question, whether a certain clause of bequest appearing in a certain will or testamentary document, was contained in the original instrument. Several witnesses are to be examined on both sides, and the cause is likely to occupy a considerable time in the trial.

On the application of Mr. Clarks, the cause was postponed until to-morrow, as a commission for the examination of one of the witnesses, a Hindoo temale, is not yet returned.

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Grant and Mr. Nott, for the plaintiff, The Advocate General, Mr. Leuh, and Mr. Morton, for the defendant.—Hurk., April 3, pees in specie, and some silver bullion, amounting in live altogether to about Rs. 10,000. The plea was general issue.

Mr. Advocate General. The plaintiff is the widow last term, verdict for the plaintiff or the whole or dexecutive of one Rambury Ghose, who, in his lite pro tanto. Certain questions of Mahommedan law he, adopted a son, called Baneywadub Ghose. Dis- had been referred to the moulavie for his opiniou.

Sir E. Ryan. It is not necessary to state the facts of this case, because the issue is narrowed to the simple question of the construction of the instrument under which the defendant claims.

The first point relates to the nature of the instrument. The Court entertains no doubt that the opinion of the moulavie is the commonsciple view, and according to that opinion the instrument is a wayf, or endowment for religious or charitable uses. The moulavie adds that it would have been a will, if it have been made in the time of mortal sickness, or if by its terms the instrument was not to take effect until after the death of the party executing it. On the second point, which causes the question whether a temale can be a mutawallee or trustes, the Court is equally clear. By Mahommedan law, a female may be mutawallee, and the dutier may be performed by proxy.

The remaining two questions present greater difficulties and opposite opinions have been pronounced by high authorities. I hese questions are wether actual delivery of the property is essential to the validity of a waqf, or deed of endowment, as in the case of onlinary gifts, and whether it is affected by a qualified reservation by the donor, in his own favour, during his lifetime. [His Lordship here referred to the Hidaya, and sev ral treaties of high authority in Mahommedan law, in which the opinions on the subject clash with each other.] Upon a full consideration of all the authorities, the opinion of the Court coincides with that given by the moulavie, which is more conformable to the modern decisions. We hold that delivery is not essential to render the weef valid in law, and that it is not affected by the qualified reservation of the donor. The appropriation, therefore, is good, and there is no ground for disturbing the original verdict which was found for the defendant.

The Advocate General and Mr. Grant for the lessor of the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defendant, Rule discharged.

Sremutty Siboosoondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Comulmoney Dossee.

This issue to try the question whether the will of a wealthy Hindoo, Kistnochunder Seat, did or did no contain clause of bequest, came on for trial. The plead ings having been opened, and the case for the plaintiff who had to support the affirmative of the issue, having been stated, the evidence of this chief witness taken, under a commission, was tendered by the plaintiff's

The Court inquired, how it had happened that the evidence of the most material witness was taken on paper, instead of being given viou voce in open Court. The very object of the issue was to satisfy the mind of the Court on a point on which the depositions taken in the equity suit were not sufficient to enable them to arrive at a definite conclusion. If the evidence was to be offered in this shape, how was the trial of the issue a whit more satisfactory and conclusive, than the hearing of the original suit on the Equity side ?

Mr. Clarke, the leading counsel, for the plaintiff, replied, that it was certainly unfortunate, and all parties regretted the necessity; but the witness in question was dangerously ill, and, at the time of moving for the commission. Dr. Raleigh was in Court ready to swear to his affidavit concerning the witness's precarious state of health, but by consent of the other side, the swearing of the affidavit had been dispensed with. It was fully admitted that this witness was the most material of all of the plaintiff's witnes-es, being the party who had drawn up the will, and read it over to the testator.

Sir John P. Grant. You say the other side consented; what right had they to enter into any such compromise?

The Advocate General (counsel for the defen lant), submitted that they had a full and unquestionable right and were perfectly justified. There had been no consent, or compromise, further than the circumstance that no opposition was offered to the motion, and surely such an arrangement was liable to no objection! The order was made under the sanction of the Court, and this commission was issued under their express authority, and the Court could not find fault with their own order.

Sir E. Ryan observed, that the attention of the Court was not called to the circumstance that this party was the most material witness.

The Advocate General admitted this, and said that he was not himself aware of the ci. cumstance at the time.

Sir E. Ryan then suggested that the cause should stand over until I hursday morning, and that, in the meantime, an affidavit by a medical gentleman should be procured of the present state of health of this witness. the decision ultimately turn upon a nice weighing of testimony and probabilities, it might be impossible for the cottalis and three chittacks, and certain godown, situated Court to give any verdict without seeing the witness, in Scotanooty in the town of Calcutta. and examining him pive voce, and in that event, the parties would be put to the great expense of another issue. The evidence taken under the commission might be considered as taken de bene esse, if it should hereafter be found necessary to use it, from the utter inability of the witness to attend within a reasonable time, if ever. Should it on appear on Thursday that there was a probability of the witness being able to attend in a week or ten days, the cause might be further postponed, otherwise the issue might be taken on that day.

After some discussion the suggestion was agreed to by the counsel on both sides,

. Stands over until Thursday next.

The Queen v. Parbutty, Junghee, and Takoor Doss.

These three prisoners, convicted of murder, in the Supreme Court sessions of August 1836, were this morning placed it the bar, and Her Majesty's free pardon under the great scal, was read to them aloud by the clerk of the Crown, and interpreted into the Bengallee language by the sworn interpreter of the Court.

This pardon was granted upon the merciful recommendation of the prisoners, by the Judges of the Supreme Court. The signature of Queen Victoria appeared upon the document, written in a fine bold hand, countersigned by Lord John Russell, the Secretary of State.

The prisoners were then discharged.

(In the matter of Kistnochunder Mookerjee)

This party is the material witness, whose evidence, taken under a commission, was offered yesterday at the trial of the issue in Sceemutty Subboo-ondery Dosses v. Sreemutty Comulmoney Dosser, it may be recollected that their Lordships objected to the evidence of so important a witness being taken on paper, and postponed the trial in order to oblain a medical certificate concern. ing the present state of health of the party.

Dr. Raleigh, of the medical service, was sworn and examined. Saw Kistnomohun Mookerjee yesterday evening. Has regularly attended him for some time past, by the direction of Rajkissen Monkerjee, (who is the agent and manager of the plaintiff in the issue, and the alleged finder of the will set up by her). Kistnomohun is in a state of great debility. His present complaint is fever and inflammation. He is altogether in a precarious and dangerous state, and could not attend the Court for the purpose of viva voce examination without risk. Perhaps there would be no actual risk of life. His age may be about 46. There is no great probability of his being speedily in a condition to give his testimony in court.

The Court, under these circumstances, were of opinion. that it would serve no purpose to postpone further the trial of the i-sue, as the personal attendance of this witness appeared to be so problematical. The i-sue therefore will come on to-morrow Thursday, (this-day) and it is expected to occupy two days at least.

Doe on the demise of Kishnochunder Biswas and others v. Anusulmoy Biswas.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case. This was an action of ejectment to recover a piece of ground, about four Several witnesses were examined, and the trial occupied a considerable time.

Sir E. Ryan interrupted the proceedings, and inquired of the defendant's counsel whether he had any more witnesses, because it seemed to the Court to be a mere waste of time to proceed. It appeared that the very party under whom the defendant claimed, was a witness to two instruments, long previously executed, shewing the extent of the premises conveyed to the Biswas's; and. among natives, the being witness implied something more than among Europeans.

Mr. Prinsep, (with whom was Mr. Clarke for the defence) said, that he would not protract the case, after this intimation had fallen from the court.

Doe D. Biswas v. Biswas.

The Advocate General moved in this ejectment case, tried yesterday, in which the lessors of the plaintiff obtained a verdict, that judgment might be entered up, and execution issued immediately.

Sir E. Ryan said that this was not a case of the kind, in which, according to the practice which prevailed in England, the Courts granted immediate execution.

Refused.

Pratt v. Colville.

Mr. Leith moved, upon affidavits, under rules 5th and 22d of the new equity rules, for an attachment against the said William Colvin the defendant, for want of ap-The affidavits stated, that this party had pearunce. sailed for England in the ship Coromandel, that he had not resided in Great Britain or Ireland for a period of two years, and that the cause of action was less than Rs 30,000. By the 13th section of the charter of 1774, the Supreme Court shall have no jurisdiction to try or determine any suit or action " against any person then resident in Great Britain or Ireland, unless such suit or action against such person so then resident in Great Britain or Ireland, shall be commenced within two years after the cause of action arose, and the sum to be recovered be not of greater value than thirty thousand rupees."

Sir Edward Ryan observed, that a complainant in equity would be entitled to an attachment for non-appearance, upon a motion, of course, without any special application.

Mr. Lieth said, that he had deemed it advisable under the circumstances to call the attention of the Court specially to the facts.

The Court said, that the case fell within the 5th rule, and that the 22d had no application, nor was it affected by any new regulation introduced by those rules, but the same practice existed before they were passed.

Attachment granted.

(*reemutty Sibbosoondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Conculmoney Dossee.)

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings. This is a feigned issue out of Chancery, to try the question whether a certain clause of bequest, in favour of the defendant, was contained in the will of one Kistoochunder Seat. The affirmative of the issue is on the plantiff.

Mr. Clarke stated the case for the plaintiff. Annuud-chunder Seat died in the year 1813, leaving a widow, one son and a daughter. That son, Kistnochunder Seat, is the festator, whose will gives rise to the present proceedings. Kistnochunder died in August, 1827, leaving a son, Hurrakissen, and a widow, Commulmoney, the defendant in this issue. On the evening before hadeath, Kistnochunder made his will, by which he gave away several legacies, chiefly of inconsiderable amount, and allowed the bulk of his property to go to his son Hurrakissen, the heir-at-law. In September 1831, Hurrakissen died intestate, leaving a widow, Siboosoodery, if plaintiff in this issue: and inmediately after his death, disputes layan to arise in the lamily, and a bill was filed against the legatees and other parties interested under Kittabeflunder's will.

The dispute, however, which is the subject-matter of the present issue, is entirely between the widow of Kistnochunder (the defendant) and her daughter-in-law. the widow of Hurrakissen (the plaintiff.) According to the will set up by the plaintiff there is. A specific bequest of sicea rupees 60 per month to, the defendant, for maintenance in the event of her quitting the family It may at first seem strange that the defen lant should disclaim a lagacy made in her own favour, and thus endeavour to impeach the will which bequeaths it; but the explanation is very simple. The amount of prodant, clauming as the widow of Kistnochunder, would be entitled to a much larger proportion than the monthly sum assigned for maintenance, whereas, if this specific bequest can be proved to be contained in the will, it will implicitly merge her general claim to her share as widow of the testator. The defendant accordingly sets up a different version of the will, and pretends that it originally contained no specific bequest to herself, but that the clause in question is a forgery, and an interpolation. Several persons were present at the making of the will, but there is a dispute as to their number and identity, and very different accounts are given on either side, of what took place on the occasion. The Court will see, therefore, that the decision will turn almost entirely upon the credibility of the witnesses on each side, the balance of testimony and the degree in which each story is supported by the probabilities of the case. One circumstance affords strong ground for presuming that the clause in question must be genuine, and could not have been interpolated. There is a subsequent clause giving a legacy to another party, and this legacy has been paid, nor is it pretended that the latter clauses did not originally exist: -if, therefore, the disputed clause is of posterior fabrication, there must have been a hiatus in the original will, wholly unaccounted

The learned counsel here put in the deposition of the plaintiff's chief witness, Kistnochunder Mookerjee, who was examined by counsel under a commission before C. R. Prinsep, Esq., granted upon motion, on affidavits that the witness himself was in a precarious state of health, and unable to appear personally, before the Court. According to his own evidence, deponent wrote out the will at the dictation of the testator, and then read it aloud. Four other persons were in the room. The testator approved of it, and caused some additions to be made in the progress of reading; but the crause of bequest, which is the subject matter of this issue, formed part of the body of the will. This was in the evening after gun-fire, and the writing was finished about midnight. The testator was carried on the following evening to the backs of the Ganges, and died in an hour afterwards. Deponent saw the will again, about six weeks after the death of his son, Hurrakistno, when it was found in a box, and read aloud—several persons were present.

There witnesses for the plaintiff were then put into the box, and successively examined and cross-examined at great length. The two first, Ramchunder Bhose, and Radagovind Roy, had been in the service of the testator, and were now employed by Sebooscondery the plaintiff. The defendant's counsel cross-examined them with reference to a conversation with ore Rammohun Bysack, in which it was endeavoured to fix them with having told a totally different version of the story. The third witness, Ramrutton Mookerjee, was a mooktyar, not in the service of the testator or plaintiff. All three swore to being present on the occasion of the witting of the will and two of them were present when it was subsequently discovered. They supported the plaintiff's version of the will.

The examination of these witnesses, alone occupied the Court to a late hour, when the furthes hearing was postponed until to-morrow, Friday, (this-day). The planniff's case is not yet closed.—Hurk. April 6.

FRIDAY, APRIL 6.

Sreemutty Sibboosoondery Dosse v. Sreemutty Comulmonee Dosesee.

The Court was occupied the whole day in the further hearing of this issue. The plaintiff's case was closed, and the Advocate General addressed the Court for the defence, but the defendant's case had not been far proceeded with, when the Court adjourned the further hearing until to-morrow, Saturday (this-day).

The report will be given, in continuation of yester-day's, when the trial is terminated .- Hurkaru, April 7.

MONDAY APRIL, 9.

Sechoosoondery Dossee v. Comulmoney Dossee.

This was an issue out of equity to try whether a clause allowing a maintenance of 60 rupees per month, under certain prescribed circumstances to the defendant, formed part of the original will of her deceased husband. The plaintiff was directed by the Court to support the athrustive; the defendant alleging that the clause of maintenance to herself was an interpolation, unroduced into a fresh copy of the will drawn up subsequently to the testator's death.

The trial has occupied the Court for several days. The evidence for the defence having been concluded this morning, Mr. Clarke, on behalf of the plaintiff, made an eloquent speech of three hours length in reply.

The Chief Justice.—This case has occupied four whole days, and the witnesses have been examined at great length. During the whole period of my having sat on this bench I hardly know any case, in which more fraud and more perjury have been exhibited on both sides. The onus of proving the particular clause of the will set forth in the issue rests with the plaintiff. The evidence proves the greatest affection between the mother and the son. It is improbable that the testator under such cucumstances would have made such a provision for her. The Court can only disinherit on clear and satisfactory evidence. The case being tainted with perjury on both sides, we cannot find for the plaintiff; we, therefore, find a verdict for the defendant.

Counsel for the plaintiff, Messrs. Clarke, Nott and Coursel for the defendant, Messrs. Pearson, Leith, and Morion.

The plaintiff is said to have given immediate notice of a motion for a new trial. - Englishman, April 10.

In the matter of Soodusun Sein, a lunatic.

In pursuance of a writ de lunatico inquirendo, Soodasun Sein was on Thursday, the 5th of April, brought up before the Commissioners, T. Dickens and C. A. Nott, Eagre.

The commission sat at the Insolvent Court, and a jury of fourteen, including two native gentlemen, having been sworn.

Mr. Dickens, briefly opened the commission.

Mr. Cochrune, on behalf of the lunacy, stated that the supposed lunatic was possessed of considerable property, and that he laboured under peculiar delusions, one of the prevalent ideas of his mind being that persons are coming to pay him large sums of money.

Dr. Raleigh sworn.—The lunatic is in charge of Mr. Beardsmore, at whose request I occasionally visited him; my first visit was about three or four months ago Mi. Beardsmore thought it would be desirable, in addi

The tion to Dr. Mercer's certificate, that I also should see him. When I first saw him he was free of fever, but he appeared sullen and reserved. I saw him merely for the purpose of satisfying Mr. Beardsmore that the man was not sent to his house unnecessarily. I was told that his madness was caused by a domestic affliction, the inconstancy of his wile.

Dr Mercer sworn .-- First attended the lunatic at his house in Hautcollah, on the 21st July, 1837. He was low, sullen, and not disposed to answer questions. Had conversation with him. The first time I saw him Lokenauth Mullick went with me. I believe the conversation was in English; the lunatic speaks English. I thought him from the first very unsound in his mind. Saw him on the 2d of December last; he was improved, more conversable, more ready to answer questions, but certainly not capable of managing his own affairs. When I saw him last he probably might have been having lucid intervals. I visited him four times, ten miautes may have been the duration of each interview. The last time I saw him he appeared improved, and now his appearance is much improved. The three first visits were all in July, I believe Lokenauth Mullick is a connexion of the lunatic's. I prescribed medicine for him. but he never would take any. Though lucid and conversable at the time, I believed him to be insane on Mr. Beard-more's statement to me.

Soudasan Sein is asked if he had any question to ask this witness,—He answers, I was taken to Dr. Beardsmore's by force, I was taken by force of four or five peons. The Dr. went to see me,—he came to make faces; and to make fun, and went away. What have I to say to the Doctor? You may ask him if you want to know.

Dr. Raleigh—again called by a juror.—I should say his mind had improved. He was at first sullen and reserved, and latterly conversable. There is something in his countenance indicating insanity. (Reads date of certificate). Now I should say he is improved in appearance.

Mr. Isaac Beardsmore. - Soondasun Sein came on the 2d of December; that was not the first time I saw him. I do not know how he came. He was brought by his connexion. I believe Gore Tagore and Nilmoney were two persons who brought him to my house. When I examined him at his house, I saw him about fifteen minutes. I believed him to be in a state of imbecility. The date of the first visit was about ten or a dozen days before the 2d December. I saw him in the evening. conversed with him. I asked him to take medicine. He said he would not take any. I had no more conversation with him. I have seen him fif y or sixty times since he has been in the asylum. I think he could not conduct his own affairs. I believe he was aware why he was confined, but I never told him: there is some sort of delusion on his mind. He wishes to sell his house and get Re- 10,000; he says he could live well with it. I do not know who his attornies are. He is never violent. He refuses to take medicine. I do not think that at any time during his continuance in the asylum he has been capable of taking care of his own affairs. His reply as to the application of the money was that he would eat and drink well, take steamer, and go to England. . I am not aware whether Gore Tagore is in Mr. Homfray's service. Doctors Raleigh and Mercer saw him on different occasions. Dr. Raleigh saw him on the following day after Dr. Mercer. The attendants say he is satisfied with his confinement, and thinks himself better off than if he was out.

Soodasun S'in asked if he has any questions to put to Mr. Beardsmore, says 'Mr. Beardsmore is talking about my wanting to sell a house: that is true.'

Mr. Beardsmore's examination continued. He expressed his annoyance, that he has been placed under a be arrived, by Fyzos, my native doctor. Having been chund Seal, standing near the jury, was pointed out as informed that he had arrived, I asked him no further the person who had given a clue by which the informaquestions. I had an understanding with Gore Tagore tion was elicited from the witness. Mr. Nott ordered and Nilmoney, I had been informed, that Dr. Mercei him to remain in Court for the purpose of being examinative times. was his ordinary family medical attendant. I made out ed.] the bill in the wife's name for RA 500, which I have been paid. I do not know her name.

Nilmoney Addy examined. Sondasun Sein married my brother's daughter. In Pous 1243, he became ill, when living near Buria Baziar. Illness first commenced with a pulpitation of the heart, and afterwards insanity. In the course of a month I saw him ten or twelve times. It was when he returned from Benares that he became insang; he used to throw himself about, and one day he threw himself into the water; he would eat nothing and flog the servants. His wife sent for native doctors. He required force to take him to bathe. His wife sent for Dr. Mercer, who prescribed, but he would not take the medicine. Dr. Mercer recommended Mr. Beardsmore's, and Goie Tagore took him there in a palanquin on the 7th Augon. Two days afterwards he went home again; five or six days after he was again taken to the asylum. There was no quarrel in the family. He was married about thirteen years before he went to Benares; at the latter time his wife was five months with child. Sooda-un Sein managed his father's affairs during his life; his property is considerable; there is a house in Cossitollah, one in Muzapore, one at Molungha, one at Bysack Street, all worth about R# 50,000. When we were returning from Benates he jumpt into the water, the manjees picked him up, and I put a guard upon him. He was a man very sensible and capable of doing business when he conducted his father's affair's. His wite now pays his expenses at Beard-more's. Gore Tagore is on friendly terms with Soodasun and with me also. Soodasun had a child, but it is dead. His wife sends me to see him every three or four days. When we took him to Beardsmore's we put him in a palanquin, shut it up, and placed two men to guard it on each side. The hurkarus forced him out of his house. I did not think it necessary to go to the police first. His wife ordeted it. She did not take any pains to apprize his 12 lations Joynarain and Marcon that it was necessary to send him to Beardsmore, nor did she direct me to do so He remained to his pil inquin two days after we took him to Beardsmore, without food; he always said 'take me back to my house.' I heard that Mr. Beardsmore took him out of his palangum by force. His tenants will not pay their routs : only one tenant has paid since last Pous twelve month. The rent of the bouse in Chitpore Road has been collected by me.

Mr. Reardsmore re-examined. - The evidence as to his being in a palkee for two days without food is true; I did not say anything about this during my examination, because I was not asked. Drs. Mercer and Raleigh saw him in the palkee on the 2d of December He was taken out of the palkee by firee at my request. Some sweetments were brought to him; I sent them to Dr. Raleigh who analyzed them, and sent them to Drs. O'Shaughnessy and Goodeve for examination. Soudasun and one of my servants are of the sweetmeats; my servant becate sick, so did Soodasun. Arsenic was detected on a lalyzing the sweetments. Soodasun feeling himself sick, gave some to Bachoo, the servant, I put over him, and to Bachoos' wife. They were sick in sweetinests, and Bachoo gave me to understand he to eat. I deputed Samchund before I went to the upper supposed them to have been sent by Soodssun's wife, provinces to collect cent while I was the land of the sent while I was the supposed them to have been sent by Soodssun's wife. Soodasun told me to eat some, I said ' I am a Mossulman. Have you eat any?' He said he had eaten one of the balls, and it had made him sick and confused. I went and took them to Mr. Beardsmore, who asked me if Soodasun had eaten them with rice. I said no. He said, he dare say it was on account of his having eaten them on an empty stomach. I took some of them home. My wife told me she had eaten some of the sweetmeats, and had a burning in the throat all night in consequence. I eat some, and we were both sick. When I was looking at the balls, I found they looked quite saffion. I managed to go to the asylum next morning with difficulty, I did not go to the Baboo. but saw Dingo, his servant there. I had taken one of the balls with me. At the time that I spoke to him, I was in a confused state of mind. I asked Dinoo where he got the -weetmeats; he said of the confectioners, but when I threatened him, he said a maid servant to the Baboo's family called Luckey, bought them. She was servant of that witness Nilmoney. When I made a noise Nilmoney came running and said to me, 'what is the matter? You are mad.' I said, it is this sweetment. I went away with the sweetmeat to show it to Mr. Beardsmore. He was not at home, I showed them to Mrs. Beardsmore, and detailed the circumstances. One servant only, Dinoo was dismissed; there were five altogether; who as well as Nilmoney remained at Beardsmore's. There was no enquiry made among the servants. Nilmoney resided upstairs. This took place about five months ago. About ten or twelve days after Soodasun became ill from purging and vomiting and took medicine. He was not attended by Dr. Raleigh at all from the time he was taken ill by taking sweetmeats to the time he was taken ill by vomiting He is considerably better from the time he was taken ill.

After he came back he had 'six annas' worth of brain,' and was not capable of managing his affairs. Formerly, he was a very intelligent man. Sondasun never eat any thing touched by his wife. He told me his wife's ways are not as they ought to be. I had a power of attorney to act for him; now his wife has a seal for which she gives a receipt for the rents. Numoney is managing this business. Soodasun had desired me to burn and sell five lacs of bricks, which I burnt, but Nilmoney sold them.

APRIL 6111. AND TWO POLLOWING DAYS.

Sreemutty Schooscondery Dosse v. Sreemutty Comulmoney

Thursday, lasted during the whole of that and the three succeeding days.

among the rest, Rajkissen Bysack, the alloged finder of the will. This witness deposed, that about a month or six weeks after the death of Hurrakissen, the son of the testato, hwe or six parsons being present in the family house it is not usual to provide specially for a widow; but began to search the boxes, in which deeds and papers were usually kept, and at last discovered the present document; that this was the identical will formerly made, nearly the same persons being present at the making and at hading.

Mr. Clarke proposed to put in as evidence, the bill and answer and the decree in the original suit, for the purpose of shewing that the present defendant and all the other parties interested under the will, acquiesced in to gonumeness at that time. He also wished to lay the above facts, and were cross-examined with great minutefoundation for reading the deposition taken before the ness. The plaintiff's counsel put in the depositions taken examiner, of one of his own winnesses, since deceased, and it o the former depositions of defendant's witnesses for the purpose of contridicting their present testimony.

ple chage in the former suit as evidence, independently of the currentstance that it was not between the same that the father either forged the will himself, or caused it parties. Nothing could possibly be implied, which could to be forged. Mr. Clarke objected that this evidence have the cilect of concluding the defendant in the present issue, since the very point had been referred from the sud itself, and it must be considered open. But it was regular to put in the pleadings, or the decretal order plaintiff, and yet they were of opinion that this evidence reming them, for the purpose of making the depositions evidence.

The pleadings and depositions were then put in, and this closed the plaintiff's case.

The Advocate General addressed the Court for the defence and first pointed out certain contradictions and discrepancies in the evidence. The defendant did not deny that a will or a hookumnamah had been in fact made, and made to a certain extent under the very circumstances set forth on the other side; but the defence was that the will now in Court was not the same instrument. It would not be attempted to be established that the disput d clauses and bequests had been interpolated. but that a different paper had since been drawn up, and as the writing was not the testator's, as there was no mother." sign ture either of the testator, or of a single subscribing witness, what could be easier than for the same person who wrote the first paper, to forge another ? This view of the case entirely destroyed one of the chief arguments relied on by the other side. Then as to the story about the subsequent discovery of the instrument : no doubt such a scene might have been gone through, and the precious document now produced might have been found in the box as described; for it would be easy for the person who had placed the thing in its hiding-place to find it again. It was tather remarkable that the very same individuals, were alleged to be present at the hour for the purposes of this tital. If this instrument was making of the will, as at the finding. The whole of really forged, it was singular that the alterations should ing his own affans, and that he has been so for the last to give plausibility to a falsehood and éclat to a forgery. There was certainly a considerable amount of testimony on both sides; but the plaintiff's witnesses were chiefly servants, who are generally ready to swear anything, or to do any thing at the hookum of their masters. Even if the testimony had been mirely balance I, the scale would be turned in favour of the defendant by the probabilities of the case. For the defence, relations of the family would be called who were present, and if subordinate servants were allowed to remain, it was extraordinary indeed that no relations should be permitted to be present on so solemn and important an occasion. The testimony of two of the chief witnesses was directly contradicted by persons, atterly disinterested, who had heard them make a totally different statement on a former occasion. The trial of this issue, which was commenced on It would be proved by unanswerable evidence that the genuine will was written on a smaller and narrower paper, and only on one side; that it contained no bequest Other witnesses were called for the plaintiff, and to the widow, and that this circumstance was remarked upon, and explained by the testator, who said that his son was living and no special provision was required; and it would be turther proved that when only one son is left, otherwise when there are two sons or more. Lastly, certain letters, written by the attorney in the cause. would be put in, which would shew clearly that the party giving the instructions, must have been then ignorant of the existence of such a will as the present; from which it might be inferred that the forgery took place, or the intention to forge was first suggested, at some subsequent period.

Witnesses were then sworn, who deposed to the in the Examiner's office, for the purpose of shewing a variance between their former and pre-ent testimony. The Advocate-General endeavoured to give evidence of The Court said, that it would be quite idle to treat the a conversation between the father of the plaintiff (since deceased), and other parties, from which it would appear was not admissible.

> The Court said that they were satisfied that the father was sufficiently proved to be the authorized agent of the could not be received, because it clearly was not within the scope of his authority to bind her by a forgery. They reserved leave, however, to the defendant's counsel, to move the point, if a verdict should be found for the ulainuff.

> Certain documentary evidence was then put in, consisting of the letters of the attorney in the cause, and the deposition of Gourmoney, a purdah female, daughter of the testator. By this lady's evidence, it appeared that four females of the family were present, and that she herself remarked, " My father has done something for every body, but what has he done for my mother?" which was repeated to the testator, who answered "Harrakissen, my son, is living, and he will make provision for his

The Advocate General was heard upon the evidence adduced by the plaintiff in contradiction.

Mr. Clarke then addressed the Court in reply, in a very ingenious and able speech of nearly three hours' duration, (to which we regret that our limits will not allow us to attempt doing justice.) He said that these clauses were treated as interpolations in the genuine will, when the original suit was instituted, and the present story that a second and different document had been forged, was a story trumped up at the eleventh this scene was a mere got-up farce, invested with a mock have been made in so absurd and clumsy a manner; nothing but absolute fatuity could explain it. Two of the defendant's chief witnesses, Radicamohun and Gourmoney, members of the family, were collaterally interested in impeaching this will. The amount of their interest did not indeed affect their competency, but it very materially affected their ciedibility. Nothing could be deduced from the letters written by the attorney in the cause. They were written with a pacific intention, and before hostile proceedings were instituted. The probabilities were on the side of the plaintiff, and the evidence of the defendant's witnesses exhibited far more of contradiction and repugnancy than could be pointed out in the evidence which supported the plaintiff's case.

Sir E. Ryan. This trial has now occupied the Court four entire days, and it certainly is altogether a most extraordinary case. Since I have sat on the bench, I have never witnessed such a vast amount of perjury and directly conflicting evidence. The onus, however, of establishing this will, is on the plaintiff, and we cannot say that she has succeeded in making out her case. It seems to us that the probabilities prima facie are against the insertion of such a clause as the present in the will of this wealtny Hindoo. The mother (defendant) and her son are admitted to have ever been on affectionate terms, and it is not likely, therefore, that the father would have gratuitously anticipated a quarrel between them, or provided for so improbable an event. It can only be on strong, clear, and satisfactory grounds that the Court can disinherit the testator's widow. We are of opinion, therefore, that the will has not been established, and that our verdict must be for the defendant.

Verdict for the defendant.

This was a bill for an account, and was heard ex-parte.

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep for the complainant.

Mahu Rajah Sibkis'no Behadoor v. Kistnochunder Ghose, and others.

The original bill was filed by one of the executors, and prayed an account of the real and personal estate of Maha Rajah Rajkristo Behadoor, deceased, against the real and personal representatives of the said Rajah. A cross-bill was filed by the representatives, and the original and cross-cause now come on for hearing.

The Court decreed that the causes should be consolidated, that a partition should be made of the real state, and an account taken of the personal estate, and that the general costs should await the final decree.

The Advocate General applied to the court to direct the costs of the commission of partition to be paid out of the estate immediately. If this was not done, the parties would be compelled to borrow money on personal tecurity at exorbitant rates. Even in England, money was often directed to be advanced.

The Court said, that their was no instance, except under very special circumstances, of the costs being directed to be advanced out of the estate, until the final decree.

In this suit an application was made to the Court by the counsel for the complainant, that the cause might be referred to the Mass er to inquire and ieport, upon a suggestion that the complainant had become a lunatic since the filing of the bill.

The Court said, that this mode of application was not regular, and that the cause might stand over in the meantime.—Hurkaru, April 11.

Rajkristno Bonnerjee v. Tairanenchuin Bonnerjee.

This cause being called upon Mr. Clarks rose and said that he had been instructed yesterday that the parties had cause to a settlement, and that he had accordingly applied to the Court to call the case pro forms. He had just understood that the cause was not settled, and he was not prepared, therefore, to argue it now.

The Advocate General, admitted that his learned friend had certainly made a statement to the Court yesterday, from which he inferred that the cause was settled. But for his own part he had received an intimation in the course of the evening that this was not the case.

The Court recollected that Mr. Clarke had mentioned the matter yesterday, and they that now directed under these circumstances the cause should stan 2 over.

LIST OF THE GRAND JURYMEN.

Foreman - J. W. GRANT, Esq. J. Jenkins, W. Prinsep, H. L. Christiana, R. C. Patton, J. Hunter, R. Davidson, A. D. Rice, C. A. Dyce, J. M. Dove, L. Carmichael W. F. Fergusson, J. Prinsep, and J. P. McKilligan, H. V. Bayley, Esquires, W. Earle, H. Chapman, Baboo Radakissen Mitter, Baboo Hurrischunder Dutto, L. A. Arratoon, Baboo Ramhucry Dutto. C. Dearie,

After the Grand Jury had been duly sworn, the learned Chief Justice thus addressed them. He commenced by remarking to them that he was happy to inform them that their duties during the present sessions would neither be very protracted nor arduous. There were only three cases to which he would direct his observations on their nature minutely to them. Two of these he was sorry to inform them were of murders, and the other of highway robbery,—a crime which has hitherto, ever since he had the honor of sitting on this bench, been one of very rare occurrence; but he regretted to find that there were no less than four cases of that nature sent up for trial during the present sessions.

The first case to which he begged to draw their partition if the deceased was in a condition which made him cular attention, was that of Hurice Mug, for the murde of his infant child, John Pereira. The particulars of it from the depositions before him, appear to be these Lydia Francisca, the mother of the child, appears to have been the mistress of the prisoner, who resided a Sibioliah Lane, and was at the time the crime is alleged to have been comunited by the prisoner, an ayah in the employ of a lady, named Ogilvie, who resided at Chow ringhee, where the prisoner was likewise entertained a short time previous to this murder as a cook. For some reasons unknown, he became dissatisfied with his service. and wished Lydia Francisca to quit the employ and return to live with him. This she refused to do untishe had earned a sufficient sum to enable her to liquidate some debts which she then owed. This refusal enraged the prisoner, who, on the 27th of March, returned home, and on leaving the premises was heard to declare "very well, there are two lives, one here and the other with me." He was then followed to his house by the police peons, where the infant was shortly afterwarddiscovered murdered. It is for the grand jurymen under these circumstances to consider who had murdered the

The other case of murder, was one of more difficulty : it was that of Prosper Milliner, a Frenchman, who was accused of the murder of a syce named Buckaollah. The statement, as gleaned by Judge from the depositions of the witnesses in this case, which he remarked are very contused, are these. I wo French sailors were on the night of the 4th of March last, met on the Chitpoor road by the decrased, and another syce between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock P. M. and without any cause or provocation, as deposed to by the witnesses for the prosecution, one of these sulors wounded. Buckaollah, the deceased, with a kinfe, which he then held in his grasp, from the effects of which wound he hagered till the 5th of March at the Native Hospital in the Discrementaliab toad and then died. It will be for the gentlemen of the jury to decide primarily whether the prisoner was the person who had wounded the decea-ed, and secondly, whether at the time the prisoner, if they are satisfied he is the man who had wounded the deceased, there was not any affray, and whether the prisoner had not been struck by any person before he wounded the deceased; and if so, whether the deceased was a party concerned in this affray or not. It has been proved, that the prisoner had bought these knives for his professional purpose. Now it has been provided by the law, that if any person has at the time any deadly weapons in his hand which he happened to have by him without any avowed purpose of wounding or injuring any person, and he happens to be struck by any person in an office and retaliates with this weapon, and thus causes the death of the person who had struck him, the crime which he in that case is guilty of, is only manslaughter; for to constitute the crime of murder, it is requisite that a degree of malice and premeditation on the part of the criminal must be proved. But though this is a fundamental principal to constitute the crune of murder, yet it is not absolutely requisite in every case; for example, when a man has been proved to be what the law terms the general enemy of mankind, in a case where a person shoots with a gun indiscrimi nately into a crowd and wounds and kills some person or persons in it, he is guilty of the crime of murden. There are besides the evidence already alluded to, the dying depositions of the deceased, taken by Mr. C. K. Robison. one of the Magistrates of the Police office, in the prisoner's presence, and explained to him by Mr. P. Delinar, the interpreter. This the grand jurymen can have read before them, because the law provides that whenever any deponent in a criminal case dies before the trial of the case at the sessions, that depositions taken on oath, may be read as evidence during the trial. Besides this, there capable of swearing to anything, because he quartelled are the dying declarations of the deceased, as declared daily twenty times with Mrs. Barfoot, and then broke sufficiently conscious that he had but a short time to live, and made a declaration as to the manner of his death, hat declaration is held voted in the eye of the law. It s for the jurymen to satisfy themselves whether the leceased, at the time he made these declaration, was in that state. In conclusion, the judge said, that the deceased's depositions as they were on oath could be read as evidence before the jurymen.

The third case was that in which a person was charged with highway robbery, for taking from the person of E. W. Bowbear, a gold watch. It appears that whilst Mr. Bowbear was watching in the streets for a friend at night, the prisoner came up to him and snatched out of his watch-fob a gold watch, and in doing so also tore the prosecutor's fob. The question it will be for the jury to determine is, whether that force which the law requires to constitute a high-way robbery which should be attended with violence and fear, was exemptified on this occasion. In the case of the King tersus Morne, it was decided by twelve judges, that when a per on has a guard chain round his neck and violence is used to that degree as by two or three jorks to break this guard-chain, it constitutes a highway robbery; but where no such chain is worn or violence is used, the crime is one simply of taking from the person, and this, like picking pockets, is not a capital offence. Therefore it will be very material for the jury to determine whether in this case, which is about to be submitted to them, that violence had been used which would legally constitute it a capital offence or not. With regard to the other three cases, the proofs of violence having been used are more clear, particularly in one of them. In conclusion, the judge informed the jurymen that if they required his aid in cluedating any legal points in any of the cases which would be submitted to them, he would be must happy to offer them all the aid in his power. These were, he said all the cases to which he would beg to draw their particular attention at present; perhaps there may be more sent in during this essions which may require his observations to them, and if so he would do so.

Mahomed Ruffick was tried for stealing, on the 30th of March last, several crockery plates, &c. from the premises of T. Barfoot.

Pasoner pleaded not guilty.

T. Barfoot deposed, that he lived in No. 2, China Bazar-Street, the prisoner, previous to his confinement, was a khansama in deponent's service for one year. Deponent, in consequence of some suspicions, accompanied by to police peons and a servant of his named Ameer Khan, searched the pusoner's house near the ilindoo College. Prisoner was at the deponents house. One of his servants pointed out the prisoner's house to him. Then Mr. McCann produced the articles, and Mr. Barfoot identified them to be his property, because they matched with his set, a portion of which he produced in the Court, and he identified likewise a work box to be his daughter's property.

Honeeskhan being dead, the thanadar who accompanied Mr. Barfoot in the search corroborated his evidence egarding this search.

This c'osed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner said, that the property was his for a long time, and that he had purchased them and brought them from China. He further said that Mrs. Barfoot vas in the habits of sending out her ayah's with goods o conceal, and charging servants to whom arrears of vages were due, with having taken them, and that he had adopted such a course against 25 persons in order o get rid of them, and their wages, and the ayah had n one instance been detected in thus conveying some poons away for that purpose, which she confessed. He ikewise added, that Mr. Barfoot was a person who was to third parties. These were, it is true, not on oath, inis oath and quarrelled with her again.

allegations of his-

The learned Judge then summed up the case, detailing the evidence, stating the law, and expressing the points as to the identifying those articles, which Mr. Barfoot had admitted were a very common pattern in the bazar. In conclusion he said, that if the prisoner was convicted of stealing even one of the articles, it was enough to find him guilty of the crime for which he was tried, which was simple.

The jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of guilty.

After the verdict had been recorded, the prisoner was sentenced to two years' naprisonment in the house of correction and there to be kept to hard labor.

The grand jury submitted to the judge to-day a petition relative to a commission issued in the case of an inquiry in a case of lunacy. The judge, on perusing it, said that he would direct the clerk of the Crown to lay the papers regurding it before the grand jury, to-morrow, if possible, and it they think fit they can, on its perusal, make a presentment to the court which would order the clerk of the Crown to prefer an indictment on that presentment against the person mentioned in the presentment. The petition was signed by D. Ross the foreman of the special jury, who sat on that inquiry of lunacy for hunself and his fellow jurymen.

In the course of the day the grand jury returned true bills against the following individuals Abdoollah, for stealing on the 2d March last several articles of to the value of 25 rupees, from the house of Messis. Cockerell and Co. in Clive Street.

George Lloyd and George Morgan, charged with stealing from the person of W. Tippen, on the night of the 14th March 1838, by force and violence, a musicasmuff box valued at li supecs.

Posteciam. For having stolen, on the night of the 22nd March, a wooden box containing several brass articles, the property of Kidernauth Bose and his uncle Nundolal Bose, from their house in Puttublangah.

James Ainold, charged with having stolen from the person of Henry Perks, on Friday, the 16th March 1838, 12 Bank of Bengal notes to the value Rs 950 the property of the prosecutors.

Mahomed Ruffies, for stealing on the 30th March, from the house of his master T. Bartoot, in China Buzar, several articles of crockery-ware, glasses and a toriet boz.

True bill against Meal Jaun for robbing from the erson of Bebee Deliaua two gold chains to the value person of Bebee Deljaua two gold chains to the value of 200 supers, at her house in Cossitollah. The judge remarked, that a true bill for stealing, and not robbing should be returned; the jury altered the finding consequently.

Henry Lemsele, for robbing from the person of Ed-William Bowbear a gold McCabe watch as Rs 270 No. 8157, on the 23d March 1838. - Hurkaru,

APRIL 17.

(Sefire Sir E. Pyan, and a Petit Jury.) James Arnold was tried for stealing from the person of Henry Perks 12 bank of Bengal notes, of the value Co 's Rs-950.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Henry Perks depos d, that he resides at Coiroo Mehter's Laure, and is an engineer employed by William Prinsep, Esq. He has known the prisoner for upwards of two years. The prisoner was tormerly a Boatswain to some triding vessel. On the 16th of March last deponent met the p isoner, at about 1 o'clock P. M., at the Cape of Good Hope punch house in the Lall Bazar Doponent called three witnesses who confirmed these tressed circumstances and very thirsty, and that a person named Long had accommodated him with lodgings gratis at his house in Coiroo Mehter's Line, Deponent conpassionated his case and give him some money and treated him with a glass of grog. Whilst thus engaged they met Mr. Long, and the prisoner advised deponent, as it was late, to retire and sleep that night at Long's house, the American flag punch house. Deponent having obtained Long's consent to this proposition, left the Cape of Good Hope for the American flag, in company of Long and the pusoner. At about 8 o'clock P. M. or gun-fire, after their arrival at Long's punch-house, deponent gave Long some money, and he brought him a bottle of port wine and another of brandy, which they finished there and then. They all retired to sleep. Deponent laid himself on a cot in Long's house, and felt very unwell and was restless all the night, but he was not intoxicated. Shortly after deponent had laid down on the cot, the prisoner came to him and wished to cover him with a quilt, but deponent objected and said, that he felt himself warm enough without it. Soon after this the prisoner put his hand into deponent's pocket and drew out a sock from it, in which were the 12 notes and a memorandum of their numbers, given to deponent with the notes by Mr. Prinsep's sugar. After he had emptied the sock of these notes and this memorandum, he attempted to replace the empty sock in deponent's pocket, in doing which deponent who had been doing all this time, started up and collared the prisoner and taxed him with the theft. The prisoner then threw the notes down under the cot and a tempted to tear the memorandum of their numbers. In this he was prevented by deponent, who snatched the paper out of his batals and called to Mr. Long and desired him to get a constable to take the prisoner into custody. Long then came into deponent's room and helped him to pick up the notes, and they picked up ten of them at that time from under the cot. Long then went out for a constable, after he had stationed four chokedars at the door to prevent any person during his absence from entering or leaving the house. During Long's absence the prisoner struggled hard to escape, and said that these notes were his property. Long returned at about one o'clock r. m., with a constable, to whose custody deponent delivered up the pusoner. The constable took the pusoner to the police office and searched his person, to see if he had the other two missing notes about him, but found no money on his person, Hethen returned with deponent to Long's house, and, on searching the room again, they succeeded in finding the other two notes lying on the floor near the door of the soom in which this transaction had occurred.

On cross-examination deponent stated, that he did not voluntarily give the notes into the prisoner's hands to keep them for him, on account of being too much mebriated at the time, and that they were not turned out of the Cape of Good Hope punch-house, because it was getting late, nor had the doors shut on them, and he never bore the pusoner any ill-will, nor did he promise to give Long 50 rupees it he would get the prisoner transported.

Constable T. Ware produced the notes, and the deponent recognized them to be the notes stolen from his person by the prisoner, and compared their Nos. with the memorandum in his possession, and said that they corresponded with the Nos. on the notes themselves.

The witness, George Long, corroborated the testimony of the first witness and said, that he had known the prisource for about 18 months, a great part of which time he had lived at deponent's house, where monies had often been lying within his reach and if he had chosen to steal any he could have done it often, without fear of detection; but he never did it. This is his first appearance of this nature. Deponent positively swore that ne saw the prisoner take the sock out of Perk's pocket, Roard, and prisoner informed him that he was in dis-lempty it of its contents and then attempt to put the sock back into it. The cross-examination of this witness by I to-day. I thought at the articles, the property of the prosecutor. time Perks came with me to my house, that he had stowed the money away at the Bank as I had advised him in the early part of the day to do so; for when I spake to Good Hope to my house, nor were we turned out. Perks absence, and several articles taken from thence. the time, but a snoring.

with him to Long's he was to pay, and had been turned the articles were then taken in custody to the police out of the other punch house. Before retiring to sleep he office. The goods were recognized by the prosecutor through intoxication be was unable to do this. Prisoner then asked hun to let him take charge of the notes for him till he awoke sober, and the deponent handed them to him. He had no witnesses to call.

The learned judge then summed up the case, laying down the law and detailing the evidence, and said that the crime of which the prisoner stood charged was stealing from the person, and not a capital felony. He then informed the jury, that the only point at issue, is whether the prisoner had, as deposed on the part of the prosecution, taken the notes out of Perk's pocket feloniously, which, if true, and two persons have sworn to it as a fact, appears strange, that as they were both awake at the time, and soler when he prisoner took the ock out, they did not instantly seize him but allow him time to empty the sock of its contents, and not to collar him till he went to replace the sock in Perk's pocket : or whether it is likely that Perks had given the notes to the prisoner to take charge of for him, whilst intoxicated, as stated by the prisoner. It seems that by Long's account that this is his first offence of this kind, although temptations were in his way before and after. This is the chief point for the jury to determine.

The jury, after a long retirement of near two hours, brought in a verdict of acquittal, and the judge ordered the prisoner to be released.

April 18, 1838.

In the case of the petition presented by the grand jury yesterday, regarding their wish to have the papers and the deposition in the case of a commission of lunacy which had lately been held in this Court, and in which the papers were to have been land before the grand jury | next, the 20th instant .- Hurkaru, April 9.

the prisoner elicited answers which excited the risibility whether it would not be better, as perhaps some of the persons present in the Court, and even brought of the persons implicated in this transaction, and occasionally a sinde over the condenance of the worthy the witnesses which may be required, might be rejudge, and set some of the jurymen alaughing. The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The particulars of this case are briefly these :

The prosecutor went, about a mouth ago, for one day him about it, he said that he had planted it safe, and did and night to Kidderpoor, leaving his house in charge not know that they were by him till you robbed him of of Hurronunder Doss. On his return, he found that We did not go reeling drunk from the Cape of his house had been burglariously entered during his does not drink grog; every day, and he was soher when thanadar of the thana was the person who had arrested he collared you for the their," The prisoner remarked the prisoner, with some of the goods in his hand. He, that he had a good six hour's sleep to sober him. Depo- when challenged, gave a false name, but the thanadar nent said, that Perks was neither asleep nor awake at recognized him to be an old offender, and took him into custody with the goods which the prosecutor's servant The prisoner, in his defence, said, that when Perks went, claimed to be his master's property. The prisoner and took out the sock and began to count the notes, but to be his property. Owing to the servant who was left in charge of the house during the pro-ecutor's absence, being faid up with the smilt pox, he could not come to Court and prove the burglations entry into the prosecutor's house, and the present charge therefore verged into barely stealing from the house.

The prisoner in his defence said, that this was a milicious conspiracy of the thanadar and his ingrinidons. It was proved that he was an old offender.

The jury, after the judge had summed up the case to them brought on a verdict of guilty of stealing from the house; and the judge sentenced the prisoner to two years unprisonment in the house of correction.

The grand jury returned true bills in the following cases to day:

Punchunand Doss, for barglariously entering the house of Ramsoonder Mullick and stealing property therefrom.

Dabee Sing and Doonkul Sing, with having stolen wearing apparel, the property of Golab Sing, a durwan in the employ of Rustomjee, Cowasjee and Co.

Harree Mug, for the murder of John Pereira, his infant child.

Cheedam Ram Shaw and Ruggonath, for stealing from the house of Sabboo Raur, at Garrenhattah, various articles of value against the first, and the other two for receiving the same.

Nowcaure, for stealing several articles from the house of Ajeem.

No true bill against Khaudim, duftry, Cauloo, duftry and Gungaram, for stealing from the presidency pay-office paper to the value of 70 rupees.

The grand jury was then adjourned till Saturday

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

Chung, explated his crimes upon the scaffold in front of the criminal jul at Hooghly, in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators. He died as he had hived, a hindened villain, singing Bengallee songs on his way to the gallows, and shouting hurree hol! hur-ree hol! upon the scaffold, until the drop fell and put a period to his existence. He was a nephew of the celebrated Radha, dacoit, who was executed on the same spot in 1832, and suffered for his share in a docoity attended with murder, which occurred in the house of one Mohan Sautra, at the village of Bansberria, in the month of October last. The example which has been made of this man and his gang (the greater part of whom has been sentenced to imprisonment for various period-) will, it is believed, be of the greatest use in nutting a stop to dacoity in the Hooghly district.

MORTALITY AMONGST THE HINDOO INHABITANTS OF CAL-CUTTA .-- The following appears to be the number of deaths which have taken place amongst, the Hudoo inhabitants of Calcutta, from the 13th to the 18th instant, as appears from the reports of the two burning ghauts.

By Cholera	237
small pox
" Miscellancous diseases
"	105

The reader must recollect that by our last report, the number was 927 from the 1st to the 12th.

CHOLERA. The havor made by the cholera amonthe Hindoos is very extensive, and the cremation fires, are seen blazing in all directions, day and night. The deaths among the Mahomedans are not less few. So rapidly have they died, indeed, that their undertakers cannot afford time to bury them sufficiently deep, and the carcaseare, in consequence, exhumed by the jackalis and pariah dogs, and exhibit a most disgusting spectacle Several Europeans and East Indians, have likewise fallen sacrifices to the malignant pestilence.

A NIW HOSPITAL .- A hospital has, since the beginning of the current month, been established an the premises of the Medical College, for the benefit, principally, of the students of that excellent institution. It consists of two wards, namely the medical and surgical.

Drs. II. H. Goodeve, W. B. O'Shaughnessy and Egerton, the particular interest in it. There are obready a great many passents fed and lodged there. The number of bed: provided are twenty-four.

STORM AT CONTRAGORE. About nine o'clock on the night of the 19th instant, there was a violent storm at Conenagore which threw down upwards of a hundred thatched houses, and laid prostrate between six and eight hundred ees of different species and sizes. Brick ballustrades of pucka houses were also blown down. The blast was extrem ly powerful towards the river side, and near Hurrosoonder Dutt's ghout especially, where a dingy was driven very high ashore, and left there.

AN ENGLISH SCHOOL AT TRIBENNY.—The Probhakur announces the e-tablishment of an English school at EXECUTION AT HOSOHILY.—On the morning of the 21st instant, a notonous sudar daton, of the name of Nundo instant, a notonous sudar daton, of the name of Nundo children, whose parents have no means to pay for their tuition.

> FIRE AT MOJEELPOOR .- A destructive fire happened at Mojeelpoor in the 24 Pergunnahs, on or about the 28th of last month. The number of houses buint, principally thatched, and some brick built, was about a couple of hundred.

> HAIN .- On the night of the 10th instant, a most refreshing shower of rain fell at Chinsural, Bhautparah, Haulishahur, Kauchiaparah, and many other places, over an extent of about fourteen miles, on both sides of the river; so that all the tanks which had been completely dry a short time back, were filled. The shower was preceded by a north-wester which destroyed several dingles a little to the south of the nulla called the Banger-khaul.

DISSOLUTION OF THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE -The Municipal or Town Improvement Commutee, has closed its labours, and, we presume, made its final report to Government on the subject of the investigations on which it was deputed.

THE MANULA PIRVIES .- The SIX Minilla pirates, who were released on the Queen's free pardon on Saturday last, have subsequently been apprehended by the police authorites, whose intention in so doing, is to have them conveyed from this country to the Dutch Government, to be tated by that Government, as the men whom they had murdered were Dutchmen.

A WHITE CHOW .- The strange phenomenon of a white row, was observed at the police office recently. The bird came out of a nest in the police office and has been captured and retained by Mr. blacquicie. he magistrate.

JOINT SAGISTRATES AND SUPERINIENDINES OF POLICE. It is said that an order has passed the Council Chamber, sanctioning the appointment of joint-magistrates, on a monthly salary of five hundred impees, and superintendents of police from amongst the uncovenanted branches of the service, on a salary of 800 rupees per mensem.

BANK OF BENGAL. - Mr. Henderson has been appointed Deputy Secretary and Treasurer to the Bank of Bengal, on a monthly salary of Co.'s 48s 1,000, from the 1st proximo.

Mr. Lee succeeds Mr. Henderson as accountant on a monthly salary of Co.'s Rs- 600, and Mr. Plumb, of the Treasury department, fills up the vacancy, occasioned by Mrs Lee's promotion, on a monthly salary of Co.'s Rs 400.

This arrangement will give, we are assured, very general satisfaction; and reflects equal credit on those who made it and those who will benefit by it.

RIOTERS AT BARRACKEORE. - It is said that on several tions, and when ready, will be sent up to Fattychur by ed, it may be, with the flowing cup and full of inischief, whence they will be torwarded on to the Political to perambulate the stricts, singing here, screeching Agent at Loodianal, for presentation to the Maha there, and wherever a decent gate offered, of some particularly. cularly quiet family long a-bed, the same has been torn and twisted off its hinges, one half transported east, the other west, and haply left floating in some moderately distant tank, or shattered at the bottom of a convenient ditch. On one occasion, when a guard which had been kept till-mid-night on the premises for their protecton, had been withdrawn, our heroes assembled by the spot and with continued hooting, howling, hammering, and hurras, alarmed the whole neighbourhood, frightening, in particular, an invalid female into serious convulsions, from which she was not recovered without great difficulty. On another it is understood, we can gave the means of escape from his den in the park managene to a tiger, whom we incontinently heard of as slaughtering the cattle around him, and who was not again secured until after the lapse of some hours, and from whose ferocity, that no accident occurred, involving loss of perhaps more than one human life, was extremely p.ovidential.

ORDNANCE OFFICERS' BRIGADE COMMANDS-It is understood in quarters interested in the result, that the reference which is said to have been made to the Su-preme Government regarding the claim of ordnance officers to succeed to brigade commands, has been decided in their favour.

THE HULL OF THE STEAMER ENTERPRIZE.—The hull of the Government steam vessel Enterprize, was put up for sale on the 26th instant at Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co.'s auction, but not sold, the highest bid being only 12,000 rupees.

THE LATE MR. ROBERTSON'S - Three balloons, belonging to the estate of the late aeronant Mr. D. Robertson, and which coast him according to the catalogue 2,300 rupees were also put up, and brought the enormous sum of fifty rupees for the whole three!

TREASURY ADVANCES .- The Government, will immediately re-open the treasury for the purchase of Bills secured by shpping documents. The rate of exchange has not been mentioned with certainty; but it has been quoted at 2-2 per Co.'s rupce, at six months' sight.

AN EXTRAORDINARY BOY .-- There is at present an extraordinary boy, the son of a venerable Hindoo Pilest, named Nobokisto Gosain, and aged apparently about five years of age. He resides at Malparah in killah Hooghly. He has mustachios and beard the same as a grown up man, the latter being more than an inch long. He is stated to have been born with these appendages, but they were not, at the time of his birth, in that degree of perfection at which they have now arrived, as they were short and somewhat downy. He is taught to mutter prayers const tily, and is looked upon by the Hundoos with great veneration, as many among them believe that the body of the boy contains the soul of some saint.

PRESENTS FOR RUNJEET SING .- It is said, that Government have issued instructions for the immediate preparation in the Cossipore Foundry of two brass 9-pounder howitzers, mounted complete for field service, intended as a present from the Governor-General to Mah-Rajah Runjeet Singh. The Hownzers are to be handsomely ornamented with suitable devices and inscript and 180 half kegs of apples, arrived during the week.

nights for some weeks past it has been the amusement of one of the inland steamers to be mounted in the Agency

BISHOP'S TOWN - It is reported, that it is the intention of the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, accompanied by the Archdeacon of the diocese (who also we believe, combines in his person the joint offices of Chaplain and secretary to his Lordship) to proceed, in all June or July, upon a tour of visitation to the eastward.

FAMINE. - The most distressing accounts of the effects of the famine, still continue to be received from the north western provinces. Every exertion is made by the wealthier inhabitants to feed the famished population; but despue their care, hundre's are daily perishing through sheer starvation. Re 58,943-14-8 have been subscribed by the residents of Calcutta, for the relief of the famishing unfortunates.

STFAM AND GAS. - Two prospectuses are now in circulation, one of an inland steam communication and the other for lighting Calcutt with gas, both projected by Mr. Suwerkrop, a Civil Engineer. We think both schemes well worthy of patronage.

CHOIERA. - The cholera still rages most fiercely and about two scores of persons are carried off per diem by it, within the town and suburbs of Calcutta.

DHARJEIING. - A gentleman residing at Dhaijeling. writes in captures of the scenery and climate. The former, he says, is most magnificent, and the latter most invigorating. Thermometer at 8 A. M. 50, in the shade, and at 1 r. m. 58 on the 24th ultimo, during the night of which, snow fell in the neighbouring hill. Seven days were occupied by him in reaching the station from litabya -two to the foot of the hills and five among them in the ascent. The road was very bad the latter part of the journey; but work-people were collecting for the purpose of repairing it, when Mr .the distance may be accomplished in three days from the plain. The Government have ordered a bazar to be formed as there is nothing of the kind at present. The neighbourhood contains all the materials for erecting substantial houses—excellent timber, good stone and time, and man alone is wanting to bring these good things together for the accommodation of visitors. 'ew years, a visit to Dharjeling will be as practicable as one to Simla, and at much less cost of time and money.

NATIVE PREJUDICES. - The Hindoo community in Bengal, and the greater part of the Mahomedans in it, have declined eating the refined Dhoba sugar, in future, because it is refined with bones, consequently they deem it to be impure to use for their comestic purposes. has lowered the price of the refined sugar considerably in the markets here.

A NEW DEBATING CLUB .- The Probhakur announces the establishment of a new debating club for the benefit of native students of English, by the managers of the Hindoo Benevolent Institution. The first meeting of the members of the club took place on the 31st ultimo.

ICE AND APPLES .- A cargo of ice and apples, has been brought round in the William Gray. The apples are of a very superior quality.

The Gasper, with 322 tons of ice, 46 keys of grapes,

NATIVE CRIDITITY.—A rumour is affort in the native community, that Mr.—, one of the secretaries to Government, is endeavouring to have a resolution passed, that henceforward no Hindoos or Mosulmans shall hold any appointment, of any description whatever, so long as he does not embrace christianity; but that it is not to affect in any way the present incumbents.

THE PSEUDO RAJAH, PURTAR SING, OF BURDWAN.—This individual fixed at Barragore to loid it over the zemindar of that place, but the latter soon collected a band of men with clubs, and made his rajahship decamp.

Palicylas h: the best station for the pilot schooners in the S.W. Monsoon, has been long a reata questio in the marine department and with commanders visiting this port. Much has been said, and well said, on both sides, and names of great weight and experience in the pilot service respectively quated in support of the views entertained by each. A notification has now been issued from the Marine Board, that a pilot schooner, the Jane, has bren despatched to bring the matter to a practical issue. She will be relieved by another schooner at the end of four or five weeks, so that the opinions of the most intelligent of the pilot-service may be received, before any final determination for changing the station be adopted.

SIGHM - HARLIL LOSS OF TIFF AND PROPERTY .- There was a thunder and hail storm on the afternoon of the 8th instant, which caused great damage and loss of life. Several places were struck by the electric fluid, and upwards of a dozen people killed by it, in Calcutta and the suburbs. The hail-stones, which descended most plentifully, were of extraordinary largeness. The largest crystal, picked up at Dum-Dum, was nine inches to length and three in diameter, and everal of about sixteen inches in circumference and five in diameter, were picked up at the same place. Hundreds of men and cattile have been killed through or by the hail, and the greater part of the fruit, has been destroyed. The laborers at Koolghuetah, on being severely struck by the hail, fled for shelter to the granaries there, which were thrown down by the violence of the storm, and, we regret to say, about three hundred laborers were buried under the ruins, and died. At Gortiah almost every but was knocked lown, and several individuals perished. The villages of Bycantpore and Ramnaghur, have been utterly destroyed. About two thousand huts and brick built tenements have been destroyed in them, and from two to three lives lost in each dwelling, and about half the number of oxen and goats. On the banks of the canal, the trees have been land prostrate, and several boats were raised from the water and laid high on land and their crews either drowned or killed by the hail and lightning. At several other places the injuries sustained have been as great as those recorded; but no authentic report has been as yet renewed of them. The loss of life and property has been most awfully severe, indeed, and when the short time the storm continued is taken nto consideration, unprecedented.

MODURNUM.—The Moburrum festival has, as usual, been attended with riots and bloodshed, in consequence of the blind folly of the zelots of caste. The principal roters were the syces in the employ of Mesers. Cook and Co. and Mesers. Hunter and Co. and three lives, we hear, have been sacrificed to party feeling.

THE LANDOLLERS' SOCIETY. - The members of the Landholders' Society are daily increasing, and we doubt NATIVE CREDULTY. A rumour is affect in the native motin a short time the society will comprise the most community, that Mr. one of the secretaries to Gorospectable and influential zemindars, European and native, throughout Bengal.

NAUTICAL INTERPRIZE.—A little vessel of forty tons, formerly the pleasure boat of Mr. J. Jenkins, of the litm of Jonkins, Low and Co., was recently fitted up for a sea voyage, and has proceeded to China under the command of Capt. Galle, carrying a cargo of ghee, tamarinds, chillies, &c. She is called the Ospray, and is reported to be as saunch a little craft of her size as any which has hitherto floated on the salt sea. We hope the interpolity of the bold commander will meet with all the successanticipated, and the result of future employment be in full accordance with the expectation now entertained.

MR. KIITOF. —The surveyorship of the line of road between Midnapore and Sumbulpore, become varient by the death of Lieutenant Abbott, —has been offered to pad accepted by Mr. Kittoe.

A NEW SHIBHA .- The Hindoo community in the metropolisis in a great fermentation, not about any political affair, but about the reparation and preservation of the system of caste. Certain influential families in town, and some in the interior, are said to have been highly incensed at the unjust decisions which have of late been passed by the Dhurma Shubha in favor of certain wealthy culprits, who had sinned against, the rules of the Shubha and to the prejudice of those with empty prokets. Indeed, from an article in the Probbakur, it appears that if a rich Hindoo were to be guilty of a gross violation of the rules of caste, little or no notice would be taken of it by the Shubha, but a poor man, for the slightest fault imaginable, is wie to be excommunicated. The bearing of thefamilies in question are, therefore, about to set on foot a fresh Shubha, in opposition to the Dhurina Shebha, and in that case the latter is not likely to survive

MORTALITY IN CALCULTA. -- The mortality in Calcutta is still very great; upwards of a thousand deaths have occurred in the town and its suburbs during this month, exclusive of those caused by the hurricane, and of this number two-thirds have died of cholera.

FAILURES.—On the 12th instant, the respectable native banking firm of Kissin Doss and Outtunchund, in the Burrah Bazaar, failed.

By a native letter lately received from Mirzapore, it appears, that two shrolling houses of respectability at that place have lately failed.

escape and re-capture of a tioen.—At a very early hour on the morning of the 14th instant, intelligence was brought to Government House at Barrackpore, where the Deputy Governor's family were residing, that the large tiger had escaped from a menagerie and was prowling about the park. Orders were immediately given to apprize the inhabitants of the respective bungalows of the occurrence, and at the same time the sepoys were directed to keep their muskets in readiness. It appears that in locking the cell on the preceding might the bolt of the pædlock had missed the hasp, and the tiger seeing the door swing open, had deliberately walked out. On his travels through the park, he took occasion to pat the head of a large monkey, chained near the inemagerie, which proved its death-blow. In the morning considerable excitement prevailed in the neighbourhood and an immense posse comitatus, composed almost entire- | the above description occuring in future at his office, ly of natives, armed with no other weapons than hamboo the native's claims shall have every consideration; and rods, assembled together and proceeded in search of the that should there be any among the petitioners possessing royal fugitive. He was presently discovered behind a thick jungly hedge, stretched at his ease, but evidently in a sulky fit. After a brief deliberation two natives (one of whom was the keeper) fearlessly walked to the opposite side of the hedge, and thrust a bamboo, to which a rope was attached, underneath the body of the tiger. As soon as they had succeeded in securing the tope, each took hold of one end, and having poked the tiger's ribs pretty soundly with their bamboo rods, they led him between them like a docile poncy, and excerted by the shouting multitude, sungly deposited him in his former cell. It is extremely providential that no accident occurred. Visitors at Barrack pore are well aware of the ferocity often displayed by this very tiger; when strangers approach too near the bars, he occasionally springs for ward with a fierce and sudden growl, and at the time of feeding he is generally savage to an extreme degree. Fortunately the monster seems to have been too well fed the night before to be pressed by hunger during his wanderings in the park; for besides the murder of the unfortunate monkey, he felled a large bullock, yet he ered victums.

GENERAL MARTINE'S ESTATES. - The undermentioned lots, belonging to the estate of the late General Martine, were disposed of at the annexed prices by sale to the highest bidder at the master's office:

Messrs, S. Smith and Co.'s house and premises in Hare Street, for Co.'s Rs. 60,000 - (bought by themselves.)

Messrs, Moore, Hickey and Co,'s house and premises. for 30,000 - (bought by themselves.)

Mrs. Lindsted's house and premises on the Circular Road, for 12,500 -(bought by Mr. Wilkinson.) THE GOVERNOR GENERAL .- The Governor-General and suite, arrived at Sunla on the 5th instant.

THE SELECT VESTRY - A meeting of parishioners was held at the cathedral on the 16th instant, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. It having been determined that the old system of re-election should not continue in force any longer, but that the two senior vestrymen should go out as a matter of course, and not be eligible for re-election until they had been out of office a twelve month. Mesars, J. S. Julge and Robert Molloy went out, and were succeeded by Messrs. Thomas Leach and Charles Mackenzie, Messis. A. Sun and Alexander Colvin were then re-elected to serve only property destroyed by the accident. during the present year.

NATIVE ASSISTANTS OF THE CUSTOM-HOUSE.—A petition had lately been presented to the collector of the Governgrievance from the invidious distinction which obtains in that office, between them and their chustian fellow assistants, that is, in no instance is a native, however well qualified he might be, promoted to any place vacat-the necessary qualifications for the berth, there would be no obstacle to his getting the appointment.

CINIL TOLLS. - The Deputy-Governor of Bengal has determined to reduce the present rate of tolls upon the canals one-half, that is to say, to fix the toll at 8 annas per 100 maunds, instead of one rupee.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR CHEASOODEN .- The Madressa of Persian College of Calcutta has suffered a severe loss in the death of their principal professor Gheasooden, whose place has been given to the individual next in succession.

INDIGO PROSPECTS -It is said the indigo districts have had ample and excellent rains all below Raimahal: Baugulpore, Tirhoot and the westward, have been less tavoured.

FORTUNATE ESCAPE OF THREE ROYAL TIGERS FROM A MIS shewed no inclination whatever to feast upon his slaught- LILARY SECRETARY .- The Hon. Capt. Osborne has had a most unprecedented escape from an accident which, according to all calculation, ought to have proved fatal. When out tiger shooting in the Dhoon, three tigers suddealy got up under the very feet of his elephant which so affrighted the animal, that he literally shook his inder off his back. Captain Osborne is said to have actually talien upon one of the tigers, and strange to say he escaped by the whole three tigers taking fright and running away.

> CAPTAIN J. A. CURRIE. - Captain J. A. Currie, late of the Howrah dock has been appointed by the board to the situation of first uncovenanted assistant to the secretary in the room of Mr. W. Peters, who resigns and goes home in the Robarts. The place had been promised by the two last officiating secretaries to the assistant who stood next to Mr. Peters; but Captain Currie's emment talents and position in society, appear to have given him a preference. It is understood, however, that Captain Curie is to be made river magistrate, as soon as that office is created; and has accepted the present office as a temporary convenience, unless the bers of the board double his salary to secure his valuable services.

LIGHTNING .- About ten o'clock on the night of Thursday last, a three storied house at Burra Bazar, occupied by, and belonging to, a Hindoostanee shroff, was struck by lightning. The fluid entered the house through the roof, and piercing through the second and first floor, went out at the street door. An account book was the

THE INTERMENT OF THE SUFFERERS IN THE LATE STORM BY THE MAGISTRATE'S ORDER .- The magistrate of zillah 24 pergunahs, we are informed, has despatched Serjeant ment customs, by the native assistants attached to the Floyd with a party of convicts to proceed to the vilestablishment of the custom-house, setting forth their lages which have been devastated by the late storms, and grievance from the invidious distinction which obtains to bury the corpses of the persons who were killed by the violence of that hurricane. The bodies, we learn from persons who went to see these places, he strewn in all directions, some with their arms carried away, some being minus a leg, &c. Cows and bullocks, had been ed by a christian; and submitting it as their right to being minus a leg, &c. Cows and bullocks, had been be considered in this respect, as on a footing of equality driven so strongly by the force of the storm as to have with the christians, now that all classes of Her Majesty's their horns driven into the earth, and many lie dead in subjects in this country, without distinction of colour, that posture. Brick-built buildings have been thrown creed or caste, are eligible for all the offices under down, and the bricks themselves hurled to a great disgovernment. The Collector gave his orders upon the tance by the tempest, and large cocoanut trees, &c. said petition to the effect, that, in case of a vacancy of rooted from their original situation and buried four or bodies were counted by the spectators. Females with their jewels on them, lie dead and untouched, the putrid smell being too offensive and considered infectious by the surviving villagers, so as to deter them from approaching these corp-es, many of which were in a state of nudity, with the jackals and vultures feeding on them. The convicts who have proceeded to bury them, we understand, dig large holes in the earth, hard the dead bodies promiscuously into them, and then cover them up. Native superstition ascribes the scourge to the curses of a fakeer, who asked for some charity of these villagers, and was refused by all except one old woman. whose house has consequently escaped the effects of this tempest.

MOTUSSIL.

premi.-A native, a female, who, to all appearances had expired, when undergoing the process of ablution previous to cremation, shewed signs of life. Her humane and sagacious relatives around, ascribed her resuscitation to the evil spirit or some equally satisfactory cause; nor was it until the poor creature had been exposed on her funeral pyre the whole day and shewed unequivocal symptoms of life and consciousness, that she was borne home. Suttee is but half abolished while the murders that are frequently perpetrated in cases like the above, are suffered to take place.

It is said that one of the Sudder jung toms furarees has just been secured, after a desperate resistance, in which two of the cantors have been severely wounded. The name of the furaree is Jhoon la, and his companion Unta, had a narrow escape of being secured also.

KURNAUL.-The Governor-General has been holding a levee for the reception of the native community, a large portion of which has flocked to pay their respects to His Lordship.

sanarunpore. A conflict between a body of theeves and the police of a village called Belain this district, recently took place, in which several of both parties were wounded. The magistrate proceeded to the spot on learning the affray, and seized the ringleader and others of the gang.

ALLIGHT R .- Manik Rae Rao, of Bidjeeguth, a large village in this district, has been sentence I to seven years imprisonment, in the jail of Allyguth, for being implicated in an affray, in which several lives were lost. The affray was caused by the Rae's attempting to enforce the levy of several dues, which he claimed as his right, from the bunnecas of the village, but to which the latter refused to submit.

Small-pox is very prevalent here among the natives, and has extended to the European residents; Mr. Thornton, C.S. and Ensign Corsar of the 64th regiment, have been attacked by the di-ea-e. The misery in which the poorer classes of the natives are kept by the scarcity, combined with the approach of the hot wearther, will, no doubt, tend to make the disease more fatal.

> AGRA.-Cholera is on the decline, both amongst the troops and the inhabitants generally; and as the magis-trate is putting a stop to a further influx of the destitute poor, in as far as practicable, by airanging so as to employ them at some distance from Agra, apprehensions of a pestilence breaking out are beginning to subside. It has been a mistake to conclude, that the congregation of these unfortunate persons, has been the cause of the cholera : as this disease is pretty well known now to arise from a peculiar condition of the atmosphere, rather than from animal or vegetable miasm; nevertheless, it has been found that larger masses of human beings, invite, as it were, attacks of cholera, and beyond doubt sooner or later in many in-tances are productive of doubtful maglignant fevers; but the magistracy is now happily so well directed to the removal of the accumulation of all contaminating matters, both on the land and the river connected with the piesence of these huge working parties and the population of Agia generally, so that little is to be leared in the shape of infection by a tuinted atmosphere.

THE YORY PRESS .- The Agra press, with all debts and property thereto appertaining, including, the Agra Ukhbar' was on the 5th of April, disposed of by sale, to Messis. Moona Lal and Co. of Agra. The editorship of the paper will be conducted as hitherto.

The number of poor employed by Government is daily on the increase : they now amount to 70,000. The following is a list of the number employed this week.

SHAHJAHENPOOR .- On the 28th day of March, the first steam engine in these provinces was put up in motion at the establishment of Messrs. Saunders, Barron and Co., and is a most interesting spectacle. The engine is of eight horse power, and is intended for sawing wood, not quite so severe as in many others, is on the increase; raising water, and working a powerful air pump. The air pump is to act in the twofold capacity-first, of stopped. A fanatic now in confinement has predicted creating and maintaining a vacutum under an immense botter to be used in the making or refining of sugar, after the manner of the celebrated Howard's patent improved by Messrs. Oakes and Co. of London; second, of curing sugar by what is called the pneumatic process, which consists in placing therecently crystallised sugar in a case with a wire gauze bottom, and exhausting the atmosphere from beneath, when the air rushing through the mass, carries all the molasses below, leaving the crystal perfectly pure.

DACCA, 24TH MARCH .- A force consisting of three companies from Major Lister's light infantry corps, under the command of Lieut, Benett, has been ordered to march against some refractory Cossyah chiefs, within a short distance of the Sanatarium at Cherra Poonjec. It is confidently expected the chiefs with their followers will soon be dislodged from the stockade, where they have taken temporary shelter, and will, probably, submit to any terms after the arrival of our torce. A Government demand made by the revenue authorities for lands in possession of the above Cossyah chiefs, situated in the Spinet district, treating our perwanas with unwarrant-able usuit, and committing outrages on the peons conveying those notices, are reported to be the ostensible causes of the present movement, cally. Cholera and fever prevail to a great extent at this town and the surrounding country. At Humeerpore and Banda an extensive mortality is raging, and almost all the villages are more or less depopulated. The latter station is represented to be unusually pre-valent and severe. The morality extends also to the cattle, few or none of which remain.

BEHAR. - The Collector of this zillah, Mr. Hamilton has dismissed seven of his Amla, for peculation and embezzlement of the public revenue. The same gentleman has substituted Hindoostanee for Persian in his

The Rajah Meetur Jeet Singh has subscribed 1,000 rupees for the relief of the N.W. P. cholera and small pox are both raging throughout the listrict.

NATIVE STATES.

OWALIOR .- The raja who lately lost his consort has just selected a fresh one, a daughter of the Mamajee, after socrowing the usual Musulman period of affliction, forty days. This is the third partner he has taken to himself.

Hydrophobia to a fearful and unprecedented extent is raging in this town from the number of mad dogs in it. Native reports say the mortality caused by it we equal to that produced by cholera. So severe are the sufferings of the poor from famine that they devour the very animals, such as horses, buffaloes, asses, &c., that have died naturally from exhaustion.

LUCKNOW .- Letters from Lucknow state, that there is apparently something of serious nature going on in that city; and that the authorities are aware of what is going The leave of all military men for the present month is calamity which is depopulating the city.

the downfall of the present reigning family; and the queen, the minister, and a wealthy and influential mahajun are said to have all died on the same day: the words of the letter are, " said to have all become defunct on the same day," which gives reason to suppose, that there is some conspiracy on foot to verify by the assistance of poison, the prophecy of the gifted individual now in custody.

LAHORE.-" An Urzee form Monsieur Uotaylor was received, stating that a Russian vakeel had come to Dost Mahomed Khan, the ruler of Cabul, for the purpose of negociating with him.

An Ukbar from Cabul was also received, mentioning that while Captain Burnes was sitting with Dost Mahomed Khan at the Durbar, the Russian ambassador came into the presence, and, with a loud voice, said to the ruler of Cabul, that he would not recommend him taking that gentleman's advice, as the English nation would make friends of people and afterwards deceive and disposses them of their territories. Captain Burnes heard this in silence; when the Durbar was over, he returned to his quarters, from whence he despatched presents consisting of wines, sweetmeats, &c. to the ambassador, but they were refused and therefore carried back to Captain Burnes.

An Ukbar written by the Cazec of Cabul was also received, which mentions that the Russian ambassador and Captain Burnes met at the Durbar of Dost Mahomed Khan where they had a long conversation, which ended in very angry words, consequent on some expressions from the ambassador disrespectfully made use of towards the English nation. The ruler of Cabul seemed to take notice, but continued the business of the Durbar, secretly enjoying the scene. They then said that they would go to Labore, and examine its strength, and report the same to their respective Governments. Deenanath said to the Maharajah, that it would be a desirable object if they came into His Highness's presence and there made proffers of friendship.

The Ukbar also mentions that Dost Mahomed Khan wrote to his son Ukbar Khan, advising him to be cautious that the reports of Herat should not be allowed to spread.

The Maharajah inquired of Deenanath and Fakeer Azerzoodeen, if they could inform him how much money Herat yield. They at first replied that the pergunnah of Herat is large and yields one crore of rupees. They afterwards said its revenue was about thirty lacs; but the ruler receives only ten lacs.

At the Durbar of the Maharajah, an urzee was presented from Sawun Mul, Nazim of Multan, stating that a few days ago the Vuzeeree Mussulmans had assembled in large body and plundered the cattle of Multan; but when the news of their depredations reached his ears, he assembled his forces, matched out and attacked them, when after a sharp conflict he succeeded to securing the cattle, completely routing the lawless banditti with a loss on their side of twenty-five killed and fifteen wounded.

BHURTPOOR.—The sickness so general, is very severe in this town. The Rajah has made arrangements for on, and have taken precautionary measures accordingly, the distribution of medicine in the hope of lessening the arrangement to which the latter appears not disposed to conform, and as he is supported by a portion of the Raja's troops a small fracas is expected. The Rajah has referred the question to Colonel Alves.

MADRAS.

TROOPS FOR MOULVELY .- It is said that the troops under orders for Moulmein, are not to proceed there until further instructions are received from the General Government, the late pacific accounts by the Larne not scening to require their immediate despatch.

The remainder of the 8th Regt. N. I. has not yet sailed for Malacca and Singapore, in consequence, it is said, of the want of accomodation in the Baique Fanny, which was taken up for their conveyance.

THE NABOB-EXEMPTION FROM LEGAL PROCESS .- A somewhat extraordinary application was made to the Supreme Court on the 28th of March, by the Advocate-General, on behalf of the Nabob, and by order of Government, but was not finally disposed of until the 30th. The Court was applied to make an order exempting all persons contained in a certain list (comprising the Na-bob's household) from its process. The application was bob's household) from its process. The application was refused on the board ground that the Court was incompetent to make any such or ter, which would be tantamount to making a law, a power reserved only to parhament.

LORD ELFHINSTONE AND SIR ROBERT GRANT.-It is generally understood, that both Lord Elphinstone and Sir Robert Grant are recalled; the latter having offended both the Home and the Supreme Governments; the former to fill a situation at Court. Sir James Carnac is mentioned as his Lordship's successor.

THE SCHOONER FOR MADRAS AND MOULMEIN. - The General Government has purchased a large schooner for Madras, to ply backwards and forwards between Madras and Moulmein, carrying troops. The uncertain tone of the Burmese King renders every precaution necessary, and makes it desirable that a constant communication should be kept up between Madras and Moulmein.

BOMBAY.

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF .- The Commander-in-Chief is going to cruize for the benefit of his health in the Hon. Company's ship Taptes between Bombay and Surat, the present station of that vessel instead of going to the Mahabuleshwar Hills, which it was His Excellency's intention to do, during part of the hot weather.

CHOLERA MORBUS .- A considerable deal of cholera prevails among the pilgrims who are congregated at Nassick, and that the victims to the disease are numerous, caused principally by the crowded state of a place to which so many went for the purpose of atonement and expiation.

OPIUM AGENT.-It is said, that the situation of opium agent, vacant by the death of Mr. Taylor, is to be abolished as a distinct appointment, and that the duties are henceforth to be performed by the Custom-house department.

ROTA. The Raja of this state has taken it into his been attended with several excesses, which render it rather questionable whether the same indulgence ought in future to be extended to similar exhibitions. One mounted patrol has been murdered, and two police peons have been dangerously wounded, all in the discharge of their duty in protecting the public peace.

BURMAH-

The accounts from Burmah during the month, do no differ from those previously received. The affairs of the country were in the same condition.

PERSIA.

ISPAHAN. - The following interesting extract of a letter dated Ispahan, 27th January 1838, has been received.

"The winter this year is excessively severe. The street are literally covered with snow, and we are, in consequence, all shut up in our respective houres. We have no further accounts about the movements of Mahommed Shah, and it is difficult to say what will be the result of his expedition. You must have heard of the arrival of Nicholas at Erivan. The visit of his Imperial Majesty to the Convent of Etchmietchin has, I am glad to say, been productive of manifold advantages to the Armenian nation. He has been graciously pleased to testify his acquiescence of becoming patron to that venerable fraternity on whom he has bestowed twenty-four extensive villages in perpetuity, the revenues of which are to be appropriated to the innintenance of schools for the education of Armenian youths, and to the printing of the Armenian classics and other useful books. This is all very good and encouraging indeed! Retter and happier days await the devoted country of the Armenians!

CHINA.

The accounts from Canton to the 27th of February, by the Water Witch, indicate no improvement in opium but on the contrary state, that there was a general expertation of the drug falling on the appearance of this year's supply in the market, none of which had been reported as cold. Last year's Opium was respectively, Patna 500 dollars, Benares 450 dollars, and Malwa 380 dollars, but sales were effected with great and increasing difficulties.

New opium was falling hourly, and sales of Patna are reported at 420 dlrs. Benares at 375 dlrs There are discrepancies in the statements of deliveries and stock for the last year, which we are at a loss to reconcile with the shipments from here and Bombay, after making every allowance for the consumption of the Straits.

Without including Damaun, the export from India was about 41,000 chests, of which we have an account to the extent of 26,855 chests delivered and in store at Lintin, leaving nearly 15,000 chests undisposed of. It would be satisfactory to have this explained.

Some smuggling boats had been soized. Fast sailing chippers, for the Chinese rivers, of thirty to forty tons, are now fitting out in the Hooghly, to be manned by Europeans well armed, for the purpose of conveying the drug into place, less exposed than the sea coast to the observation of the authorities.

Ma. LINTON'S CONCERT.

We were in hopes, not only from Mr. Linton's of which we confess our technical ignorance, he so choice programme, but the unusual coolness of the thoroughly captivated the hearts of his auditors, that we evening on Monday, that his concert would have been better attended. Malgie the damper of such poor enbetter attended. Mange the camper of such poor ca-couragement; he sang with great spirit throughout, and, with his invariable readiness, substituted a right joinal ballad for the promised 'Calannia' of 'an amateur,' who was non est inventus. The gens of the evening who was now est inventus. The gents of the evening were, decidedly, the delightful performances of the Ryckmanns. Both the basso and the point bassoon were exquisite, but the bijou of bijoux was the piano forte fantasia of the junior Ryckmann—the Thalberg of Ind. There was one pianissimo passage in it, which, what with the delicacy of his touch, the modulation of the pedal, and sundry other musical witcheries the audience .- Englishman, May 2.

thoroughly captivated the hearts of his auditors, that we heard around us, many an irrepressible ejaculation of delight and 'special wonder.'

Mis. Chester was in excellent voice, but, we think, the songs assigned to her were not judiciously chosen, inasmuch as her forte lies in those that require more naiveté in the singing than so sombre a one, for instance, as 'Garder vous,' Her 'Dashing White Sergeant' and 'Buy a Broom,' afford ample corroboration of this assertion. Mesdames Ventura and Valudares acquitted themselves very creditably, and Delmar led admirably: in short, all went off to the entire satisfaction of

IMPROPER USE OF THE AQUEDUCTS.

Calcutta, 4th May, 1838.

To HER MAJESTY'S TESTERS OF THE PEACE FOR THE

The petition of the undersigned inhabitants.

Your petitioners having observed, with feelings of disgust, the filly and abominable uses to which the water in the various aqueducts is appropriated, by all denominations of the native inhabitants, who are everywhere to be seen bathing their bodies over the very channels. attended with indecent exposure of their persons, washing dirty rags, hawking and spitting into the water, and applying it for the purpose of cleaning ulcerated portions of the body, beg leave to bring the matter to your special notice, under the confident belief that, as it could never have been intended that the water should be applied to such uses, but for the useful and desirable purpose of supplying the domestic wants of the people, watering of the streets and replenishing the public tanks, that the justice of the peace will adopt such measures, consistent with the authority which they possess, for the application of such wholesome restrictions, as the abuses which your petitioners have noticed so imperatively demand, and the health and comfort of the community merit at your hands.

As an efficient measure for the correction of the abuses complained of, your petitioners would suggest the propriety of the day patroles being authorized to eject parties from the aqueducts who resort to them for unseemly, uncleanly, and filthy purposes, or by any other mode which may appear advisable and expedient for the accomplishment of the desired object.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting of this Society was held in the Town-hall, on Wednesday, the 9th May, 1838, at half-past 9 o'clock, N. WALLICH, M. D., V. P., in the chair.

Present: — Messrs. A. Colvin, W. Storm, M.S. Staunton, W. Ainslie, R.S. Strickland, and J.W. Masters; Drs. Strong, Apry, and Huffingle; Leut. Abercrombiu; Messrs. John Allan, A. Grant, T. Brae, T. Dyce, R. Watson, F.T. Fergusson, C.K. Robison, G.A. Prinsep, W. Speir, T.S. Kelealt, D. Hare, E. Preston, T.P. Morell, C. Brownlow, and John Bell.

Visitor: - Lieut. Montrieu.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were duly elected members of the Society:

Dr. James Morton; W. Bennet, Esq.; Wm. Agnew, Esq.; Robt. Campbell, Esq.; Audrew Sym. Esq.; K. M. Scott, Esq., Assistant Surgeon; Munceram Bur, Bemdatce; Licut. J.G. Gerard; John Guilding, Esq.; G.C. Richardson, Esq.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members, vis.

Capt. H. Macfarquhar, of Tavoy, proposed by Mr Bell, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Dr. James Hutchinson, proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Thomas Savi, Esq., of Kishnaghur, proposed by C. Deveninne, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

E. Mackintosh, Esq., G.T. Cockburn, Esq., C.S., and Baboo Keenut Sing, Purneah, proposed by J.F. Cathcart, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

G.G. Mackintosh, Esq., C.S., Purneah, proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

Rajah Bursingchunder Roy, and F. Kitcuhoffer, Esq., proposed by G. Preston, Esq., and seconded by Mt. Bell.

G.M. Hunter and G. Austin, E-qrs., Jessore, proposed by G.M. Adam, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

Motions of which notice was given at last meeting.

No. 1.—Dr. Wallich's motion, to offer premiums for essays on particular subjects, was brought forward and discussed. As there appears to be con-iderable difference of opinion on the propriety of offering rewards on essays, while the sum of four thousands rupees was already set aside for the best work on Indian Agriculture in all its branches, and as it became a question whether the funds of the Society were adequate to meet the outlay contemplated by the motion in question, with reference to other objects for which the Society have already pledged itself, Dr. Spry, as the seconder of the original motion, moved as an amendment, seconded by Mr. G. A. Prinsep,

"That the four articles following be assigned as the staple articles deserving of the Society's support, for practical treatises, viz. cereal grains, sugar, silk and cotton; and that the details be referred to the general committee for report. Amendment carried. The secretary here submitted an account-current, dated 30th April, 1838, from F. Macnaghten, Esq., shewing that the Society has 19,900 rupees invested in Government securities, 10,000 of which unlocked up to meet Society's engagements, to meet the offer of premiums already voted away.

Motions Nos. 2 and 3, carried nem con.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

No. 1.-Proposed by John Bell, seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

1st.—That as most of the European vogetables have been brought to perfection in the vicinity of Calcutta, through the stimulating influence of medals and rewards from this Society, it is expedient to withdraw further encouragement from such as may now with safety be left to the profits of industry derivable from local consumption, and limited in favor of artichokes, asparagus, seakole, celery, parsnips and a few others that have not been brought to sufficient perfection to tempt uninterrupted cultivation for the market.

21.—That the medals and rewards thus taken from vegetables be enhanced (with reference to the more expensive cultivation) and applied to frints, hitherto neglected, there being little doubt that with care and attention, grapes, oranges, apples, strawberries, and other delicious fruits may be brought to perfection in Bengal, and indigenous fruits greatly improved.

3d.—That with a view to secure such a desideratum, parties having approved stocks be invited to contribute grapes (or to sell them to the Society) who will undertake to keep up a nursery for the distribution of young fruit trees.

4th.—That the sum of 500 rupees be annually set apart and laid out in the importation of fruit trees, from the Cape, America, New South Wales and Europe.

5th.—That Government be solicited to authorize the superintendent of the botanical garden at Scharunpore to send down grafts of fruit-trees and shrubs, and that the expense of trasmission be borne by the Society.

6th.—That two of the Society's ordinal y silver medals, and fifty rupees be placed at the disposal of each of the following branch societies, for the purpose of encouraging the natives to cultivate European vegetables as successfully as they are now ostablished round about Calcutta, viz.

Hooghly, Burdwan, Beerbhoom, Midnapore, Cuttack, Comillah, Moorshedabad, Azımghur, and Assam.

7th.—That a limited shew of particular vegetables shall be held in reference to the season of their coming to perfection.

That a shew of fruits shall be held annually in due season, and rewards given.

Motion No. 2. The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting, that the great increase of now inembers, had exhausted the stock of the Society's transactions, vols. 2 and 3, and that there were not many of the reprint of vol. 1. remaining.

Proposed by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq., that the 1st, 2d and 3d volumes, be put into a second edition, and that the expense be ascertained and brought to the notice of the Society at its next general meeting.

The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting several samples of raw silk, and one sample of sugar, sent in by parties agreeable to a resolution of the Society passed in the 12th April, 1337, to compete for the Society's medals.

The secretary was directed to hand over these samples to the respective standing committees, upon whose reports the medals would be adjudged at the next general meeting.

REPORTS.

Read, the agricultural committee's report on the subject of the distribution of sugar-caues at the end of the year, concerning which an advertisement has already appeared in the public prints.

Read, the report of the silk committee on certain specimens of raw silk and cloth produced from the wild silk worm in Assam, Barugalpoor, Dirigepore and Boncoorah,—referred to the committee of papers.

Read minutes of the caoutchour committee recommending that the caoutchour samples from Lieut. Vetch, should be given to Mr. Robert Smith, for purposes of experiment,—confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Read the following communication .

Read a letter from Mr. Robert South to the secretary, dated 11th April, requesting to be supplied with as much caouteboue, as the Society can spare, and offering to pay for the same at the rate of eighteen supers per maind.

The secretary had submitted Mr. Smith's letter to the committee, who were unanimous that Mr. Smith should have what was available, graits. Resolved accordingly.

Read a letter from Mr. Rotert Smith to Dr. Wallich, dated 7th May, submitting for the inspection and opinion of the Society some samples of caoutchoic cloth, which he had prepared as a substitute for wax-cloth for packing purposes.

From Lieut.-Col. Dunlop, dated Simlah, March 25th, to the secretary, advising the despatch for presentation to the society, of a parcel containing seeds of all varieties of hill forest trees, and several kinds of pine-canes which may be considered valuable for transmission to Europe and other cold countries, giving information respecting the description of vines grown at Koomawur, and promising to forward cuttings.

From Messrs, J. Willis and Code, dated 12th April, presenting to the Society, on behalf Mr. Jeffines Finch, four specimens of apples grown in that gendeman's garden at Shalepore, Tithoot, from Eaglish grafts.

These beautiful apples were received by the secretary on the day after the last general meeting, and, fearing the apples might not keep, he circulated them as widely as possible. The fruit was equal to any at home, both in appearance and flavor, but Mr. Finch does not state whether these were solutary specimens, or whether the tree or trees bore much fruit.

From C. K. Robison, Esq. dated 14th April, enclosing extract of a letter from Major. Lawrence, dated Dorunda, near Hazareebaug, 3d March, forwarding a small quantity of vegetable-marrow seed.

From T. Sandys, Esq., (without date), received 15th April, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter of the 16th January, together with copy of the Committee's report on his model, No. 2, of a machine for raising water, and offering a few observations in reply.

From Captain Macfarquhar, to the secretary, dated Tavoy, February 21st, forwarding presentation to the Society, specimens of caouchoue, dammer varnish, and cotton.

Stating that the former has been manufactured under his superintendance, and that abundance of the gum can be procured in those provinces. That the sample of dammer varnish is made by bees on the same tree from which the rosin is procured, and that the cotton is the produce of his garden from seed raised from Sea Island, and which seems to thrive well in that neighbourhood.

From Mr. Thomas, superintendant of the Baptist Mission Press, intimating that he will point the transactions on the same terms as prepared by the College Press.

From Colonel Stacy, dated 15th April, enclosing a sample of cotton, and requesting an opinion on its quality.

From R. S. Homfray, Esq., dated 18th April, presenting an apricot produced in his garden at Barripore.

The members of the agricultural committee had tasted this apricot. Its fragrance was very fine, but it was sour to the taste.

From Captain P. Torckler, dated April 19th, acknowledging the receipt of transactions, and stating the intention of the committee to agree the question of establishing a branch society at Dum-Dum.

From Ur. A. Campbell, dated Nepal, 12th April, conveying further information on the subject of his former proposition of acchimating seeds in Nepal for transmission to the plains.

From the Reverend J. Parry, dated Jessore, 17th April, presenting to the Society, about half a maund of Sandoway tobacco, and a quantity of Madras tobacco, growing in that district, from seed supplied by this Society to Mr. Catheart, also a specimen of the soil. Requests an opinion on these samples, and information on the culture and preparation of the plant; stating that he has collected a large quantity of seed from both varieties in distribution at the district.

From Major Syers, secretary Agricultural Society of Cuttack, dated 4th May, advising despatch of samples of Virginia tobacco and Upland Georgia cotton, produced in the Society's garden at that station from seed furnished by this Society.

From F. Macnaghten, Esq., Government agent, lated 2d May, enclosing account-current up to the 30th April, 1838, showing the sum of 19,900 rupees, to be lodged in Society's fixed assets, in Government securities.

From M. G. Maxwell, Esq., M. D. of the Madras establishment, dated 9th May, asking for the coloured drawings of tobacco plants, presented by that gentleman to the Society sometime ago, if not required, for the purpose of being forwarded to Dr. Wight of Madras.

Dr. Maxwell also gave some useful hints as to the manner of preserving seeds from insects.

Some fine parsnips were submitted by Mr. Kirchoffer, the produce of his garden at Ballygunge.

Dr. Wallich submitted a small squash grown by Mr. R. Smith from English seed.

. The thanks of the Society were ordered to be offered for all the above communication and presentations.

THIRD REPORT.

An unusually long time has transpired since the pubheation of the last report of this institution. The socieby was established in May, 1832, and the first report was published at the end of the next year; the second report also was published at the end of 1834, and since that time no report has been published until the present one. The reasons for this delay have arisen, partly from the circumstance of the operations of the society being of a very simple and unobtrusive character, and partly from the desire not very rapidly to increase the operations of the society, until such labourers might be available to carry on the work as could have confidence placed in them by the commutee, both as to then own Christian character, and their capabilities of doing their duties in such a manner as, with the Divine blessing, to bring the truth of the Holy Scriptures to bear upon the hearts and consciences of those who are visited by them.

The readers who have been in the employ of the society since the publication of the last report, are Raja Aghaee, Joseph Russic, Lat Gho-e, Jutti Ah Alu, Preme Mus-ee, Samuel Ombika Chuin, Meei Jan Jane Sheeky, and Mr. De Mittas. Those just at present employed are Raja Aghare, Samuel Ombika Churn, and Sheetel; of the rest Joseph is now engaged as a Catechist at Culna. Prome Mussee and Jane Sheeky went to situations of usefulness up the country where the latter is still usefully engaged in connexion with a school. Jutti Ali Alu and Meer Jan found other employment more congenial to their feelings, and Mr. De Muttas was attacked by cholera last Murch, and deentering upon a joyful immortality through the merits of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, thereby proving those truths which he had been going about to impress upon the minds of others.

Raja Aghaec attends at the houses of fifteen subscribers and reads the Scriptures therein on an average to about 150 naives weekly, who, in almost every instance, hear the Gospel with attention, very frequently ask questions upon what has been advanced, and, not unfrequently, hold disputations with the reader concerning those truths which are revealed in Holy Scripture. In only one or two instances can it be said that the people give no aftention whatever. Portions of Scripture and of the Liturgy, Homilies, and Christian tracts, principally in Hindustani, have also been distributed to such persons as were able to read, and desirous or willing to receive the cannot bear testimony to any good result as yet produced

Samuel Ombika Churn attends at the houses of twelve subscribers weekly, and therein reads the Scriptures to about one hundred and twenty persons during the week. This reader also attends weekly at a benevolent institution, in which are usually congregated about tifty natives from all parts of the country, to whom he reads the Word of God. From the report of this reader's visit-, it appears, that most of the hearers listen attentively; some hear but do not consider, some question with a view to obtaining a solution of their doubts, and others, with a desire to con-jun itself, and however proper, it may be for Europeans to receive, yet that it is not suitable for them as they are already in possession of a religion of their own.

Sheetol attends at present at only five houses in which about ninety natives assemble and hear him read the Scriptures, and concerning whom it is reported that they do so with attention, frequently holding disputations concerning the doctumes of revelation, and asking questions for the solution of their doubts.

The late Mr. De Mattos, a native of Portugal, was a convert from Popery ; soon after his arrival in this country from Lisbon under the ministry of the late Revd. David Brown at the Old Church; he was engaged as a reader in 1835, with a view to his visiting the numerous families of the Portuguese, with which this city abounds, most of whom continue to live in very great darkness with respect to Scriptural truth; since the time of his appointment, about three years ago, to that of his death, he has been constantly engaged in going about from lane to lane and from house to house reading the Word of God to numerous Portuguese families in their own language. During that time he has read the Scriptures to about seventy different fami-lies monthly, or, in other words, he may be said to have held about seventy Bible class meetings every month reading the Scriptures, and encouraging the heaters to hold conversation upon the truths of God's Holy Word, and concluding with prayer. It is sincerely hoped that the seed of Divine truth which has been sown by this labourer will prove a blessing to those families who have enjoyed the benefit of his visits.

All the readers are expected, when not engaged in visiting their stated bearers, to devote their time to endeavouring to draw the attention of their countrymen to the consideration of the truths of Holy Scripture.

The following communications received from some of the members, shew, that what is doing is at present only the breaking up of the tallen ground of the heart, which is pre-occupied by all the error and vices of Mahommedanism and Hudduism: they also shew, that there is reason to hope that some of the seeds of Divine truth sown by the labourers of this society may find in some hearts parted this life in peace and in the steadfast hope of a soil in which it will germinite, take a deep and cortery root, and eventually pring up and bring forth the fruits of righteousness and peace to the honor and glory that he himself was experimentally acquainted with of our Gol and saviour, and the salvation of immortal souls. If the husbandman wait for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain, it surely becomes the spiritual husbandman to be patient, to be instant in sowing the seed of Divinctiuth, and to persevere in prayer for the enlightening and sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit to cause that seed to be productive of repentance, faith, and holmess, in the hearts of sinuers of mankind, and be instrumental in preparing many an immortal being for the service and love of God, here below, and for the enjoyments and employments of the everlasting kingdom of heaven above.

> One writes, "In reply to your note, I am sorry I upon the minds of my servants, who are in the habit of hearing the scriptures read once a week; but as they show a willingness to listen, some more than others, there would seem reason to hope for the Spirit's influences, notwithstanding the difficulties which apparently obstruct the immediate conversion of adults?"

Another writes, " The servants still continue to give us a great deal of trouble in summoning to assemble, which, if left to themselves, they would never think of doing; there is, consequently, no spirit of enquiry or any visible change of sentiments, but we hope for better tound and refute, and to make it appear that which is times, and, therefore, desire to labour humbly under that advanced in the Holy Scriptures, however true, it may be hope."

A third states, " I am happy to say the servants atthe truth of the doctrines preached to them; but, that is all. One man, a Hindoo, who has left Calaltered his conduct, and improved in every re-pect; and not only acknowledged but felt the truth of Christianity, and plainly told me his intention of embracing Christianity on his return. One of my servants is learning the English language of his own free choice. I trust it will be blessed to him. Upon the whole, they seem to be more willing to hear now than they were about two years ago, and more altentive: they prefer being spoken to in the Hindustani language. One of my women servants related the explanations she had heard here to some of her acquaintances at the house of a friend of mine, and those servants entreated to be spoken to also; they were so, and they seemed highly gratified."

Another writes, "I am sorry I have nothing particular to mention respecting the Christian Instruction Society: most of my servants are Christians, and they appear glad of every opportunity afforded them of hearing the Scriptures read, and I am thankful to find them attentive and consistent."

Another communication is as follows: " I regret to state, that little or no effect appears to have been made on the minds of my servants as respects the Christian instruction they receive on the Sabbath day. I have endeavoured to encourage them to put any questionthey thought proper to the reader, and to enter into discussions relative to the truths of Christianity and the tenets of their own belief. For some time they availed themselves of the privilege; but, latterly, they appear contented to attend, listen, and go away unconcerned; and, it appears to me, that several of their would not attend, but from the fear of incurring my displeasure. Our only comfort under this discouragement is, that we are doing our duty in holding forth the light of truth to a very ignorant portion of our fellow-creatures, leaving the result to the All-Wise disposer of events."

Another member writes, " I have received your note inquiring what effect has been produced on the natives in my house from reading the Scriptures in their hearing by the agents of the C. C. I. Society. I am sorry I cannot give you satisfactory information on this subject, because of my inability to converse with them, unable as I am to speak in any of the native languages. All I can say is, that during the reading of the Scriptures in their bearing they listen respectfully, and often with apparent interest, and I should regret if the practice of reading to them were discontinued."

" I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 25th April, requesting a communication on the subject of the effect that the regular reading and expounding of the Scriptures have had on my servants, and in reply I regret that I have nothing to report, (I wish I had) beyond regular and apparently willing attendance. Some of them acknowledge what they hear to be truth, but, as far as I can judge, their hearts appear untouched!"

"Though I cannot see any fruits, I am glad to have the blessed Word read to my people, and the Gospel simply preached in my family of dependants, and I trust to have the regular attendance of the men you now send, as it may not be always in vain that these privileges are imparted to my poor servants."

"The society must, I think, commend itself to every tend to the in-truction, with care, and acknowledge Christian heart. The recollection that we are daily receiving attention and service from those who are perishing for lack of knowledge, is most painful. How sad cutta for his country. I had great hope of, and this constant habit showed in any degree, renders us if it please the Lord, I trust he will come back, he indifferent to such a state of things, yet we all feel that indifferent to such a state of things, yet we all feel that it does, without great watchfulness. This society reminds us of our responsibilities, and tends to keep alive our sympathy for the stringer that is within our gates, and I have tound it useful in this respect even to pray to our soul."

> Funds. The total amount received since the publication of the second report is Rs 2,110 4 annas and O pic. and the amount expended during the same time Rs 2,367 8 annas and 0 pie : there is, therefore, a balance of Rs. 42 12 annas 0 pie, in hand.

The experiment of reading the Scriptures to the domestic servants of Christian families having now been carried on for the last six years, the committee feels couvinced that it is now time to attempt to bring the labours of the society to bear more extensively upon those in-dividuals for whose benefit it was more especially established. They, therefore, now beg to invite the heads of Christian families to follow the example of those who have attempted to bring their domestic servants, so far as circumstances would admit, within the sound of the blessed Gospel, and for that end to obtain the services of a Christian reader, for the purpose of meeting their domestics at a certain conventing hour, once, twice, or oftener per week, as circumstances may suggest, and of reading to them, in a language which they can understand, the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. There is one point to which the committee would especially invite the kind attention of those persons who are desirous of benefitting their native dependants, and that is, the desirableness of one of the members of the family kindly devoting the hour of the readers visit to the object of that visit, and as frequently as possible remaining present during the reading of the Scriptures and the discussion which usually takes place, subsequently, as it has been found, that in those cases where this practice is followed, the servants feel that their employer takes an interest in their welfare, and, consequently, are induced to listen with more attention than they would otherwise bestow.

The committee cannot but feel that sufficient attention has not yet been paid by Christians to improve the influence they possess for promoting the best interests of their servants, and, it is feared, that many individuals, who do not think seriously of their dependants, that as they are not desirous of seeing the light of truth, they may be left to themselves in quiet possession of their prejudices, and in agnorance of the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he hath set forth to be the propitiation for our sine, and not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world. The committee feels also that on Scriptural ground, it is the indispensable duty of Christions not only to attend to the spiritual interests of themselves and their own relatives and friends, but also to those of the strangers who are within their gates. If it be the command of God that the privileges of the Sabbath be extended to all such strangers as are brought within the sphere of Christian influence, as, from the Fourth Commandment, it evidently is, it undoubtedly is aduty also which every Christian owes to those over whom he obtains any influence, to use that influence, accompanied by his best endeavours, and by his prayers at the throne of grace, for the Divine blessing, to bring them to an acquaintance with that Gospel which reveals the way of salvation through faith in our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ .- Hurkaru, May 11.

MESSES, CARR, TAGORE AND Co.

Dear Sire,-We have the pleasure to hand you (annexed) an extract from a letter received vesterday from a friend at Rombay, who was a passenger on board the Emerald Isle to Madras, to whom we wrote namediately on receiving your note of the 5th ultimo, advising us of a complaint that the bread supplied by us to that vessel was bad and unestable. We addressed him to ascertain if there was any real ground for complaint, as we ourselves felt confident that our stores were most excellent.

We will feel obliged by your forwarding our extract to the Committee, of the Australian Association, with a request, that they will give the same publicity to it that was given to the protest of the passengers received from Madras, as we find that parties now, who are in the habit of supplying ships with such stores, do not hesitate to state that our future supplies will be found (as in the case of the Emerald Isle) of inferior quality.

We are, dear Sirs, yours faithfully,

Extract from a letter, dated Bombay, April 6, 1838.

My dear Hardman, -" You desire me to inform you. if, amongst the general complaints on board the Emerald Isle, there were any upon your cabin biscuit, marked W. H., H. and Co., in reply to which, I must tell you, that I heard none; but, on the contrary, on one occasion, your mark, and, of course, your bread was brought to my notice at table by one of the passengers, before I had observed it myself, and, upon informing him that it was the produce of the new mills at Cossipore, he expressed himself how good it was; and, I do not assure you, it was good, and I did not see a wearit in any of the bread all the while I was on board : in short, I did not bear a single complaint about the biscuit in one shape or other, nor would I ever wish to eat better. The complaints seemed to be respecting the wines, of which I partook very little, and confess myself no judge of quality. Heer is my only beverage, and I took more than enough of my own; but that belonging to the ship was good beer also.'

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Medical and Physical tarsus after Chopart's method upon a native, with canser Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, the 15th May, 1838.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read :

From W. Michelson, R. B. Penningion, A. Ross, J. Innie, M. D. E-qrs. Bengal Medical Service; Hamilton, Esq. H. M.'s 17th Regt. and J. Murray, Esq. Bombay Service, requesting to withdraw from the Society.

From Messrs. Leckie and Co. of Bombay, forwarding their account-current with the Society, shewing a balance in favor of the latter of 514 rupees.

From J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., offering to act as agent for the Society here and in England, and stating that the Society is accepting his offer would only be required to contribute as a single subscriber at 10 rupees per annum.

On the motion of Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Egerton, Mr. Stocqueler's offer was accepted.

Dr. Goodeve then stated, that in the last monthly report the mention of an operation for scrotal elephan-tiasis similar to his own, performed by Dr. D. Stewart, had been inadvertently omitted to be noticed.

Mr. Richard O'Shaughnessy then communicated to the meeting an account of two operations performed The 1st was an amputation through the

The patient had recovered perfectly complete, union having taken place rapidly, although a large articular surface had been exposed by the operation, and the man was beginning to walk well with the remaining portion of his foot.

The 2d case was one of amputation of the right half of the lower jaw for hollow exostosis of that bone. The bone was divided a few lines to the right of the centre of the jaw, and turned out of the socket after separating the soft parts. About 16 ozs. of blood was lost during the operation, but no untoward symptoms had since occurred, and the wound was healed within a fortnight after the operation, leaving scarcely any deformity of the face.

The lumour had been the growth of some years, and had acquired considerable magnitude. The case was accompanied by a beautiful preparation of the bone and drawings of the patients before the operation.

The discussion upon these two cases being continued for some time, prevented any further business being commenced during the evening.

SOCIETY FOR THE ACQUISITION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.

A meeting of the above Society, established by a cluded, certain resolutions were passed for the guidance respectable body of educated Hindoos, was held in the Sauscrit College Hall, on Wednesday evening last. The rules of the Society requiring some member to deliver a discourse on the subject chosen for discussion at each meeting, the Rev. Baboo Kisna Mohana Banerjee delivered one, on the advantages resulting from the study of history. The discourse was good and well calculated to rouse a desire in young minds for the acquisition of a historical knowledge, as also to teach how to select the kind of histories fit for study. The speech tor of native ed was a lengthy one, and it is impossible to do justice to its whose name we merits within a short compass. After the Baboo con- karu, May 19.

of the Society. The meeting broke up about half-past nine o'clock.

There were about a hundred Hindoo youths present on the occasion; but, we believe, the attendance would have been much greater, had not the weather worn a threatening appearance that evening. Two European threatening appearance that evening. Two European gentlemen honored the meeting with their presence, namely, that zealous and unwearied friend, and originator of native education, Mr. David Hare, and another, whose name we had not an opportunity to learn.—Hur-

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF BENGAL.

GENTLEMEN,—Having, at your request, undertaken the investigation of the complaints of the passengers of the Emerald Isle, we beg to report to you the result of our enquiries, which have been as full as circumstances would admit.

Every article supplied to the ship was by Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. or under their orders. We have had before us, lists of the whole with Messrs. Binny and Co.'s letters, and Captain Driver's letter to Messis. Cair, Tagore and Co., and have tasted two bottles of the condemned port and claiet, sent up from Madias per Malcolm, and compared them with two bottles of the same wines from the godowns of Messrs. Cair, Tagore and Co. We have also tasted samples of the biscuits and flour. It was not possible to obtain samples of every article, and some we did not deem it necessary to require.

Referring to the passengers' letter to Captain Driver, of the 16th March, 1838, we shall notice separately the various supplies complained of, viz.

TABLE RICE.—Of this we find 20; maunds was laid in: we have no musters, but are disposed to think that it was not properly prepared for the table by the European cooks on board: the sickness of the children many be attributed to another cause instead of the inferiority of the rice.

over.—The want of a proper oven is next complained of. At the time the Emerald Isle sailed, every exertion was used to procure a new and propen apparatus; but none new was to be had, and a second-hand article was purchased from the Moira, which ship brought out troops and a number of passengers. If it suited so large a ship, the inference is, that it was a proper atticle, and Captain Diver is to blame if he did not cause a proper use to be made of it.

recoun.—Bread and biscuits. Samples of the flour and biscuits were on the table at the last general meeting and tasted by every body present: they were pronounced good, e-pecially the biscuits, and in this opinion we concur and believe them to have been as good acever was put on boardship. We have, besides, in justice to Messrs. Haworth, Hardman and Co., published a letter from a passenger of the ship to Madras, stating that, instead of the biscuits being weavily and uneatable, they were much liked, and thought very superior. We have already stated that Captain Driver is to blame, if no fresh bread was baked on board, for he had a sufficiency of good flour.

clarer. — Was St. Julien, and, in our cpinion, a very inferior wine, and that sent up by the Mulcolm is absolutely sour, though the same wine, and, we presume, exposure on deck when sent on board caused this description. We do not consider the committee of the Association to blame in respect to this wine; and are even disposed to exouerate Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., for the wine was produced at the public tiffin. Mr. Cratoft thea pronounced it inferior; but his opinion was overruled by all the other gentlemen, and among them several who have signed the letter to Capt. Driver; so the unfortunate choice of the wine is in a measure attributable to the passengers themselves—or, at any rate, those who attended the uffin and approved of it, fifty dozens were put on board, and at Madras a fresh supply of 50 dozens of Chateau Margeaux was taken in.

PORT WINE.—The sample of this wine produced at the tiffin was considered very superior, and the muster was taken of this proposition, and, we understood, that received by the Malcolmshews that it is the same wine; and though we think it sound and not disposed to conjugately of personal baggage in addition to what he had demn it equally with the claret, we are of opinion that in his cabin, and in the hold of the ship; as there was GENTLEMEN.—Having, at your request, undertaken it is a very common description of wine. A fresh supply is investigation of the complaints of the passengers of of 30 dozens was put on board at Madras.

BRANDY. -- Messrs. Cair, Tagore and Co. assure us, that they put on board an ample supply of French brandy from their own godowns. We find by the lists, 12 dozens, and as no part of it was condemned at Madras, we consider it to have been good.

Been.—Of this we find supplied to the ship 112 dozens of Bass' pale ale, 21 dozens of golden ale, and 173 dozens of other beer; no part of this was condemned at Madras, though stated by the passengers to be inferior. Capt. Driver states the consumption was "four dozens per day, so it could not have been very bad; on the contrary must have been very good, and in the published letter of the passenger to Madras, the beer was pronounced to be good; an additional quantity of 100 dozens was taken in at Madras.

SHERRY.—No part of the sherry was condemned at Madias, though pronounced by the passengers to be interior, and no additional quantity was thought necessary to be supplied to the ship. The original stock was 32 dozens of one sort, and 24 dozens of another.

TEX.—The tea was from the godowns of Messes. Rustumjee Cowasjee and Co.; there were three half chests of green tea and five ten-catty boxes of southing. It is notorious that the teas from Messes. Rustumjee and Co. are equal to any procurable, and Capt. Driver is to blame for not having had it properly prepared.

DIFICIENCIES OF MATERIAL AND ATTENDANCE -We cannot, of course, pronounce an opinion in a charge stated in such general terms; but it must be evident to all persons, that a ship of the size of the Emerald Isla taking passengers upon the moderate rates charged, cannot be expected to have all the advantages of supetior accoming ations and attendance of large London ships. We are led by the passengers, also in general terms, to infer that there were not wholesome provisions on board; from the lists before us it is clear, that a very large supply, in our opinion, an unnecessarily large supply of cuddy stores of every description, pukles, sauces, jums, jellies, preserves, chesse, spices, preserved meats, &c., was lable in for the voyage, and we have a certificate from Messrs. T. Payne and Co. who supplied the greatest portion, and whose respectability is a guarantee of the goodness of their supplies, that every article were good. They challenge proof of any inferiority; besides, no part of these provisions were condemned at Madras.

waller. An extraordinary supply was provided, but in a ship containing so many persons and annuals, we concurred the propriety of Captain Driver serving it out upon allowance.

It unfortunately appears by all accounts, that the ship was greatly crowded and lumbered, and, we fear, that in every ship proceeding to these colones, this will prove a source of discontent: to this discontent the disconiorits of the commencement of a sea voyage, and the ill-health of some of the passengers, we attribute these complaints, though the crowding of the ship was entirely their own act, in bringing an enormous quantity of baggage in excess of their engagements, without notice, and for which, consequently, there was no space reserved: had this extra baggage been refused, greater distatisfaction would have been created. In fact, the committee offered to re-land the excess, but no notice was taken of this proposition, and, we understood, that when the ship was unmooring, a passenger brought a quantity of personal baggage in addition to what he had in his cabin, and in the hold of the ship; as there was no room the officer refused to take it on board. A very the greater part of the complaints of the passengers are unpleasant scene ensued, and the consequence was, that the baggage was taken on board to the still greater inconvenience of the passengers. On this point, Captain Driver writes to his owners, " the crowded state of the ship has arisen from the quantity of baggage brought by the passengers, and, in fairness, Mr. Gardiner ought not to have been blamed." A quantity of freight was for the Swan, and, when landed, no doubt the ship would prove comfortable.

CATTLE AND DOGS .- The dogs belonged to a passenger who signed the letter to Captain Driver, and he might have abated the nuisance had he been so disposed. The horses were also the property of the passengers with two exceptions.

PITTINGS OF THE SHIP .- Doubtless some inconvenience was occasioned by the hurry in which things were obliged to be done; and, considering the great exertions of all concerned in despatching the ship, we should have been disposed to overlook all trifling inconveniences.

Upon the whole, therefore, we are of opinion, that !

either unfounded, exaggerated, or referable to their own acts; and that they were not advanced in a fair and candid spirit, for no allusion is made to the public tiftin at which the only two wines we consider inferior (claret and port) were submitted to them, and it is unfortunate that THEY made so bad a situation for themselves. Capt. Driver states, "the passengers find fault with every thing, still I am determined to keep my temper." Besides keeping his temper, we think he might have made greater exertions, as the provisions and water were consumed, to remove and slow away such articles as occasioned inconvenience, and, certainly, he ought not to have left Madras without writing to the Association more particularly with a knowledge of these complaints; besides, he is clearly to blame, having good flour and good tea, that the passengers were not supplied with fresh bread and good tea, as they state.

EXCHANGE ROOMS.

May 22, 1838.

At a meeting of the subscribers to the proposed Bank of India, Mr. J. Allan in the chair. Mr. Bracken, in behalf of the present committee, made the following report:

I beg to state, on behalf of the provisional committee of the proposed Bank of India, that one of then object in requesting the attendance of the subscribers, is to tender the resignation of their functions in that capacity.

In the infancy of undertakings of this character, it is absolutely necessary that somebody or other should put themselves forward; and, o far they subject themselves to the charge of self-appointment. We are fully sensible of the inconveniences of any such mode of election; and, as the number of shareholders is now sufficiently large, in our opinion, to enable them to undertake the selection of their representatives, we now propose to place our temporary honours at their disposal. I am authorised, however, to state, that we shall not have any objection to continue our services, in co-operation with other gen-tlemen, to be named by the meeting, if it should be pleased to consider them at all useful.

The progress made in establishing the Bank, in the face of an exceedingly powerful opposition may be held as favourable. There are already 189 applicants for shares, amounting in the aggregate to 1,476. These are entered in the list on the table; but I understand that, in addition, there are conditional orders in Calcutta for 3 or 400 shares, which, I presume, will now be executed. The prospectus provides for the commencement of business on 4,000 shares being taken; and I am individually disposed to adhere to that provision; but it is proper to mention that some opinions are favourable to the opening of the Bank, so soon as 3,000 shares are registered. Another point to be considered, and it may be anisable to instruct the committee now to be appointed to furnish a report thereon, is the limitation of time, which applicants in Great Britain should be restricted to, in taking up shales at par. Perhaps six mouths from a given date, say the 1st of August next, would not be an unrea-onable period. It is obvious, that such applicants would come into the Bank relatively on better terms than India subscribers, the working of whose capital had brought the value of its stock to a premium, unless some rule of this kind be made.

I may add that our subscription list embraces all classes in this country. Gentlemen in the civil, military, and medical service; merchants, planters, bar-tisters, solicitors, independent capitalists, who have remed from business, and gentlemen employed in the treasury and other public offices in Calcutta.

1.-Proposed by Mr. Boyle, seconded by Mr. Stocqueler, that the late provisional committee be requested to continue their services.

2.-Proposed by Mr. Syers, seconded by Mr. D. Ross, that the following be added to the committee :

Messrs. J. Boyle, W. Gibbon, Robert Paton, Hurryhur Dutt, W. Oxborough, Anthony DeSouza, I. F. Leith, and W. Patrick.

3.-Proposed by Mr. Bracken, seconded by Mr. D.

That Mr. Boyle be honorary secretary, with in-structions to arrange the preparation of a deed on a sufficient number of shares being subscribed; and to call a meeting of the subscribers for the purpose, fixing a day for opening the Bank, electing officers, &c.

The general meeting of January, having recognised the expediency of using pillars of masonry, and wooden beams, for the first range of godowns, as it was of paramount importance to loss no more time in its construction, we sought competition, by publicly inviting tenders for the supply of caul beams and raiters, and of teak for the supply of each beams and ratters, and of teat planks; and we succeeded in arranging for the former at Co.'s Rs. 48,218, including expense of painting and putting up; and for the latter at Co.'s Rs. 61,961; and allowing further Co.'s Rs. 21,039 for placing and fixing the floors, the result, more especially as regards the latter, will be a very decided reduction of the amount inserted Report by the Directors of the Bengul Bondel Wathouse in the estimate, which was placed before you in January. As to the masonry, you were then informed, that Messrs. Burn and Co. had undertaken to execute the whole of it at the Honorable Company's rate of remuneration, Co.'s Rs 16 per 1,000 cubic feet. With advice which we deem to be the very best within our reach, we have sanctioned the use of iron tie-bars and plates longitudinally, for strengthening the arches of the two rows of pillars and of transverse iron tie-bars, with-cast iron boxes and plates, for every alternate pier, to maintain the position and solidity of the walls. We could indeed wish that the erection of these godowns were more forward. The oppressive heat of the weather lately, and the prevalence of sickness have been adverse to celebrity of work; but as the rainy season is at hand, it will behave us to uige the contractor to the employment of adequate means to insure as rapil progress as may be consistent with safety; for, not only is that the most favourable season for masonry, but we are given to understand that, with even extraordinary exertion, the range cannot be finished before March ; and we are sensible that every month's delay in its completion, may make a difference to you of many thousand rupees.

> Of the iron work originally intended for this range, but which it was judged advisable to set apart for the second range, we are now enabled to place before you full, and we trust satisfactory information. Mr, T. Anderson, one of the three gentlemen whom we addressed, trausmits, under date 14th February, copy of a correspondence, which you will find exhibits a narrative of the progress of the iron indent; and he communicates its position then, furnishing a copy of the plan and specification, by Mr. George Stephenson, a distinguished engineer in England. For details, we refer you to the correspondence. Let it suffice here to state, that your agents, deferring to the opinion of high authorities, whose science and experience were entitled to every respect, judged it proper to depart from the plans transmitted hence. A different pillar and beam have been adopted, although they confined their deviation from the original plan within the necessity of the case.

Having agreed on advice which pronounced such composition to be indispensable, to use a mixture of over no inconsiderable withdrawal of merchandize for enhanced from £2 to £3 per ton, more than of Scotch or Welsh iron alone, run from the ore, had been employed.

Mr. Stephenson proposed that 200 tons were to be delivered in March, and the whole to be delivered in Liverpool by the 30th June. He, or his assistant, was to be at liberty to inspect the work at all times; and every test was to be in the presence of one or other. As Mr. Anderson had, by the iniddle of February, received only some of the tenders, expecting the remainder in the course of a few days, it is to be assumed that the completion of the work will be later than the date indicated by Mr. Stephenson.

It was computed that the whole iron-work would weigh 900 tons. Mr. Anderson, in letter of 18th January, says, the price would be from £8 to £10; and, in that of 14th February, that the mixture of the three qualities of iron would cost from £2 to £3 extra: so that we may assume the cost, on delivery at Liverpool, will be £11,000. On this account a remutauce of £6,000 had been placed in the Liverpool Bank, bearing 3 per cent, interest. We recently wrote to Mr. Anderson, that, an instalment of subscription being required to be paid upon 21st proximo, we would, by the first overland mail after that date, make a further remutance to him of £2,000 or £3,000.

We may dismiss this part of our report by observing, (and we do so advisedly) that we deem your agents (for, although Mr. Anderson writes in his single name, he has been acting in constant communication with his associates, Mr. Arbuthnot and Speir) have throughout proceeded very judiciously, interrogating in the outset various practical and scientific authorities; appealing to experience in different fields; adopting the alterations which such circum-pect examination demanded; and, in the sequel, yielding to no private influence, acknowledging no partiality, but securing to you the cheapest terms, by throwing the contract open to public competition :- and we cannot doubt that you will feel every satisfaction that those agents have thought proper, in the execution of their task, to resort to the guidance of a distinguished engineer. "Mr. George Stephenson" remarks, one eminent in science and practice in India, " is a first rate engineer : in his hands you are perfectly safe.'

In the course of our statement, we come now to direct your attention to the progress of warehousing operations, in the temporary and interior accommodation it has been in our power to provide. The rent (we speak of its monthly product) at the period of the last meeting, had reached about 1,400 rupees; afterwards it quickly increased to about 2,000 rupees; it then fell back to 1,400 rupees; but soon began to use, reaching now not less than 2,500 rupees, and likely to be 3,000 rupees by the end of the present month, altogether manifesting a proinstead of Captain Ouseley and A. Colvin, who went out gressive increase, the more satisfactory, as it has prevail- by rotation. Hurkary, May 25.

Scotch, Welsh, and Shropshire iron, the cost will be despatch into the interior, and for re-exportation, thereby shewing that the augmentation of your warehousing bu-siness, is by no means to be ascribed to any peculiar and temporary predicamen of the market. The exigencies of the bonding trade even now compel us immediately to look out for more room. The range of dilapidated godowns on the north portion of these premises, may, it is expected, for a moderate sum, be put into such repair. as will serve, at least part of it, for the temporary reception of merchandize. We lately requested the Manne Board to allow us to occupy those godowns, for whatever rent may be proper in reference to their present condition, until the period arrives for paying to Government to the remaining part of the purchase-money; and the Board has in the most handsome and friendly manner accorded to our request. Additional and good accommodation being instantly required, we are in treaty for a fine and spacious godown in the immediate vicinage. We may shortly observe, that business seems now to be in the course of rapid extension; that, when the channels of periodical communication are opened with the interior, we reckon on an extensive removal of wares; but, on the other hand, we know that, with the arrival af the cold weather, there will be a considerable influx of trade into the warehouse. The issue, we anticipate, will permit a dividend to be paid early in the ensuing year, even before your warehouse is erected, from operations, necessarily circumscribed, in the temporary, insufficient, and inferior godowns now occupied.

It is perhaps superfluous to state to you, that such incipient thriving of the undertaking, with the very limited and discouraging means at our command, although beyond all question it augurs well, yet can be received as no just criterion, whereby to measure the magnitude of the trade that will flow into the warehouse when constructed or to appreciate the probabilities of the ultimate development and prosperity of the whole scheme.

It is not for us, in making our report to indulge in the expression of sanguine anticipations, which might unconsciously be charged with some exaggeration; but this we are free to affirm, that, when the warehouse is completed, if it be so well occupied with trade, and the whole of such experience as we have yet been permitted to have, testifies emphatically that it will be so occupied. then it follows incontrovertibly, that the undertaking will yield you regular and ample returns.

ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

above charitable institution, was held at the Town-hall, on Thursday evening last. Baboo Joychunder Bose was called to the chair; he addressed the meeting in a very eloquest speech, stating the object they had assembled for, namely, an inquiry into the conduct of their secretary, against whom the managers had cause to entertain suspicion of improper practices, such as would prove ruinous to the institution. Several charges were latd against him, but, as none of them were backed by sufficient proof to satisfy the meeting of their existence, it is but justice to the accused to withhold them from the public for the present. It was then resolved, that eight gentlemen be elected from amongst the subscribers to make a strict and impartial inquiry into the affair. Nineteen gentlemen were then named, out of whom, it was resolved, that David Hare, Esq., be requested to selected

A meeting of subscribers, called by the managers of the , the required number," eight " The committes, are at the close of the investigation of the charges, to lay their report, before a general meeting to be called for that purpose.

Several gentlemen spoke on the occasion, to the same effect as the chairman, to whom a vote of thanks was given for his able conduct in the chair.

The meeting broke up at a rather late hour.

We, as impartial reporters, cannot conclude this without remarking, that some young Hindoo gentlemen who spoke, were a little too, free in their use of calumnious expressions to the accused, which could not be decorous under any circumstances, much less at a public meeting. Nor can we pass over unnoticed, the want of order which now and then prevailed. Our object is not to discourage these youths, but to give them salutary advice, that they may behave with more propriety in future, -Hurkaru, May 26.

SUPREME COURT.

April 18, 1838.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and a Petit Jury.)

Sheikh Abdoollah was tried for stealing from the office of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., some indigo, on the 16th of March, 1838.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

J. M. Dove, Esq., deposed, that the prisoner was a furash, in Messis. Cockerell and Co.'s office, but had no access to the indigo godowns; but there was at that time some indigo in the compound, in some chests, to which the pirsoner had access.

Here Mr. McCann produced the indigo, and Mr-Dove rocognized it to be the indigo stolen from Messrs. \mathbf{C}

Cockerell's house, marked D. D., C. C. for Coliah factory, where this indigo has been manufactured; and D. D. from David Dombal, the proprietor of that All his indigo is invariably consigned to Messrs. Cockerell and Co. for sale; and one of the cakes is a part of the indigo which was submitted to them from a house in Java for sale. The raw silk and wax candles, deponent could not recognize; but added, that the prisener had charge of wax candles in the Chain Sing, durwan of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., deposed to his having searched the prisoner at 9 o'clock! p. m., when he was leaving Messrs. Cockerell and Co.'s! office, and found on him some wax caudles and three cakes of indigo, and then detained him in the office; and the prisoner, at 6 o'clock next morning, confessed that he had concealed some cakes of indigo in Neeloo Baboo's desk, and Kunniah Sing peon went with the prisoner to this desk and brought the indigo, and then deponent took the prisoner and the judigo to Mr. Dove, who ordered them to be taken to the police office.

Kunniah Sing confirmed this witness's testimony, as to the prisoner pointing out the stolen indigo concealed by him in Neeloo Baboo's desk.

Bhooroosee Ram, naib of the police thana, deposed to his having, by Mr. McCann's order, searched the prisoner's house, and found there some indigo, raw silk, seventeen wax candles, some nails, two pairs of gloves, &c. in a wicker basket in the prisoner's presence.

Prisoner made no defence.

The judge then summed up the case, which he said is larceny, and detailed the evidence and the law in the case.

The jury, without retiring, found the prisoner guilty. labour.

Nowcowrie coolee was tried for stealing a box, containing various articles, the property of Ajim, on the 10th of April, from his house in Mulungali.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Ajim deposed, that the prisoner put up in his house for four days. Two other persons live in his hut. Deponent had a trunk in his hut, which he rented from Ameerun, his landlady, who lived in another hut. This and partly to his landlady, who had then kept these ever since her house was burnt. Some of the other articles in the hox belonged to the other two men who lived with him. As the pirsoner had no work, the other persons who lived in the hut when they went to work, desired him to look after their properly. One day on their return from their work, they missed both the prisoner and the box, and after having searched for him some days, depouent found him in Coling th, with one of the stolen dhootees on his body, and asked him what he had done with his trunk, when he denied all knowledge of it. Deponent then asked how came he to have his dhootee on him, and made him over to the Colingah thana peon. He next day he saw the box at the police office, where he found all the stolen property except the money and one dhootee.

Rahimbux, the naib of Colingah thana, produced the box, which he found in the house of a woman named Chundermony, where, the pusoner lived after he had absconded with the complainant's box from Mulungah.

The witness Chundermony, confirmed the deponent's depositions, and the prosecutrix Ameeiun, the landlady, and the two persons who lived with the prosecutrix, identified the stolen property to be their property, and confirmed the statements already made in this case.

The prisoner merely said, that the box was not found in his house, but in that of Chundermony at Collingali, whereas he lived at the Chandney Choke. He had no witnesses.

The learned judge summed up the case, and the jury, without retiring returned a verdict of guilty.

The learned judge then sentenced the prisoner to two years' imprisonment in the house of correction. with hard labour.

George Lloyd and George Morgan, were tried for having, on the night of the 14th of March, 1838, stolen a musical snuff box, from the person of William Tippin, in the Scebtollah lane, by force and violence.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

William Tippin deposed, that he is a pilot, and lives at Seebtollah lane. On Wednesday evening, the 14th March list, he went with Mr. Hatton, the gun-maker, to Mr. Williams's, at Gree Baboo's lane, and from thence he accompanied Mr. Hatton to his house at Cossitollah, where he took a glass of grog and left him at 12 o'clock at night. On passing Cook's livery stables, he met a country-born young man, who was accompanied by two Europeans, and who addressed him and said "how do you do Tippin! Are you coming on board ship?" Deponent replied, "very well— The judge then sent need the prisoner to two years' no," and then walked on without taking further notice imprisonment in the house of correction, with hard of them. When deponent arrived at the Chandney Choke, he saw an European standing at a liquor shop, and an African at a sweetment shop. The African addressed deponent and said, "well, friend, are you not gone home yet?" Deponent replied "no," and walked on. It was a moonlight night at the time when deponent arrived at the door of the house, these two persons who had followed him all the way from the Chandney Choke, rushed on him and knocked him down by trip-ping he heels. The European throttled him and held him down, and the other nifled deponent's pocket and took out his musical snuff-box from it. Mrs. Tippin, hearing the scuffle opened the blinds of the window box contained articles, which partly belonged to him and called out and said "Tippin Tippin, what is the the thana people for having let the thickes follow and airesting the prisoner, say, that he was the greatest rob him, and then escape. They replied, that they did blackguard in Calcutta; this, he did, because he has not know that those men were robbers, until deponent heard repeated complaints against him, and has seen had informed them that they were so, consequently, they could not arrest them. Deponent, because his eyes were blinded by the tightness with which his throat was Rosa DeSilva, who lives with Mr. Tippin, corroborated his testimony as far as it related to her.

Buddeat Pummah, peon of Seebtollah thana, deposed, that he knows both the pusoners, who live within the beat of that thana, and that he had seen them pass his stand at 1 o'clock A.M., dressed as Mr. Tippin had described them to be, and shortly after they had passed him, Mr Tippin came and complained of his having been robbed of a musical snuff-box by them.

Ishamut, peon of Seebtollah thana, confirmed the last witness's statement.

Boran, peon of Seebtollah thana, deposed to his having seen the prisoners following Mr. Tippin down the street, at the time this robbery is stated to have occurred.

Mary Anne Rawlins deposed, that in March last, she lived in Dhobyparrah lane. Deponent knows the prisoner Morgan; he came on the 10th of March last to deponeut's house, with a musical snuff-box for sale, and asked 20 supers for it, and at deponent's request he left it with her to have it valued, and about 10 minutes after this he returned and took the box away. At candlelight he, during deponent's absence, came with an European to her house, and when deponent, on her return, saw them enjoying themselves with a glass of beer, having brought two tupees of it, deponent asked them why they came there. They said to speak to deponent. Soon after this, they began to quarrel about 20 rupees, which the European taxed the African of having stolen from him, and the African called the European a liar. The European then gave the African a slap in the face, and the African then beat him severely with a chair. The European then went and brought a police constable and had the African taken into custody. The African when taken to the police office, left the musical box on her table, and when Mr. McMahon heard of this box, he desired deponent to bring it to the police, and consequently returned to her house, and gave it to the charge of constable Ware. That European is not the prisoner at the Bar. Deponent is a married woman, and keeps a public house. When is a married woman, and keeps a public house. When deponent first saw the musical snuff-box on that night, the prisoner Morgan was making it play and showing it to the European. Deponent cannot say who brought it on that occasion, but it was the same box which the prisoner Morgan had brought to her for sale at 5 o'clock P. M. of that day.

The deponent's durwan and khidmutgar confirmed his testimony.

John Weir, constable of the Colingah division, deposed, that he heard from a chookeydar of the riot in Aune Rawlins's house, and when he arrived there, he saw a buggy with two gentlemen in it, assisting a person named Sheriff, the boatswain of a ship, who said that Morgan had assaulted him and broken his head, and robbed him of seven rupees eight annas. Morgan said that Sheriff bad first struck him. Depoucht then took Morgan into custody, and as been very contemptuous, on quitting the Court thanked Mrs. Rawlins was accused before the megistrate of his lordship .- Hurkuru, April 20.

matter?' Deponent, because he was throttled, could give assisting in the assault, Mr. Mc Mahon then sent for Mrs. to reply. Mrs. Tippin then came down, and when the prisoners saw her coming with the servants to deponent's assistance, they left him and ran away. Alexander was in custody, for having stolen a musical souff-box there; and as another caffree named deponent then got up and followed them and called souff-box, deponent informed the magistrate of this out to the chokeydars to stop the thieves. He purches the think of the purchase of the circumstances, and he desired him to bring the box sued them as far as the thans, and there he abused which he did from Mrs. Rawlins. Deponent did, on Here this deponent produced the box, which Mr. squeezed, could not recognize the persons who had robbed Tippin recognized to be his property, and knew it behin again if he were to see them.

Tippin recognized to be his property, and knew it because it has "Boston State House" written on, and is slit slightly inside, and deponent has the key with him which fits it. He fitted it and treated the Court with a tune.

> Lloyed in his defence said, that on the night on which the case is stated to have occurred, he was in bed at 10 o' clock, and never quitted it till next morning, and he left them to judge whether he is a thin dark man six feet high and of a dark complexion, as the prosecutor has stated the man who robbed him was.

Morgan, in his descuce, admitted that he had been rambling in the quarter where the robbery was stated to have been occurred, but he never saw the prosecutor that night, and he is a perfect stranger to him. rest of his defence related to his transaction at Mrs. Rawlins' house, in which he attempted to show, that the conduct of Mrs. Rawlins was malicious against him.

Lloyd called two female witnesses, one of whom was his mistress's mother, who swore that on the night in which the robbery is stated to have occurred, Lloyd came home at gunfire, and went to bed at 10 o'clock r. m, and he did not go out again that night, as one of them, who is his mistress, slept in the same room with him, and bolted the door from inside. It appears that these women, when this prisoner was tried for robbing one Baker, were brought forward and deposed to an alibi in that case likewise.

Here the learned judge summed up the case, and detailed the particulars of it, commenting on and ex-plained the evidence both for and against the prosecution. The jury could not agree and were locked up all night.

APRIL 19, 1838.

In the case Queen tersus George Lloyd and George Morgan, for robbing W. Tippin, of a musical snuff box, the verdict was this morning given at the opening of the Court, of guilty against both the pusoners.

Just before the adjournment of the Court, at about five o'clock P. M., the judges ordered Lloyd and Morgan, to be brought up to receive their sentence. The judge, in commenting on their case, said, that this was not the first time they had appeared at this bar, and he blamed Lloyd in particular, for having suborned false witnesses to prove an althi. He added that he was fully convinced that they had committed this crime. In conclusion, he said, that he could sentence them capitally or even to transportation for life, if he chose to do so, for this offence; but he would deal milder with them. He then sentenced George Lloyd to seven years' transportation to Van Diemen's Land, and George Morgan to seven years' transportation to the S. E. coast of Martaban.

The prisoner Morgad, whose demeanour had all along

Artel 18, 1838;

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and a Petit Jury.)

Henry Lemeste was tried for robbing from the person of Edward Wilham Bowbear, one silver watch and two silver watch keys, on the 22d Maich, in Jann Bazar road.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Edward William Bowbear stated, that he is an assistant in the Sudder Board of Revenue. Deponent lived at Warman's shop. On the night of the 22d March, deponent left the shop at half past 10 o'clock, in company with Jones, to go home, and the night was a dark one. When deponent arrived at the Jaun Bazar a dark one. road he met the prisoner, who was a perfect stranger to him. After Captain and Mr. Jones had passed prisoner, Mr. Jones went to a neighbouring grain dealer's shop to light a segar, and deponent stood at the cross road waiting his return. Whilst thus standing, the prisoner came behind him, seized the 11bbon of his watch, and jerked it out of his fob. Deponent then pursued prisoner who ran down the Jaun Bazar road, eastward, calling out stop thief. After deponent had pursued him about a quarter of a mile, a chokeydar came up and arrested the prisoner with the watch in his possession, and took the prisoner to the thana, from whence he was sent off to the police office. During the pursuit deponent never lost sight of the prisoner. Jones came up after this prisoner was in custody. The watch is a silver McCabe's watch, and had two keys attached to it. Prisoner when arrested, said the deponent had put the watch into his hands and had desired him to take him to the Cooly Bazar.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. The deponent had been drinking; every one who is gentleman drinks a little. Deponent was there about three hours casting and drinking, but they were not flushed, and proceeded home from Warman's directly. Jones know the prisoner when he was a boy—he is not a boy now. It was about 11 o'clock P. M. when this occurred.

Alfred Robert Jones, deposed, that he is a section writer in the Sudder Board of Revenue. Deponent knows Bowbear, the last witness, and went to dine with him on the 22d March, at Mr. Warman's. The rest of the witness's evidence was a direct confirmation of the testimony of Mr. Bowbear. In the latter part, as to the conversation between the prisoner and the chokeydar, the prisoner declared, that because he would not go with these two witnesses to the Cooly Bazar, they beat him and he ran away, and he said that the watch was his property.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. Deponent told Bowbear, that the prisoner is living in Dobeyparra Lane, where deponent resides. Deponent has been living in the same neighbourhood for II years, but was not on visiting terms with him. Deponent has heard that he prisoner is the sond of a steward of a Governor-General. Does not know whether his father died worth property. Deponent quitted his school rather precipitately for good reasons; there were some suspicions against him, Deponent had gone that day to the Botanical Gardens, taking the requisites of nature with him, but there not being sufficient, he went consequently to Warman's, and took an additional supply, and then, after a walk, they returned and took a cool bottle of champaign and another of claret; yet they were neither of them finshed. Deponent previous to being employed at the Sudder Revelue Board, was at Carr and Tapore's and was discharged for absenting himself; he is not aware of any ther motive. He was likewise employed by Mr. Frederick, and was discharged for having appropriated some of the articles in the shop, which were entrusted to his charge, to his own use. It is a very natural thing for a person out of employ to take from another.

Buxoo, chokeydar of Toltullah thana, deposed to his having seen the prosecutor pursuing the prisoner, and calling out to stop the prisoner who had stolen his watch, and that he had arrested the prisoner.

Cross-examined. The prosecutor and his companions were not intoxicated, but their months smelt of liquor, as gentleman's mouths usually do at nights.

Owing to some neglect on the part of the police authorities, the naib, who had taken the prisoner and the watch to the police office, was not in attendance.

Mr. McCann produced the watch, and deponent identified it to be his by the No. (1837.)

Prisoner said that he was acquainted with Jones, and on the night this robbery is stated to have occurred he met Jones and Bowbear. The former a-ked him totreat him to a glass of grog, and when he refused, because the shops were shut, he beat him and wanted him to get the shop opened, as Muddo Soodun Ghose and Guffor Khan, who passed them at the time, can testify. The rest of his defence was that he was a person above want and this was a conspiracy, and he impugned the character of Jones.

Muddo Soodun and Guffor both corrobotated the prisoner's statement regarding what passed between him and the prisoner, and said that all the parties were partially intoxicated at the time they saw them together, on the night of the 22d March last, in Jaun Bayar road, Doorga Sing, nath of the Toltullah thana, was then called, but his evidence elicited nothing beyond what had already been deposed.

John Brown Ward, a clerk in the commercial accountant's office, deposed, that he had known the prisoner for a long time, and gave him a good character for honesty. So did Mr. John Lucas and J. Minos; and they said that pusoner's family had money and honour, and were in affluent circumstances.

This closed the case for the defence.

The learned judge then summed up the case, detailing the evidence and commenting on it, and explaining the law on the case.

The jury, after a short retirement, brought in a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was ordered to bedischarged.

THURSDAY, 19TH APRIL 1838.

Dabee Sing and Dookul Sing, were tried for having, on the night of the 16th April, robbed Golah Sing, a durwan in the employ of Baboo Rustomjee, of a trunk contaiging several articles of wearing apparel, 200 rupees in cash, and other articles.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty:

The articles were produced in Court by Mr. McCann, and the prosecutor recognized them to be a portion of the property stolen from his room.

The case for the prosecution is as follows.

another of claret; yet they were neither of them finshed.

Department previous to being employed at the Sudder wans in the employ of Baboo Rustomjee, at his garden Revenue Board, was at Carr and Tagore's and was house, and lived in one room. The prosecutor had been in the habit of absenting himself repeatedly from his convicted and punished; and that, because they had duty. On the night on which this theft is stated to have occurred, the prosecutor's trunk was stolen from his room, and the prisoner, on his return early next morning, discovered his loss, and found the trunk in the Babon garden, rifled of its contents. He taxed the two prisoners with the theft, and desired them, if they had, as a matter of joke, removed his goods, to restore them to lim. They denied that they were guilty of the crime laid to their charge. The prosecutor then informed his master of this theft, who likewise questioned the prisoners, and before him they persisted in their denial of the crime. The Baboo then desired one of his sircars to bring a person who could perform the ordeal of making the suspected persons eat parched rice, the next day. When the prisoners heard of this, they came at mininght and confessed to the procedure that they had robbed him, and entreated him not to expose them publicly by making them undergo the threatened ordeal, and to forgive them, and they would restore him his property. The proceeding replied, that if they would restore him all his property he would overlook their offence. They then restored him all with the exception of 40 rupees, which they both denied that they had stolen This denial enraged the prosecutor, and he, next day, informed Baboo Rustomice of wh thad occurred, who sent for a chokeydar and torwarded in his cu-tody the two prisoners, the trunk and the stolen property recovered to the police magistrate, who committed the two prisoners, and sent the case up for trial during the present

The prisoners, in their defence, said, that the prosecutor had been leagued with a gang of comers, and had repeatedly passed counterfeit com in the Bazar. They advised him to desist from such a nefarious practice, and, as he would not attend to their remonstrances, they went and complained against him to Mr. McCann, at the police office, and had seven of his colleagues in this mal practice arrested. The prosecutor was then absent from the house of his employer, and could not be pointed out to the police functionaries, who apprehended his abbottors. They were the witnesses in that case, and five of the men who were arrested on that occasion were convicted and sentenced to the house of correction; and April 21. although Ram Deen, the police naib, who had arrested these seven persons, had subsequently repeatedly seen Golab Sing; he never a rested him for the offence of which they had accused him. The pusoners, on that occasion received a reward from the police office, for having had these five persons convicted, and the prosecutor demanded a share of this booty, which they refused to give him; he consequently vowed vengeance against them, and shortly after had them confined on the present indictment. They admitted that they had concealed the trunk and its contents to punish and expose the prosecutor, and to show that if he could not guard his own property, much less was he fitted to guard the property of his employer: and after they had extorted a promise from him that he would not, in future, neglect his duty, they delivered up his trunk and its contents to him, which they had concealed in Bahoo Rustomjee's molly's hut. In conclusion, they observed, that if they were inclined to rob, they, instead of robbing the complamant of his paltry effects, would have robbed their master of a considerable sum and absconded to their native country, where they would have lived all their lives comfortably on their booty. They said that this was a malicious conspiracy against them, hatched by the prosecutor, for having preferred the charge above stated at the police office against him, and not given him a portion of the sum given them for bringing the smuggling transaction to the knowledge of the police office.

They called Mr. McCann and Ramdeen, who corroborated their assertions as to the passing of the counterfeit coin by the prosecutor, and they having brought this to the notice of the police magistrate, and got ave men in Mrs. Ogilvy's employ, left the child under the sare refused to give the prosecutor any portion of the money given them by the police office, the prosecutor had threatened them a month previous to his instituting this complaint against them. Mr. McCann gave Dobee Sing a very good character for honesty, and said that he had formerly been a naib of a police thana, and given perfect satisfaction to his employers; and Mr. George Aviet gave dookul Sing a like good character for honesty and activity, whilst he was in his service; and a police peon proved that the prosecutor had passed some counterfest coin on him.

This concluded their defence, and the judge then summed up the case, detailing the evidence and commenting on it. The jury covicted both the prisoners of crime for which they were tried, but, in consideration of their having formerly borne very good characters, and this being their first offence of this kind, they recommended them to the merciful consideration of the Court.

The learned judge took the recommendation into consideration, and, after the verdict had been recorded, he, under all the circumstances of the case, sentenced both the prisoners to six months' confinement in the house of correction, with hard labor .- Hurkaru, April 20.

ADJOURNED INQUIRY OF LUNACY,

APRIL 19, 1838.

(Before Messrs. Marnell and Leith, Barristers.)

IN THE MATTER OF JOYKISSEN, A LUNATIC.

The jury in this case gave in their verdict at about 9 o'clock, P. M., after having demanded and received their fees for their attendance. The verdict was, that the said Joykissen was of unsound mind, and had been so for these 12 years, and was therefore incapable of managing his own affairs, and that his lunacy had been caused by violent anger at the conduct of his brother, Radakissen, who had forcibly prevented him from accompanying his mother on a pilgrimage to Bindabun .- Hurkaru,

APRIL 20.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, and a Petit Jury.)

The judge on the opening of the Court, directed Mr. King, to have the eight prisoners against whom no true bills had been found, if there was no other charge against them, brought up and discharged. Mr King replied, that there were no other charges against them, and that they were at the jail. The Chief Justice then ordered him to bring them up to-morrow to have them released.

Hurres, was indicted for inflicting, on the 27th of March, 1838, a severe wound on the throat of John Pereira, from the effects of which wound he died instantly, in Old Bow Bazar lane.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Lydia Francisca deposed, that she was in Mrs. Ogilvy's service as an ayah, in the mouth of March last. Deponent is acquainted with the prisoner and has been his mistress these last eighteen mouths. Previous to her entering Mrs. Ogilvy's service, they lived together in a hired but in Old Bow Bazar lane, the property of Mrs. Rosina. Deponent had a child named John Pereira, aged seven years. His father was a Christian and had been dead some time. The general conduct of the prisoner to the child was kind. Deponent was supported by the prisoner. Deponent went to service because she and the prisoner had contracted heavy debts, and the prisoner was out of service. Deponent during the time she was ing of the night in which the child was murdered, she stand and his fellow chokydar accompanied Mr. Ogilgot him employed in Mrs. Ogilvy's service, where he worked the whole of that day. At 3 o'clock P. M., of that day, after Mrs. Ogilvie had taken her tiffin, the prisoner requested her to discharge the deponent from her service, and Mrs. Ogilvie replied that it would be better for both to continue in her service, and by earning something, pay off their debts. At 70'clock P. M., after Mrs. Ogilvie had dined, the prisoner came to deponent and desired her to accompany him to their house. Deponent said that if he was anxious for her to quit her employment, she would do so at the end of the month, which would expire in a few days, and then she would provide a substitute and go with him. When Mr. and Mrs. Ogdvie heard of this, they sent the sweeper to search for him; and, not finding him, they desired the gate-keeper to shut the door, and sent for the cook and a-ked him what he required. The cook said he wished to take away the nurse, and asked them to discharge her, and he would get them another; to which they replied that as their child was sick and had just been weaned, it would inconvenience them greatly, so that they had better stop at least the few remaining days of the month. After this the prisoner finished his work and wanted to remain all that night in Mr. Ogilvie's house, but Mr. Ogilvie would not permit him, and made him quit the premises. This he did not do until Mr. Ogilvie was obliged to send for a chokeydar and threaten to send him in custody to the thana, if he would not go. After the prisoner had quitted the house, he hold a conversation with the khansama, and requested him to desire the deponent to give up his traps to him, and when the khansama delivered this message, the cook asked him to give up his umbrella to him. After the prisoner had received the umbrella from the khan-ama, the prisoner informed the khansama that as the nurse did not come it mattered not; for there were two lives of her's, one safe from his reach, but the other at his but with him-that of her son John Pereira, which was in his power, and which he would finish. When deponent heard this she called out to the chokydar and desired him to take care and detain the prisoner in custody until she could send for, and receive her child. The prisoner when he heard this, ran away, and the chokydar pursued him. Deponent then went and informed her mattess of what had then just occurred. Mrs. Ogilvie then asked deponent whether any of her servants knew her house, and she replied the khausaina did. By this time the chokydar returned from the pursuit and Mrs. Ogilvie desired the chokydar and the khansama to go after the presoner and bring deponent's child to her. She did so and they retuined at three o'clock A. M., and informed her of the death of her child. The day previous to this occurrence the deponent had seen the child at her house in perfect heal h. Her mistress would not permit her to go to the corpse that night, but she went next morning and saw it.

Nugeem Addee, peon of the Colungah thana deposed, that on the night of the 27th March last, he heard Mr. Ogilvie's gate-keeper call for a chokydar, and when he met him he said that his master wished to speak to him ; and, on his arrival, Mrs. Ogilvie informed him that the prisoner wanted to take the nurse away with him, and if she was willing to accompany him she would let her go; but if the prisoner used any violence or became riotous, to take him into cristody. The cook then said that he would willingly go away peaceably; and when he quitted the premises he required the nurse to give up his articles, and she sent him his umbrelle. When the prisoner received it he asked for his trunk, and the khansama who had conveyed his message replied, that the nurse had brought no trunk with her to give up. The prisoner then said, "very well, there are two lives, of the prisoner and she used to visit him once a week, fellow chokydar to arrest the prisoner; but as the night The prisoner was a cook by profession; and, on the moin- was dark he escaped. The deponent then went to his vie's khansama to bring the child to Mrs. Ogilvie's house.

> Koodrutollah, Mr. Ogilvie's khansama, confirmed the testimony of the two last witnesses, as far as they had occurred under his observation; and, added, that when he arrived at prisoner's house, he asked the landlady for the child, and when she heard the message she lighted a lamp and went into the prisoner's hut, and when she entered it she exclaimed, "Ah! ah! what has been done. what has been done! A murder has been committed!— > the child is killed!" And when Hurree, who was > sitting in the compound with others heard title exclamation, he ran out and the chokydar pursued and arrested him, aided by this deponent and a chokydar of that beat. Prisoner struggled hard with them, but when he was exhausted he sat down and said, " I did this for the sake of revenge, and must die for it; it is useless my attemptthana arrived and secured the prisoner; afterwards the deponent went into the prisoner's hut and saw the child lying dead on the floor with its throat cut and blood flow.

ing from it. Deponent had never seen the child before.

The prisoner said that this deponent was the nurse's paramour, and it was on his account that she refused to accompany him home. He would swear to anything against him.

Budderoddeen chokydar confirmed the testimony of the prosecutrix. Koodrut-ollah added, inzt when they arrived at the prosecutiix's but they demanded of Bebee Rosina the child, at 9 o'clock P. M. The landiady, after she had learnt the purport of their visit, lighted a chering and went into the hut where the cheld slept that night, and on her entering the but, she exclamed " Ah ! sh ! what has happened? What is the, come and see 'the child is murdered." Hurry was at that time sitting in the compound of the huts, which is bounded on the one side, by other huts, on another by a cla cena, and the third by the back of the hute, and on the fourth is the entrance to them. He ran off pursued by the chokydar, who caught him and had a severe battle with him to secure him. The chokeydar then called out to Knodiutollah for assistance, and he and a chokydar of that beat then seized and secured prisoner. The prisoner then sat down exhausted, and confessed that he had, from motives of revenge towards the prosecutive, killed the child, and he would suffer for it. Soon after this, the thanadae of Bow Bazar thana came, and the pusoner repeated the expressions before him. The thanadar then secured the prisoner, and saw the deceased's corpse lying on the cot with its throat cut from ear to ear and covered with blood, and found a knife which the prosecutrix subsequently recognized to be her property, lying on a table in the hut covered with blood. The prisoner was then taken into custody to the thana, where he again repeated his confession of having murdered the child. There were neither threats nor promises held out to him to induce him to make these confessions.

The thanadar of the Bow Bazar thana and Beebee Rosiua confirmed these statements of these last witnesses, and the latter added, that when she saw the corpse she was so frightened that she lost her wits. She had been out the whole of that day and did not return till past 9 B'clock r. m.

Beebee Nanachee, the daughter of the landlady, deposed, that she last saw the deceased on the night on which he was murdered playing near her at 7 o'clock p.'m. At about 8 o'clock r. m., he expressed a wish to p. M. Alabout of clock r. M., ne expressed a wish to retire to sleep. At about half an hour after the child had thus retired, the prisoner came and lighted a cherog and went into the but where the child had slept, and one here, and one at home in my charge, I will see, about half an hour after that, she heard a noise at her When the nurse heard this she desired deponent and his door, and when she opened the door of her hut, she saw the prisoner in custody, who confessed the murder in her prisoner's request. The prisoner then asked Mr. Ogilvie presence, and she saw the corpse.

Mr. R. II. Bain, police Surgeon, deposed, that he examined, on Wednesday the 28th March last, the corpse of the deceased, which was pointed out to him by Bebee Rosina in a hut in Bow Bizar lane. Its throat was cut from the ear to the jaw-bone, and all the jugular arteries separated. The deceased died from hemorrhage caused from the effects of the wound. An instrument lake the kniie produced might have inflicted such a wound.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner in his defence said, that during the time the avah was in Mrs. Oxilvie's service, he obtained a situation as a cook to proceed to the upper provinces with a gentleman, on a salary of twenty-right rupees a mouth. The gentleman resided at the Bengal Clubhouse. Shortly afterwards, he heard, that the ayah had returned to her house indisposed, and because she had no person to attend her during her sickness, he quitted his service, gave a substitute, and came to his residence with an intention of administering to her wants. When he arrived at his but he ascertained that the ayah had that morning hired a palkee and gone back to her mistress's service. A few days after this, the ayah again came to her home to see her child. The prisoner then blamed her for having returned, whilst sick, precipitately to her service. The ayah made some frivolous excuse, and the matter dropped there. Subsequently, the prisoner visited her occasionally at her mistress's residence, and Mrs. Ogilvie, who had observed that he came repeatedly to see the avah. asked who he was; and when she learnt he was the ayah's protecter, and a cook out of employ, she expressed a wish to engage his services from the 1st of April 1838, in consequence of the cook who was then in her service having applied to her for leave to return to his country. and see his mother, who, he said, was seriously indisposed.

The prisoner, when this proposition was made to him, consented to it, and on the day on which this muider is alleged to have been committed by him, he worked at Mr. Ogilvie's the whole day on tital. During that day the prisoner remarked to the ayah, that if both she and he were to remain in service at Mr. Ogilvie's house, who would look after their child? and proposed to her to give a substitute and resign her service, and return home and attend on the child, adding, that he would remain, and by the savings from his wages liquidate their debts. The ayah replied that she was willing to accede to his pro-posal, provided her mistress consented to discharge her; and requested the prisoner to re-consider the matter, and as they were both deeply in debt, whether it would not be more in lictous for them to temain in their situations until their debts were discharged; adding, that if the prisoner, at the expiration of the month, still persisted in his present request, she would then comply with it. The prisoner then, after Mrs. Ogilvie had fiaished her tiffin, at 3 o'clock r. M., waited on her and communicated what he has just stated in the Court, to her. Mrs. Ogilvie consequently called for the ayah and asked her if she wished to quit her service; who then retracted the promise she had previously made, and replied, that as she was in debt, she would rather stay in service and clear it. Shortly after this had occurred the prisoner overhead Mrs. Ogilvie's advice, the ayah to discard him, observing to her that as she was a Christian and had now obtained a decent service it would be disgraceful for her to remain the kept mistress of a Mug cook, who was a good-tor-nothing, idle vagabond. The prisoner, consequently, after Mr. Oglivie's return from office, waited on bim at 7 o'clock P. M., and repeated his request to discharge the ayah, and he would procure them a substitute in her Mr. Ogilvie then bit his finger and remained silent for a short time; but when he had ascertained that to assign a godown to him and the ayah where they could live in his house, and he would then bring his child and moveables, and live there altogether. This request entaged Mr. Ogilvie, who desired the prisoner to quit his house instantly, and never come there again; and added, that if his orders were not instantly complied with, he would send for a chokydar and consign the prisoner to his custody. A chokydar was accordingly sent for, and on his arrival Mr. Ogilvic told that functionary to turn the prisoner out, and if the ayah wished to accompany him she was welcome; but if she refused, and the prisoner became riotous, to take him into custody. Prisoner then quitted Mr. Ozilvie's premises, and sent word to the aval to return to him those articles of his, which she had in her care. The khansama, who took this message to her, returned with an umbrella. This khansama has an intrigue with the ayah, and this was the motive why presoner desired her to quit the service, and she refused. Prisoner then asked for his things, and the khan-ama said if he had anything it must be in his but not here, as neither the aval nor prisoner had brought any with them. The prisoner then quittell the place, and, in leaving it said to the ayah: " Very well. Lydia; you have obliged your new paramour, deserted me, and will not now accompany me home, as I requested you; but you will some day come to see your son. John Pereira, who lives at my house, and when you do so, I will detain you and not let you go bank to Mrs. Ogilvie's house." On his way to his house the prisoner ogives house. On his way to his house me prisoner met the chokydar and the khansama going thither likewise. They informed him that they were going to take the child to his mother. Prisoner replied, "very well, do so," and proceed in a circuitous route on some urgent business. They, it appears, arrived in his hut before him, and when he came there afterwards, they seized him, beat him, and taxed him with having murdered his child, a crime of which he is wholly innocent and unconscious, for he always had loved the child and treated it kindly as if it were his own, and regretted its untimely death. Soon after this, the thanadar came and took him aside into the hut and said to him that if he could fee him well he would hush up all further enquiry and get him released. Prisoner replied, that as he had not done anything wrong he had nothing to dread, therefore he did not know why he should give any money to the police people; if they had any offence to tax him with, let them take him to the police office at once, and have the matter investigated by a magistrate. The thanadar on this refusal desired the chokydars to bind the prisoner, and beat him severely, which they did, as they were taking him to the thana. In conclusion, he added, that all the witnesses for the prosecution were either his enamies, or and been hired by the ayah and her paramour to swear tway his life, and the affair was a malicious conspiracy concocted between the ayah and the khamaina to remove him as an object who was an hinderance to their intrigue, and, consequently, obnoxious to them.

The prisoner then called five Mag cooks who resided in the huts adjoining his. These men deposed, that on hearing an uproar they got up and saw the chokydars binding up the prisoner, and, on enquiry, learnt, that he had murdered his child, whose corpse they subsequently saw; but whether the prisoner or any other person had killed him they did not know. They added, that when the prisoner struggled hard to escape from the grasp of the chokydars, they gave him a few blows to quiet him.

This closed the case for the defence.

the kept mistress of a Mug cook, who was a good-fornothing, idle vagabond. The prisoner, consequently, after Mr. Ogilvie's return from office, swaited on him at 7 o'clock r. m., and repeated his request to discharge the ayah, and he would procure them a substitute in her lieu. Mr. Ogilvie then bit his finger and remained islent for a short time; but when he had ascertained that the ayah had no desire to quit his service, he refused the their verdict.

The jury, after a short retirement, found the prisoner guilty of the crime laid to his charge.

After this verdict had been recorded, the judge thus addressed the prisoner. " Horree, after a patient enquiry and consideration of your case, you have been found guilty of the crime of murder. No rational person who has heard the evidence this day, can have any doubt of your guilt. You have committed a most cruel and barbarous murder on an innocent child, and whom, it appears, you had formerly treated with kindness, and whose life you could not have destroyed from any malicious feeling to the child, but of revenge towards his mother, as your words on leaving Mr. Ogilvie's house, on that night, plainly indicate. You did it to wound the feelings of the mother. You inflicted death on a helpless child of six or seven years of age, whom any other person would have pitied. Such crimes must be punished with the utmost penalty of the law, to check their recurrence, and it only remains for me to pass the sentence of death upon you. The judge then, in the usual manner, sentenced the prisoner to be hanged at 6 o'clock A. M. on Monday (this) morning.

After this the Court adjourned till 11 o'clock A. N. to-morrow morning.

All the gentlemen who were summoned on the peti: jury during this sessions, were in attendance from the opening of the Court at 11 o'clock a. m. till it broke up at So'clock r. M.

ROBBERY AT THE HOUSE OF MR. AMOS.

The chief magistrate attended at the Supreme Court as it was about to adjourn on the 20th instant, to request the chief justice to permit him to send up for trial during the present sessions, the sirder-bearer in the employ of Mr. Amos, one of the Law Commissioners, and the fourth ordinary member of council. The bearer, it appears, had confessed that he had broken open Mr. Amos's hox, and taken out of it a considerable sum of money which he had buried in the compound of Mr. Amos's house; and, on his subsequently pointing out the spot where he had concealed it to Mr. Amos the place was dug and the money discovered in it. The application was granted by the judge .- Hurkaru, April 21.

APRIL 21, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and a Petit Jury.)

Punchanuad Ghose was tried for burglariously entering the house of Ramsoonder Mullick on the 31st March 1838, and stealing from thence a brass culsee, the property of the prosecutor.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Ram Govind deposed, that he is the prosecutor's son, on the night in which this lobbery was committed, he had, after having locked the doors of his place of wor ship, taken the keys and retired to sleep. He was disturbed late at night by a noise over the roof of the room in which he sight. He swoke the durwan and went upstairs to the place of we ship, and perceived the padlock lying there broken, and the doors of the place broken open; and when they entered the room, they perceived a person rush out of it, seize the top of a palmtree which grew contigious to the place, and drop down by it, and ran off. Depon at then called out to the chokydars to seize the prisoner, and one of them succeeded in arresting him. Prosecutor, when they saw the pusoner in custody, observed that he was smeared with mud, and had his head bruised, occasioned by his chingang to the palm tree, and passing through a drain behind | matter.

persons, adding, that the life of the prisoner depended on the prosecutor's house. He said that he lived close by, and had come to grind corn. The next morning they found a brass water jar lying in the drain, together with a long rope at the spot where the prisoner had jumped down, and they perceived a bamboo-ladder fixed from the roof of Petumber Mookerjea's house, which adjoins his house, to the roof of the second story of his house, on the top of which is his place of worship. As the night on which this robbery occurred was dark, this deponent did not see the leatures of the man who jumped from his house to the palm-tree.

> Bendoo Sing confirmed the testimony of the last witness, and the thana chokydar and the naib of the thana deposed to their having arrested the prisoner, and his having confessed to them the robbery, and begged of them not to maltiest him. The latter produced the jar, and the first deponent recognized it to be his property.

> The prisoner said, that whilst he was proceeding home from his master service, he was seized by the chokydars, axed with this crime, heaten and taken to the thana in custody. Prisoner called Kası Hozia, who said that the orisoner had been a long time in his service, and had borne a very good character. So did four other witnesses.

> The judge summed up the proceedings, detailed the svidence, commented on it, and then left it to the deciion of the jury.

> The jury without retiring, found, the prisoner guilty. The learned judge then sentenced the pusioner to seven years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Maitaban.

Gopeeya was tried for having, on the 17th of April last, stolen from the house of Andrew Amos, Esq., his naster, Co.'s Re-, 60-8 annas and 150 Madras supees, and 13 annas and two silk handkerchiefs.

The pusoner pleaded guilty.

Andrew Amos, Esq., then addressed the judge in mitigation of the prisoner's punishment, by saying that he was sorry to say, that there was in this case a large sum of money on the table placed before the prisoner, which night have been a temptation in his way, and which he will never place before any servant again.

Mr. Amos then deposed, that the prisoner was a bearer a his service, and had been employed in pulling the punka in his room. Deponent on the 17th instant, ini-sed about Co.'s Rs 60 and 150 Madras supers. Deponent iad separated the Madras and Co.'s R+ separately, and out the Madras rupees in a "kerchief, fied it and locked it in a box, and put it into another room in the prisoner's preence. About two or three days after the prisoner confessed the crime and pointed out the place where the money was concealed, which was recovered. Deponent has not counted the money recovered, but he believes that all of it has been recovered, at least from its appearing to be the same amount.

The learned judge then addressed the prisoner, and after he had been cautioned and persisted in his plea of guilty,' sentenced him to two years' imprisonment in the house of correction.

The chief justice informed the grand jury, that in the case of a commission of lunacy regarding which the grand jury had presented a petition to him signed by the foreman of the special jury summoned on that occasion, he had directed the papers to be handed over to the chief magistrate of the police office, who, after he made the requisite inquiry, had informed the judge that he had not on an investigation of these papers, been able to find grounds to prefer any indictment against any parncular person; but if the grand jury were not satisfied with the result of this investigation, they could have the papers submitted to them for perusal, and make any presentment on it that they may consider requisite in this

All the persons who are empannelled during the go with the deponent and point out the stolen property present sessions were desired to remain in attendance to him. APRIL 21, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan.)

Cheedam, Ramshaw and Ruggonath were tried, the former for having robbed Sheeboo Raur, his mistress, or several articles of value, and the two latter with having received the same, knowing them to be stolen property.

Cheedam pleaded guilty. The other two not guilty. Sheehoo Raur deposed, that she resides in Guranhuta. Cheedam was her domestic servant. On the 3d of April instant, she went to see the Ram Nubboomy Poojah, leaving Cheedam in charge of the house. When she returned she discovered that Cheedam had absconded during her absence, and her trunks and boxes had all been broken open and rifled of their contents. The prosecutrix here detailed the articles which she had lost. On the evening of the 4th instant, she saw her property at the Jooiah-bagan thana. Cheedam never returned to her service again.

Bessumber Seth deposed, that he is a writer in the military auditor general's office, and visits the prosecutrix at her house occasionally. On the evening of the 3d instant, he went there as usual, and learnt that her house had been robbed by Cheedam, during her absence, who had absconded; and he then despatched her servant Sadoo to search for him. Sadoo returned the next evening, and communicated to deponent something which induced him to accompany him to a house in Puthurghutta, where he saw Ramshaw and others. Sadoo informed deponent that the stolen property was concraled in that house. When the inniates of the house saw deponent, they fled. Deponent then went to the thana and returned with the jemadar. On his return, he found that Nubboo Kisto Uddee, Banian, had driven Sadoo away from the house, and locked it. At the thanadar's request he opened it, and when thay had entered it, Sadoo desired Rumshaw to point out the place where the property was concealed. Hearing this, Ramshaw began to cry. The thanadar said to him, don't weep, point out the property, and you shall be released. Ramshaw then pointed to a trunk in the room, and said that the property was buried under it; but that he had not stolen it, nor was he aware of its being there until Cheedam had informed him of it. The thanadar then caused the trunk to be removed, and after they had dug a considerable depth under it, they discovered a large earthen pot in which were some clothes. Deponent then said, where is the box of jewels, and Ramshaw replied, "be-side the earthen pot." It was found there. The thanadar then observed, that it would be advisable to send a person to the prosecutrix, and desire her to come and recognize her property. Deponent consequently ordered Sadoo to convey the message to her; and she came with him and identified her property, and inquired where her silver mounted hookah was. Kamshaw replied, he did not know, but perhaps Ruggonath might. The thana-dar then left some chokeydars to guard and search the house, and went in search of Cheedam and Reggonath, and deponent and the prosecutrix returned to their houses.

Sadoo deposed that he, by the order of the last witness, went in search of Cheedam, and found him at his house, in the village of Khoordah, six coss from Calcutta. He questioned him regarding this robbery, and prevaited on him to confess where he had concealed the property, and to return with him to Calcutta and point it that to him. Cheedam, on his arrival at Calcutta, put up at his cousin's house, sent for Ramshaw and desired him to go with the deponent and point out the stolen property to him. Deponent then accompanied Ramshaw to his house, and requested him to watch there a short time, till he went and informed his master of what had occurred since he had left him; and they then both came to Ramshaw's house, where the property was found. The rest of this witness's evidence was corroborative of Bishumber Seth's testimony.

Foujoddeen, thanadar of Jorabagan thana, confirmed the testimony of the two last witnesses regarding him, and added, that neither Cheedam nor Ruggonath were present when the concealed property was found in Ramshaw's house. He arrested them about two hours after this, and Ruggonath, on being questioned, pointed out the allver mounted hookah, which was concealed in some jute leaves in the adjoining room.

Nubboo Kisto Uddee deposed, that he is the proprietor of the house in which the stolen property was discovered, and has rented it to the prisoner Ruggonath, who has five under tenants. Deponent is a collecting sircar in Rajah Nubkisson's cutcherry at Nimtollah, and lives contiguous to the house in which the search was made; shortly previous to which, in returning from his employer's cutcherry, he passed it as he usually does, and finding the house empty and the doors shut, he locked it. He witnessed the search, Cheedam was present at the time, and so was Ramshaw and Ruggonath.

In this stage of the proceedings, the thanadar produced the articles found, and the prosecutive recognized them to be her property.

Bishumber Seth recalled, deposed, that neither Cheedam nor Ruggonath were present when the search was made, and to come from the Rajah's cutcherry to Nubboo Kisto's house, there is no occasion to pass the house where the prisoners live.

Ramshaw in his defence said, that Cheedam had intimated to him where the property was concealed, and had desired him to go and point it out to Sadoo. How or whence it came there, he did not know.

Ruggonath said, that he is a poster that plies for hise, and is consequently out all day, some ill-designing person must, during his absence, have brought these articles to his hut, and concealed them there without his knowledge.

Cheedam said, that he had stolen the goods and had hired the two presoners to take them to his hut and conceal them there, but they did not know that the property was stolen.

The learned judge summed up the proceedings, detailed the evidence and commented on it, and then left the case in the hands of the jury.

The jury, after a short retirement, brought in the prisoners guilty but, recommended them to the mercy of the Court.

After this verdict had been recorded, the judge sentenced Cheedam to seven years' transportation to the S. E. coast of Martaban, and the other two prisoners to be confined in the house of correction for 12 months each.

The grand jury returned the following bills to-day.

True bill against Mazuroddeen, for stealing from a dwelling house.

True hill against Shumshoodeen, for forgery.

No true bill against Rajkissen Mitter, for forgery.

No true bill against Russick Dutt and others, for an assault and false imprisonment.

No true bill against Abdar Syrang and others, for an assault.

him. Cheedam, on his arrival at Calcutta, put up at The grand jury having finished all bills that were his cousin's house, sent for Ramshaw and desired him to be presented during the present sessions, informed the judge that they had perused the papers in the the desired him to leave it and tried to roise the 100° lunacy commission case. To them it appeared to be one of great suspicion; but as they could not make out a charge against any particular person from what they had perused, they had no presentment to make to the judge on it.

After this the grand jury was discharged.

Previous to the adjourning of the Court till Monday mext, the 23d instant, at 10 clock P. M., the judge ordered Agapetur Dela Raize, Mariana Francisco, Augustus de Amone, Rahameo Antuneo, Clementee, and John Larrence (the six Dutch subjects who had been tried and convicted of the crime of piracy during the third session of the year 1836, and had sentences of death recorded against them, the execution whereof was delayed pending the decision of the Queen in Council, on their case, which was referred to England for that purpose) to be this day brought up and informed them, that Her Majesty had been graciously pleased to confer her free pardon on them all, and they were discharged accordingly. At about 2 o'clock r. M., the judge empanuelled a second petit jury, and then discharged the one empannelled at 11 o'clock P. m. as well as the other gentlemen who were summoned to serve on the petit jury during the present session for to-day, and informed those that had served to-day, that they need not come on Monday unless they wished it .- Hurkaru, April 24.

Aruil, 23, 1838.

Mazuhuroddeen was tried for stealing, from the house of Sookut Ally, in Sheeboo Thakoar's lane, a silver watch, shawls, and wearing apparel, to the value of Co.'s Rs- 270.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor was called on his recognizances, and not answering they were estreated.

Paunchoo kidtmutgar, of Shoucut Ally, deposed, that his master is sick and not able to appear, and he knows the prisoner, who is a teacher. Emdad Ullee was in his master's service. His master was robbed on the 3d March. Looks at the goods and recognizes the property produced in Court, and identifies them to be his master's.

Calahchund, maker of lustres, deposed, that the prisoner lived near his neighbourhood. He saw the prisoner go to an empty house and put a bundle of clothes in a gumloh. Tarrachand suspecting him, went and took out the goods. Prisoner said they were his. Deponent then sent for a tailor to fit on the clothes, but they were too large for him. Deponent having heard of Shoucut Ally's house, took him there. Shoucut Ally said, the goods are his; but asked where were the shawls and the watch. Prisoner then said that Emdad Ally had left them with him to pledge, and produced the watch and shawls from a drawer.

The thannadar deposed to having arrested the prisoner, and to his pointing out the stolen articles to him, prisoner said that Eindad Ally, who had returned to his country, brought them to him to be pledged for 100 rupees.

The naib and two chokeydars confirmed the last with ness's testimony.

This ended the case for the prosecutors.

The prisoner in his defence said, that Meer Emdad Ally brought the shawl and watch to him and said that Meer Shoucut Ally desired him to get these articles portgaged to him and get him 100 rupees on their ledge. Prisoner at first refused, but on his representing supees on its pawn; but he could not prevail on any person to give him more than 50 rupees upon it, and when Emdad Ally come again to inquire of him, he informed him of it and told him, unless he could bring more articles, he could not raise the 100 rupees; and, he desired Emdad Ally, if he would not get 50 rupees on the articles now sent he had better take them away. He desired prisoner to keep them and take charge of a bundle of clothes till his return from the neighbourhood, and as he did not come soon, he tied up the articles in a bundle, and he intended to proceed, to Shoucut Ally's house, when the heard the call to evening prayers. He went to pray, and on his return he saw the bundle had been opened and the shawl taken away. He saw Calachand by the bundle, and taxed him with having con-Cealed it, and said to him, "brother, if you have taken-the shawl return it." Calachand demed that he had taken it; but when the prisoner said that unless he would produce it, he would complain against him to the thanna, he then said if he would make him a slight present he would restore them. Prisoner said he would, and Kalachand despatched a person to the thanna and had prisoner arrested on this charge, which is a conspiracy.

Prisoner then called two witnesses, who deposed to-Emdad Ally's having brought the articles in their presence to pledge, and gave him a general good character, and that Emdad Ally had gone to his native country.

The learned judge then summed up, detailed the evidence, and after commenting upon it, left the case in the hands of the jury.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

Meah Jaun was tried for stealing, from the person of Beebee Dil Jaun, two gold neck-chains, valued at 200rupecs.

The prisoner pleaded not guitty.

Dil Jaun deposed, that she resides in Emanliang lane, and lived there in March last. On the night of the 12th of that night, deponent sent her servant Ramzan to purchase some milk for her. Some delay having occurred in his return, prosecutrix stood at her gate waiting Ramzan's return; and, whilst thus standing she perceived four persons coming from the eastward by the light of the moon, and the prisoner who was one of them, when he came up to the prosecutrix, seized the two gold chains on her neck, and giving them a violent jerk, they broke. He then ran off with them to the westward, and prosecutiix, called out to a chokeydar to stop the thief, and one of them came to her assistance, and persued the thief, so did the prosecutrix and her servant. The chokeydar seized the thief a little beyond the Emaubarrah, near Mangbe lane, and the pusoner threw him down. The chokeydar then called to his fellow chokeydars for help, and one of them came to his assistance and secured the prisoner, and, on searching his person, one of the chams, valued at Rs- 150 was found, but not the other. Prisoner denied all knowledge of them. The prisoner was then taken to the town-guard, and the article which was found, consigned by the order of Captain Birch to the thanadar's care. The prisoner is a perfect stranger to prosecutrix. Cross questioned, Peeroo, the naib of Shibtollah thanna, is not the prosecutrix's paramour, nor did he ingligate her, from motives of jealousy to get tid of an obnoxious rival, to trump up this charge against Jaffer and Mobaruk, chokeydars of the Shibtoliah thuma, and Ramjaun, her servant, corroborated her statement fully. Mr. McCaun produced the chain and identified the property.

The prisoner put in a petition of defence, the purport of which was, that Peeroo, naih of Shibtollah thanna, had a quarrel with the prisoner, and threatened to be reveng-Withat Meer Shoocut Ally urgently required the money, ed on him; and as he was one night passing by Cossitollah street, they took him up, by the aid and counsell house to Mr. McCann's to show him the wound of the of the thannadar, Beebee Dil Jaun, the prosecutiva, who blow of the stick, he saw the wounded man lying near is Peeroo jemadar's mistress, and other myrmidons of the town guard. The night was a moonlight night, police. When the naib thannadar mentioned that he and deponent saw the faces of both the sailors, and as could not confine the prisoner on a charge of assault, prosecutrix took out a gold charn from her neck and charged prisoner with felony; they then took him to the police office, and there they took 10 rupees bribe from

The prisoner called nine witnesses, who deposed, some to one part and some to the other, with several discrepancies, to the following tale :

The prisoner and Poeroo jemadar had a quarrel. Peeroo threatened to be revenged on him. Dil Jaun was Peeroo's mistress. At 9 o'clock Dil Jaun accused him of having pulled her hand to one of her neighbours, and at 11 they saw him in custody. Some said that they saw the prosecutrix at the time, and she charged the prisoner with the theft; others that she was not there, and they on inquiry learnt from the passers by, that the prisoner was charged with an assault. The prisoner was beaten when taken to the thanna. All of the witnesses deposed, that they were strangers to the prisoner with the exception of one, and two of them said that they knew nothing about this affair.

The learned judge then summed up the case, detailed the evidence, and commented on it, pointing out its leading features, and thus left the case to the decision of the jury.

The jury retired for about a quarter of an hour, and then brought a verdict of guilty.

After this verdict had been recorded, the prisoner was sentenced to seven years' transportation to the S.E. coast of Martaban. The judge remarked, that he had aggravated his offence by the false defence he had set up. Hurkaru, April 25.

TUESDAY, APRIL 24, 1838.

Pierre Prospeirree Millineur, was tried for the mutder of Bolaky, syce, on the Chitpoor Road, on the 4th of March, by wounding him with a knife, from the effects of which he died on the 5th of the same month.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Mahomed Thumus deposed, that he is the durwan of Agah Mahomed, near the Teretta Bazar. On the night of the 4th March last, whilst deponent was sitting at his employer's gate, two European sailors came there, and one of them attempted to enter the house, but de-ponent shoved him back, and they desisted, and the man who was shoved put hunself in a fighting attitude, and in doing so, some cheeroots dropped from his hat. Shortly after this, in consequence of some intimation being given to the neighbouring thana, the thanadar came, accompanied by some chokeydars; and whilst deponent was putting up the cheeroots for the sailor, asked deponent if he had any complaint to prefer against the sailor. The sailor, who was a short person, seized Jumun, chokeydar's stick, and attempted to wrench it from his grasp. Jumun resisted, and whilst the sailor and Jumun were struggling for the stick, the sallor drew a clasp knife and attempted to wound Jumun with it. Seeing this, Jumun abandoned the stick and ran away. The sailor after he obtained possession of the stick ran up and down the Chitpoor road, striking the passers by, promiscuously, with it. He struck the deponent a blow with it, and attempted to wound the prisoner with the knife; but deponent ran into the house, and shut the and deponent saw the faces of both the sailors, and as he spoke to them he could recognize them again. The prisoner was the person who acted so very outrageously in the streets. The other sailor in off towards the town guard, but returned again soon after, and stood at Mr. Latour's gate, where he was apprehended, as deponent heard, but he was not present when he was taken up. Deponent saw the other sailor standing at Mr. Latour's gate after the prisoner had been arrested. When the prisoner and his companion came to deponent's master's gate, there were no chokeydars beating him. After deponent had closed the gate on the prisoner, he knocked two or three times at the gate and then went off. As the deponent was within the house at that time, he did not witness the subsequent transaction. Both the sailors were apparently intoxicated. Agah Mahomed only witnessed the latter part of this riot.

Agah Mahomed Bankur, deposed, that he is a merchant, and resides on the Chitpore road. The last witness was his servant. Deponent is a native of Peperoz. and trades with the Persian Gulph. Deponent recollects the 4th March Sunday. Deponent was disturbed by a noise in the street opposite his gate, and, on enquiry, learnt that two sailors were making a not in the street. He did not go out then. Shortly after this, there was another disturbance, and when deponent went to his gate to enquire into it, he then saw two European sailors, one standing in the street, and the other standing with his back at his gate with some bright instrument in his hand which shone in the moonlight. Deponent, as he had heard that these sailors had attempted to enter his house, desired his servant if they attempted to do so again to go to the thana, bring some chokeydars, and have them removed. When deponent left his office to see the riot, some of his friends came out with him. The one at his gate with the instrument in his hand, was a short man; but deponent would not be able to recognize him again. Deponent was at his gate four or five Emandee, naib of Loll bazar thana, deposed, that on the 4th of March last, a passer-by gave some intimation at the thana which induced him to go from the thana to the spot, opposite the house of Hukeem Punnahally, in the Chitpore road. When he arrived there, he saw two Eurepean sailors standing there. They pointed to some cheeroots which were lying in the street, and said something in a dialect which deponent did not under-stand, Agah Mahomed's dutwan picked them up, and tied them in a kerchief and gave them to one of these Europeans. The European, when he received them, flung them down, and deponent desired Jumun, chokeydar, to put them up and deliver them to him; and whilst Jumun was delivering them to the European, he seized his stick. The prisoner was the European. The prisoner, whilst struggling for the stick with Jumun pulled out a knife from his pocker, and when Jumun saw it, he let go the stick and ran away, and the prisoner went to the gate of Mr. Latour and spoke to some gentlemen who were standing there. There was a great crowd opposite the shop of a vial-seller, and the prisoner ran towards them. Ilukeem Punnah Ullee's house, Agah Mahomed, Mr. Latour's, and the vial merchants are near to each other and in the same street. When the prisoner ran towards them they all ran away; but the vial man, who is blind, cried out "he has wounded me, he has wounded me." The prisoner after this, came back again to Mr. Latour's gate, and from thence he ran off towards the Loll Bazar, and he desired some chokeydar to pursue the European, whilst he took door on him. Soon after this, deponent heard that the charge of the wounded vial-seller with an intention to sailor was taken into custody near the town guard, and, whilst deponent was proceeding from his employer's sent off the wounded man to the thans, be, on his way, guard near his thana, and when he inquired of him why he was lying there, he said a European sailor had wounded him. The wound was on his left side and his entrails had protruded through the wound. Deponent took both the wounded men to the town guard, where he met Mr. McCann, who directed some of the sepoys there to take them to the police hospital. The prisoner appeared to be somewhat intoxicated, but not so the other sailor, nor did the other quarrel with any one but walked away quietly.

Jumus, chokeydar, deposed, that he was one of the chokeydars who accompanied Emandee, naib, from the thana to the Chitpore road. This deponent confirmed the deposition of the last witness from the time he went to the place where the prisoner had wounded the blind man, to the time when he left the naib and pursued with other chokeydars the prisoner, who was running down the lane and flourishing his knife. When he came near the town guard he met the thanadar of the Loll-bazar thana. When the prisoner arrived at the town guard he attempted to wound Euseph Khan, the sentry at his post; but the sentry intimidated him with his bayonet. Deponent then got behind the prisoner and seized him by the leg and threw him down with a jerk. As the prisoner fell, the thanadar struck his hand with a stick and the knife fell from his grasp, and Buldoo Sing, burkundaze, took it up. Soon after this a constable came to the place and took the prisoner into custody. The prisoner was the man so arrested. It was a moonlight night, and deponent saw his features distinctly and can identity him. After the prisoner's apprehension, deponent returned to the thana and saw Buckawollah, syce, lying there wounded, and the blind vial-seller. Deponent was one of the persons who conveyed the two wounded men, by Mr. McCann's direction, to the police hospital, where they had their wounds dressed by an European Doctor.

Neamoddin, chokeydar, deposed, that on the night of the 4th March, at 10 o'clock P. M. a person came to the thana saying that a Europeau was attacking the passers-by on the Chitpore road with a knife. Emamdee, jemadar, went to the spot indicated with some chokeydars, and deponent was one of them. When he arrived there he saw two European sailors and some men assembled there making a noise. This witness then confirmed the testimony of the two last witnesses as to what had occurred at that place, and added, that when the prisoner made towards them they ran off to the door of the vial-man and leaped over a ditch opposite the shop, where the blind man was sleeping, who on hearing the noise came to the acqueduct, where the European sailor came up to him and wounded him with the knife in deponent's presence, who went and staunched his wound. Prisoner then went back to Mr. Latour's gate. Deponent followed him, and when he attempted to seize him, an European gentleman seized the prisoner and snatched his badge from his waist, and asked deponent why he was following the sailer. De-ponent replied, that the sailer had wounded a blind man near the acqueduct, and he was following him in consequence, and took the gentleman and showed him the wounded blind man; and whilst so doing Emandee, naib, joined them. Here the judge desired Mr. Guizenec to be alled, and the prisoner said he was the person who had seized his bedge. When Mr. Guizenec saw the wounded man he delivered up the badge to the naib, and deponent received it from him and followed the prisoner, exclaiming that a European sailor had wounded an old blind man, and when deponent arrived opposite the town guard, he saw the prisoner in custody and immediately afterwards Hubesbullah, naib, came and informed them that the prisoner had wounded a syce likewise; and Mr. McCann, who had come to the town guard on hearing of this disturbance, ordered the man from the thank to the town guard, where Mr. prisoner to be locked up there, which a constable did, McCann was to show them to him. When he arrived saw Burkawallah syce, lying wounded opposite the town, and the two wounded men were carried to the native hospital, near the Chandney Choke, and the deponent then went with some chokeydars and arrested the other sailor at the Fonzdarree Balakhanna without resistance.

> Constant Guizenec, deposed, that he is a Frenchman. and has resided five years in Calcutta, and can speak the Bengally language. On Sunday night, the 4th of, March, 1835, at the hour of 10 o'clock P. M. precisely deponent was coming out of Mr. Latour's house on the Chitpore road, and saw some natives surrounding a sailor and beating him with sticks. The sailor extri-cated himself from his assailants and joined deponent at Mr. Latour's gate, and as he spoke French, depo-uent asked him what was the matter? The man replied that he belonged to a French ship lying in this port, and having obtained leave to come on shore, he had been to the bazar and purchased some cheroots, 'keichiefs and three knives which he had by him, together with some money, when he was attacked by natives, who robbed him of all except his knives. Deponent then showed the men one of the knives and said, that if they assaulted him again he would be obliged to use it. Deponent suggested to him to deliver up the knives to him, and he would procure him a palkee to take him to his ship. Before the sailor could answer, he received a blow from a chokeydar across his arm with a stick which nearly felled him. The sailor then, without waiting to reply to deponent's suggestions, made a rush at the chokeydars with the knife in his hand. They all ran off towards the acqueduct, towards which the sarlor followed them; but when he reached the acqueduct he stumbled and fell. Deponent followed the chokeydar who had struck the sailor, and asked him why he did it, and seized his badge. The chokeydar denied that he was the man who had struck the prisoner. Soon after this the naily came up and informed deponent that the prisoner had wounded a blind man near the acqueduct. Deponent then gave up the chokeydar's badge to the naib, accompanied him to see the wounded man, and when he had seen him he returned home, Deponent did not see the sailor again till on his way home he heard that he had been arrested by the police authorities. The prisoner is the sailor alluded to. prisoner held the knife in his left hand, and was both intexticated and in a great rage. The beating which the prisoner got was very violent, particularly the blow which he received at deponent's door. Deponent beheves that the persons who had beaten the prisoner were choke dars; but he did not see their badges. The old man must have been wounded after the prisoner, had received the blow at Mr. Latout's door. Deponent believes the irritation of this last blow must have provoked the prisoner, and he must have wounded the wounded man whilst pursuing with the knife his assailant. Deponent had no conversation with any of the chokeydars beyond what he has just stated.

Huberb ollah, naib of the Loll Bazar thana, deposed, that the information of a riot was brought at 10 o'clock P. M. in his presence to the thana, and Emamooddeen, head naib, proceeded towards the spot, and half an hour after this, hearing the uproar increase, he proceeded to the spot with some chokeydars to enquire into the matter. On his way, he saw a sailor coming down the Chitpore road with a knife in his hand, making blows with it to the right and left, and the crowd running away before him. Deponent seeing this turned to the side of the street and avoided him. The sailor made a rush with the knife at deponent, but missed him and ran on. Deponent and his party fellowed him, and heard that the prisoner had wounded a man, This deponent related the prisoner was captured, and identified him to be the sailor he alluded to in the same manner as Jumun chokeydar did. Deponent then went by the order of the thanadar to bring the wounded at the thana, he saw Baukoollah lying there likewise deponent back by his clothes, and drew another knife wounded, and his bowels protruding, and brought and attempted to stab the deponent with it. Deponent both the wounded men to the town guard to Mr. McCann, and by his orders he took both the wounded Deponent then rebuked the sentry for not alarming the men to the native ho-pital near the Chandney Choke. Buckoollah died on the night of the 5th November. On Monday and on Tuesday at 2 o'clock r. M. deponent. by order of the police authorities, removed his corps, to the police hospital, when he pointed it out to Dr. Bain, the police surgeon, who examined it there.

Golam Hossan, thanadar of the Loll Bazar thana, deposed, that after he had sent off the two nails to quell some disturbance at the Chitpore road, finding the disturbance and uproar to increase, he likewise went to quell the riot with the remaining chokeydars at the thana who were not on duty; and on his way deponent saw a European running down the Chitpore road with a knife in his hand, rushing at every person in the street with intent so stab them, and they avoiding him and Neam Oddeen, chokeydar following him, and calling out that he had stabbed a blind man. When the European came near deponent, he made a ru-h at deponent, who stepped aside and avoided him, and when the satlor had passed the than and arrived opposite the shop of Rutton shoe-maker, where there were four or five persons standing, the sailor made a rush at them with the knife in his hand, and then ran off towards the town guard, where he held a conversation with the sentry on duty, and threatened to stab him; and the sepoy replied that if he approached him he would run the bayonet through his body. During this conversation Runjeet Sing, the nath of the town guard, came out and attempted to wrench the knife from the sailor's grasp; but when the sailor made a rush at him, Runject Sing ran back to the guard house and shut the door. Here Jumun, chokeydar, went behind the prisoner and seizing him by the leg and threw him down with a jerk. Deponent knocked the knife out of the sailor's hand and secured him. The pursoner is the man. After the prisoner was arrested, Runjeet Sing came out with a knife in his hand and said that he had wrenched it out of the prisoner's hand and his hand. Shortly after this he perceived Bankoollah had been wounded in the attempt. There was no blood the decreased, come towards his than a crying. Depoon the knife which Runjeet brought; but the squire nent asked him why he cried, and he answered that the head knife which deponent struck out of the prisoner's hand had marks of blood on it.

Euseph Khan, deposed, that whilst he was standing at his post at the town guard, he perceived four Europeans passed his thana, and in doing so they said " beware there is a drunken sailor pursuing us with an open knife in his hand." Soon after this deponent perceived the prisoner approach with a kuife in his hand. Deponent stopped him, and when the prisoner attempted to stab him, deponent presented his bayonet towards him and desired him to stand still, or else he would bayonet him. Deponent able to recognise him again if he were to see him. then perceiving the handle of the knife below the prisoner's grasp, wrenched it out of his hand, and gave it unto Runject Sing, the town guard nails's hand. Runjeet Sing then attempted to arrest the prisoner; but the prisoner drew a second knife and attempted to stab Runjeet Sing with it. Runjeet Sing wrenched it out of his the prisoner drew a third knife, and Runjeet Sing withdiew to the guard house and shut the door. After this the prisoner stumbled once and hurt himself in the face Golam Hossain the thanadar and the chokeydars then came to Jumun, chokeydar, seized the prisoner's leg and threw him down; and Golam Hossain struck with a stick the third knife out of his grasp. After this the prisoner was secured. The deponent identified the pri oner to be the sailor alluded to in this affray.

Runjeet Sing Lalla, naib of the town guard, deposed, that seeing an altercation between the last witness and a sailor with a knife in his grasp, he tucked up his sleaves, wrenched the kpile out of the sailor's grasp. magistrate, deposed, that he interpreted strictly to and as he was going into the guard house he pulled Baukoullah what the magistrate said; but he did not served it by the blade, and in doing so he cut his hand guards and securing the prisoner; and he then roused the guard, and Buldoo Sing, peon, snatched the other knife out of his hand, and the sepoys at the guard then came and arrested the prisoner. Deponent here produced the knife which he had taken from the prisoner whom he likewise identified.

Buddul Sing, deposed, that whilst he was in the town guard, their naib called out to the poons for asstance. Deponent came out thereupon and perceived Runject Sing and the sailor struggling, and the sailor had a knife in his grasp. Runjeet Sing then secured the knife from his grasp and got into the guard house, and as he went in he gave the sailor a shove which threw him down. The sailor got up instantly, drew another knife and ran at the sentry. Deponent then said to the sentry, is all this fun to you that you did not interfere when the sailor attempted to stab Runject Sing, and now if you do not charge beyonet imme-diately he will stab you. The sentry then presented his bayonet, and the sailor retired. Shortly afterwards the thanadar and his chokeydars arrived and Jumun, chokeydar, seized the sailor by the legand threw him down, and deponent seized the kuife out of his The sailor was then secured, and Mr. McCann. graso. and the constables came. In the mean time a European gentleman passed by and sceing the prisoner serred, asked deponent why they were thus maltienting him. Deponent showed them the knile and said that the sailor had wounded a man with the knife. They looked at the knife and then returned it to deponent and went away. Deponent here produced the knile stained with blood. This deponent identified the prisoner to be the sailor alluded to by him.

Sulcem, chokeydar of Loll bazar thana, deposed, that as he was at duty at the thana, he saw a sailor run down opposite the thank pursuing two natives, with a knife in sailor who had just passed the thana with the knile in his hand had wounded him. Deponent, when the wounded man come opposite the thana, brought a light and examined the wound which was on his belly and his entrails had protruded. Deponent then took him into the thana and bound up his would with a piece of cloth and led him on a corin the thana. Afterwards Hubeehollah, naib, came and took the wounded man to the hospital. As the sailor passed running speedily past the thaua he did not observe his features, so as to be

C K. Robison deposed, that he is a magistrate, and he, on the 5th of March went to the native hospital at the Chandney Choke to take the depositions of the Baukoollah syce, a wounded man there. The prisoner was present at the time, and Mr. Delmar, the French interpreter and Mr. Leal the native interpreter, and a. grasp and was wounded in the hand in doing so; then great crowd. Deponent cannot recollect the date, but it is in the deposition. Deponent cannot say if there were any of Baukoollah's relatives present. Baukoollah was sworn at the time. The depositions were explained to the prisoner, but he was asked if he would put any questions to him, and he said no. Baukoollah is since dead : looks at the depositions and says there are them. Baukoollah was perfectly sensible and collected at the time and expressed to deponent a conviction that he would not recover from the effects of the wound. Deponent once before saw him at the native hospital shortly previous to his taking these depositions.

C. F. Leal, interpreter to C. K. Robison, Esq., the magistrate, deposed, that he interpreted strictly to interpret Baukoollah's reply. Baukoollah said that ! there were Europeans present at the time he was stab- at the Chandney Choke, deposed, that he recollects the bed. One of them, the prisoner at the bar, he said was the man who had stabbed him. He said he recognized him because he was shorter than the other man, and had a bruise under his left eye and a short beard. ponent read the depositions now in his hands, and he admitted them to be correct, and made his mark to it in deponent's presence, who witnessed it.

C. K. Robison, Esq., re-called, said, he cannot say who interpreted Bankoollah's reply to him; but he is proficient in the Hindoostani language in so very proficient in the Hindoostani language in which Baukoollah spoke, as not to be in need of Mr. Leal's assistance in interpreting the replies to him. He commenced taking the deposition after Mr. Leal arrived.

P. Delmar deposed, that he explained Baukoollah's depositions to Milliner, who declined putting any questions, saving, that the deceased is a stranger to him. and if he were to question him he would not answer correctly, and he was too drunk to know what had occurred on the preceding night.

The depositions were then read. Deponent said that he was a syce. On the night of the 4th March, as he was passing down Chitpore road, at 10 o'clock P. M. in company with his cousin, of the two sailors now before him, the latter passed him by, but the pusoner, without any words, having passed between them came up to him and stabbed him in the stomach with a knife. Deponent recognized him by a scar in his face and his beard, and he is shorter than the other man. Prisoner is a perfect stranger to him; he had not seen him that morning at a punch-house. Deponent is perfectly aware that he will not be able to recover from the effects of this Hyder, syce, deposed, that he is a syce and cousin to Bankoollah. On the night of the 4th March last, at 9 o'clock r. m. as he was in company with him passing through the Chitpore road on their way home to Amnantollah-street from Banstollah lane, where they had been to have read to them some letters which they had received from their families, and when they arrived opposite the three storied house near the Terretta-bazar, they met an European sailor with two knives in both his hands. As he came up to them he stabled Bauk-pollah with one of them and he fell. Deponent through fear jumped across the acqueduct, and when the sailor passed them he came to his cousin by whose desire he returned to Amiantollah lane, and brought his brother, Ruzzah-ooilah, to the spot where Baukoolish had fallen, and not finding him there, they enquired at the Loll-bazar thana and learnt that he had been removed to the native hospital at the Chadney Choke, where deponent and Ruzzali-oollah went and saw him, and saw his wounds dressed. Deponent then went to his duty at his employers, and Ruzzah-oollah and remained with Baukoollah. Deponent was present when Di. Bain and Dr. O'Brien dissected Baukoollah's corpse. The man who stabbed Bankoollah was a short man, but through fear deponent could not recognize him; but he subsequently heard that he was arrested on that night. If he had observed him sufficiently so as to identify him he would have done it before the coroner and at the police office. police office.

Ruzzah-oollah, the brother of the deceased, deposed, that by information he went to the native hospital at the Chandney Choke, where he saw Baukoollah wounded and the Dr. O'Brien dressed his wounds, Deponent then went to his service and saw the deceased again at the hospital at 6 o'clock r. n , when the deceased informed him that if he would recover he would seek his rediess, but if he died, he had pointed out the person who had stabbed him to the police magistrate in his presence.

P. O'Brien, the first assistant at the native hospital, deceased, Baukoollah, syce, being brought at about 11 o'clock r. m. of that night to the hospital. He had a wound on his left side protruding into the abdomen and a portion of the omentum had protruded out. It was a narrow wound 3 of an inch wide and 3 of an inch in length. Deponent thought either of the two knives in the court could inflict such a wound. The deceased gave his depositions to Mr. Robison, the magistrate, on the 5th March, and the deceased died at Il o'clock P. M. on that day from internal hemorihage caused by the wound he had received. The body was subsequently, by the order of the police, removed to the police hospital on the 6th March.

R. H. Bain, police surgeon, deposed, that on the 6th of March last, be examined the body of the deceased Baukoollah. There was one wound on the left side of the body a little better than one inch in length. De-ponent shewed the head, chest and abdomen. There was a considerable quantity of congulated blood in the abdomen, the fower extremity of the spicen wounded, the larger intestine had been divided in two parts, and there were two wounds on the omentum. The other membranes were all healthy. The lungs were rather soft, but healthy. The deceased died from internal hemorrhage caused by the wounds on the spleen and the omentum. Either of these two knives might inflict a wound of

This closed the case for the prosecution. Prisoner declined questioning any of the witnesses, asserting that he was too drunk to recollect the transactions of that night, so as to be able to cross question any of them.

He said, that on a Sunday morning, the 4th of March, he by leave left his ship with 20 rapecs. his intention was to purchase some provisions, and three knives useful to his profession as a sail-maker. He likewise purchased three silk hankerchiefs and a box of cheerouts. He went with a shipmate who was arrested with him, to several places. He, from the quantity of liquor he had drank at these several places, became entirely bereft of all recollection of what happened subsequently; but he has an indistinct recollection of being assaulted by some natives in a street, which so initated him, that he lost all recollection of what occurred subsequently; and it was not until the next morning, that he found himself in confinement at the town guard and his 'kerchiefs, his cheeroots, and three knives all lost; and he was then taken to the native hospital at the Chandney, and there he learnt for the first time of the crime he had been charged with.

The prisoner called no witnesses to substanstiate his assertions, but put in a petition in English, the purport of which, he said, he had dictated and knew its purport and did not require it to be translated to him.

This petition was but a repetition of his defence. He put in a certificate of good conduct eigned by Captain Laor De Paert, Captain of the Salamander, French Frigate, on board of which ship he had served as a sail-maker to his Captain's satisfaction for one year. The certificate was dated Toulon, 5th June, 1835.

This closed his defence.

The learned Judge then summed up the proceedings and said, that the charge was one of nurder, a very important charge, as on it pended the prisoner's life; and to clearly decide it, and do justice both to the prisoner and to the public was their important and painful duty. It is very evident that the deceased, Bankoollah, died on the night of the 4th March 1835; but no one has deposed that the prisoner wounded the deceased.

The only evidence of that kind is the deceased dying deposition. There is one person who deposed to his having wounded the blind man. One thing is plain, that the prisoner was intoxicated, and though the law does may first drink and then commit crime. Yet justice Holroyd has decided, that when a man who is intoxicated and had no previous malice against any person, and having without any intention to inflict an injury to any person, but for absolute necessary purposes any deadly weapon, and then and there receives a provocation, as is denosed by Mr. Guizenec, of his having been assaulted, and these uritated with intoxication and maltreatment, he, in a fit of anger, wounds with that instrument any person mortally, the come is only that of manslaughter; but if any person swears that the prisoner did run a muck with a deadly in-nument in his hand in a state of intoxication and wound all the passers by because he had been just previously assaulted by some persons, and stabs a person who was in no wise connected with the assault on him, and wounds him mortally, then the crime would amount to that of murder. Yet there is another circumstance to consider. It there is a great crowd and confusion, and the prisoner is struck by any of the crowd promiscuously, and in this crowd he meets the deceased and wounds him, mistaking him to be one of his assailants, although the man may not have been one of the assailants, yet it is very probable the assaulted person in the confusion might have mistaken him for one of them and wounded him in self defence in the state he then was. It is for the jury to draw this distinction between the crime of muider or manslaughter, from the evidence, and to judge whether the deceased was one amongst the crowd who had best the prisoner on that night or was he met by the prisoner when he was not as-aulted, but running wildly about the street and wounding all the passers-by promiseuously, and had at a time, when no persons were assaulting him, without cause or provocation, stabbed the deccased, as the deceased has declared, and the declaration made at that time by the person stabbed, even if made when the prisoner had passed on, but at the time he was wounded, is strictly in evidence, because it forms a part of the transaction itself.

Here the judge detailed the evidence of each witness, fully commented on the nature of it, and made learned legal observations on them to the jury. The judge emarked, towards the conclusion, that to constitute the crime of murder, malice, is required; but it is not absolutely necessary that sedate and deliberate malice to take the life of any one individual; for if a person without malice towards any person, shoots with a gun wantenly in a crowd, the crime to that case is murder. It is for the jury to decide whether the prisoner had inflicted the wound on the prisoner or not; and if so, whether the deceased was in the crowd that assaulted the pusoner, and in the confusion mistaken by the pirsoner for one of the as-ailants; in that case it will constitute the crime of manslaughter; or whether he, in passing down the street, excited by angry, malicious feelings, wounding every person whom he met promiscuously had thus met the deceased who was not one of his assailants, and womonly wounded him, which would be murder. If the jury doubted in a case of this kind, they must give the benefit of the doubt to the prisoner, and return a verdict in that case; but if they are convinced that he did it in the latter manner, they must however paintul it may be to their feelings, in order to discharge their duty conscientiously, according to their oaths, find the prisoner guilty of the offence for which he is now tried. If they doubt that he even wounded the deceased, then they must acquit him at once. After this he left the case in their hands, remarking that he had, as bound by his oath, tried the law in all its bearings in the case before them, and it now rested with them to return the verdict that they judged to be best suited to the case.

The jury retired for about quarter of an hour and returned a verdict of manslaughter.

not excuse intoxication for a crime, because if so people | as the prisoner had been found guilty of manslaughter in the case just before them and thus acquitted of the capital offence, he could not possibly be thought guilty of having wounded the old, blind man, with an intent to kill, as the indictment charges him, therefore the jury had better be sworn to being that indictment, and have it formally read to them, and then, after, the prisoner has pleaded not guilty, acquit him of that charge. The jury were then sworn to bring the indictment which was read to them, and the prisoner having already pleaded not guitty, the jury, as directed, acquitted him of this charge.

> The judge then remanded the prisoner for the present, and said that he would, at another time, pass the sentence against him for the crime or which he had been convicted.

> The prisoner was then removed, and the Court adjourned at 6 o'clock P. M. till 11 o'clock A. M. tomorrow morning .- Hurkaru, April 26.

> > SESSIONS. - APRIL 25, 1838.

(Refore Sir E. Ryan.)

Petumber Mookergia and Holladhur Chuckerbutty were tried on an indictment charging them with having forged a document on the 5th of September 1837, purporting it to be the last will and testament of a Hindoo widow, named Servah Munglih Dabee, deceased, with intent to defraud Bemolah Dabee.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

Counsel for the prosecution, Messrs. J. Pearson and L. Clarke, Counsel for the defence Messrs. J. Cochrane and C. R. Prinsep.

Mr. Pearson addressed the jury and said, that the prisoners are indicted for forging a will and aftering the name, both of which offences are equally criminal.

The deceased Komalunth was the widow of Ram Mohun Chuckerbutty, deceased, and she had an only daughter named Bemolah Dabee. This daughter was at Bindrabund, 600 miles distant from Celcutta, on a pilgrimage. On the 8th of Assaur, when her mother was attacked with the cholera, Servah Munglah Dabes imagining that the malady would prove fatal made a will on that day by which she bequeathed the whole of her property to her daughter, and Nobinchander Chuckernutty, Anundoo Chuckerbutty, and Ram Kisto Odacarea were witnesses and executors to it. She died on the 12th of that month, and her daughter, about 32 days after her demise, returned from Eindrabun and arrived. In Calcutta in the mean time another will, dated 5th Assaur, was filed in the Ecclesiastical Registrar's office, by the defendants, one of whom swore the usual affidavit for a probate by this will. She disposed of the property otherwise and appointed Petumber Mookergia her executor. In this will she mentioned her indisposition, whereas she was not sick before the 8th, and further there are proofs to show that Holladhur Chuckerbutty was seen composing it, and although he declined to be the executor; but by subsequently applied for a probate on that will, and thus he clearly uttered this forged will by this act it is plain; and it would be an absurdity to suppose a person could have made a will on the 3d of Assaur, quite concrary to the one she executed on the 8th of that month.

The witnesses by application of counsels were all ordered out of Court.

Sheebchunder Ghose deposed, he knew Servah Mundainh Dabce. She is dead : she died on the 12th of Assaur last. Previous to her death, the deceased made a will. She had an only daughter, a widow named Bemolah Bevah, Deponent knows both the prisoners. The father of the last deponent is dead; his name was Gunganarain Chuckerbutty. Deponent never saw the The judge then addressed the jury and said, that will which Servah Mundalah Dabes made, but heard she made one on the 8th of Assaur last. This will de- | Deponent gains his livelihood as a mooktiar in the petty ponent never saw, but he saw a will in the possession of Gunganarain Chuckerbutty and Hollodhur Chuckerbutty. When they made it, deponent saw it in Shrahoon last, deponent saw it made out by those two persons. Petumber Chuckerbutty, Beromohon Chuckerbutty, Sheebnarain Holdar, Issurchunder Sircar, Ramlochun Kur, and Sooroopchunder Shaw were concerned in framing it. Petumber Mookergia was the executor to on the 31st Shraboon and anti-dated the 5th Assaur. it, and the others become witnesses to it. This will was Deponent knew Rammohun Chuckerbutty; he died made on the 31st Shiaboon, about one month and 20 about three years ago. Deponent never heard that he days after the death of the person whose will it purported ever had a son. Deponent has seen Beinolah Dossee, to be, and was anti-dated the 5th Assaur last, Deponent, it he were to see that paper, could recognise it. Deponent knows the hand-writing of Issurchunder Sircar who wrote it. There was previously a rough draft made and submitted to the prisoner, who made a few alterations and then it was fair copied: the draft was written by Holla-dhur Chuckerbutty. When this will was forged, Petumber looked at it, and said the whole responsibility of this affair will be on me. Hollodhur observed "who is to write the name of Servah Mundalah Dabee." Hollodhur then said, "Get Issurchunder to write her name and I will on that occasion, having mentioned deponent's name, make a cross mark to it," and this was done. After this will had been executed, the witnesses remarked, as every thing was completed, what were they to get for their job, and Ifollodhur replied "that matter has been discussed already;" and Issurchunder then wished to know the purport of it, and Hollodhur said, of the 1,700 rupees of Servah Mundalah, which is of Bobany Lull Shahands, he would give 1,000 rupees of it to Petumber Mookergia and 300 rupees for the costs of this probate; the remainder, after considering what each of the others ought to get will be divided amongst them. Thakordosthe parties concerned in framing this document were present at the time when this conversation occurred. Deponent lastraw Thakordoss Chuckerbutty about fifteen or sixteen days ago at Sham-bazar. Kosinath Kur for fear of getting a subpoena in this case, has ran away.

Mr. O'Dowda, acting registrar of the Ecclesiastical Court, produced from the records of his office the will which was purported to be a forged document, together with the usual affidavit of the executor named in it, Pe tumber Mooker is, for a probate. Probate was not granted on it.

Sheebchunder further deposed, on looking at the will, that he recognised this to be the forged will. It is writ ten in the hand-writing of Petumber Mookergia. ponent is acquainted with Issurchunder Shaw, having seen him and Ramchunder Kur write once.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. Deponent saw Bermomohen Chuckerbutty. Des onent knew him. Gunganarain Chuckerbutty, whilst deponent was passing his house, as a friend, called him and informed him, that he had fallen into a learful predicament, and when depo-nent inquired what it was, he replied his sister-in-law, Servah Mundolah Dabee, had the cholera on the 8th of Assaul last, when she made a will. She died on the 12 b of that month; he then observed that if her daughter were to die, the executors to it would make away with his ancestorial property, and added that his son Hollodhur Chuckerbutty and Bermomohen Chuckerhuity had consulted together and tesolved to make a forged will wind an intention to take out a probate and preserve everything. Hotlodhur, after his father and his brother had consuited together, said " let us make a draft of it," and so hinted deponent's advice. Deponent replied, "if you succeed in the traudulent act it will be very advantageous to you, but if you are detected, the consequences will be very serious." Deponent did not sesist in the making of this will. He was again sent for by Hol-I dline, for the purpose of becoming an atte-ting witness to it. Deponent is not in the habit of becoming court, but he has never given his evidence in any of those cases, nor was he ever warned by the commissioners of that court regarding his evidence. Deponent did not get any part of the 400 rupees, because he declined to become a party to this nefarious transaction; he suspected it to be wrong, because he saw another sign the name of the deceased, after her death, to a will framed who is a purdah-nasheen woman. She is the daughter of a Brahmia and does not go a gadding. Deponent sees her on business. Deponent does not know whether she has a husband. Deponent last saw Bemolah Desce about three or four days ago, when she had the cholera morbus. She is now a widow and has no child. Deponent was not examined before the grand jury in this case, deponent first received a subpoena on it about a week ago. After the grand jury had found a true bill in this indictment, and the witnesses who were examined the prosecutors subpoenaed him. Deponent does not know whether the prisoners were heirs-at law to Servah Mungolah's husband, they were the brothers of Suttah Hungolah's husband, and cousins of Servah Mungolah. At the time of her father's death Bemolah Dossee was childless wilow. All the property Servah Mungolah Dossee died possessed of, was left her by her husband. Holodhur resides at Putthurgutta-street, to the west of Bemolah Dossee's house. The forged will was written in a hall, behind the two side rooms, at the entrance of the house. Deponent does not know whether Gung i-Chuckerbutty, Kosmath Kur and Prawn Kisto Sen, and narrain entered a caveat against the will dated the 8th Assaur last, or whether it was ever filed in this Court.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cochrane. Prann Kisto was present when the forged will was made, and is a witness in this case; cannot say whether he was examined before the grand jury. Deponent cannot say what relationship there is between Petumber Mockerpa and Bemolali Dossee. Deponent never was before called to witness a forged will. Deponent knows Annuchunder Chuckerbutty; he lives in a separate hut; he is very infiniate with Bemolah Dossee, and visits her very often. Deponent is paid for his trouble at the petty court, but he is not to get any thing for his trouble here to-day. " He has no note of hand nor promise of a reward in this business. Bemolah Dos-ee is at her own house. Deponent knows Behary Loll Shaw; he is a rich man. Annunderchunder Chuckerbutty is here to-day. Deponent saw five or six, days ago, Bermomohon Chuckerbutty at his house. Deponent did advise the defendants not to commit this act but they did not regard him. Deponent has heard, that every subscribing witnesses to this will has been put into this indictment.

Re-examined by the judge. When Hollodhur was writing the will, deponent saw Prawn Kisto; he came there after the deponent; but why he came deponent does not know. When be came, Gunganairain Chuckerbutty said "sit down;" he was asked to become a witness, but he declined, and said to Hollodhur" you have three or four witnesses, there is no necessity for my name."

Mr. Cochrane remarked to the Court, towards the close of this deponent's examination, that Prawn Kisto had been in Court all this time hearing this deponent's evidence, and has just left the Court. The judge asked Mr. Hilder if this was true, and sent for Pratt the bailiff, who had charge of the witnesses out-side the Court to inquire into it : and it then appeared that the constable had only charge of some and not all. The judge consequently asked counsel where the rest were: counsel, replied that neither they nor the attornies in the case knew them all, so as to he able to point them out to the required sala witness on account of his respectability, constable, who was to have charge of them. The judge observed, that it is clear that when witnesses in a crimi- to the Commercial Advertiser ; its subscription is two nal case are ordered out and come in again they cannot rupees eight annas per mension; deponent knows the be examined. Mr. Prinsep replied, that he was perfectly aware of the law in this instance. As Mr. Pearson had supposed that the judge would not re-examine the witness, he had desired Prawn Kisto to be the next witness to be called. He had just come in, but when he found that he was not required as yet, he went out again.

Prawn Kisto was then called and swore to the correctness of this statement of the prosecution's counsel, and added that he had been out with the other witnesses.

A Pratt, the bailiff deposed, that he called the names of the witnesses in the list furnished to him, and got some of them, but deponent did not see Prawn Kisto. He was not in his charge nor did any person call any of the witnesses under his charge. The judge then remarked that there ought to be two constables to relieve each other. and the names of the witnesses ought to be called as per list of the witnesses furnished to the constable by the parties, and then made over to their charge and kept in another room, and nobody permitted to speak to them until called for ; a similar case he added should never occur again. A sircar of Mr. Bedell, the attorney for the prosecution, having deposed that Prawn Kisto was out during the time Sheebchunder was examined, and he had just called him in by mistake, the judge permitted him to be examined:

Prawn Kisto then deposed, that he knew the two prisoners at the bar and the last witness. This witness, like the former, proved the construction of the alleged forged will, and identified it in Court.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. Deponent is a broker and an oil-merchant. Deponent undertook on one occasion to be half for Moonshee Is-hur; but as the Moonshee could not give under bail be declined being bail. He did not receive 64 rupees on that occasion. When the will was signed, no person asked him to become a witness to it, nor did he refuse to become one.

The judge, after he had examined the evidence of Sheebehunder, witness, and found a material discrepancy between his deposition, and had further ascertained that there were no more witnesses to prove the making of the will, remarked to the jury, that if they believed these two witnesses, the case was plainly made out, and must proceed; but if they doubt them, for to him it appears a very strange circumstance that these two persons were, especially the latter, called for no other purpose by the pirsoner than to witness their committing a forgery, a crime for which they could be transported for life, and which crimes are invariably committed in secrecy, but to enable them at some other period to appear as witnesses against them, and convict them in this case. Mr. Pearson added, that he had a documentary evidence against Holladbur, and if the actual forgery were proved against him, the fact of the other taking out the probate would in itself be sufficient to convict him of uttering a forged will.

The judge replied, that if the very first part of their evidence as to the perpetration of the forgery could not be believed by the jury, how could the case proceed against them.

The jury consulted and informed the Court, that they did not believe these two witnesses. The judge remarked, then the case cannot proceed, and directed the jury to acquit the prisoners, which they did. They were then ordered to be discharged by the judge.

Shumsoodeen was tried for uttering a forged document, with intent to robbing Mr. Kuhu, the proprietor of the Commercial Advertiser.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

John Overet deposed that he is a Government pensioner, and lives in North Intuity. Deponent is a subscriber Attorney, Mr. Anly, and their counsel. Mr. Cochrane, prosecutor and the prisoner. Deponent looked at a paper in Court and said he recongnised it; he had seen it before. The writing on it purporting to be and of Mr. Kuhn; is not his, the document is a forged one. The writing on it purporting to be the writing The prisoner presented it to deponent at his house the the day before the Churruck poolah. Deponent desired the pusoner to write on it his receipt for the money and he would pay it to him. Prischer attempted to write, but the figures he made were no writing. Deponent after having called a sucar and ascertained from him this fact, said he would pay the money to the prisoner's The prisoner then requested deponent to accompany him there. Deponent left his house with the prisoner for that purpose, and procured a palkee at the first stand he came to. The prisoner at the head of the Dhurrumtollah road gave deponent the slip and ran away. Deponent however proceeded with the paper to Mr. Kuhn, and there he learnt the bill was a forged one, and that the prisoner had been taken into custody on a charge of forgery.

W. C. Blacquiere deposed, that Intally, the place. where the last deponent resided, and where the prisoner had aftempted to utter the alleged forged document, as stated by Mr. Overer, is in the suburbs of Calcutta, and within the jurisdiction of the 24 Pergunnah's Court, and not of this tribunal.

The judge said, that as the indictment stated that the prisoner uttered this will, knowing it to be torged within Calcutta; but as the document now, it appears by the evidence in this case, had been uttered out of Calcutta, this Court has no jurisdiction over natives of this county for crimes committed out of the limits of this city, except in particular Government cases, which he need not mention. He then suggested to the jury, that without entering into the merits of the case, to acquit the prisoner on this indictment, on the ground that the offence had been committed out of the jurisdiction of this Court.

The jury without returng acquitted the prisoner. The prisoner was then remanded.

TRAVERSE CASES.

In the case of Queen on the profecution of Mootes Mangy versus Rammond Ghose, Gungapersad Seal. Kishna Ghose, Omit Holdar, Sharkamar, sircar, and three other prisoners, who were arraigned for having on the 18th of October last, assaulted Moottee Mangy in a violent manner.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor and his witnesses were then called on their reconnoi-sances, and not appearing, they were read and estreated, and a verdict of not guilty pronounced against the prisoners by the jury, and the prisoners released. The prosecution, the judge informed the jury, was a private one, and it appears had been needlessly brought before the Court.

The case of the Queen on the presecution of Gooroo Chund Doss and Hurry Chund Doss, against Kadar Bux, jemadar, Jhubboo naib, and two chokeydars, for having on the 18th of January, assaulted the prosecutors, were then called on, and the july sworn.

The prisoners having pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor was called and he informed the Court that his attorney, Mr. Martindell, and his counsels, Messis. Pearson and Leith, who have the sole management of their case, although they were in Court this morning were absent then.

The defendants likewise informed the Court, that their

The chief Justice, after he had made the requisite inquity from the clerk of the Crown, and ascertained that the attornes and counsels, both for the prosecution and the defence, were informed that this case would come on to-day, addressed the jury, and said, that it appeared strange to him, after intimation had been given to these attornies and counsels, that this case, would be tried to-day, that they were absent. A message was then despatched to them to require their attendance, and the jury were de-ired to await a little.

After a delay of about half an hour the prosecutors' connsel and attorney appeared, and the case was heard.

Mr. Pearson said, the prosecutors in this case were arrested on a false allegation of a theft from some accusers and assaulted very roughly. This class of crime is a very great offence to society, and this is very much aggravated by its having been perpetrated by the very persons whose duty it was to prevent the breaches of the peace.

Gooroochand Doss deposed, that he is a bustom, and resided at Hanokhola. Deponent knows the defendant at the bar. The defendant, on the month of Maugh last, at about 8 o'clock v. M., accompanied many other persons with lighted flambeaux to the prosecutor's house, and began to search the upper apartments. Prosecutor remained below till the jemadar sent for him and desired prosecutor to deliver up the keys of a chest, the property of this deponent, which they brought out of a room upstairs. The prosecutor replied, that the key was not by him, but at his house in Jorahbagan, and he would go and fetch it. The jemadar would not permit him to go there, but broke the chest open, but could not find any stolen property within it. The jemadar then, at the request of Kallon Ghose, who had brought these persons to his house, took the prosecutor and his brother into custody, and Shoobucamp Shaw having brought a globe which he said he had found under the prosecutor's platfirm, and that it was a portion of the property stolen from the house of his master Kalloo Ghose, prosecutor, was then taken into the street, and he and his brother bound hand in hand, and taken in custody before Mr. McCann, who ordered the jemadar to release them; but the jemadar, after he had consulted with Kalloo Mullack, again bound pro-ecutor and his brother, and took them to Captain Birch's office; they were then made to was: below, whilst the jemadar went and spoke to Capt Birch and then took and confined the prosecutor and his brother in town guard all that night. The next day the charge of their preferred by Kallon Mulluck and his servant Soobut, was heard by Mr. C. K. Robinson, the magistrate, and dismissed, and the prosecutor and his brother released by his order.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cochrane. Prosecutor gave similar evidence in this Court, when Kalloo Chand and Soobut were tried on this charge and acquitted, and so did his brother who is very sick in his house. Kalloo was his next door neighbour. He had never heard of Kalloo's house having being robbed. Prosecutor put every person into the indictment who entered his premises. Kalloo was on bad terms which prosecutor. The case against Kalloo and Soobut was very prematurely brought on. Prosecutor had not time to subpoena his witnesses. The fill was found one day and the case called on the next. The prosecutor, his brother, Mr McCann and Mr. Pobinson, were the only persons examined on that occasion, and none of his servants. Here the prosecutor named the persons who were present on the occasion. One of them has died subsequently; but prosecutor has subpectaed the rest. Mr. McCann's order to the jemadar was to deliver prosecutor and his brother to the care of his father. Pro-ecutor's brother was in attendance in this Court till yesterday, when he fell sick. Prosecutor never heard that Kullo's house had I case.

were not likewise present in Court to conduct their case | been robbed, but Kalloo and his gang behaved like robbers in his.

Re-examined. Prosecutor asked Kalloo and his gang when they entered his house, what they wanted. They made no reply, but seized him. They produced no warrant on the occasion.

J. McCann deposed, that he is the deputy superintendent of the police. Complaints of robbesies are made either to the magistrates or the superintendent of the police, and the thanadar. Deponent heard no complaint of a robbery committed in Kolloo Ghose's house on the day the prosecutor's house was searched, until shortly before the prosecutor and his brother were brought in cu-tody to him. He desired the jemader to take them to their father, and take his security to bring them to the police office the next day, to answer to the charge. It is not usual to search a house without a warrant. Deponent would not do it at night, nor would he take a man into custody at that late hour without an oath of the robbery; and if he had taken up a person in the condition in which these men were brought up to him, he would have sent them up to a magistrate for trial. He would not be punctifious regarding a search in the day time, if he was sure that stolen property was concealed in the suspected house.

Captain Birch deposed, that no person in this matter applied to him for a wairant to either arrest or search their house. He declined at first to answer whether he authorized the jemader to search the prosecutor's house; but the counsel for the prosecution submitting that he was bound to answer the question, he said that he had given the jemader authority to search the prosecutor's It was a verbal order and not given on any athdavit. The search was to be made in the prosecutor's thakoorbaity, to see it any of the property alleged to have been stolen from Killoo Mullock's house could be found there, and that if any were found to take the parties into custody. Kalloo Ghose was the complainant on that occasion, and said he suspected these two men as being the thieves. At night the thandar gave him intimation, that a globe lamp had been found under the prosecutor's platform in his house, and jemadais and peons without seeing the persons brought in custody, ordered them to be confined in the town guard. The next day the case was taken up by Mr. Robinson, who, without an investigation, dismissed the charge.

Cross-examined. Deponent was not then sa good a lawyer as now. The deponents, are bound to obey his orders. Deponent did see the lamp, Mr. Robinson did make a preliminary investigation before he discharged the prisoners. They demed the charge against them.

Mr. Cochrane for the defence said, that the prosecutors had not shewn that they were acquitted clearly of the charge Kalloo Mullick had preferred against them. He next condemned in a very strong terms the practice of putting the neighbours and all witnesses in the case into the indictment, and thus deprive the prisoners of all evideace; and even if the search was illegal, it was committed by ignorant natives who were bound to obey the orders of their superiors on that point, and that they had no malicious intention in so doing. If any person had acted illegally, it was Captain Birch, who had given the order for their search; they, therefore, are innocent.

The judge then summed up the case, detailed the evidence, and commented on it, and said, that if the prosecutor's evidence is to be credited, the assault has been proved, and the prisoners have proved no justification. It is true that they searched he house by the order of Captain Birch ; but Captain Birch himself had no power to order a search unless it was deligated to him by the magistrate, and thus, if the prosecutor is to be believed, and his testimony is uncontradicted, the jury must find the prisoners guilty, and it is for the judge to decide the nature of the punishment on the merits of the

The Lunacy Case.

A commission of lunacy sat this day at the Supreme Court house to enquire into the lunary of Baboo Sreenauth Sandail, a supposed lunatic. The commissioners were Richard Marnell, Esq. and W. P. Grant, Esq. counsel for the commission, C. R. Prinsep, Esq., Attorney Mr. P. Peard. The following jurous were chosen George Vint, Esq. Foreman; D. M. Gordon; G. A. Prinsep.; W. F. Gibbon; J. Colquhoun; J. S. Kellsad; A. D'Souza; C. Fagan; W. Mackenzie; J. B. Scott, Esq.; Carrapit Jacob: Rajah Dabeekiesen; Baboos Oboychurn Bonneerjee and Promothoneuth Day.

The witnesses called and examined were Drs. H. S Meicer and Walter Raleigh. A bearer named Gocool and a kansamah called Proncase, were stopped by the jury, who unanimously gave the following verdict: That Sreenauth Sandial was of unsound mind, and had been so for about three years past, and did not enjoy lucid intervals, so that he was incapable of managing his own affairs; and with regard to the amount of hiproperty no evidence was tendered to them. The jury then adjourned to Saturday, the 15th instant, to meet and sign the inquisition. The gentleman of the jury then directed that all fees coming to them and partly to the commissioners, amounting in all to company's ru pecs 262; should be forthwith sent to Mr. Patton, the the sufferers by the late storm at Rungpore or Chingreehutta in the 24-Pergunnalis, and the amount was immediately sent by the sheriff's office to Mr. Patton under the directions of Captain Vint, the Foreman.

ZILLAH 24-PERGUNNAHS FOUJDARRY.

BARRASLT, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1838.

(Before E. Deedes, Esq., Joint-Magistrate.)

Mr. McDougall, the grantee, appeared this day, accompanied by Mr. Dias to inform the magistrate that he found it impossible to continue his residence at, or cultivation of the lands granted to him by the state in the Soonderbuns for the constant annoyance and disturbances created by the people of the zemindar of Khas Ballundah Mr. McDougall stated, that the zemindar's people had in a couple of hours destroyed a that ched house erected by him at considerable expense and trouble, and that the daring character of some of the attacks made him apprehensive of his life.

A similar representation was made by both Messrs. McPherson and McDougall to Mr. Commissioner Dampier a short time ago, and that gentleman immediately sent an official letter to the joint magistrate, requesting him, under the provisions of Regulation II1. of 1828, to protect the grantees from the attacks and practices of the zemindars. Two cases were pending at this time at the Foujdairy of Baraset, the one against the zamindar's people for stealing away and destroying several cocoanut ported by the most bare faced perjury, as the people his people. - Hurkaru, April 12.

charged with the assault, were at the time it was alleged to have occurred in attendance at the judge's Court at Allipore, at the hearing of Mahommed Ameer versus McPherson. Both cases were appealed by the Moonshee's people and pending their issue, the offenders were released on bail.

Mr. Dias informed the magistrate, that his client had come to lodge an information against Moonshee Mahommed Ameer, the zemindar Bycanto Paul, the Go-mashtah, Mudden Mozumdar, the Februldar, and two Burkandazes. Mr. Dias said he would prepare Mr. Mc Dougall's affidavits and file it before Mr. Deedes as a justice of the peace and magistrate, and he believed that the court would have no alternative but to issue warrante for the parties and oblige them to find bail for their future good conduct.

A native sircar-looking gentleman, here stepped forward and addressing the magistrate said, "my master is not that sort of man, that will be brought here on such an atfidavit.

The following involence was soon put a stop to by the magistrate telling him, that if he repeated his impertinence, he would let him feel the consequences of it, and plants, and the other against a sincar and other in the employ of Mr. McDougall for an alledged assault. In the former case the delinquents were sentenced, and the latter fell to the ground for the want of evidence. MOONGHYR.

Furkea.

The resumption operations in this purgunnah have been nearly brought to a close, resulting, we are sure very much to the satisfaction of Government. The settlements made with the zemindars and others for the land that has been resumed out of the old estates or muhals, show a considerable addition of revenue; and, which will progressively increase, till the close of the several terms for which the leases have been granted. The attempts of Government to procure an enhance-ment of revenue from the old muhals necessarily created great dissatisfaction among the zemindars at whose cost the increase was to have been induced; and when we examine the nature of the objections advanced by some of them, we are uavoidably led to question the right of Government to encroach upon the possessions of land-holders on any consideration whatsoever, not supported by the argument of pressing exigencies either of unavoidable foreign wir, or general urgent measures to be adopted for the improvement of the country, embracing the benefit collectively of both the zemindars themselves and the people at large. The latter, we readily allow, may be prosecuted in a thousand very interesting and extensive channels of desirable improvement; but the former cannot, in the present posture of political affairs, be justified in any point of view. The excess in the former agrarain demands, however, has been laid; the resumptions are progressing; the resources of Government are being multiplied; the waste lands are put in the way of improvement (a very desirable thing no doubt); and the zemindars have sighed, went, bothered, and bestirred themselves to no purpose, as it respects saving themselves from the aggressions of the erchequer, into which, ere long some forty or fity thousand rupees, will flow from purgunnah Furkeea alone. We could here suggest, that if the advantage of the people has been made the basis of the fresh exactions made from the Furkea zemindars, the additional profits thus secured should, at least, every third year, be appropriated exclusively to the local improvement of that perguinal; some of which we here briefly point out. Bunds or embankments are very much required to prevent the inundations from the Gunduk, the waters of which, singularly enough, seldom make any productive deposits, while they interrupted the cultivations, and deprive the people of one of the best crops. Roads are very much wanted, sources of artificial imigation are urgently and absolutely required, and, above all, a more respectable and efficient police is imperiously called for here, as well as in all the other parts of the country. If the people are made to add to the resources of the state, the latter should, in return, use its diligence to aid to their comforts, safety, and prosperity.

The arguments generally made use of by the zemin-dars in support of their objections to the resumption proceeding, have been from time to time put into our pussession, and as they are usually of the same kind, we here furnish a brief expose of them as lately submitted to Government by Raja Bhldanund and his son Koomar Roodrandind, zemindars of portions of this purgunnah.

1st. That one of the arguments used to warrant the resumption is that the resumed mouzes were not included in the famous decennial or perpetual settlement on account of their having been mere waste lands at the time. Against which position they urge that, at that time the papers of settlement did not specify the quantity of land comprehended within the area of the several Resumption of Toufeer and Waste Lands in Purgunnah tuppahs and mouzas included in the muhals, that these papers exhibit the aggregate of the estimated profits of four years, whereby a scale of jumma was formed for the levying of an excess to the revenue of former settlements,-that the sayer collections were taken away, and proportionate deductions were allowed them; that there is not a a single mouza included in the tuppalis, nor any description of land that has at any time been exempt from the assessment, and jumma fixed by the perpetual settlement, that they support their objections on the provisions of regulations I. and VIII. of 1793, and the circular letter of the 22d May, 1818, in this particular; that all descriptions of land and monzas whatsoever included within the boundaries of the tuppahs, as above settled in perpetuity, are unquestionably their rightful property, and can on no account be claimable by Government, and that the present measures of Government can be regarded in no other point of view than as the exhibition of an unjustifiable design of intinging on. and rendering the permanent settlement at once nugatory.

> Another argument used in support of the resumptions is the absence of any recorded jumma attached to the resumed mouzas and lands, in the column of jumma of the quinquennial register compiled in 1202 of the Fushee year. This argument they rebut by observing, that the tuppules, and mouzas were perpetually settled in the Fu-lee year 1179, at which period those registers were not in existence; that they were embo-died on data furnished by the kanoongoes, to which preparation of them they, the zemiodars, were not parties, and therefore were not able to check the inaccuracies that abound in them; that as these registers were not in being at the time of the settlement. their rights, supported by section vit. or regulation 1. and several sections of regulation VIII. of 1793 cannot be justifiably impugned, with a view to the intrusion of the claims of Government to lands lying within the land-marks of the tuppuls and mouzas settled in perpetuity before the quinquennial register was frimed, that these registers comprise no part of the records of the perpetual settlement, a circumstance which in a peculiar manner renders them unauthentic, especially as they do not correspond with the substance and provisions of the puttahs and kubooleuts mutually incerchanged on the occasion. In proof of this they cite the following instance: Tuppah Jumalpoor, &c. is recorded in the said register, as assessed at Rs 1,055. 5as, and 10gs, whereas, the amount of assessment specified in the puttah and kaboleut is Rs. 12,429 12as. Again: tuppahs Rehooa and Schuzarce, &c in the register is stated to be assessed at Rs 6,949 3as. but the amount entered in the pottale and kaboleut is Res 8,200 10as. 8gs. Hence the spurious nature of the source of the formation of these registers is undeniably evident, that in the settlement books of 1197 Fueley, jummas are attached to each mouza individually, consequently the argument herewith contested is not founded on act, that if any portion, or the whole of the lands comprising the estates of the zeminGars had been discovered to be waste at the time of the compilation of the quinquennial register, that circumstance could only serve to prove that the zemindars, and not the Government, must have been subject to losses, from their having been unproductive; that nevertheless they have always farthfully discharged the demands of Government exacted from those very lands, which were included in the perpetual settlement, and that they have proved by respectable corroborative evidence, that the resumed lands were in a state of cultivation, before, at the time, and after a perpetual settle-

3d A further argument used is, that they support the commencement of the execution of the resumption court, grounded on regulation XIV, of 1835; and 2dly, That the settlement made with them does not make any distinction between cultivated and waste lands. These objections are controverted by the assertion that the awards of the civil courts cannot abstract the investigation of the rights of Government. The petitioners contest that positively, enting various legal proceedings successively instituted in various courts, Mofassil, Appeal, and Sudder Dewanny, at the close of all of which the claims of Government were explicitly declared to be illegal, with reference to laying fresh jumma on the mahals included in the perpetual settlement; that the parties were peaceably put in possession of the lands at-tempted to be resumed, and that all these decisions, were conformable to regulation 11. of 1819, XIV. of 1820, and sections xxii. and xvi. of regulation 111, 1793.

4th. Another argument started in support of the resumption is, that the regulations and the letters quoted by the zemindars, were only applicable to such mouzas as have been assessed by Government, and not to the the higher authorities; but of which seven had been conwaste lands. They contend that the settlements were made for perguonals without a specification of tuppals, for tuppals without a detail of mouzas; and mouzas without recorded rubba; consequently, all soits of lands cultivated or waste, had been included in them, and therefore they indisputably belong to them.

5th. It is further urged in support of the Government resumptions, that the village anda of the remindars themselves had pointed out the lands resurced as lying beyond the limits of the mouzas assessed at the time of the perpetual settlement. This argument, they say is, not founded in fact, for they flatly deny that their and could possibly have done any such thing, since they knew that the truth of the matter was directly the reverse.

6th. Under this head they object to the argument that they cannot support their careat by any trustworthy document, by insisting upon it that they have submitted many of a very respectable and authentic nature, on the erring on the sale of concession than aggression. We strength of which they urge that the claims of Govern- are unchangeable in our opinion that the execution of ment should be set aside.

7th. For an argument, that the perpetual settlement did not comprehend all the mouras individually, they urge that their pattas, and the kaboleut, expressly mention mouzas numerically detailed (with the collective jumma levied on them) comprehended in the what is transpiring on the Mofussil. It is our province several estates they refer to. They comprised in all to earth—we have done so; we have, we trust, honestly 207 move a sistee and dakhilee; assessed at a total given them their dues. We could have lifted up a 207 moveas uslee and dakhilee; assessed at a total jumma of 22,262 supees and 12 annas. And these were all perpetually settled.

Thus far we have very briefly represented the arguments pro and con of the resumption operations, but cannot spare time to enter at any length into the respective of the sentiments of the people over whom they have ments of the question as mooted by the contending their objections by two things. 1st, Fysulas at the civil proceedings, have upheld by their representives in the constituted courts of the country.

But particular justice from us is due to the public officer of Government under whom the resumptions have been carried on in purguunah Furkeca. We allude to the Hoable Mr. Dimmond, with whom we have, in the way of our humble calling, seldom come in centest, That this officer has acquitted himself, in the execution of his peculiarly trying duties to the satisfiction Government, nobody will dony, after the result of the resumptions has exhibited a large amount of revenue added to the coffers of the state. That he could, nevertheless, have given satisfaction to the zemindars, nobody will be willing to credit, but we state it with pleasure as a matter of fact. Such, generally speaking, really is the case. We have had opportunities of conversing with many of the landholders concerned (much against their will, no doubt, originally) in the resumptions, and have from them obtained the following facts: That Mr. Dimmond had decided upwards of two hundred disputed cases, of which only nine had been appealed to filmed, leaving just two, in which his decision had been overruled. We have met with only two or three of the zemindars who seemed to be much discatisfied with the result of Mr. Drummond's proceedings; but even they have been constrained to admit that in the decision of the rest of the cases justice had been done, since he was acting according to the orders of his superiors, and guilling his measures by the regulations of Government. We are no panegyri ts, it will be allowed without controversy; but here we cannot refuse to do justice. We have before us the testimony of nearly a whole body of zemindais acknowledging that, whatever they might have to uige against the aggressive and arbitrary measures of Government, as they denominate them, they, with the exception of one or two captious individuals, conspite to represent Mr. Diummond as conducting his proceedings in the most impartial, cool and deliberate manner; readily admitting of remissions; correctly estimating the capabilities of the lands to be assessed, and rather the important functions vested in the younger branch, especially, of the service, are improperly regulated; and that but a very small number of them are fit to be entrusted with them. The exceptions are discovered accidentally, as it were. The world but scanfily knows finger at Mr. Drummond, but we drop it when we are called upon by the concurring voices of the zemindars of Furkeen to say that they have been satisfied with in his public capacity. We hope that Government will, cie long, prove that it is not indifferent to the expression set generally very incompetent officers for the distribution parties. Let it suffice to inteat Government to hold in one hand the sceptre of mercy, while with the broom in the other, they sweep away any of those rights which to themselves brought to their notice.—Hurkaru, they have themselves created, and till the moment of April 14.

By our last notice, under this head, it appears I that the number of deaths within the limits of Calcutta, amongst the Hindoo inhabitants, was thirteen hundred and thirty-two t from the 1st to the 18th instant. The following has been reported.

		Small Pox.	Cholera.	Miscellane-	Total.

Towards Taultollah and Cullingah, where the cholera had about a fortnight or three weeks ago been most prevalent, it has become very mild; so that the medical students placed in those two thannas, have been withdrawn as having little or nothing to do. But it is now raging with virulence in the northern parts of the town, which are chiefly inhabited by Hindoos, as appears we the above memorandum.

DISCHARGE OF AN UNTIRE THANNA FSTABILISHMENT .--The whole establishment of the Bang Bazar thanna, namely the thannadar, the nails, and all the choleedars attached thereto, were, the other day, discharged for a gross neglect of duty, of which, however, we have not been able to learn the particulars. It is stated that a robbery had lately taken place in their division, of property worthy about eleven hundred rupecs, which they had kept a secret from their superior.

JUDICIAL APPOINTMENT. - William Patrick Grant, Esquire, the son of Sir J. P. G. aut, has been through his father's interest, appointed to the vacant office of Master in Equity.

MR. WILLIAM RUSHTON .- The following well merited tribute, has been paid by the editor of the Englishman to Mr. William Rushton :

announcing that Mr. William Rushton, in conjunction with other parties, is about to commence business on his own account as a book-seller, stationer and printer.

As this measure necessarily involves the dissolution of the connexion latherto subsisting between Mr. Rushton and the Englishman establishment, to the extent, as least, of his duties as printer and publisher, we think it incumbent on us to offer him a public farewell, and to express our hearty good wishes for the complete prosperity of his new undertaking. For five years we have experienced from Mr. Rushten the most active and zealous co-operation in the performance of duties of which no one but ourselves can fully understand the difficulty-no one thoroughly appreciate the mental and bodily labor,—because no one was ever required to at-tempt them in this place before. Our readers may temember when every week, may almost, every day, brought its meeting of angry croditors of fallen houses .of steam projectors, the projectors, library projectors, free press advocates, civil jury clausourers, bank act petitioners, &c. &c; when every Saturday produced its Insolvent Court rife with interesting and intricate proceedings-when every term yielded an infinity of cases springing from the commercial bonderersement of 1830, Many of our supporters will also recollect when an overland packet was a rainty, and never to the calculated upon, and when, in consequence, the arrival of a Liverpool or Bordeaux ship was an event anxion-ly watched for, as likely to put us in possesion of the latest news from home. It was during those periods at cultoral difficulty that we felt the great value of Mr. Lashton's unweared industry and thendly real. Day after day might be be seen at the court-house or the town-hall, diagently reporting the speeches, the judgments and the embaras-sing 'desultory conversation', for which all kinds of meetings were then distinguished; and anon, as it gifted with the sprint of abiquity, he was away down the river in the lighest of beauliahs to meet the latest arrival," at the lightest on becaming to incertain the latest price arrival, telegraphed but a few minutes previously, returning with her (to us) greatest treasure, the latest papers, and creating an 'exita' while our contemporaries were isleep! These were services the value of which we have been reaping for the two past years; and though an alteration in the character of a journalist's Jahors enables us now to dispense in some measure with Mr. Rushion's further aid, we cannot forget what we one to his great energy, activity, prodence and integrity, or deny cutselves the gratification of paying a public tribute to his

As the sole proprietor and editor of the Oriental Observer Mr. Rusaton continues the publication and management of that excellent periodical, but his general printing and stationary establishment is a new under-taking altogether, and, in our opinion, a very great desideratum in this town. We hope he will receive very extensive patronage, for if ever honest man deserved support, he certainly does.

HEALTH IN THE HOUSEUP CORRECTION .- It is considered very strapge that the state of health in the I'ouse of Correction should be so different, from the remainder of the town and its suburba. While cholera and small-pex are raging in a frightful manner beyond its walls, not a single case of any of these scourges has occurred within them. There are now about a hundred and fitty prisoners in it, and some fourteen or titteen of them, only, are afflicted with a slight fever.

THE PRETENDED RAJA OF BURDWAY .- It is said, that the "Our readers have doubtless noticed an advertisement soi-disant Rajah of Burwan, has been ranging about which has been for some days prominently before them, the river lately with a retinue of boats full of his followers. He set out from hence some time ago with ifforhed in from all quarters to see the prisoner. It is said, Chinsman for some time, he proceeded to Culna and landed there with an armed rabble of some 200 men headed by himself in a tonjon, with a drawn sword in his hand, and a European legal functionary attenling him. He ordered the sepahi centry at the Ray Barne to quit his post, which the man declined to do; and the pretender was prevailed upon, with great difficulty, by the darogab, not to attick the man. If he had done so, as there were probably more than 100 of the actual Rajah's men within the gate, with an abundant supply of arms, the pretender and his rabble would have been repulsed. Information of these proceedings being sent to Mr. Ogilvie, the magistrate of Burdwan, that genteman immediately sent orders to the police to compel the pretended Riph and his rabblement to retire. they retused to do; and the Darogah reported that any attempt to carry his orders into effect would be useleand lead to bloodshed, and he had no take at all adequate to cope with the followers of the Pretender. Besides which, the fellow had been visited by crowds of people, the natives coming duly in thousands down to his hoats. In the mean time, I tiers of his had been intercepted, addressed to all the neighbouring remindars, calling upon them to assemble at Burry in and witness his re-ascension to the guidaes of his ancestors! Mr. Ogdvie, under these circumstances, proceeded to Culua, with a nail'ary torce, and apprehended the Pretender, and he is now in custody. The magistrate had previously received orders to apprehend this man, if he should attempt any proceeding of the nature described.

The PRITISHER calling hunself Pertaub Choud and claiming the Raj of Burdwan, of whose proceedings, at Culus, we gave an account the other day, has been apprehensed. It would seem that he never could have had any serious intention of going to Burdwan, as he was perfectly aware that he would not be permitted to go there with an armed rauble, such as he chose to be attended by. He remained, therefore, at Culni until the 2d instant, sometimes going ashore merely to or ate a tamasha. Crowds of people collected to see him, amounting sometimes probably to 50,000, including a very large proportion of women. On the morning of that day, however, the magistrate arrived with a company of the 2d native infantry, commanded by Captain Little of that corps with another commissioned others. They found the imposter in his boats, moored near the mouth of a nullah, in a good position for deence or escape. He had the discretion to choose the latter, and attempted to make off as soon as he saw the troops approach. As soon as the magistrate saw this, he commanded the boatto stop. His orders, however, were disobeyed. Herenpon, by some taistake, a volley was fired by the Troops, and four of the deluded followers of this man were wounded by the fire, three of whom have since med. The fellow upon this, jumped into a drugy, but the people deserting him, he threw himself into the river and got on the bank where he lay motionless like a dead body, and had nearly escaped by this artifice. An experienced havildar, however, gave him a kick and thus discovered him. Several of his followers were taken prisoners in the boats, and among them, three Europeans. One of these is Mr. Shaw, the Attorney, who was lodged in the jail of Burdwan, where his countrymen also found quarters; but they have been brought down to Calcutta on writs of habeas con pus.

The PRETENDER himself, was, immediately after he was captured, sent off to Hooghly, in charge of Captain Little and his company, and was, early on the morning of the 6th instant, delivered over by that oricer to the magistrate of that place, and is safely lodged in the jail. Very few of the natives assembled at Hooghly to witnesthe Jal Rajah's re-entry into the prison; but at Nyah the avowed intention of going to Burdwan. This intention that the Pachete Rajah, one of the powerful zemindars, tion he has not fulfilled; but after remaining opposite to with whom Pertanb Chund was in correspondence, has, since the capture of the Pietender, broken out in open tevolt and attacked and taken possession of a factory of Dr. Cheek's. Mr. Halkett, the officiating magistrate of Burdwan, has gone out against this man, with two compinies of sepays.

> During the last week, Mr. Shaw made an application to the Deputy Governor of Bengal, setting forth, as report says, that the proceedings on the part of the force employed to apprehend Pertaub Chund, were most unwarrantable, and quite uncalled for; he prayed, therefore, that some able and impartial officer may be appointed for due investigation into the affair; and his honour in council was pleased to commission the superintendent of police for the Bengal presidency for that purpose. He has left Calcutta, accordingly, for Burdwan.

The 19th instant was the third day of the examin thou, and, at about half past five, Mr. Longueville Clarke addressed the magistrates and said, for the present his friend, Mr. Leith, and he would addice no further evidence, nor as yet press the magistrates to take any further step for an ex-parte case, which these preliminary inquines always were. They had proved all that was necessary; and he would stake his professional reputation, that if the statements were not contradicted, any judge, charging a jury, would tell them that if they believed the witnesses they must find a verdict of guilty. But he would not now ask the magistrates for a warrant; he should, as he had always stated his intention to be, submit the evidence taken down to the Government; they might hand it to their law others, or, what would be more proper, they might obtain copies of the magistrates' depositions. Ha would give the Government ample time to consider the matter, and to make every inquiry; and, as he believed there is no fear of Mr. Ogdvy's wishing to escape, or that he could do so, he did not consider that by following this course, the ends of justice could be deleated. that he succeedy believed that the ends of justice would have been defeated, it Mr. Leith and he had not forced this investigation on. They had waited to see what the Covernment would do, and they found them sending a gentleman to Burdwan, as he believed, in utter ignorance of the fact, that from the power of Prawn Baboo, and the diead of the magistrate, no witness would go here to depose against them. This he had distinctly here to depose against them. This he had distinctly proved in evidence, and also Mr. Ogilvy's admission, on a former occasion, "that the Rajhbarry was a ank or iniquity, and that he believed every native in the Government employment at Burdwan, was an annuitant of Prawn Baboo's." The witnesses would not go there, and they were all here, and nineteen of them he had ammed. By this course he had saved evidence, which he believed would otherwise have been lost, and he had only caused it to be taken in the legal and proper manner, before the justice of the peace. He appealed to the magistrates to say, whether his friend and he had not conducted the examinations fairly towards the accused, and the witnesses

Mr. O'Hanlon said, most fairly, that he believed, if it became necessary to issue a warrant, Mr. Ogilvie would surrender. Mr. Clarke replied, that it it rested with him, the accused should not be put to any inconvenience which was not absolutely unavoidable, with a view to the ends of justice. Mr. Clarke also stated, that the intentions of his friend and himself to forward their notes of the depositions, as soon as they could be fair copied, had been communicated to the Government. O'Haulon observed, that he also had mentioned it."

DORJELING .- The new settlement at Dorjeling proare well. About fifteen locations have been made, and id litional applications are daily flowing in. A line of Serai where Capt. Little had encamped the evening inditional applications are daily flowing in. A line of before, we learn that many thousands of people had bungalows is constructing in the new road to the new to enable the good work to proceed.

proprietors was held on the 5th instant, for the purpose of quested to form the committee of investigation. In this had resigned. Sir J. P. Grant was in the chair. Mr. Bell's letter, assigning, as a reason for his resignation, a difference of opinion with his colleagues, was read. A minute, by the same gentleman, and counter-minutes, by Mesers. H. M. Parker and W. P. Guant were likewise read, and a discussion ensued thereupon. It appeared that Mr. Bell considered the library in a state of insolveney, and that he saw no prospect of extricating it from its deficulties. He also seemed to feel huit, that he had not been consulted by his colleagues, touching some of the measures which had been adopted by them.

Mr. W. P. Grant, in explanation, denied that a difference of opinion substited between Mr. Bell, Mr. Parker and houself, he likewise disputed the accuracy of Mr Bell's calculations, and shewed, by the scruttny of an account laid before the meeting, and prepared by the librarian, that the library was fur from being in a state of in-olivency. Mr. Grant further stated, that Mr. Bell had always been duly invied to the meetings of the curators, but having failed to attend, he could not justly complain of not having been consulted. Mr. Grant spoke of the attacks, which had been made on the creators in the public papers, and appeared to think, that they proceed d partly from an unaccountable wish to discredit the efforts of the curators, and partly from ignorance of the real state of affairs.

Mr. Stocqueler part parale, and with reference to the remark ie saiding new-paper attacks, avoived that he grounded those which the Inglishman had made, on evidence furnished by the curators themselves. He referred to then last published statement of accounts, (1st April) in which it appeared that the library oned upwards of eight hundred supces to the Union Bank, but had, to meet the debt, only 900 rupees, in course of collection, a sum that might or might not be recover

Mr. Stoequeler said, that he felt much interest in the prosperity of the library, and that, as the public could only be induced to support it by being put in possession of the state of affairs, he thought it the duty of the press, when the affairs were represented to be in disorder, to urge a reform in the management. The was much grant fied with Mr. W. P. Gram's present explanation, and regretted that it had not been laid before the public, instead of the imperfect statement which had alarmed him (Mr. S.) and other friends to the library.

Mr. W. P. Grant and Mr. H. M. Parker expressed their surprise, that the imperfect statement should have found its way into the public prints. It continued important omissions, and its appearance had not been sanctioned by them.

On the question of Mr. Bell's resignation being put from the chair, Mr. Bell was asked whether what he had then heard and seen respecting the accounts, did not cause any alteration in his intentions !

Mr. Bell avoxed that his opinion remained unaftered.

Mr. W. Adam then proposed that a committee be formed to investigate the accounts, and report upon the article of diet, a limitably adopted to the uses of convalesstate of affairs.

Mr. J. P Grant seconded the proposition, Mr. Stocqueler moved as an amendment, that the curators be queduct, which was noticed in the papers some time requested to prepare and publish a statement of the ac- ago, as proposed to be made in New Colootollah street, counts made up to the 1st May (matant), exhibiting all at the expense of Baboo Moteciaul Seal and Baboo settlement, to which all interested subscribe 100 rupees; the available assets of the institution, and specifying its for this sum Col. Lloyd's agents now call upon them, debts and dependences. Mr. W. Ochme seconded the amendment. Mr. W. Adam submitted that the original motion and the amendment might be rendered perfectly PUBLIC LIMIARY .- A meeting of the subscribers and compatible with each other, by the curators being reelecting a curator, in the too not Mr. John Bell, who form the proposals were put from the chair and agreed to nem. con.

> On a motion that the meeting do proceed to elect a curator, in .uncession to Mr. Bell, Mr. Morrell proposed Mr. Stocqueler, Mr. S. submitted that, not being a proprictor, be was inclusible. Mr. J. P. Grant then named Mr. William Care, who had formerly been a curator, and merely resigned because he was about to proceed to England. Mr. Stocqueler seconded the nomination, and Mr. Carr was duly elected.

> The meeting then separated after voting thanks to Sir. J. P. Grant, for the kind manner in which he had performed the troublesome duties of the chair.

> SALE OF COMPANY'S COMMISSIONS .- Despitches have been received in India, announcing the intention of the Honourable Court to withdraw their old prohibition of the sale and nurchase of commissions in the army; in other words, it has been found expedient to legalize the purchasing system which could not be prevented.

> CIVIL SERVINIS' PERIOD OF PROBATION. - It is said that the Court or Directors intend to vest a discretionary power in the local Government, of modifying the present peremptory rule, which allows to their civil servants, the term of one year only for passing the college examinations, from the date of their arrival at the presidency.

> numours of wan. - Preparations for a further concentration of forces, are said to be going on, and another company of suppers and mucis have marched for Sylhet; and it is bounted, that two more regiments will be added to the Sylhet frontier.

> section writish .- Government have at length come to a decision on the much mooted question of remuneration to section writers. The pay is henceforward to be one rupes for one thousand four hundred and forty words. The resolution applies to all section writers who have entered the service subsequent to the 1st of January last, int does not affect the remineration of old servants. At the end of each year a committee as to be formed to take into consideration all matters touching section viiting, and to make their report thereon.

> DISCOVERY OF MAKING PAPIOGA .- Mr. D. W. H. Speed has succeeded in making tapoca from the cursara plant. Having organied some plants of the cristata from the Hor-neultural Society, Mr. Speed, proceeded to his task with an ability that exhibits itself in the perfect success or his ondeavours. To make the speculation in any way responsive to the trouble and time which it requires. It is destrable that the remaining portions of the plant should find a sale in the market; and as it is in its nature nearly, if not altogether, unknown to our native tellow citizen, we have the pleasure to state for their information, that the cassiva is used in the West Indise as a substitute for bread, and that very pretty eating may be had from it, in the shape of good, wholesome food. It any inducement were given by purchasing these portions, so that on the disposal of the whole plant, a profit might be reaped from his labours, we are given to understand, that Mr. Speed would not be unwilling to manufacture another cents and young children.

> ACQUIDUCT IN NEW COOLLOOTOLAH STREET. -The ac-

Baboos about four thousand rupees.

FANCY SALF .- The sale of fincy articles for the relief of sufferers in the north-western provinces, realized about six thousand supees.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH OF MR. HUNTER .- Intelligence has been received of the death of Mr. Hunter, of the civil service, under very inclancholy circumstances. catastrophe is described in the following extract of a letter, dated Ghazeepore, May 8, 1838.

'Mr. Hunter, joint magistrate of this station, was amusing himself yesterday evering about 6 o'clack, leaping a spirited horse over a ditch or diam. About the third attempt, the horse reared and turned, winch suddealy unscated Mr. II .. -- he fell on his head, crushing the crown inwards, and was taken up senseless; blood was gushing from his mouth and cars. Medical aid was speedily called. Mr. Assistant Surgeon Jackson was first in attendance, but nothing could be done; the poor gentleman never spoke again, and was dead in an hour after the accident.

MR. MANGLES .- Mr. Ross Donelly Mangles has been appointed to succeed Mr. Walters in the Board of Revenue. This leaves the secretary-hip in the judicial department to the Governor of Bengal vacant, and it is not improbable. Mr. F. Halliday will be permanently appoined in Mr. Mangles's room,

THE LUTTERAL AND PINITE GARMS .- A letter from Assam states, that the Lutturah and Peshee Grums had returned to their old places, and that there is not the slightest chance of another distribunce at present, they having sent back then hired fighting men.

the bordish and nipavitise .- I'wo companies of Assam light infantry have been ordered to keep the pass between Burmah and Neoaul, and to intercept all letters that may be passing. A sample of Thatawaddi's second has been sent to Major La ter for his guidance It is a compound of clause pot hooks and hangers, as a great man's manuscript cugnt to be-The Nepaulese Rajah, on the other hand, writers a fine fist, something between German test and runing hand.

SALE OF THE COMPANY'S SILK FACTORIES .- The undermentioned silk filatures, belonging to the East India Company, which were put up for sale at the export warehouse on the 224 instant, fetched the following Bhowannygunje factory, 100 pottery clives, &c., standing on about 12 beggs of land, subject to an annual tent of Sa. Rs. 72. Upset pince Company's rupees 1,780, was purchased by Baboo Rogoonath Bose for Co.'s Rs. 1,785.

Hajah sactory, 180 pottery glyes, &c. standing on about 21 begas and 12 cottahs of land, subject to an annual rent of Sa. Rs. 43-3-4. Up et pine Com-

Madoymooree factory, 70 pottery glyes, &c., standing on about 9 beegas of land, subject to an annual rent of Sa. Rs. 36 Upset price Company's inpres-1,423, was purchased by the same individual for Co.'s Rs. 1,482.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF .- His Excellency the Commander-in-chief has tendered his resignation. Phis regulation, in which his departure for England has been fixed to take place in the ensuing cold weather, was sent in last month, various reasons of a public nature, are assigned for this step.

MOFUSSIL.

Mandhub Dutt, has lately been begun. It will cost the Iments of a Maire du Palais, but who has now engage? to relinquish these prerogatives, on being granted a lat jugher! These arrangements will, in all probability, be concluded by the end of the present month, when Colonel Alves expects to return to Ajmere.

> The wealthy Seths of the city of Ajmere have munificently come down with nearly two-thousand rupees, in aid of the tamt-hing poor of the Dooab.

> AGRA.-The weather has been extremely variable since the last report, the wind being chiefly from the north, and north east, at one time hot and oppressive, even long after sun set, but as the might advances, at becomes almost cold. This must be owing to rain from a northerly quarter, and it is known, that a heavy full took place at Kurnaul on the night of the 11th and 12th instants. Cholera, happily, continues to retrograde, but the hospitals, European and native, are full of lever cases, accompanied by distressing afficetions of the head. A general deterioration of air, or exhalations hasted to an extent in its operation, assisted at the same time by a great diversity of temperature, have, no doubt, rendered the present season a very unhealthy one.

> The number of poor working under the magistrate are still ranged somewhat below 80,000. The official return is 77,500, and the new entries are at present not more than sufficient to cover the number of vacancies ausing from dislike to hard work, a wish to better saudtion, deatn, sickness, and the dread of catching the cholera.

> MULTRA. - Oxing to cholera having prevailed for some time past amongst the Europeans of the troop of Hor- Adultery at Mattia, where several men have been carried off by the disease, it has been determined to move the troops into tents across the Jumna, for change of air, and to enable the barracks to be whitewashed, and otherwise purified; the same measure having been resorted to, with complete success last year, in respect to the Foot Artiflery at Agra.

Arryounn .- The bridge over the Kala Nudlee at Hydromy in this district, has suffered a serious fracture. one of the blad arches having sank so as to become separated from the man building. This bridge was only finished in 1830, and cost the Government 96,000 inpecs.

Cholera and small-pox have both broken out in this town, but have not assumed any very virulent character.

Mysroomi. - Mangoe grove, large enough to hold between 2,000 and 3,000 people, is walled in, and divided by a bamboo fcace, rato secure and commodious lines. Into this enclosure the poor are admitted every morning at daylineak. Bread is baked on the premises of a Resident, and its distribution is superintended by pany's Rs. 2,657, was purchased by Baboo Cosmath another soon after sunnes. Three chapattees weigh a Bose for Co's Rs. 2,670. two to the less needy, and to the weaker children, and one to the remainder; a man follows, distributing salt, and four bluestees of water. Subordinate arrange-ments are observed, and adopted as suggested by necessity, for convenience of distribution, and the preservation of order; thus, tickets, consisting of an office stamp pasted on wood, are suspended to the neeks of the weaker objects, and these are confined to one line; none are allowed to pass the entrance, not to use from their seats, after a certain juncture. These, and simitheir seats, after a certain juncture. ar precautions are necessary, for the good of the whole. The number now led, amounts to about 1,450 souls; and without doubt, the majority of these are nearly, if DELHI. - Colonel Alves, and his corps diplomatique, not entirely, sustained by the chantly. FIVEA was never so crowded as it is this season .- The rent of houses is enhanced they per cent. Upwards of twenty houses of this and last year's election, are all occupied. Public offices are converted into private residences by the majority of the Covernor-General's office establishments, and the public bazar contains a portion of those who were unfortunate enough not to obtain domiriles elsewhere. Land Auckland is said to be displeated with his house. It is frittered away in paltry closets six and seven feet square, and has only two rooms deserving the name. His Lordship's staff are little better off. Among the Commander-in-Chief's party, there are many in larger and better houses than His Lordship. This is rather chaguning. His Lordship's cutrée was rather imposing the thie of Soula, headed by Sn H. Fane and staff in "review order," ushered but in. Provisions are scarce and dear, which, perhaps, accounts for the monotonous duiness of the place at present. Balls and dinners are talked of, and the political agent is preparing for a grand fête to be assembled at Simla. Theatricals were talked of, but the diamatis persone hang back from apprehensions, that their body is neither numerous nor choice enough to afford popular representations. It is said that the Governor General returns here next season, after visiting I ahore, but doubts are entertained whether the Commander-in-Chief dees. The death of his mother may induce his return home, but every thing is as yet in profound uncertainty. A mission from Labore is daily expected, and a return one, headed by Mr. Macnaghten, is talked of. The establishment of a cantonneat at Ferozepore on the Sutlege is, I believe, determined on, and apprehension seem to be entertained that all is not right on the N.W. frontier. Arullery and Cavalry, it is presumed, will constitute our chief arm at the remodeled fortiess and new cantonment. This influenza, an enidemic, which more or less has affected the inhabitants of Upper India during the last four mouths, visited this place, and is now disappearing. Its symptoms are those of mild fever and partial cold, and with care it is got over in a few days. On Wednesday and Saturday evenings, the public are gratified with good music from the Governor-General's band. There are about 300 Christian re-idents here now. The weather is still delightfully cool; fires are kept in the houses, and people stroll about all day without even a chatta.

mononya .- A fire broke out in the Surwun Bazar at Monghyr, on the evening of 8th of April, at sunset, which, owing to the high wind blowing at the time, first threat ened to be very destructive, but was afterwards naupily got under without any very extensive lose. The vicinity of the burnt part of the town to a bazar, in which a vast quantity of grain was stored, caused serious starm at the commencement of the disaster, but we are happy to have learnt that the flames were airested before reaching this valuable store. It is supposed that not more than five and twenty houses were burnt, and these, for the most part, were huts. Had the wind blown a contrary quarter, that is from the westward instead of the eastward, a great portion of the town must have been destroyed. The conflagration was accidental, having been excited by the overboiling of a ghee pot.

comments.- A deputation, headed by Mr. Secretary Maonaghten, to the Lahore Court, was to leave this station on the 10th instant. Its object, is, it is supposed, to arrange preliminaries and forms for the interview between Lord Auckland and Runjeet Sing, which is to take place at Faurapoor on the Sutlege, west November. The deputation will be escerted by two companies of pative troops. 8

One fellow aimed duectly at his breast but by wheeling his horse sharply round he escaped the blow, the weapon passing under the brille arm, without injury. Being no match for the party, he put spurs to his horse and escaped, after being pursued for two miles. A representation of the business has been forwarded to Government by Mr. Bax at Indose, and it is to be hoped that something will be done to rid the country of these scoundrels.

LOSS OF A LAICE VINEY AND A LATAMAR. - A large vessel and a patram have been lost between Burn Hills and Mount Lormosa to the southward. The wie k was discovered by a vessel which littly passed down the coast, and information of the event communicated to our naval authorities. The person by whom the com-munication was made, observed to leaves I a large span about 15 or 26 feet above water, and, on proceeding to exar one this, another spar was observed stinling eight fect out of the sea The first was evidently, it is said the lower mast of a vessel, as the step of it was clearly distinguish able, and the emiller our was the mast heal of a jata mar with the rightng upon it. I from the observations which were made, it was supposed that the wreck must have been a barque, and that she must have gone down In a straight direction, her keel rusting on the bottom.

Those who examined the vessel think that she in ist have been of a large size. Ludeavours were made to disenting each of the spars but without success, although they managed to tow the smaller one thout fifteen yard-, when it was retained by something to which it appeared to be attached. On sounding there was a depth of 23 fathoms alongside the vessel which was lying with her thought she was honeward bound. The pattamer, on examination, appeared to be held down only by the ship's rigging, and could be moved about easily. They sounded also on the deck of the versel but could not see enther its hull or that of the pattamar. The conjecture 19, that the vessel and the pattamar must have come in collision during the night of Monday the 23d of April, which was a very dark and borsterous one, and to have gone down both of them instantaneously. Great fears are entertained that all on board perished. The wreck are entertained that all on board pershed. The wreck lies in 22 fathoms water about 15 or 16 miles from the shore, in latitude 12° 26' north, longitude 74° 59' east, Burn Hill bearing north 48°, east Mount Formoss S. 72° E, and Mount Dillyinst in sight from the goop bearing S. 400 E.

The result of the investigation which was held at Mart bin by two Burmese offi ers of rank, into the outrages committed on our frontier, is just what wis all along anticipated. It seems that the burnese officers sent over to say they had secured two of the men accused of commuting murders and robbertes. Mr. de la Conda-mine proce led to Mutabin to ascertain the fact, and hem -att hed they were the men, (though they were any thing but secured, being in fact gentlemen, at large, and in the suit of a high Bileng official who had accompanied the burmers commissioners) he called for the appr hension of some more of those whose names had Wen given in by him on a former occasion. They had made enquires, they sud, and apprehended two men, and they intended to return to Rangoon immediately. Being 2-ked if they intended to try even the two men whom they pretended to have secured, they said no, it was no part of their duty. Mr. de la C took his leave and the next morning, (the lat) the two Burmese officers, started on their return, although the day before they had said they ratended remaining some days longer. What occasioned this precipitate retreat on their part is not known. Some attribute it to the want of provisious at Martaban for so large a number of followers as accompanied them ; others to the preparations going on here for the reception of additional tipons. Others again asset that orders have come down from Court, both to prohibit the enterspacement of dacous in future, and to put a stop to any enquiry into what they may have already effected. Among the native reports current in the place, one that pomessi pecular interest for the Mauhman ship-builders, is, that opposition building-yards are to be established at Mariaban under the auspices of Mr. Sarkies.

DREADFUL MASSACRE OF THE ENIGRANT FARMERS .-By the mail which arrived this morning from the northern frontier, we have received the appalling intelligence of the massacre of Mr. Pieren Reiter, together with 270 persons, comprising men, women, and children! If the account furnished us be correct, the Zoolu Chief, Dingan, must, with the most subtle treachery, have inveigled the emigrants into his territories, and, having acquired their confidence, he must, at a moment when thrown off their guard by his specious kindness, scartered and comparatively detenceless, have committed this savage butchery. Colesberg, 4th March,

" Agreeably to the wish of Dingaan, as respects the emigrant farmers settling in his territory, Pieter Retief proceeded to take possession of such lands as that that had previously pointed out for the purpose. After a me-ome journey, and having passed through numbers of Dinguan's people, with the most friendly intercourse, they arrived at a spot in the vicinity of Port Natal, where they established their head-quarters, and on which they purposed to build a fort, &c. Two days after their arrival, Retref made known his intention of lacating on separate places such families as might wish to be so placed. On the fourth day these persons assembled with their waggons and families, amounting in all to two hundred and seventy souls, men, women, and children. On the fifth day they left head-quarters, and, on the night of the seventh day, they were rurrounded, and attacked by a commando of Dingaan's people, and all perished, including PIEIER RETIEF!

" Intelligence of this dreadful catastrophe has been received by Mr. Maritz (formerly of Graaff-Reinct), and by him it has been forwarded to farmers residing on the Riet and Modder rivers, together with a communication that he wishes as many as are capable to join him to the purpose of giving assistance to the emigrants remaining at Reties head-quarters. In consequence, however, of a rumour that all are killed, the farmers are rather tardy in their movements, and some doubt is expressed as to whither they will proceed.

" I have this intelligence on the authority of a gentleman of unboubted respectability, who has actually read the document, spoke to Maritz on the subject, and who left to their tender mercies. At present time will not heard the aged people bewaiting the loss of the children."

THE OVERLAND ROUTE.

REPORT.

The steam committee in publishing the following report of Col. Barr's proceedings in Egypt, have to congratulate the subscribers to the fund, and the public in general, on the near completion of arrangements which will so greatly tend to facilitate the transit, and promote the comfort of passengers, proceeding to England the the Red Sea.

It will be in the recollection of the subscribers that Col. Barr, under instructions from the committee, took with him from hence and also purchased in Egypt, sundry articles, consisting of small tents, sedan chairs, covered chairs for ladies and children; tables, small table chairs and cooking utensits; a portion of which he left at Cossier, to be distributed on the route between that place and Thebes; and the remainder he disposed of between Suez and Cairo. These will be found sufficient for the accommodation of such passingers as are likely to proceed by these routes, before the more extended improvements are brought into operation.

Immediately on his arrival in Egypt, Col. Barr communicated, as requested by the committee, with Col. Campbell, the consult general there, who entered warmly into our project and addressed to Boghoz Bey, the minister, a long official letter to be submitted to the Pacha, on the subject of the erection of suitable buildings between Sucz and Cairo.

Pending the expected answer to this communication, which on the assurance of Boghoz Bey, the committee have every reason to believe will be favourable; arrangements were entered into with Messrs. Hill and Raven, of Carro, to provide the necessary establishment of carriages and baggage, waggons, &c., for conveying passengers across the desert.—This agreement provides, that in consideration of the sum of £1,000 Sterling, Messrs. Hill and Raven engage to procure and hold on account of the steam committee.

- 4 Light vans with canvas or woollen awnings and stuffed seats.
- 2 Luggage waggons.
- 40 Mules.
- 5 Sets of harness for light vans of 4 mules each.
- 3 Sets of harness for luggage waggons of 6 mules each and to keep up the following establishment:
- 6 Carriage drivers.
- 15 Assistants at station-houses.
- 1 Harness mender, and
- 2 Shoeing smiths; one at Suez and one at the centre

The whole to be kept in a thorough and efficient state | Englan of repair for the space of five years, commencing from | Egypt.

five months after the 20th April, at which time the £1,000 was paid to the contractors.

The following regulations as to the time of starting from Sucz and Cano, the rate of travelling, and the fares to be charged, were also arranged.

TIMES OF STARTING AND RATE OF TRAVELLING.

From Cairo.—If more than a sufficient number of passengers for one van are anxious to proceed to Suez; the first van to stait within 48 hours before the departure of the steamer from Suez, and the second within twelve nours after the first. It only sufficient passengers for one van, to start thirty-six hours before the departure of the steamer; or as may otherwise be agreed on by the najority of passengers.

From Suez.—The first van to start six hours after the landing of the first lady passengers from the steamer;—the second twelve hours after the first; if the number of passengers exceed ten. In event of there being no lady passengers, then the first van to start six hours after the landing of the first ten male passengers,—Ladies to have always prior claim as to proceeding by the first or subsequent carriages.

The right of male passengers, without families, to a similar choice, to be hereafter determined by the steam committee. Every facility to be afforded to such addes or gentlemen as may wish to perform the whole, an any part, of the journey by saddle, in place of carnage conveyance.

THE RATE OF TRAVELLING TO BE,

20 hours actual travelling, or less if practicable.
21-3 hours stoppage at the centre station.
2 do. at the other stations.

The votes of a majority of passengers by any carriage, may extend the period of halting at the mid-way station for any number of hours, not exceeding twelve; or of departure from Cano or Suez for six additional hours. I had a latitude be necessary at particular seasons.

FARES AND CHARGES.

The above to include the carriage of one cwt. of luggage for each lady or gentleman, and ½ cwt. for each child or servant, with provisions, attendance, &c.—but not including wines, spirits, beer to go by the laggage. Extra loggage waggons, and be charged at the rate of five sinhlings per cwt.

To procure the carriages, in conformity with the above agreement, Mr. Raven was about to proceed to England, at the period of Col. Barr's departure from Egypt.

ŧ

With regard to the buildings between Suez and Cairo, plans have been prepared of a centre station and four intermediate ones in the desert, which are now before the committee, all of which Messrs. Hilland Raven offer to contract to build, for the sum of 5,117 dollars, or about 12,000 rupees. The centre station to contain one room of 24 feet by 18, and 5 sleeping apartments of 14 by 12, and 15 feet high, with stabling and other requisite buildings; the whole protected and euclosed by a wall 15 feet high to be built of stone, in a subsantial and workmanlike manner. A water tank also to be added sufficiently large for the use of the mules.

The intermediate bungalows to be built with walls twelve feet high, and to have stabling attached; together with water tanks, the whole to be built in the same substantial manner as the centre station.

At the date of Col. Barr's departure from Cairo, Ccl. Campbell had not received any positive answer from the Pacha, rolative to the erection of these buildings, but in a letter dated Alexandria the 11th April, he writes to Col. Barr, that "the Pacha, who is now in the Delta, has written; in a letter received yesterday; that he will arrange everything satisfactorily with me respecting those buildings on his arrival at Alexandria, which will be in a few days. His arrival however will probably not be in time for me to communicate to you, before the departure of the expected steamer, any arrangements which the Pacha may make with me, and therefore I fear that I shall not be able to let you or the Bombay steam committee, know the result before the steamer which will leave Suez in the ensuing month.

"Nothing, of course, can be undertaken in the way of building or forming establishments of any kind or nature, between Suez and Cairo, until I shall obtain the Pacha's sanction to that effect."

The committee have every reason to believe that the Pacha will himself undertake the erection of these buildings, but in the event of his declining to do so it will be necessary to place at the disposal of Col. Campbell, the requisite funds for carrying on the work on his obtaining His Highness's sanction to do so. In the mean time, however, a sufficient number of 'ents have been provided as substitutes for the buildings; and as the contract with Messis. Hill and Raven, comes into operation on the 1st of October, passengers on landing at Suez, from and after that date, will find there a branch of the Cairo hotel, where they can remain comfortably, fise of all expense (except for wines, &c.) for as many hours as they please. From thence a ten hours' drive in a comfortable open, or close carriage, over an excellent road, will take them to the half-way house, whence an additional drive of 9 or 13 hours brings them to Caire, where they will find comfortable accommodations in the English hotel.

With a view also to improving the communication between Cosseir and Thebes, likely to be visited by so many passengers from India, Col. Bair communicated with a Mr. Prisse, a civil engineer, formerly in the Pacha's employ, now resident at Luxor, and obtained from him plans for a building at Luxor, another at Cosseir, and four intermediate ones in the desert, the erection of which he offers to superintend and conduct.

He states, however, that it is difficult to estimate correctly the expense of building in Egypt where the price of labour and materials varies so much, but he feels confident that the cost of those he proposes, would not exceed, under any circumstances, £1,700.

The Pacha had also given orders to build a number of boats both for the Nile and Canil, to be placed under the entire control of the consul-, allowing them to fix a fair scale of passage-money. As we may reasonably expect, from the management under which they will be placed that these boats will be kept in a proper states of cleanliness, this act of the Pacha's will prove one of the greatest boons he could grant to the traveller through his dominions. His Highness had further intimated his intention of having small steamers on the Nile and Canil, is soon as they can be prepared, and has, in fact, promised to afford every facility for the transit of passengers. The committee have only to state in conclusion, that an accompdation building at Mocha or Aden, if the latter should be selected as the coal depôt, appears to be absolutely necessary for the comfort of passengers, as all complain of the discomfort of having to remain on board the steamer while the coals are being taken in.

TRIAL BY JURY IN CIVIL CASES.

addressed to the Honourble the President of the Council of India, by the committee appointed by a public meeting at the Town-hall to communicate with the Government, respecting trial by jury in civil cases in the Supreme Court, and the answer of Mr. R. D. Mangles, the afficiating Secretary to the Government of india. The case of P ittsh subjects is strongly and clearly put; and the delay and dilatoriness of the "powers that be" not spaced. The answer is anything but satisfactory; for the committee are told to want the result of the deliberations of the Law Commissioners, "who are engaged in the consideration of the existing law of procedure in all the Courts of India and in framing a code for the future regulation of the same;" and consequently ten years hence we may possibly hear a recommendation of jury trial in civil cases has gone home for the opinions of the Court of Directors, and Board of Control, and in ten years more, we may, if we are in good luck, ascertain what those opinions may be. Six years have been consumed already, and the only progress we have made is the receipt of an assurance, that "the best attention of the Legislative Council will be given to our wishes," which means, being translated, "open your mouth and shut your eyes and see what the gods will send you."

Calcutta, May 21, 1838.

To the Hon, the President of the Council of India.

Howell Sin, - We beg permission to address you as the committee appointed by a public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta, convened for the purpose of promoting trial by jury in civil cases in Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature for this presidency. Our this city, a prayer important in its object, often urged, committee up to the time that he became a Judge of the powerfully supported, yet long left without any reply.

In 1726, British Law was first introduced into India, the Supreme Court, cousine, and in 1774 the Supreme Court was founded in Calcutta, with the same number of judges and similar jurisdicdetermined, that except in crimal cases, they had no of the profession was strongly in favour of the measure. authority to try by jury. In consequence of this determination a petition was presented by the inhabitants of this city to the legislature, against a court being established, "who should be at once judges and jury, and invested with uncontrolled and indefinite powers, such as no men were to be trusted with." This peti tion was presented, but was not followed up by any substantive motion, for then one great obstacle existed to granting its prayer, which has long since been removel, the waster a sufficient numb r of capable jurymen

On the 14th of April 1832, a public meeting waconvened at the l'own-hall to petition. Pailiment for a legislative enactment, for trial by Jury in civil cases. The requisition to the Sheriff was signed by the unprecedented number of 312 persons, comprehending every mercantile firm in Calcutta, and 162 of the most opulent One of the present judges of the Court, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Grant, took a most prominent part at the inceting, and all the re-olutions were carried with only one dissentient voice, and 3,108 inhabitants of Calcutta, signed the petition to the King and Legislature.

The Right Hon'blo Charles Grant presented this petition to His Majesty and to the House of Commons and the Marquis of Lausdowne to the House of Lords. Mr. Grant, as President of the Board of Commissioners for the Affans of India, addressed a letter dated Novem her 1831, to Mr. Longueville Clarke, the chairman of the committee, recommending an application to the Governor General and the Legislative Council, as possessing full powers to comply with the prayer of the petition. In consequence of this recommendation, a second public meeting was convened by the high Sherff at the Town-hall on the 8th of July 1835, at which a petition was unanimously voted to the Hon'ble Sir Charles Phoophilus Metclafe, then Governor General, praying for an Act of Council, granting trial by jury in civil cases, and which petition was singed on behalf on the inhabitants by the high Sheriff of the city.

No legislative enactment having been passed, and the Right Honourable Lord Auckland having arrived as Governor General, a third public meeting of the in-habitants of Calcutta was convened at the Town-hall on the 12th of April 1836. At this meeting a petition to the Governor General was unanimously voted, and presented to him personally by the high Sheriff, and the whole committee, on which occasion, his loudship was pleased to say, that the petition should be laid before the Law Commissioners and their attention called to its great importance.

From that time to the present no legislative enactment has been passed, no communication has been made to the committee, and trial by jury in civil cases has not been introduced into Calcutta.

In addition to the above detail, shewing the unanimous wish and continued efforts of the inhabitants of this city to obtain trial by jury, we beg to refer to the repeated charges of chief justice Ryan to the Grand Junier, especially in the 12th of April 1828, and also to the charges of Chief Justice Grey, and Mr. Justice Franks, pronouncing their strong opinions on the importance "what alteration should be introduced in the mode in

We do submit in plain, but we trust in becoming language, that the strength of our case is almost unparallelled. The capital of British India is now praying for the inmoduction of that system, which is the most ancient, and the most prized in the British Constitution, a system closely identified with the cherished punchyat of the natives, and forming as it were a link still further to unite the European and native subjects of Her Majesty. The introduction of this system has been strongly advocated by the judges of the very Court in which it is to take effect, it has been advocated by the bar, the officers, and the attornies, and three times in the last eight years have the citizens publicly assembled and pentioned the Crown, the Legislature, and the local Government, to grant them that trial by jury, which ought to be inseparable from British rule, and which is rapidly introducing into every country through which knowledge, freedom, and tolerance, are dissemmating.

Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor was called to the chair.

The secretary read a short report of the proceedings of the committee since the last general meeting, and which is as follows:

The committee beg leave to lay before the Society, the following short report of their proceedings since the last general meeting.

Their first meeting was held at the Town-hall on the 27th March, when an establishment was voted for carrying on the business of the Society, and Mr. Dickens was requested to find some gentleman willing to undertake the office of secretary. The Union Bank was requested to act as treasurer, and it was ordered that a respectful letter be addressed to Government, informing them of the establishment of the Society, soliciting to be allowed to communicate with Government through the secretary of the Society on all subjects connected with the general interests of the landbolders, in the same manner that the Chamber of Commerce does now on matters relating to trade.

An application was presented by the provisional secretary, requesting the Society to memorialize the Government, to introduce the Vernacular language into the proceeding of the Sudder instead of the Oordo, as contemplated at present.

On the 2d of April, the committee met at Mr. Hurry's office, that gentleman having agreed to act as European fecretary, and having officed the Society the use of apartments in his house, No. 3, Clive-street gliant. Baboo Prosonoocomar l'agone also consented to continue to act as secretary for the native languages.

The followin ligentlerian were elected additional members of the committee.

Baboo Pranauth Chowdry; Baboo Callynauth Roy Chowdry; Baboo Mothornauth Mullick; Baboo Shumbo chunder Mitter; Rajah Burrodacaunt Roy; and Baboo Radhamadhub Banerjee.

A list of districts was submitted to the meeting, in order to form sub-committees of correspondence.

On the 23d April, the committee took into considera- ceipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo, at that the resumption petition, and agreed to forward it to copy of the proposed resumption regulation.

Government, and support it by a separate representation. It was resolved, that Government should be applied to, for a copy of the draft resumption law, which is under-tood to have been printed. The answer of Government to the request of the Society, to be allowed to communicate with it having been received, was read, and is as follows:

No. 501.

TO W. C. HURBY, ESQ. AND BABJO PROSONOOCOOMAR TAGORE.

Gentlemen, I am directed to acknowledge the recetpt of your letter dated the 7th instant, enclosing the prospectus of a Society to be called the Landholders' Society, and requesting permission to address the Government, through the medium of the Society's secretary, in the same manner as is done by the Chamber of Commerce.

In reply, I am directed to state, that the Hon'ble the deputy Governor of Bengal will always be disposed to receive and consider the representations of any class of the inhabitants, affecting their own interests or the good of the community.

The communications of the Landholders' Society upon matters connected with the lands, revenue, and judicial departments of government, must be addressed in due course, through the secretary of those departments.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

The translation of the above report in Bengallee was also read by the pundit of the Society, for the explanation of those who do not understand English.

An application from Moonshee Mohumed Ameer, expressing his opinion in favour of the Persian language, was also read by the secretaries in Bengalice and Enghish, which was replyed to, by the following gentle-men: - Baboo Dwukanauth Tagore, Rajah Ranthacaunt Bahadoor, Mr. W. Feigusson, and G. Prinsep,

After a considerable discussion on the merits of the petition, the following resolution was proposed by G. A. Prinsep, Esq. That this meeting generally concur in the opinion expressed in the pennion, that it would be desirable to make the Bengalice the language of the courts in Bengal, and the Oordoo that of the courts of Behar and upper-provinces; but as the question affects not the landed interests alone, but all the community, this inceting do not think it a subject proper to be taken up separately by the Landholders' Society. This was seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and carried unaumously. After offering the usual thanks to the chanman, the meeting dissolved.

TO THE HONOURABLE THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

HONOURABLE Sin, - I have been directed by the committee for encouraging the importation of American ice into Calcutta, to solicit most respectfully the aid of the Government, in promoting the undertaking.

The grounds on which the committee urge this request are, that the importation of ice is of the greatest importance to the public health, and that the success of the undertaking is endangered, unless assistance be

The committee are well aware of the unremitting attention bestowed by Government to the great object of public health, and of the vast sums expended for this They therefore believe, that it they can clearpurpose. They therefore believe, that it they can clear-ly establish that the importation of ice is of immense consequence to the health of this great capital, that the assistance which they seek will meet with favourable consideration.

The committee have obtained the opinions of all the principal medical practitioners in Calcutta, regarding the efficacy of ice in diseases, peculiarly incidental to of ice at prices which Mr. Tudor could afford to pay.

the climate, and I am directed to submit to your Honour Sir,—I am directed by the committee for promoting the importation of American Ice, to forward to you the committee issued, and the answers which they have received. The letter of the committee distinctly stated of your transmitting to me your opinion in writing for treat a permanent supply of ice in Calcutta, as or great the purpose of its being submitted to the Government.

> It was about a year ago, that the committee from carefully warching the receipts and expenditure of the speculation, began to entertain fears, that the sale of ice in Calcutta might not remunerate Mr. Pudor, its spirited importer; they believed that the undertaking might be injured, and not benefitted, by raising the price, as that would diminish the sale, and if the sale were not rapid, loss would be inevitable, from the perishable nature of the article. The committee were aware, that the Government of Havannah had for the last eighteen years, ecured, a permanent supply of ice for that settlement, by giving Mr. Fudor a monopoly for its importation, and remitting all port and pilotage duties on vessels landing a cargo of ice; and they were also aware, that this plin originated at the suggestions of the medical profession. It was under these cucumstances the committee proposed to adopt a similar course, but forbore making any application until they found Mr. Tudor entertaining doubts of his own success. Mr. Tudor has never been apprized of the fears, or intentions of the committee, but these fears have been realized, by the following paragraph in a letter from that gentleman, dated the 15th of February : -" The profits at best are very small -expenditures, of every kind, very heavy. After a shipment of twelve cargoes, and the consumption of four years of time, the debtor side of the ice account to India exceeds the credit side, and it is still a business of hope and expectations."

> Under these circumstances the committee respectfully submit to your Honour in Council, that the opinions of so many eminent medical men, decidedly establish, how important it is to the public health of the capital to secure a permanent supply of ice. The experience of the committee, and the statement of Mr. Tudor, shew that ufter four 'years' trial, and expenditure has not been covered by the receipts, and they are tully convinced, that increasing the price would not afford a remedy. It is under the latter circumstances, and on the former ground, the committee venture to appeal to the Government for aid.

The chief obstacles which Mr. Tudor has to encounter, are the objections of ship-owners to carry cargoes of ice, and the very high freight which they charge. It appears to the committee that these difficulties might be in a great measure removed, by the adoption of the plan pursued at Havannah, and it the port and pilotage charges were remitted to eight vessels every year, proviled they landed not less that one hundred tons of ice, ship-owners would be desirous of taking the cargoes

But while the committee, in the best exercise of that Government can seldom have a more favourable dient.

I have the honour to remain, with great respect, Bonourable Sir, your obedient humble servant, Sin,-In reply to your letter of this day's date, calling for my opinion as to the importance of a permanent supply of ace to the public, I beg to state, that I coustpoorer classess of the community.

A press of business obliges me to be succinct in my reply. As an article of luxury, I need not expetiate upon the use of ice. It has more within my province to mense value in the treatment of a variety of ailments that to the ice house every alternoon, to provide themselves urgenly demand the aid of the surgeon, no less than of with a small portion, ore they commenced their seven the physician. This is especially the case on occasions miles' walk home. where the preparation of attificial cold mixtures, would be operose, incur delay-be maccessible to many on account of the expense, Sec. and after all, the substance not be suited for direct application as well internally as to various parts of the external surface of the body, as ice.

Purposely omitting all but affections of imminent danger, I content myself with observing, that there are cases of hemerrahage where during the hot season especially, the application of ice, and of ice only might sive life. In certain fevers, with great determination to the head, and burning heat, the application of ice lessens vascular action, and soothes the sense of rembing pain in the brain, bringing not only rehel, but a tendency to repose. The same remark applies still more foreibly to the dentinon fevers of children, in whom the sensorial excitement and tendency to organiclesim, are still greater than in adults. In internal inflammation, the surgeon in this climate does not possess a more scotling or more patent resolvent, and in cases of stangulated herma, though such are not frequently heard of amongst us, ice might literally be worth its weight in gold. I might adduce other instances, but time will not permit.

To L. CLARKE, Esq. Chairman, Ice Committee.

Sin,--In answer to your letter of the 20th ultimo, 1 have the honor to submit to you my opinion, "on the great importance of a permanent supply of ice to the public health," for the information of the committee for promoting the importation of American ice.

In all ages cold has been regarded by physicians, as one of the most powerful means of allaying the worst symptoms of inflammatory diseases, and is at present universally used by medical practitioners in all civilized countries.

How invaluable therefore must such a temedy prove in a country like this, (sent to us in its beautifullygealed form,) with a high temperature of the atmosphere, where inflammatory diseases are so abundant, and as-Buine so formidable an array of alarming symptoms. In the ardent fevers which bourly present themselves in this city, with great determination to the head and other cavities of the body; intense thirst, a burning and dry state of the skin; great re-tlessness and general uneasiness, with a pulse upwards of 20, the application of iced water is at once a sure means of subduing these symptoms, and affording to the patient the most speedy, grateful, and southing relief, next to blood-letting, and purgatives. I consider cold effusion to be the next most powerful agent in the cure of fever, and, therefore, a prodigious acquisition to medical practice in this country.

In the diseases of infants, the value of ice is incalculable, especially in dentition, where there is such enormous determination to the head, and which so frequently and rapidly terminate in convulsions and death, there is no means which relieves heat, and distention, by emptying the large vessels of the brain so effectually and so sately, the application of iced-water to the head, and I can declare, that many parents in this city, owe the existence of their off-pring to the judicious use of the invaluable remedy. In that state of debility following acute disease, the patient has been kept alive again, and again, by dipping toosted bread in iced water, when nothing else would remain on the stomach. In the irritable stomach also, which is so frequent and distressing a symptom of acute disease, I have seldom failed

In the long train of diseases to which the delicate female is hable in this country, I can bear ample testimony to the value of ice in these complaints.

Numerous other proofs most convincing and satisfactory, of the efficacy of ice, could be adduced by me; but which I consider, unnecessary after what I have already stated in its favor. In one word, I regard the importation of American ice as one of the greatest blessings bestoned upon the people of this metropolis, both in a medicinal point of view, as well as an article. of comfort and luxury.

God bless the ice.

In all cases of febrile excitement, more especially those attended with fixed determination of blood to the head, I look upon the command of a supply of ice, as one of the most valuable and safest of our remedies; it enables us more effectually, than any other application we possess, to reduce, and keep down, the immoderate circulation, and encreased nervous irritability which is commonly destructive of life, in cases of fever; to effect which, without it, all our endeavours are in vain, and which it is our most anxious abject to effect. As a topical agent, in many ordinary affections, its efficacy is undoubted, and when within our reach, one of which we are always glad to avail ourselves; but it is in fevers, and the acute attacks, common to this climate, that its advantages are most apparent, and Government could in no manner show its care and regard to the well-being, and protection of its servants and subjects at large, so well, as by affording its most liberal assistance, in promoting the importation of a constant supply of an article, of such active powers, and great value, in the treatment of these diseases, characteristic of, and incidental to, the country.

Club-House, July 19, 1837.

My Dran Sin,-With reference to our conversation last night about the ice, I am prepared by professional experience to afford my unhesitating testimony, to the powerful agency, which it possesses, when judiciously employed, in alleviating disease, and contributing towards a cure. It would be tedious to enumerate the cases, in which the use of this admirable adjuvant, tends to produce decidedly beneficial effects; but there is one class of disorders, which I cannot help particularizing (at the risk of writing somewhat more technically than I intended) as cases where I have witnessed wonderfully beneficial results, from its discreet use; I allude to infantile fever during dentition, in which there is always determination to the head, sometimes so sudden and to such an extent, as to prove fatal in an incredibly short time, if not promptly arrested, nature conleavours to counteract this result by increased secretion from the bowels, i. e. by spontaneous purging; and the ordinary treatment is to follow up nature's plan by keeping up a free action of the bowels by medicine, many is the little sufferer, however, whom I have seen sink under this indispensable evacuation, who might have been saved if we had possessed the means, which the ice now affords us, of determining powerfully, and at once, from the brain by its application in substance to the head.

Its beneficial effects in such cases, is almost immediate, by unloading the vessels of the brain and thereby enabling you with safety to moderate, or arrest the alvine flux, which is draining away the strength of the babe. It will sometimes stop a convulsion fit, as if by magic; and when one reflects that the cranium of the infant is in its upper part almost as thin and diaphorous as an egg shell, where the several bones are in actual opposition, and that there are several spaces where the membranes covering the brain, and the scalp are only reparated by the interposition of a thin membrane, one ceases to be surprised at its immediate effects.

I beg you to excuse my troubling you with such details, but our convensation on the subject was inturjupted, and I wish to instance to you how specifically the faculty may furnish grounds for their general re-commendation of the efficacy of ice in the cure of disease.

I will only add, that the specific cases which I have olduced might have suggested another claim on the patronage and support of the ladies, at least such as are mothers, or hope to become so, and in these two classes, I presume, may be included a protty considerable majority of our fair countrywomen at the presidency. again beg your excuse for the length of my note and remain,

Yours very faithfully,

My DEAR SIR,-I must beg your forgiveness for my remissness to answer your first letter. In reply to your inquiry of the estimate which my professional experience of its use has induced me to form of ice, as a remedial agent in tropical disease, I am really at a loss

I can only state my opinion comparatively, by saying hat in all the acute disease, to which European adults and children are liable, I esteem it as a remedy, only econd to the lancet, and I believe that a permanent supply of so invaluable and powerful an agent, would srove a source of benefit to public health, and a means if saving life, not inferior to any single article of pharmacy, which can be named, in the hands of an Indian practitioner.

I am of opinion that ice is most valuable in certain cases' of mania, in fever where the brain is affected in hemorrhage, and, especially, in cases of uterine hemorrhage (flooding) in strangulated hernia, &c., and as an article of diet it may have a beneficial tonic effect,-and I consider this grateful addition to other articles of luxury by no means injurious to the constitution.

Sin,-I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 20th instant, in which you inform me that the Ice Committee are desirous of learning my opinion, as to the utility of ice in the case of disease.

In reply, I have to state that, in my opinion, the use of ice as a remedial agent, is very important, whether with reference to its immediate application in diseases of congestion, inflammation, and hemorrhage, or to those still more extensive though not so direct benefits, arising from the tonic effects of cold fluids, taken in moderation into the stomach.

Sin,-In reference to your circular of yesterday. I can with much satisfaction and confidence add my tesagent, in some of the most important and fatal diseases of Bengal.

As a local application in cases of fever, where determination to the head prevails, and induced, in local inflammation wherever situated. "Ice," constitutes one of the most efficacious antiphlogestic remedies, in con-junction with bleeding, and purgatives, whilst as a source of relief, and luxury to the feverish patient, by affording a naturally cool beverage, which no art can imitate, its advantage cannot fail to be generally admitted, and appreciated.

The advantages we have lately enjoyed in Calcutta, by obtaining ice at all seasons of the year, must be obvious to every medical practitioner. For my own part, I regard this article as important in the highest degree as a remoded agent, none have had so much reason to rejoice in the benefits afforded by the use of in promoting the cure of disease.

It is unmecessary to detail the particular instances wherein ice is valuable in medical treatment, but I have no hesitation in saying, that in fever, in various forms of inflammation, in many cases of external injuries, and in the practice of midwifery, there are numerous instances, in which the life of the patient may depend upon the internal administration, or the external application of this substance. In cases of impaired digestive powers also, I believe it to be highly useful, as a stomachic tonic. Indeed, so much do I value it, that apart from every consideration of individual comfort. I consider it to be the duty of every medical practitioner, to use all his endeavours to ensure a never-tailing supply of ice in this city.

Sin,-In reply to your circular of the 6th instant. I have much pleasure in expressing my conviction, that the successful importation of ice, and its constant preservation in Calcutta, place within the reach of the humblest member of the community, a remedy of the highest efficacy in the treatment of many varieties of tropical disease. Considering ice solely as a made of solely as I would deem all the subscriptions we have made and all the support you now seek to encourage the importation, as well and cheaply bestowed.

Sin,-I beg to apologize for having so long delayed answering your circular of the 20th July, and your note of the 13th instant, on the subject of ice, and its importance to the public health. This areas in the first instance, from my considering myself unconnected with, and unknown to, the inhabitants of Calcutta, and that my opiniou consequently, could not be regarded by them as of the slightest importance, and since the receipt of your last gifte, I have been much occupied.

There can be no doubt, that we is an article which contributes largely to the enjoyment and the, health of those, who can afford to purchase it, and, were it cheap enough, and procurable at all times, it might be turned to various uses in medical practice. But at the same time I must express my opinion, that the committee have not taken up the true ground for soliciting the bounty of Government on this occasion, the real im-much more than as a means of cure either in fever or any other disease.

> I have now the pleasure to communicate through you, for the information of the committee, that I regard ice as subordinate to no other agent, in the prevention or treatment of disease, and as a remedy in controlling fever, in its various applications, the power of which is second only, if, under some circumstances, it be not even superior, to that of the lancer; a remedy which can never supersede the lancet, nor dispense with it, but which, when added to it, forms by the combination a treatment so powerful and efficacious, that it will render death from the acutest cerebial inflammation, as rare, as recovery is at present. Employed as a remedy (known by the name of the ice cold dash) there is no degree of burning heat which the animal economy is capable of producing, no intensity of vascular action, and no violence of pain, that can resist its continued application. The cold evaporating lotions, which were in former days applied to the head, proved useful in mild cases, but to hope to control the more formidable cases of the fever of Bengal, by their and alone, is to expect to coerce a giant by twisting around his arms a spiders thread, the impression which the one makes upon the brain, compared with the effect produced by this remedy, may be said to be, what the application of six leeches to the temples, is to the abstraction of thirty ounces of

> With the carnest hope that Government may be induced to listen favourably to the appeal of the committee, and thereby secure to the juliabiliants of this city so powerful and so blessed a remedy in the hour of sickness. I have the honour to be, Sir, your faithful and obdt, servt,

There are few in this country who will not concur in the opinion, that the importation of ice is a valuable auxiliary to the comfort of an Indian life. But if we completely lay aside the notion of its forming a part of the luxuries of the East, we shall find numerous reasons to had its introduction as highly subservient to the preservation of health.

I will not take up your time by referring to any theoritical opinions on the subject, but will merely adduce a few instances in which my personal experience, can bear testimony to its salutary effects. I have found it essentially useful in cases of dyspepsia, which is a very prevailing disease in this clunate, and a slight acquaintance with its tonic powers will sufficiently elucidate t'ie cause.

I have likewise proved its beneficial effects, in cases of retention of the placenta, when all other remedies have failed, though administered to the utmost extent, and in the following cases of hamorrhegia entonica, I have used it with great success, viz. Natioum or bleeding at the nose, hamosstysis or spitting of blood, utevina or uterine hemorrhage, in certain cases of fever too, its powerful, aid has frequently been proved especially portance of ice is, as an article of luxury, during health, I during the hor season of the year when an inevitable exposure to the heat of the sun, frequently produces attility of ice in the treatment of some of the diseases of considerable derangement of the brain.

I have no doubt that the experience of every individual, will tend to corroborate the opinion, that the addition of ice to the luxuries of our table, ought to be considered equally desirable in a medical point of view. J. MAXTON, Surgeon.

Col. L. R. Stacy, 32d N. I., proposed by the secretary, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Motions of which notice was given at last meeting. Motion No. 1, by the secretary seconded by Dr. Strong, was brought forward and carried, nem con-

Mation No.2, by C.K. Robison, Fisq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq., was next brought forward and carned nem con.

Notice of motion.

Proposed by G. A. Prinsep, Esq., seconded by C. K. Robison, Esq. "that the sum of 500 rupees be approprinted for procuring cotton-seed of every variety in estimation from South America, and that a correspondence be opened with Rio Jauerro, for the purpose of obtaining u."

Reports.

The President drew the attention of the meeting to the subject matter of motion No. 1, of April meeting which was brought forward at the last meeting, and carried by an amendment on the original motion, being at the same time referred to the general committee, for consideration. He (the President) would read the report of that committee, drawn up at a meeting held on the 9th instant, as follows:

"The committee having given the subject of reference to them their best consideration, are of opinion that upon the account of the state of the funds laid before them by the Secretary, the means of the society at present are inadequate to admit of its offering any sufficient tewards, for the four practical treatises on cereal grain, sugar, silk, and cotton; and the committee have therefore abstained from entering into any further detail, conceiving that the general operations of the society will be endangered if the present ascertained surplus be applied to these purposes."

(Signed) E. RYAN. C. K. Robison. F. P. STRONG. W. STORM. ,, D. HARE.  Jos. WILLIA. ,, JOHN BELL.

Proposed by G. A. Prinsep, Esq., seconded by W. Earle, that the above report be confirmed. Carried nem. con.

The President read the report of the silk committee, on three samples of yellow and white raw silk, sent in for competition, with reference to the prizes offered by a resolution passed at a general meeting of the society held on the 12th April, 1837.

The Committee are of opinion that the samples submitted by Mr. W. G. Rose, of Ramnaghur factory, near Coolbariah, are the best and entitle that gentleman to the society's gold medal.

That the sample of yellow silk sent in by Mr. Lay, superintendent of Mr. Larruletta's fillatures at Jungypoor, is the second best, and entitles that gentleman to the society's silver medal.

Moved by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by the Secretary, that the silk committee's report be confirmed:

The President also read the sugar committee's report on a sample of sugar submitted by Mr. Blake of Dhoba, who was the only competitor for the prizes awardable under the same resolution as those for sik.

" The committee are of opinion that the sample before them, does not come within the meaning of the Society's intention, as expressed in the printed conditions, the sugar in question having been made from goor by a double process, and not by a single boiling, as practised in the West Indies, &c.

The committee recommended that the premiums shall be open to competition till the 1st May, 1839, and that a specific advertizement be published and transmitted to all known cultivators.

Moved by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by G.T.F. Speed, Esq., that the committee's report be confirmed: carned.

The following communications were submitted to the notice of the meeting :

From II. Piddington, Esq., dated May 10, enclosing copy of a letter written by him to Col. James Young, in February, 1831, on the subject of cake cochineal, prepared from the Sylvestre insect.

From J. Guilding, E-q. dated May 23, forwarding a sample of cuke cochineal, made by him from Sylvestre insect, abounding in Midnapore, and asking for an opinion upon its quality, &c.

From Professor O'Shaughnessy, dated May 31, giving his opinion on the continual paste prepared by Mr. Guilding. Having submitted it to chemical test, the Professor speaks in very favorable terms of this dye. "This I think completes the proof that between the fina and Sylvestre in ects there exists at least no chemical difference." The conclusion at which Mr. Viddington and Professor O'Shaughnessy arrive are very similar, the only difficulty appearing to be in obtaining a com-plete absorption of all moisture from the paste, immediately after the process of manufacture.

(Referred to the cochineal committee.)

From Major W. H. Sleeman, dated Jubbulpore, May 7, conveying much interesting information on the mode of cultivating the lac insect.

(Referred to the committee of papers.)

From the Revd. C. E. Driberg, dated May 9, annexing a paper on the "culture of the cocoanut tree in Ceylon," received from a friend in that island.

(Referred to the committee of papers.)

From Col. Dunlop, a parcel containing varieties of hill forest trees, referred to in his letter to the Secretary, on the 25th March.

From G. H. Smith, Esq. dated Delhi, May 8, promising to forward, shortly samples of cotton of the first and second year's crops, raised from Upland Georgia seed. rice, which he presents to the society.

Gives a favorable account of an experimental plantation of Otalielte sugar cane in Deyrali Dhoon.

From the same, dated May 18, forwarding for the opinion of the committee, samples of Upland Georgia and Sea Island cotton, the produce of his garden at that station, as alluded to in his former letter of the 8th.

From R. Lowther, Esq., dated Allahahad, May 20 advising despatch of two cases containing samples of the produce of four varieties of cotton-seed forwarded by the society for distribution in that and the neighbouring districts.

Euclosing a memo, received from Mr. Lambert regarding these samples.

From Dr. Huffungle, dated May 30, forwarding a bale of cotton, being a portion of the second crop produced from 400 plants grown at Cossipore, raised from Upland Georgia seed imported by the society in 1836.

Suggesting that the bale of cotton be sent to England for a competent opinion as to quality. Forwarding also two bottles of oil pressed from the seed of this cotton.

From T. O. Crane, Esq., Secretary Agricultural Society of Singapore, dated Mic 11, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter of the 17th March, together with the Seychelles' cotton-seed, and transactions of the Society vol. 5.

Enclosing a small sample and a few seeds of a description of cotton resembling Sea Island.

From Major Syers, Secy, to the Agricultural Society of Cuttack, presenting samples of Upland Georgia cotton and Virginia Fobacco, grown on that district from seed received from the society referred to in his letter of the 4th May.

Note. - All these samples of cotton ordered to be referred to committee for reports.

From Mr. A. Il arris, dated 24th May, forwarding three cuttings of cane (variety unknown, but resembling the China cane) together with a large caue, retained from the small stock.

Mr. Harris states, that the original cuttings from which these three average canes were produced, did not exceed the thickness of a common ratan, shewing a vast improvement on the plant canes; but the most extraordinary improvement is upon the ration, which is nearly four times the thickness of the plant or parent stock, -a fact which is at variance with the course of rationing in general, since rations are invariably smaller, and can only be accounted for, in the extraordinary fertility of the Soonderbund soil, and holds out fair prospect of ultimate remuneration to those grantees who are now laboring to convert a rank pestileutial morass, into a highly cultivated sugar country.

A full length sugar cane was submitted, said to be produced in the Island of Ceylon by Mr. Henly, from Mauntius plant, -of four months' growth.

From A. Harris, Esq., dated May 28, offering a few remarks on a trial made with a plough recently received by the society, made at the Porto Novo foundery from an American model.

From Major J. A. Moore, dated Hydrabad, May 18,. advising de-patch of three apples of the nonpareil species, grown in a friend's garden a few miles from the station.

From Colonel Stacy, dated Dacca, May 20, forwarding a bag containing the roots of a plant, common in that part of the country, called "Suth Moolee," or the sixty radishes, also a few bags of a climber termed "Tiel'h, Gulah.

From Captain Cautley, dated Saharunpore, May 11th, advising the despatch of a quantity of bansmutti seed

From Dr. W. Montgomerie, dated Singapore, April 23, acknowledging the receipt of Secretary's letter of the January, 1837, to March 1238, 5 numbers, has been re-17th March, intimating a resolution of the Society for awarding him a silver medal.

In reply Dr. Montgomerie returns his best thanks to the society for this mark of its approbation, but regiets that "circumstances should render it necessary to decline the intended honor.

From Signor G. Mutti, dated Kootroor Bagh, Poonah, 7th May, acknowledging icceipt of Secretary's letter of April 15, and returns his best thanks to the society for the resolution therein conveyed of awarding him the society's gold medal.

Promises to afford further information to the Society on the cultivation of the standard mulberry trees, &c.

From Major Paisons, dated Campore, May 4, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter intimating despatch of cotton seed.

Mentions having raised a quantity of fine Guinea grass from seed forwarded by the Society in 1836.

From Major Gawtkin, dated Coel, May 2, acknowledges receipt of cattle committee's pamphlet, but regrets his inability to give any information on the subject in question.

Advises despatch of sample of four growing of oats, and promises to send seed of the "Prangoo" if successful in raising plants from a few seeds lately received.

States that the Guinea grass seed has vegetated, and alludes to trials made with the French out seed, and Italian iix grass seed received from the society.

From Captain Jenkins, dated Gowhatti, May 13, advising despatch of two parcels of fresh Fria cacoons.

From W. Priusep, Esq., dated May 19, reporting on musters of raw silk forwarded by the committee for his opinion as to the market price.

From James Anderson, Esq., M. D., secretary to the Agricultural Society of Beerbhoom, dated June 5, giving cover to a copy of the proceedings of a late meeting of the Branch Society and calling the attention of the parent institution to a few of the resolutions contained therein, viz. for the supply of sugar-cane, fruit trees, seeds, &c. Encloses also a copy of the proceedings of their society since its formation up to the present time.

From W. Rushton, Esq., duted May 12, offering to print the transactions of the Society on the same terms as the Bishop's College or Baptist Mission-Press.

Mema .- The question had been settled before the receipt of Mr. Rushton's letter, and the 6th volume is now printing at the Baptist Mission Press.

The Madras Journal of Literature and Science from: ceived through Mesers Thacker and Co.

From Captain F. Jenkins, dated Gowhatti, May 31. intmating his intention of forwarding by a different mode to that hitherto pursued, which has proved unsuccessful, some eggs of the Fria worm to try if by this means they can be received in a living state.

From James Anderson, Esq., M. D , secretary Agricultural Society, Beerbhoom, forwarding the samples of cotton alluded to in his letter of the 5th instant.

From Miss Peacock, a pod of a large species of tamarind the produce of Mhow.

Dr. Wallich stated, that it was not a tamarind, but the adansonia digitate or boobab of the West Coast of Africa.

From Dr. Wallich, dated June 13, annexing extract of a letter from Mrs. Captain Milner, presenting a basket of beautiful and perfect bunches of purple and white grapes, with some interesting details as to the mode adopted by that lady in treating the vines. Proposed by the president, seconded by the meeting, that the special thanks of the society be offered to Mis. Milner, for her highly interesting and beautiful present, which clearly proves that nothing but taste and attention is wanting, to serve as fine grapes and as plentiful in and about Calcutta, as in the finest vine countries.

Memo.-The Secretary had also received within the last week, a spendid bunch of grapes from tol. James Young the produce of the vine planted by C.K. Robison, Esq., in the Union Bank compound, and a banch from Mrs. Smith, the produce of her garden in Short's Bazar. If every householder in Calcutta would plant but two vines, he would secure at once a cool retreat, and delicious fruit by simply planting cuttings in a sootkey corner.

Mr. George Prinsep presented a fine specimen of cotton grown from Peruvian seed, valued by Mr. Hill at fifty per cent, more that Surat. It has the advantage of black seed which are easily detached.

Mr. Masters presented a fine graft of the Ficus Elastica, of 48 day growth, 10 feet in length and 6 inches in circumference.

Mr. G. T. P. Speed presented a specimen of hemp grown from the purple Hibiscus, grown at Patna.

The thanks of the meeting were ordered to be given for all the above cummunications and presentations.

DARJELING.

CALCUTTA, TOWN HALL, 15th June, 1838.

At a meeting heid this day, J. W. Grant, Esq. in the chair, the following report, drawn up by two gentlemen, to whom the public are greatly indebted, was already experienced by the whole of them. read to a rather numerous and most respectable assemblage.

meeting, that unless active steps are now taken, another year will be lost to the community. Many parties are anxious to build bangalows, and expressed their determination to do so; but the difficulty of procuring builders to direct and superintend these operations, has been

Under these circumstances, the idea of starting a hotel on the scheme of a tontine has been suggested, The present meeting has been called by a few of the hotel on the scheme of a tontine has been suggested, applicants for sites, with the view of promoting such as likely to induce respectable builders to undertake measures, as may be likely to insure comfortable actits erection, while, at the same time, the opportunity commodation to all parties, who propose to visit the thus afforded to settlers of procuring competent persons station. It is, perhaps, scarcely necessary to inform the to enter into contracts, &c., would no doubt be taken advantage of by many, who from want of time and other causes could otherwise do nothing.

A plan of a hotel has been prepared by Messes, Burn and Co., which Mr. Spence approves of; and a he agrees to open it on much the same footing as the one conducted by him here, the question now remains to be considered, "whether or not an adequate sum for its erection is likely to be raised? Messes. If and Co. are not at present prepared to give an estimate or enterinto a contract; but from the abundance of materials on the spot, they are disposed to think, the expense of such a building at Darjeling would be considerably less than in Calcutta. The scheme of the proposed toutine has been kindly drawn out by Mr. Cuinn, and along with the plan, both are now submitted for consideration.

Doubts have been expressed by some persons as to the probability of a hotel succeeding at Darjeling, and the Mussoorio one is quoted as being nearly a failure. Without enquiry here into the accuracy of this assertion, it appears to us, that the circumstances are totally different. The Mussoorie hotel was started after the number of bungalows built exceeded the demand for them. At Dirjeling there is not a hut at present available. No doubt it may be argued that the hotel is not likely to be patronised after parties have built their own bungalows; but the answer here again is, that the cales are not parallel; and whatever number of bungalows are built at Darjohng, it may be fairly presumed, there will always be a sufficient influx of Bengal visitors, who, from various causes, would prefer a residence at the hotel, to the trouble and expense of building houses for themselves.

Most persons present are aware, that measures are now in progress for the construction of a public read, and four staging bungalows. These undertakings will probably be completed against February next. There are other matters of importance to the settlers. Such as arranging for a proper dak line; managing the details connected with these bungalows; fixing on a European of respectability near Titalay, who would keep a store there and at the station, and act likewise as an agent in procuring bullocks, &c. &c. The-e objects must be attended to by the committee to be now appointed. It may be satisfactory, however, to the meeting to learn, that a statement regarding the alteration of the dak line has been already submitted to the proper authorities, (with every prospect of success,) which, if adopted, will enable a traveller to lay dik from Calcutta at once to the second bungalow at Punkabanee, 1,500 feet above the sea level, and where he may arrive with ease on the fourth evening.

With these observations this report may be concluded. The subject in all its bearings is now before the community at large; and whatever difference of opinion there may be, as to the means proposed, discussion cannot fail to promate the speedy establishment of an object, conducive alike to the health and recreation, of a great proportion of the Europeans in the Bengal presidency.

MRS. CHESTER'S FAREWELL DRAMATIC CONCERT.

On Tuesday evening, we attended the above performance at the Town-hall, and considering the circumstances under which it had been got up, we were agree able surprized to find it so well attended. There could not have been less than twelve hundred rupees in the party.

THE DARJELING MEETING.

A meeting was held at the Town-hall, this morning, Friday the 20th June inst.

PRE-ENT.

Messrs. J. W. Grant, J. Abbot, S. Smith, W. Patrick, J. Cumin, C. Deane, W. Bruce, W. Storm, A. Grant, D. McRherson M. Dugal, C. K. Robison, J. Spence, Davidson, J. H. Storqueler, Gray, W. Jackson, R. Evans, R. Walker, Captain Harrington, A. H. Sim, G. Prinsep, Willis, Earle, Barwell, and H. M. Low. The secretary read the following report from the

By the 3d resolution passed at the public meeting of the 15th instant, your committee was directed to call a meeting of shareholders so soon as it appeared a sufficient number of shares had been subscribed for. Upwards of ninety having been taken on the 22d, your committee felt justified in calling the present meeting, and they have now to report the number of shares subscribed for as 105.

It will be in the recollection of the meeting that two plans for the proposed hotel were produced on the 15th instant; and that neither of them were approved of. Your committee at their first meeting, came to the same conclusion, viz. that there were objections to both; and Major Garstin having kindly undertaken to make a new plan, it was accordingly submitted for consideration at a meeting of the committee on the 22d. At this meeting too, another plan by Messrs. Burn and Co. was laid on the table.

Your committee do not feel authorized to recommend either for adoption. They approved generally of Major Garstin's, as from the explanations given by him, it seems to combine comfort with economy. But before adopting a plan at all, it is evident that some reference must be made to the amount of funds subscribed for, as well as to the painions and wishes of the tenant who is to occupy the premises. Another consideration is impossibility of finishing a building on the scale contemplated so early as March next. Your committee, therefore, are decidedly of opinion, that a temporary building should be erected at a moderate expense; and, though at first this recommendation may almost have the appearance of throwing away money, they are satisfied the result would prove a saving. Ample time would thus be given for practically ascertaining the value of materials, cost of labour, &c. &c. and in afterwards effecting trick, and carried by acclamation.

a contract for the more durable building, the Company would no doubt have the benefit of a competition, which at present cannot be expected. On the whole then, after giving the subject their best attention, your committee would recommend;

1st. That authority be given to levy the subscription forthwith;

2d That a sub-committee of three be named for the above purpose, and with power to carry through the necessary arrangements for vesting the property in their names, as trustees for the company;

3d. That the committee be directed to make arrangements for the erection of a temporary building at an expense not exceeding Rs 6,000, and at the same time to secure a respectable tenant for opening it as a hotel. In conclusion, your committee have to observe, that though active operation cannot be commenced on the spot, before the month of October, still it is very necessary that certain measures should be in progress here, with as little delay as possible. That some difficulties exist is unquestionable, but if resolutions are passed to the effect recommenced, your committee feel confident, these difficulties will soon be surmounted, and that the sanatarium of Darjeling will thereby be established on a permanent footing, by next hot-season, ... J. W. Grant, Chairman,

RESOLUTIONS.

1st. Moved by Mr. Abbot, and seconded by Mr. Stocqueler, that the report now read be approved, and that the meeting do authorize the committee to carry through the whole measure recommended. Carried

2d. Moved by Mr. Smith, and seconded by Mr. Dearie-That Messis. J. W. Grant, W. Patrick, and Dwarkanauth Tagore, he the trustees for the company with the powers recommended. Carried nem. con.

The stamp duty now levied on the kobooleats and security bond of the gomastahs and other moffussil opium, pointing out the grievances sustained by landholders, particularly in consequence of a new order of the board, that the security taken from any geneastals or other servants should be on a distinct stamp, by which the amount previously required is doubled to 16 (on salaries of 3 to 5) rupees per month. That, as all leases and kabooleats between zemindars and ryuts are exempted from all stamps, it appears, that persons who are employed in collecting the rents from the above lessees, ought on the same principle, either to be exempted, or at least put on a lower stamp. This was seconded by Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor, and carried unanimously. Resolved, that a circular letter, inviting new members to the Society be lithographed for distribution.

A CASE OF VIOLENCE.

dent and we publish it without comment :

"A firm in your city, having some causes of discontent with a gentleman, with whom they were in partnership in a sugar concern, contrived first to have him arrested upon a partnership balance sworn to, it is said, as a private a count! The arrest was illegal, being performed by bursting open his door, at nine o'clock at night! to the unspeakable terror of his family.

Having got the managing partner out of the way, their next step was to demand possession of the factory, which the assistants, acting by orders of their principal, refused to give, and, in two or three days, boats with about thirty EUROPEAN SAILORS, and forty burkandauzes, were brought up from Calcutta, and the factory taken by stoin ; though there are no great fighting of course, for the assailing party were headed by Europeans, and the two European assistants in the factory, very properly turned the whole of their attention, to protect the managing pattner's lady, her two children, and female servants. She fortunately escaped across the river in a dingy, to Chinsurah, and is now in safety.

The assailants were perfectly aware that the mother and her children were residing in the factory, and that there was, moreover, from 5,000 to 6,000 gallons of rom in the distillery store. It was with the full-knowledge of this circumstance, that these gentlemen led a party of sailors to assault it ! Can any husband or father think of the possible consequences without a shud-der? There is "no mistake" here, Mr. Editor, for one of the gentlemen has actually admitted before a magistrate, that he was accompanied by sailors! A friend of his an officer of a ship, on the river for his health ! and he, walked in to the factory, by accident, as one might say, seeing all quiet and abandoned! This occurred on the morning of the 10th instant, but owing to the absence of the magistrate of Barrasut, on duty, the parties are in full possession of the factory, to which they might suppose they had some right; but they have, moreover, taken possession of the dwelling house of a respectable family, and seized the property of all kinds, both factory and private, and some of it is on its way down to Calcutta! Petitions have been presented to the local authorities, the joint magistrate at Barrasut,

The following has just reached us from a correspon- and the superintendent of police, and proceedings will be immediately instituted in the Supreme Court. It is needless to say, that the assailants had no sort of legal process with them, which could give any colour to their proceedings."- Hurkaru, June 21.

> With reference to a statement which appeared in your paper yesterday, from a correspondent, respecting an attack on a sugar factory by some sailors and others, I beg to inform you, that the facts alleged to have occurred are highly coloured, although there is some faint resemblance in the general outline. With the parties sent to take possession, there were 10 not 30 sailors, who were carried up, in order to prevent a breach of the peace, which it was supposed might follow any collision between the hurkandauzes of the respective claimants to hold the factory. There was not the slightest resistance, the late occupiers having one and all left the premises, it is supposed, on the report of a party of sailors advancing being received, and no part of the furniture or private property was removed. The house belongs to the factory, and the entire concern to the firm in question. As the matter will be shortly brought before the Supreme Court, when and where the actual circumstances and merits of the case will be fully disclosed, it is unnecessary to say one word more on the subject. The public will soon be enabled to judge who is right and who is wrong. -Ilurkaru, Juna 22.

I observe, Mr. Editor, that your devils have overlooked a note in which I requested you to give my name noted a note in which I requested you to give my name and present residence in Calcutta to any person who may inquire for them; pray do so, if you please. My respondent informs you, that the facts "are highly coloured." I promise you they are not coloured enough; and, verily, the idea of carrying up sailors "to prevent a breach of the peace" is a rich specimen—almost as rich as the comfortable ignorance in which he appears to be, that the bodily fear is quite equivalent in the eye of the law to the violence. The entire concern did assuredly not belong to the firm in question. If their title was so clear, why use such means? and why, within ten days of the violence, claim in writing, only a joint proprietorship? This document I have seen, Mr. Editor. - Hurkaru, June 25.

THIRD IERM.

This was the first day of term. The chief justice sat alone, and little was done except the taking of common motions.

SEFBOOSOONDERY DOSSET VETSUS COMULMONEY DOSSEL.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Autt) wished to apply to the equity side of the court, for a new trial of the issue at law, tried in this case last sittings, and he intimated an intention of calling upon the other side to shew cause in the first instance.

The Advocate General (with whom were Messrs, Leuk and Morton) for the defendant, objected to this course, and cited the case of Moris v. Davis, 3 Russ. Rep. 3-8 in which upon a similar application the Lord Chancellor Eldon, after consulting with the Vice-Chancellor, held that the proper course of proceeding was to make an en parte application for the judge's notes of the trial, showing some to sonable prima facie ground for questioning the verdical

Mr. Clarke said, that there was a distinction to this country, where, although the court was nominally a different court, the judges were the same in law and equity.

SirE. Ryan was of opinion, that a statement of ground ought first to be made in order to satisfy the mind of the verdict. This was not by any means a motion of course. term, and liberty was then reserved to make the applica-

The usual practice was, as laid down in the case cited from Russell.

Mr. Clarke said, that he should adopt this mode of procedure, and that he should make his application on Monday next.

RUSSICKCHUNDER SEAL LEISUS MILLETT.

Mr. Leith moved that the payment of a sum of money directed to be paid by the master's report in this cause, should be made by a transfer of accounts, instead of the usual mode of payment into the hands of the accountant general. Notice had not been given of this motion, but it was apprehended that no objection could be made. Motion granted.

In Mr. Ogiloy's case no application whatever was made to the court, the objections to the return of the writ of habeas corpus, have been diopped, as the prosecutor is anxious that the proceedings may not appear to be vigorously and harshly pressed against the delendant.

The chief po-tice intimated that only common motions would be taken to-morrow, Saturday (this-day).

In Machaghten v. Tandy the demuirer to the bill (which is a bill of discovery to ascertain the names of the proprietors of the Agra Ukhbar) stands for hearing on Monday. - Hurkaru, June 16.

Our Supreme Court report of Saturday was incorrect (as mentioned by our morning cotemporary) in stating, that the deminirer to the bill of discovery in Macuaghten crisus landy stood for hearing on Monday (vesterday) This was a clerical error for Thursday. We may mention, however, that the Fuglishman is by no means altogether accurate in warning its reeders not to contound this case with the famous libel case in which the same parties appear as plaintiff and defendant, and in in orning them that the two cases have no connexion with each other. It is very certain indeed, that a bill in equity to compel a discovery is not quite the same thing as an action at law to recover damages for a liber; but in the present instance the former is closely connected with the latter, inasmuch as the bill is filed for the purpose of secretaining the proper parties to the action, and it may be considered, therefore, as supplemental and auxiliary to the proceeding at law. The defendant has demuired to the bill on the well established principle, that no party is bound to discover any matter which may subject him to penal consequences. The precise question, however, involved in the present in-tance, has not been forestalled by any reported decision, and is still quite open to argument on behalf of the complainant.

Monday, June 18, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

HURRYLOLL TAGORE VETSUS SHAMYLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Clarke moved that judgment might be entered upon a cognovit given by the defendant to the plaintiff. The defendant died in May last, and application was made within a few days after that event to a judge in court of the probable necessity for reconsidering the chambers to enter up the judgment as of the preceding tion, without prejudice, in the present term. According from the verdict which was pronounced when the evi-to the old rules, if a party had died in vacation, the judged enco was fresh in their minds. I feel bound to say ment might have been entered up as of the term preceding, and, although by the new rules all judgments are to be entered of record of the day and your, whether in term or vacation, when signed, yet a discretion wareserved to the court to allow a judgment to be entered up nunc pro tune. In the secent case in the court of exchequer at home Mann v. Land Andley, 5, Dowling's Reports, 596, the application was refused, merely be cause it could not have been granted under the old rules : the defendant had died in Hilary Term, and the motion was not made until the Easter-1 erm following.

Sir Fdward Ryan said, that it was an important point, and the court would take time for consideration.

JOSEPH Versus PRINSEP AND OTHERS, EXECUTORS.

The Advocate-General moved, that certain words of course, accidentally omitted in a legretal order made in this cause in July 1837, might be inserted by amendment. The other parties had given their consent. The order was interlocutory only, and it was the custom for the registrar only, and not the judge, to sign interlocutory orders. The clause omitted was the usual direction to take an account of the debts due to the testator. In Wallis v. Thomas, 7 Ves. Jun. a similar application was granted; at least the master was authorized to take the accounts without any alteration in the decree itself.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the alteration would be a material alteration in the decice, yet as all parties had consented, it might be made. His lordship added, this could not form a precedent for future cases.

IN THE MATTER OF W. CURRIP, DICEASED.

The Advocate-General moved, that the usual citations should issue in the goods of this part,. Mr. Currie left debts and effects in this country and also in England; and by his will appointed his son and another party executors, who had proved the will in the proper ec-clesiastical court at Canterbury. But it had been decided that such probate would not extend to India, and it now became necessary to take out administration with for defendant .- Harkaru, June 19. the will annexed up this country. A power was given by the executors, to Messrs. Colvin and Co. to institute actions, and otherwise to act; and the question was whether this power extended to enable them to take out administration and act as executors here.

Sir L. Ryan was of opinion, that the power was insufficient.

Motion refused.

BREEMUTTY SIBOOSOONDERY DOSSEE versus SREEMUTIA COMULMONIY DOSSLE.

This was the issue out of chancery tried last sittings, to inquire into the validity of a certain clause in the will of a wealthy Hindoo Kissenchunder Seal. It may be recollected that the cause occupied four entire days in the hearing, and that a verdict was out of the defendant, negativing the clause.

Mr. Clarke now moved for a new trial. He felt himself placed in a very difficult position in applying for new trial upon evidence on which their lordships had once already expressed an opinion; but the case appeared to him so full of doubt and uncertainty, that he was inclined to hope the court might see some ground for a re-He should now state the chief points upon which he founded his present application.

Sir E. Ryan. Have you any new statements to bring to the notice of the court? If not, your position is one of insuperable difficult. The court cannot well come that it then appeared to myself and Mr. Justice Grant, that you had argued the most ably and ingeniously, and indeed urged everything that could possibly be advanced; yet we felt that the probability was, if anything, slightly the other way, and that the plaintiff had not succeeded in making out her case.

Mr. Clarte said, that there were one or two points which he had not then dwelt upon strongly enough; chiefly the encumetance that the defendant had instiinted equity proceedings immediately after the death of ner husband, when if the will she set up had really been in existance, such proceedings would have been quite superfluous. His grounds for the present motion were,

1 .- That the plaint fl's case was supported throughout by probabilises.

- 2. That the plaintiff's case was consistent with that which she had previously set up in equity, and that the defendant's was the reverse.
- 3, -That the plaintiff's witnesses were consistent with themselves and with each other, whereas the testimony adduced by the defendant was highly contradictory and inconsistant.
- 4 .- That all plaintiff's witnesses were perfectly uninterested in the result, while most of the defendant's had some interest.
- 5. That the witnesses for the plaintiff were far superior in character and station of life, and therefore more worthy of credit.

Sir E. Ruan said, that he retained his former opinion. He did not say that the defendant's story was the most probable, or that her witnesses were more worthy of belief; but the onns of proof rested upon the plainiff. and the court could not come to the conclusion that the plaintiff had succeeded in clearly establishing it.

Sir J. Grant fully concurred.

Rule refused.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Nott for plaintiff.

The Advocate General, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Morton.

THURSDAY, JUNE, 21, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir John P. Grant.)

HURRYLOLL TAGORE versus SHAMYLOLL TAGORE.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that Mr. Ctarke had apolied to the court in this case, for liberty to enter up judgment, on a warrant of attorney given by the delendant, empowering the plaintiff to enter up judgment on a cognovit. (See the Hurkarn of Tuesday.) The regnorit had been prepared, but the defendant died nelore judgment was entered up, and the application was made a few days afterwards to a judge in chambers, and by his direction referred to the court. Now according to the old rules, all judgments had reference to the first day of the preceding term, but by the new rules every judgment had effect from the day when signed. It was true, that the court had still a discretionary power of allowing judgments to be entered nune pro tune. But it was the opinion of their fordships, that since the new rule, it was necessary tor the party to be actually living, at the time when the judgment was signed. Such opinion had been expressto a different conclusion at this stage of the proceedings, ed in the last edition of Archbold's practice, and also by Mr. Baron Parke in Mann versus Audley, 5 Dowl. duty. In the instances of the Governor Raffles, and the Pract. Reports. Under these circumstances, the court Francis and Eliza. 2. Dodson's Adm. Rep. the crew of could not grant the application.

Motion refused.

ADMIRALTY SIDE.

IN THE MATTER OF THE SHIP " CALCUTTA."

This was a claim of salvage. An application had been made to direct the sheriff, to cite Charles Howe Cockerell and others, owners and consignees of the bark " Calcutta," to shew cause why salvages should not be allowed to Captain Charles Henry West and the officers of the steam-ship Enterprize, for the rescue of the said back from the perils of the sea.

It appeared from the affidavits, which were put in and read in this cause on the part of the salvors, that that the vessel could have got off, and arrived at her in the month of October last, the steamer Enterprize, employed on Government service in the river Houghly, observed a vessel off Saugor point, in apparent distress, and making a signal that no pilot was on board. This vessel, which was the bark Calcutta, burden 440 tous, P. H. Bentley, commander, was at that time dufting rapidly towards a dangerous shoal, with a heavy gale blowing, threatening squalls, and a strong flood-tide. She ppeared to be dismasted. The Enterprise immediataly left the duty on which she was engaged, and proceeded to the assistance of the Colcutta. After consi detable exertions, and with no small difficulty and risk, he steamer succeeded in making fast a hawser, and in getting the bark clear of the sands, and then towed her to Kedgeree, where she anchored. The whole of the ensuing night was tempestuous, and the steamer remained near the rescued vessel, for her protection, until day-light the next morning, when she towed her up the river to her moonings at Diamond Harbour. The affidavits on behalf of the claumants stated, positively, that, from the dangerous position of the Calcutta, and the strong wind and tide, she must have been infallibly wrecked, but for the timely aid afforded by the steamer. One of the affidavits was that of Longueville Clarke, Esq. who was on board of the Irrawaddy steamer, Captain Warden, commander, and witnessed the danger of the Calcutta, and the exertion of the Enterprise. The vessel and cargo were valued at more than a lac of rupees.

The counter-affidavits (among others) of Captain Bentley, the commander, and of Mr. Middleton, the first officer, set forth, that no signal of distress was made by the Calcutta, that she was in no danger whatever, and that the only signal was the union-jack, which had been flying all day for a pilot. They added, that, observing the Enterprize and Irrawaddy in sight, they had supposed that those steamers were disengaged, and they wished, therefore, to obtain their services. These gentlemen positively swore, that to the best of their judgment and belief, the steamer rendered no material service, and that the Calcutta could have easily reached Diamond Harbour in safety, without aid. The Calcutta was a strong new vessel, totally uninjured; she was not dismasted, but had struck her upper spare, and double-reefed her top-sails.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith, addressed the further into the affidavits, and that they should postpone court on behalf of the defence. The learned counsel judgment until a future day. contended, that there was no ground for this claim, Cur. adv. vult. upon the other party's own showing. No danger was incurred by the steamer, and nothing was performed except what was within the scope of her usual duty and occupation. The steamer, therefore, was merely entitled to the ordinary rate of remuneration for her services, (which had already been received) and to no extraordinary reward in the shape of salvage. Cases had been decided in which it was held, that the claim sould not be sustained for the performance of a mere the Common Law Board.—Hurkaru, June 22.

a vessel were held not entitled to salvage from the owners, for rescuing their own vessel from mutineers and pirates. And in the Joseph Harvey, 1. Robertson's Reports, it was laid down that mere pilotage duty, even under hazardons circumstances, must be distinguished from salvage services, and is entitled only to the common remuneration.

Mr. Prinsep, for the plaintiffs, urged, first, that quite sufficient appeared upon the affidavits to shew the extreme danger in which the vessel was placed. It was sworn positively by persons competent to judge, that the vessel was placed in so precarious a position, that she must have been speedily wrecked without aid. This inference was very natural too, considering the circumstances of wind and tide, and it was absurd to suppose, moorings in safety, if left entirely to her own devices. Authorities were not wanting to shew, that no great exertion was essential to be proved on the part of the This salvors, and no vast risk necessary to be incurred, in In the case order to entitle the salvors to their claim. of the Maria Edward's Adm. Reports, 175, the vessel had been totally abandoned and first taken possession of by two fishing-smacks; yet, aithough these vessels were proved to be fully competent to the task of rarrying the vessel safely to shore, a King's ship interfered for the purpose of giving as-istance, and was held entitled jointly with the original salvors. Secondly, it had been uiged on the other side, that the steamer had done no more than her duty, whereas to entitle a party to the claim, such party (it was alleged) must be a more volunteer. Now the cases cited, relating to the saving of a ship by her own crew, were utterly inapplicable, because the crew had done nothing more than they had actually contracted to do, and could not, therefore, claim any reward: and the distinction between pilotage and salvage might be safely admitted, without affecting the present claim. If the commander of the steamer had been a regular pilot, and had performed nothing more than a pilot's duty, he certainly could not have demanded any additional remuneration; but the case was not so. It was true, that to a certain extent, it is the general duty of commander of a steamer to interfered, because general instructions to that effect have been promulgated under the sanction of Government. But to a certain extent too, it is the duty of every ship to assist another in distress, as it is the duty of every good Christian to lend a helping hand to his neighbour. The case of her Majesty's vessels being allowed salvage for saving other ships from damage or destruction, was precisely in point. It was the bounden duty of a King's ship to aid and protect a merchant vessel under British colours -in the instance, for example, of such vessel being attacked by a hostile ship of war, -yet the King's ship might institute a claim for salvage. In the matter of the Marianne, Haggard's Adm. Reports, 158, where the vessel was saved by the King's sloop Arrow, Lord Stowell said, that the sloop was entitled to salvage, although there was an obligation upon her Majesty's vessels to aid the merchant ships of this country.

CROWN SIDE.

THE QUEEN VETSUS MOSAHUB ALLY AND FAY ALLY.

These two prisoners, who were convicted of theft at the 3d sessions of 1836, and whose case was transmitted home by the judges, for the merciful consideration of the crown, were this morning, placed at the bar. The clerk of the crown read about her Majesty's free pardon, signed with the royal sign manual, and countersigned by the secretary of state. The pridon was interpreted to them by the sworn interpreter of the court, and the prisoners were ordered to be discharged from custody.

Prisoners discharged.

PLEA SIDE.

JAMES YOUNG VETSUS MUDDOOSOODEN SITT.

This was the first cause on the common Law Board, and stood for this-day.

The Advocate General had been instructed to apply to the court for liberty to postpone the trial, as Mr. Clarke (to whom the learned Advocate was opposed) was the only coursel on the opposite side, and had met with an accident in sprinning his ancle, which unavoidably confined him to the house.

Sir E Ryan said, that if the opposite counsel consented, the case might stand over.

Stood over.

IN THE MATTER OF JUDGE, GENTLEMAN.

The Advocate General moved the court, that leave of absence for three years might be granted to Mr. Joseph Spencer Judge, an attorney of this court, for the benefit of his health.

Leave granted.

PAUL CHOWDRY.

This was an action upon a bond, and was heard exparte.

The plaintiff and defendant were sureties in a bond given to the receiver (E. Macnaughten, Esq.) for securing the payment on the part of their principal, of certain money payable by instalments.—After the payment of a certain portion, default was made by the principal, and two instalments falling in arreas, the receiver, having applied without success to the principal debtor, instituted proceedings against the present plaintiff, as surety. The plaintiff paid the amount due, Co.'s Rs. 10,500, and now sued his co-surety upon a separate bond, which he had taken from him for his own indemnity.

The plaintiff was very nearly nonsuit d, from inabilityto give legal proof of the default in payment on the part of the principal debtor; but he was allowed to recover on giving evidence of the demand made upon the principal, and of the proceedings at law instituted against himself at the suit of the receiver, and under which he had paid up the arrears which had accrued due.

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep appeared for the planniff.

EQUITY SIDE.

Moddoosoodden Sandell versus Ralsmoney Dosser.

This cause stood for hearing on the pleadings, the bill having been filed for an account.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Cochrane) for the complaniants, stated, that the parties had agreed that a decree should be taken by consent. The learned counsel proceeded to specify the terms.

Mr. Osharne rose and said, that in the consultation at which he was present. the terms consented to were not the same as those now stated on the other side, and in the absence of his loader, Mr. Clarke, he did not feel nunself justified in consenting to any alteration.

Mr. Prinsep said, that if Mr. Clarke had been present, be would not object to the terms now stated.

Sir Filward Ryan observed, that this was a curious position to place their lordships in. The court were first informed, that a decree would be taken by consent, and then, as soon as the matter was opened, it appeared that there was a dispute between counsel, respecting the precise terms. The regular course was, whenever the parties were willing, that a decree should be had by consent, to draw up the decree before coming into court, and then for the senior counsel on each side to sign it. If counsel could not agree, the cause must be gone into, and the court would decide.

It was at last settled, that a decree should be taken on the pleadings, and that a reference should be directed to the master to take an account of all matters in the pleadings mentioned.

Mr. Clarke moved that the master's report might be confirmed. The former master had made his report in the cause, to which exceptions had been taken and in part allowed. The report had been referred back, and the present master (the vacaucy having occurred in the interim) had made his report upon only the matterexcepted to. At the present time, therefore, there were two separate reports, forming one entire and complete report in the cause, and the object of the present application was to consolidate and confirm the same. The learned counsel argued, that it would involve both the master and the parties in great hardship and difficulty, if the whole of the matters brought before a former master were obliged to be gone into a second time before the new master, and the whole report drawn up aftesh, while, perhaps, the portion requiring reconsideration and amendment, might bear a very minute proportion to the entire report. Moreover, there was another obvious objection, masmuch as the master would make the whole report his own, by embodying the former report in his fresh report upon the matters excepted to, whereas the special direction and authority given by the court, would extend only to the latter,

Sir E. Ryan said, that this was an application to add together two separate reports by two different maters, and transmute them into one. Such an application was without precedent in this court, and could not be granted.

Refused.

MANUE AND OTHERS Terras Sankies Owen and others.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Clarke) moved upon affidavits, that the present trustees of the matriage-settlement might be removed, on the ground of in-obsency, and others substituted in their stead.

Mr. Prinsep, for the trustees, did not object, on the part of his clients, to their discharge, and to the substitution of new trustees. His cheats, indeed, were anxious to be relieved from their trusts, and secured from all future liability. Yet be conceived it necessary to submit to the court, whether the present proceeding was strictly regular, and whether trustees appointed under a solemn deed, could be removed by a mere petition to the court. He submitted that the parties might change the trustees of their own act, and discharge the present trustees from their hability, a regular deed of release.

The Advocate General, in reply, observed, that he could not understand the course adopted by his learned friend, and he was not aware that there was any middle course between opposing a motion and not opposing it. The patter could not effect the change required without the aid of the court, first because one was under age, and secondly because another had refused to give his consent.

The Court said, that it appeared that no opposition to the change was wished to be made on the part of the present trustees, and they unquestionably possessed the right of coming in and opposing the application in its present form, until they were themselves duly discharged from all liability. There must be a reference to the master.

Mr. Clarks applied for a sale by the sheriff, of the goods of the defendant, seized under a writ of sequestration for want of an interaction. The affidavits stated, that the goods seized were perishable commodities, and that damage and loss would inevitably ensue, if the sale were delayed.

- rersus -

Sir E. Ryan. Why, it appears that the property in question consists of GRAM, and I am not aware that gram can be called a perishable commodity. I have heard of cases, indeed, where a sale of cattle has been permitted, on the ground of the expense incurred in the keep: in vulgar language, they "eat their own heads off."

Mr. Clarke suggested, that at the commencement of the rains, grain was likely to be damaged by being long kept, and in support of this position, he referred to a report of the agricultural society, who (the learned counsel observed) most be deemed a better authority upon such a point, than even their lordships! Besides, the pirce of grain was likely to fall in a short time, and this property, therefore, would be sold at a depreciated price.

Sir E. Ryan said, that even if this were the case, it did not bear out the statement that gram was a perishable commodity. The actual sale of the property would be a measure of some severity, and the court saw no reason for hastening it. No judgment had yet passed against the party:—he was only in contempt to non-appearance. The ground of the affidavit be must amended.

Refused.

NIBBUNMONEY DABEY versus SHAMLOLL TAGORE AND OTHERS.

Mr. I eith rose and said, that he had to shew cause in this case.

The Advocate General observed, that he had not expected to be called upon, as the motion was his own, and it was in his discretion to press it or not.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the course was certainly not strictly regular. It was for the party who had obtained the rule, to apply to make it absolute if they chose. I he other side need not interfere, because, unless a motion is made to make the rule absolute, of course it falls to the ground.

The Advacate General, however, said, that he was perfectly ready, and he proceeded accordingly to support his rule. The nature of the application was this. A creditor Juggomohun Mookerjee, had applied, at a late stage, for leave to come in and prove his claim before the master, and the court had allowed this upon a special order, directing that all costs incurred by the proceedings before the master, should be paid by the creditor. The question was, whether the costs of certain objections to the items of a bill before the taxing-officer, were to be considered as included in the terms of the order. The leaved counsel contended, that these costs did not arise from the delay of his chent, that they would have been equally incurred if he had come in six months earlier, and that they did not fall, therefore, within the purview of their lord-hips' order.

Mr. Leith shewed cause, contending that the costs of the objections were clearly, to all intents and puposes, costs occasioned by the application of the creditor, and fell within the express words of the order.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court had given leave to this creditor, with considerable reluctance, and that the order then made was, that all the costs incurred, should be borne by the applicant, as they considered that he had placed himself in the most unfavourable position in this respect. It was the intention of the court, and the order so expressed it, that the party who had already suffered from the creditor's wilful delay, should not be put to any expense at all in the matter. The order extended, not merely to costs caused incidentally by the delay which had occurred, but to all costs whatever which the application should occasion.

Rule discharged.

Bonnepjee versus Bonnebjee.

Upon the application of the Advocate General, the court said, that judgment would be given in this case (upon exceptions to the master's report) in the course of a day or two.

The motions occupied the court to-day until so late; ance, and the plaintiff now proceeded to assess damages. an hour, that the two demurrers standing for hearing Both of the parties carried on business in Calcutta, and on the plea and equity side, were postponed. RANDHONE GHOSE VERSUS RAMANUND GHOSE.

The case was called upon, but stood over, being tied up by a rule nisi for its postponement until next term, on the ground of the absence of two material witnesses.

JAMES YOUNG VERSUS MOODOSOODDUN SLIT. Mr Prinsep opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case for the plain tiff. The action was brought to recover the balance of principal and interest due upon promisory note for Sa. Rs. 15,000, of which the defendant was the maker, and which had been indorsed over to the plaintiff as secretary to the Umon Bank. The detendant and his brother were partners, and had established a cootie or banking house, which transacted the business with the in this case as for want of a plea. The plant was Union Bank. This promissory note had been given to framed upon a loll of exchange, and the plea was the secure a loan, and the defendant upon two different general issue, which, since the new rules, is a nullity. occasions, had paid up a sum, amounting to between two and three thousand rupees, upon account of the note. The defendant's brother was in the habit of signing for himself and his partner, and had singed his brother's name in his presence upon the present occasion. The learned counsel submitted that proof of the payment on occount of the note would preclude the defendant from denying his own liability, and the authority of his brother to indorse.

Evidence was then tendered in support of the above facts.

Mr. Clarke for the defence submitted, that there was not sufficient proof of authority, or that the instrument was duly explained and recognised by the present detend ant; and further, that, as it had appeared from the plaintiff's own case that several dealings had taken place between these parties and the Union Bank, there was nothing to shew satisfactorily to what account the alleged sums had been pind. He therefore prayed a nonsuit.

Sir E. Ryan. There is quite sufficient prima facie evidence to shew that the sums were paid on account of this promissory note. If you go for a nor unt, that evidence must be assumed true for that purpose ; -it is otherwise, if you submit the case to us as jurors, and claim a verdic; for your chent.

Mr. Clarks then called a witness to prove that the cootie was the sole property of the brother, and that the defendant had no interest in it whatever. This witness was examined and cross-examined at great length, and the plaintiff produced testimony in contradiction of the material parts of his evidence.

The Court was of opinion that the plaintiff had succeeded in proving the authority, and was entitled to a verdict for the whole balance claimed.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

WOODDYCHUM Doss versus BRINDABUN.

Mr. Marnell opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated, that this was action upon an account stated between the parties. Judgment had been allowed to pass by default for want of appear-there had been several extensive mutual dealings. Upon the settlement of accounts between them, some time since, a large sum was found due, and acknowleriged to be due to the plantiff; to recover which with interest from that date, the present action was brought.

The Court were of opinion, when the evidence had been gone through, that the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the sum acknowledged to be due upon the settlement of accounts, and that there was no evidence before their lordships to support his claim for interest.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke moved, in the cases, in which a motion was made yesterday to confirm the two separate master's roports; that the said reports might be taken off the file, and referred to the master to be consolidated, when the consolidated report might be afterwards moved to be brought up and confirmed.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court would direct that both the reports should be taken off the file, but that when they were referred to the master, that officer must deal with them according to his own discretion. without any special order from the court.

Mr Leith moved, that judgment might be entered up

Motion granted.

The demanters were again postponed. Sir John Grant said, that in the demurrer on the plea side he had only just received the paper-books. Sir Edward Ryan intunidated an opinion to the counsel for the defence, that most of the authorities relied upon by them, had been expressly overruled by more recent decision. -Hurkaru, June 27.

RUSSICKCHUNDER NEOGHY PERSUS SREEMURTY HURREE-MONEY DOSSEE.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Prinsep.) for the plaintiff, stated, that this was an issue from the equity side of the court, directed for the purpose of trying the question whether the complainant in the equity suit (the defendant at law) had accepted and acknowledged a certain Bongallee security in the nature of a bill of exchange for the sum of Sa. Rs. 2,900 The defence set up was that the defendant had never signed her name to any such paper and that the whole was a forgery; but the plaintiff would call the subscribing witnesses, and show when and how the whole happened. The brothers of the defendant (who is a lady of property) by name Cossinauth Dott and Bissinnauth Dutt, had been indebted in large sums to the plaintiff; some of these debts were liquidated by the sale of certain pro-perty mortgaged by them to the plaintiff. The present defendant had paid several large sums at different times and given securities, on account of her brother's debts, and among others had signed the present acceptance to cover the balance found due to the plaintiff from Cossinauth Dutt, on a settlement of accounts between those parties.

fiff. and examined and cross-examined at great length. counsel submitted, that no unnecessary delay had been Among others, the alloged subscribing witnesses to the instrument were called to prove its validity; the defendant's counsel endeavoured to shew that their names had beed subsequently added.

Sir Edward Ryan observed, as soon as the case for the plaintiff had closed, that the court would not call upon the other side for their defence, as they were of opinions, that the plaintiff had failed in proving the genuineness of the acceptance.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith appeared for the defence. Verdict for the defendant.

This case occupied the court the whole day.

The case in yesterday's report, entitled "-v. Thackeray," ought to have stood "Hullodhur Ghose v. Thackeray." Our reporter accidentally failed to catch the plaintiff's name .- Hurkaru, June 28.

Schneider versus Mongan.

This was an action upon the common counts for goods sold with which particulars of demand had been filed, stating that the plaintiff claimed the value of a buggy sold to the defendant. The plea was special, buggy sold to the defendant. The plea was special Calc and stated that the chattel sold did not correspond tion. with the representation of the seller. To this the plaintiff demurred upon the ground that the plea was had for duplicity, and, moreover, amounted to the general issue.

Mr. Clarke stated to the court, that after the intimations thrown out by their lordships, questioning the validity of the plea, the defendant would, with the permission of the court, withdraw his plea, instead of risking an argument upon the demurrer. Upon the question of costs, he submitted, that some allowances might reasonably be allowed, on the score of the doubt and uncertainty in which the point had appeared to be involved, and that the amendment, therefore, might be allowed without costs, the costs to abide the event of the cause.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court would permit the plea to be withdrawn and amended, but that there was no ground for refusing costs to the plaintiff. The cases relied upon by the defendant, had been clearly and expressly overruled.

Leave to amend on payment of costs.

JOHN REVELEY U. BENJAMIN HARDING AND OTHERS.

The Advocate General, shewed cause against the rule nisi obtained by the plaintiff in this case for entering up judgment as in the case of a nonsuit. The action was brought against an insurance office for Co.'s Rs. 12,000. This saintiff wer resident at Penang, from which place the ship sailed, and where she had been insured. The vessel was wrecked at Cochin, and the owners now claimed for a total loss. A Mr. Philip and Mr. Morton had been material witnesses to prove the plaintiff's case;—the former had sailed from Calcutta, and the latter was dead. There were other persons at and the latter was dead. There were other persons at Penang, capable of giving important evidence, and it might confine himself to the former point, as it appeared. would be necessary to apply for a commission for their prima fucie to make strongly against him.

Mr. Leith supported his rule.

Sir Edward Ryon said, that the rule must be discharged, and with costs. There was no other affidavit but that of the gomastah, and the court observed, that frequent attempts had been made latterly to postpone trials upon such vague grounds. Their lordships would require a much more certain and substantial foundation for such applications. A suspicion naturally arose that the application was made merely for the purpose of delay.

Rule discharged with costs.

MACNAGHTEN versus TANDY.

This case being called on, the counsel for the defendants were about to support their demurrer, when the court observed, that they wished to hear the complainant's counsel first in support of the bill.

The Advocate General stated, that the defendant was the editor and publisher of a newspaper called the Agra Ukhbar, and that the present bill had been filed against him for a discovery of the names of the proprietors of the said paper, in aid of an action at law about to be brought against them for certain libels contained in that newspaper. There were several grounds stated in the demutrer, but the chief grounds were that the bill sought a discovery which would subject the defendant to pains and penalties, contrary to the principles recognized by courts of equity, and, moreover, that the defendant himself might be examined as a winess at law in an action of libel against the proprietors, and that he was not subject, therefore, to a bill of discovery.

The Advocate General submitted, that there was no ground for the objection. It was only stated, that an action was about to be brought against the proprietors, and the defendant was not necessarily included in this. There was nothing whatever to shew that the answer to this bill would attach cominality to the defendant, Besides, there was no possible object to be guined by calling upon him to acknowledge himself responsible aproprietor, because he was already amenable as the avowed editor. But, even admitting for argument's sake, that part of the discovery sought in the bill extended against the defendant himself, and afforded a ground for the objection that he was not compellable to crimieste himself by his answer, this did not apply to the whole bill, and there were abundant authorities to shew that a defendant might demur or plead, to part of a bill and answer to the remainder. The present demutrer, therefore, was at all events too large.

Sir Edward Ryan. There certainly is some distinction, by the manner in which Mr. Advocate General has ingeniously shaped his case. The court now wish to hear the opposite side upon the other main point and proved ; -in which case no bill of discovery could taken in the demurier.

Mr. Prinsep, in support of the demurrer, contended that their opponents were placed in this palpable dilemma ;--- if they mean to argue that this defendant was an interested party, and as such hable to the bill of discovery, then the first objection would arise, that he was called upon to make a discovery which would criminate himself as proprietor, and it on the other hand it was contended that he was not interested, and was in this respect a mere third party, an equally insurmountable objection arose in the principle that a party capable of being made a witness at law could not become a party to a bill of discovery. Now, it was stated in the bill that C. G. Mansell (and others were proprietors of this paper:-then, why was not an action brought against Mr. Mansell and Mr. Faudy sub-poenaed as a witness to prove the proprietorship? No authority could be shown for making a witness defendant in an equity suit for the mere purpose of obtaining his evidence; and, indeed, if such a principle were once acknowledged, it would lead to endless abuses. Every one was hable to be subjectiated as a witness; but was every one therefore compeliable to answer a bill of discovery? Besides there were no grounds alleged how or why this party possessed any knowledge upon the subject, or enjoyed peculiar opportunities of procuring information. It was true, that he was editor of the paper in question, and as such employed in the office, but this was no guirantee that he was acquainted with the names of the proprietors then, selves. The bill might just as vell have been filed against the, Printer's devil, who of course was also employed in the office. The whole proceedings was a mere experiment; the bill was (as it were) shot into a mob, and the complainant might go on in the same manner from party to party, until he succeeded in hitting upon some one capable of giving him the desired information. But, faither, the learned Advocate General had considered the former objection upon two narrow grounds. There were authornes to show that no bill of discovery would lie in aid of any criminal proceedings, whether the defendant himself was implicated or not, and that it was very questionable whether it could be supported for any tort whatsoever. These positions were laid down by Lord Langford, the master of rolls, in a recent case reported in 1 Keen's reports, Glynn v. Houstown, where the bill was in aid of an action for false imprisonment against the Governor of Gibraltar. So in Caatom Douglas, 16 Vesey Junior, it was laid down, that it was material whether the criminal matter affected the defeedant or other parties, and that no one was bound to answer to matters tending to implicate another in a criminal charge

Mr. Leith followed on the same side, and urged the points dwelt upon by his leader, contending that this lenurrer was founded upon two well-established principles of equity, viz. that no party was bound by his answer to criminate himself or any other person, and that a witness could not be made a party to a bill of discovery. The learned counsel further proceeded to argue, that it was necessary for a party to come into a court of equity (as usually expressed) "with clean hands:" whereas it here appeared upon the face of the bill, that the complainant himself had given ample provocation, and had in fact commenced hostilities by publishing gross libels against this very defendant, Sir E. Ryan. That appears upon the face of the bill no further than this, - that you have accused him of it in your own libel!

Mr. Leith then urged another point, vis. that the party was bound to deny solemnly all the charges against him contained in the libel of which he complained: otherwise it would not appear but that a plea of justification might be put upon the record in the action at law; and him a jot. Now the charges contained in the alleg-ed libel were not denied by the complainant, and the charges, therefore, must be assumed as true.

Sir Edward Ryan. That position would be good, where the party libelled sought for a criminal information against the libeller, but the principle is quite inap-plicable to the present case. The complainant is not prejudiced by omitting to traverse the truth of the charges.

The Court then directed the attention of the complainant's counsel to the dilemma in which they appeared to be placed.

The Advocate General said, that there was not only the authority of legal decisions in support of their side, but the express declaration of an Act of Parliament. By the 38 Geo. 111. c. 78. s. 28, it was expressly enacted, that in all cases where bills were filed for the purpose of discovering the names of the proprietors or publishers of any journal, or ascertaining other necessary matters in aid of an action at law for libel, it should not be competent for the defendant to plead or demur, but that he should be compelled to answer the matters required. Now he did not mean to say that this act expressly extended in India, but it amounted to a clear admission, by inference, that bills of discovery had been formerly entertained, and were not wholly unusual in such cases.

Sir E. Ryan. It seems to me merely to narrow a right in the part of the defendant, which formerly existed!

Mr. Clarke followed on the same side. The learned counsel took a new ground of argument with reference to the above cited Act of Parliament, and contended that although the act itself did not extend to India, this court, sitting as a court of equity, would recognize the principle there laid down, because by the express provisions of the charter, it was empowered to decide according to equity and good conscience, and the practice was directed to be regulated according to the rules which were acknowledged, and acted upon at home. Now, it was clear that such a full as the present would be entertained by the court of chancery at home, because it would not be competent for the defendant to plead or demur, and the demurrer must therefore be overruled. The same principle ought to be acted upon here.

Sir J. Grant. I understand this act to mean that the defendant, when interested, shall not shelter himself from a discovery upon the mere ground that such discovery may subject him to penal consequences.

Mr. Clarke. The act contains no such restriction, my Lord. It provides generally that the defendant shall be compelled to answer, and he has no right to demur upon one ground more than upon another; whether it be his liability to penalties, or his competency as a witness at law. The object of this enactment is plain. It was, doubtless, occasioned by those disgrateful tricks to which the proprietors of journals (as in the notorious case of the John Bull) had recourse, in putting forward men of straw to become the scape goats for the most attrocious libels. There were exceptions to the rules that no bill of discovery would lie for torts, or against parties competent to be called as witnesses. In the first place, there were cases (reported in Vernon), where it was expressly laid down that a court of equity would entertain a bill in aid of an action in the form ex delicto, as well as for actions ex contractu. As to the other point there was one instance where witness was compelled to answer to a bill of discovery in a matter relating to canal-tolls, and another where a factor was compelled to answer, although a real principal was concerned. Now it might be said, perhaps, that these cases arose ex necessitate rei, and were mere exceptions to the general rule, inasmuch as the witnesses, made defendants, were the only ostensible parties. But the present case was fully as much an exception, and presented peculiar features which justified a modification of the general rule.

Sir Edward Ryan. I retain my former opinion, and I have no doubt whatever that such a bill as the present cannot be sustained. This is a bare question of law, and unconnected with any disputer which may exist between Mr. Macnaghten and Mr. Tandy. are told that an action of libel is pending, but of this we can take no notice.

If the party answers this bill as it stands, he must, infalliby criminate himself. It has been ingeniously suggested, that the part relating to the defendant might be omitted; but this is impracticable. It is impossible for the defendant to answer the bill at all, without stating that he is connected with the paper, or otherwise interested so as to make him incompetent as a witness.

Again, no authority is shown and I believe none exists, which contravenes the general principle, that such a proceeding is untenable in the case of a mere personal tort, whether the defendant be implicated or not.

The exceptions to the rule that a witness cannot be made a party to a bill of discovery, are founded upon peculiar circumstances, which have no soit of existence in this case. They are exceptions which only confirm the general rule.

As to the 38 Geo. III. c. 78, I must confess myself utterly unable to perceive the grounds of the learned following morning. Advocate General's inference. It appears to me to imply, not that such bills were formerly entertained but that this were a mere matter of practice and procedure, it an offer made merely to purchase peace. might be otherwise, but it is a question of general right. Besides it seems quite clear that even in England this could not extend to the case of witnesses made defendants, because even if an answer, were obtained, it would not be avidence against a third party, and unless the act went of to make such answer legal evidence, the provision so far would be utterly nugatory. Possibly this very act, may have given rise to the present novel bill of discovery! The demurrer must be allowed, and the bill stand dismissed.

Sir J. Grant concurred.

The Advocate General. I hope your lordship will not allow costs, to a party guilty of such gross libels.

Sir E. Ryan. We have no grounds before the court Mr. Advocate, for assuming that the allegations are libels.

Bill dismissed with costs.

RAMDHONE GUOSE, REPRESENTATIVE OF MUDDENMOHUM GROSE, DICEASED, versus RAMANUND GHOSE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings. The plaint was on the common counts for money lent and interest, laying the promises both to the deceased and the plaintiff. The plea was non assumpsit,

Mr. Clarke stated, that this action was brought to recover the balance due upon a Bengallee instrument in the nature of a bond, given to secure a loan of Sa. Re-1,600. This was the case in which their lordships had discharged the rule nisi on Thursday, for the postponement of the trial, obtained on the alleged ground of the absence of two in iterial witnesses for the defence. There was an order drawn up by the court under the new rules, compelling the other party to admit the execution of the instrument, in default of having appeared to shew cause before a judge at chambers against making such admission.

Sir. E. Ryan said, that the order was incorrectly drawn. The rule in question, R. 59, gave no power to compel the admission of any document, but merely allowed a discretion with respect to the costs of proof, in the event of a refusal to admit the execution.

Mr. Clarke said, that the order had certainly appeared to him maccurate, and he was prepared therefore to prove the instrument in the regular way.

The subscribing witnesses were then called, and the instrument and consideration were proved, also the fact that the plaintiff was the only surviving son. The sum of Rs- 838 were allowed by the plaintiff, as having been paid on account of interest, and a verdict was taken for the balance.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings. The plaint was for goods sold and money lent.

Mr. Clarke stated the plaintiff's case. Part of the claim was for the principal and interest of a loan, and the remainder for the value of certain cattle sold to the defendant. Witnesses would be called to prove the transactions, and an admission of the debt on the part of the defendant, coupled with a promise to pay.

Evidence was given to shew that the parties had agreed to settle their money disputes, that they met at defendant's house, and that the defendant eventually agreed to pry 18- 1,600. A written statement of the court was intended to have been drawn up on the

SUDDER DEWANNY ADAWLUF.

JUNE 5, 1808.

(Before J. R. Hutchinson, F.q. Judge) A petition was presented for an appeal by a party to a suit tried before the judge of zillah Tirhoot.

The petitioner stated, that a person named Shibchunder, who resided within the district of Tuboot, had become security to another person for the payment of a debt due to him by a third party. The original debtor having failed to pay this debt when it became due, the creditor sued both the debtor and his security for the amount, and, having obtained a decree in the zillah court of Tithoot, he seized some lands and houses for the execution of his decise, situated within the jurisdiction of the zillah court of Dacca, as the property of Shibchunder the security. The petitioner admitted that these lands and houses had been formerly the property of Shibehunder, but he bad sold them to the petitioner long previous to his becoming security for the debt, for the liquidation of which they were now wized. He further added, that he was a resident within the district of Dacca, and consequently not amenable to the jurisdiction of the court of zillah Tirhoot. He therefore prayed the Sudder Court to remvestigate the merits of his case, and order the replevin on his lands and houses to be with-

The vakeel of the party who had seized these lands, &cc. as the property of Shibchunder, replied that at the time that Shibch under became security for the payment of the debt for the realization of which the property which this petitioner claims to be his, had been seized, he had represented to his client that the property in question was his, and it was on this very property that his client had consented to accept the security of Shibehunder. The judge was of an opinion, that there were sufficient grounds to admit the appeal to be heard, and it was ordered to be registered accordingly.

(Before E. R. Barwell, Esq. Commissioner.) Several proprietors of lands in a zillah appertaining to June 15.

the Bengal presidency, petitioned the commissionar against the collector of that zillah.

The petitioners stated, that the collector in question had in one day decided the cases respecting their lands against them, and that they had subsequently petitioned the collector for official copies of the decisions passed by him on their cases, which he had refused to grant on the plea, that by the time these documents could be furnished to them, the period of three months allowed by the regulations from the time of the decisions being passed in their cases, to file their appeal to the superior court would expire.

On perusal of those petitions, the commissioner, direct ed a precept to be despatched to the collector, desiring charges instituted against him by these petitioners. The collector thereupon made his return, in which he stated-that he couccive i that the period of three months allow, ed to any dissenting party from his decision to appeal to the superior court, commenced from the date of the decision of their case and not from the time when the order passed by him was engrossed and ready for transcription. as these petitioners conceived it to be, and consequently as three months would expire from the date of his award in their cases, before they could obtain copies of the documents they required, and file their petition of appeal before the superior court, he had declined furnishing them with official copies of these documents.

After the receipt of this return of the collector to the precept directed to him in this case. Mr. E. R. Barwell, the commissioner of the Sudder Special commissioner's court, took up the matter pending on these petitions, and after he had carefully perused the petitions and the collector's reply to the charges urged against him or them, he decided that in his opinion, the period of three months allowed to a dissentient party to appeal from the award of the minor court to the Sudder Court, commenced from the date on which the orders on their cases were ready for transcription, and directed the collector to furnish the documents required by these petitioners .: - Hurkaru.

TIRHOOT.

PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEEN'S COURT, MAY 28, 1838.

(Ubdool Wahid Khan, Bahadoor.)

This case was originally instituted in the court of the moonsiff of Mudepoor. The plaintiff sues three individuels, viz. Premina, Hemuniha, and Shamiha, for a bonded debt of Re-200 with 11 Rs-8 As. interest that has accrued thereupon. The defendants contest the demand by denying the genuineness of the tumussook; and producing witnesses to prove as much. The plaintiff substantiates his plea, by the depositions of witnesses, who swear to the money claimed, having been paid to one of the defendants, and to the rest being parties to the instrument produced in court. The moonsiff decrees the instrument produced in court. The moonsist decrees the suit in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants appeal; the case is referred to the former principal Suider ameen, the home the decision of the moonsiff is reversed. The retainment to a khas appeal, i.e. to the court of the additional judge, who, considering the grounds of the decision of the principal Sudder ameen as inconclusive, refers the case to this Court.

This-day the principal Sudder ameen examined the case, and had all the papers on the file read. It was discovered that two if the vakee's, a mookhtarkar and the stamp vender attached to the moonsiff's court, named by the respondent as witnesses to the defendants' preventing him by entreaties from prosecuting him, some time before the institution of the suit, had not been called in by the principal Sudder ameen. This court thought it desirable to have them produced, and gave the vakeel of the respondent two weeks' time for that purpose. The vakeel of the appellant, was also permitted to produce, if he wished it, any other witnesses or proofs in support of his side of the question.

In the course of examining the file of the proceedings in the case, the fysula of the moonsiff was read. Ere it had been gone through, it struck the court that half of the fysula related to one, and half to another care The under part of the paper had been added evidently by carelessness or accident, without the incongruous junction having been discovered, by any of the courts through which the file had been travelling in quest of a final decision; and but for the watchfulness of this court, it might have had to stand a second khus appeal.

ADDITIONAL PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEEN'S COURT.

(Shoojaoodeen Ulles Khan, Bahadoor.)

On entering, we found the court engaged with a suit respecting the right by law, and fact of occupancy, to certain reat property, lustily being contested by four vakeels. There was apparently so much said by all by any possible means, remember but a tithe of what was spoken for and against the merits of the case, we warrant the result would be the most inconclusive conclusion, at which any judge or jury could arrive. We were utterly foiled in our attempts to make anything of the business. The court, however, patiently endured the wrangling of the legal twigs, and seemed to be very much at its ease, as to the drift of the speeches addressed to it, as if out of a four-mouthed speaking trumpet.

In the midst of the hubbub, we caught the eyes of the court, which led to the inquiry, "what is that gentle-man about?" One of the vakeels, who had seen us perpetrate our mischievous work in the other courts. explained the sum and substance of our husiness, with which the Khan seemed satisfied; and turning to us asked, whether we should like to consult any of the papers in the file, to furnish ourselves with accurate data for our reports. We should have accepted the offer, but contented ourselves with replying, that we would at present rather dispense with any other mode of preparing our reports than that which we have hitherto adopted.

THE PUNDIT'S COURT.

There is yet another court at this station to be noticed. We have several times passed by it, while it sat in the verandah of the building in which the magistrate's kutcherry is held; but could not possibly suppose it to be a court of justice. We had taken the whole concern as the durbar of the nazir, or dufter of one of the pleader's practising here. Being told this morning what it meant, we took a closer survey or it than it had deserved, without a label to point it out. "This too is a judge; and this is a court of justice!" To this court criminal cases are referred by the magistrate,—sometimes with a direction, that if the case turned out to be a serious one, it should be sent back for trial to the magistrate's court. The Pundit seemed to be a quiet, harmless personage, with two smart right and left hand men, to help him to sustain the labours of justice.—Hurkaru, June 18.

THE JUDGE'S COURT, MAY 25, 1838.

Since our appearance in this court, we had no apprehension that our avocations would prove unpleasant to the authority that presides over it, we could not possibly anticipate any thing but ready encouragement in the prosecution of our labours. Publicity, we should have imagined, would be courted where there was a consciousness of the characteristics which adorn the bench. Our first report will offer a satisfactory testimony of readiness to set in the fairest point of view, as we are in justice bound to do, those qualities which are entitled to approbation, and this we shall continue to do wherever and whenever we may have opportunity.

Adulation we hold in contempt; but we shall never forget ourselves so far as to withhold the meed of praise when the authorities deserve it. On the other hand we have fearlessly brought to the notice of the public every thing that required to be dragged from mofussil obscurity to the knowledge of the world. Of this nobody that values the weal of the community, the impartial distribution of justice, the correction of abuses which seldom find the light of publicity through any other channel, can possibly question the advantages. And we always had an impression on our mind, not yet obliterated, that the appearance of public reporters in the mofussil courts could not but be appreciated by Government, likely as it is to be left totally in the dark, respecting a thousand things and circumstances which transpire at a distance from the presidency. Such has been and are our views; and we persuade ourselves that we are not harbouring chimerical notions.

When we made our debut as a reporter at Monghyr. we had our fears; we did not, we frankly own, expect that ready and civil encouragement in those courts which we were satisfied would by no means be long withheld. The authorities there not only offered no hindrance to the prosecution of our duties, but seemed to help us forward, though we are sure the freedom of our remarks was calculated to rouse into mitation the corrupt passions of human nature, and expess us at least to the exhibitions of some tokens of the displeasure of those who had not been accustomed to have their public proceedings roughly handled, or freely commented on; still they took no means of obstructing us of even indirectly exhibiting any hostile feelings. We were readily accommodated with a seat, though there were not wanting people. among those who frequented the courts, who regarded our being allowed to sit in court as reprehensible. It was argued that it was a mark of the favour of the court owards us; for what was more monstrous in the molusall than to permit any person not a functionary to be sitting in open court!

At Bhaugulpore, too, every facility was afforded us by all the authornies; nay, they seemed to be studious to render us perfectly satisfied that we were before liberal-minded judges and magistrates, who desired no kind of concealment from the eyes of the public at large. They seemed rather to Court publicity; and both there and at Alonghyr, we pursued and terminated our career without the slightest impression on our minds that we could possibly give umbrage. Had we published any misstatements we should have been happy to have had our mistakes rectified: we courted no favour, but we received kindness freely.

On our arrival at this station, we heard a rumour that our pursuing the avocations of a reporter would not be reliabled by the authorities; but we gave no credit to it: we went quietly round the courts and were much gratified by what we saw in some of them.
We readily laid the result before the public. To-day we appeared in this court and took our stand not far from the bench in a part of the court-house to which the vakeels and others freely resorted, and where we ourselves went several days without any objections being raised. But when we went to-day with pencil and paper in hand, we were desired by the judge to place ourselves there were the populous was standing —a place so far removed from the presence that we are certain we shall not be able to catch distinctly what transpires about it. There was not another individual, vakeel or mooktear, in the place where we had stationed ourselves, we incommoded nobody: we were merely taking notes in our memorandum book placed on a kind of railing that separated us from the vakeels, &c. that were standing before the court. Whatever might have been the object of the direction we received this-day, we cannot view it in any other light than at a manifestation of those sentiments which we were on our arrival at this district told to expect We were unwilling to call away the attention of the court from the case which it was then occupied upon; but we intend to bring the matter formally before the judges, as it is obvious that we cannot rely on the accuracy of our reports. if we have not an opportunity of distinctly hearing the proceedings .- Hurkaru, June 23.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

MARTING OF THE GOVERNOR WITH RUNJEET SING. - It is said that a large force, under the command of Major teneral Duncan, will proceed, 400n after the rains, towards Ferozepore, on the Sutledge, in which neighbourhood the meeting between the Governor-General of India and the ruler of the Punjab, will take place. The force will consist of one regiment of native cavalry. a troop of European horse autillery, two squadrons of Her Majesty's 16th lancers, one regiment of European, and her of native infantry.

THE GOVERNOR OF STRAMPORE. - The Hon. Mr. Hanson having been appointed Governor of Serampore, by His Majesty the King of Denmark, arrived in the river on the 2010 instant, and landed in Serampore the next day at noon, under the salute due to his rank.

THE BRIOTAN EMBASSY .- Within the last few days, letters have been received in this city from the British embas-y in Bhotan, from which we Icarn, that Captain Pemberton and party have abandoned their original plan of proceeding into Thibet, and may be expected in Calcutta towards the latter end of June.

THE CULNA AFFAIR. - Mr. Shaw, who had gone in company with Mr. Hedger to attend the investigation at Burdwan, had been igain arbitrarily seized by order of Mr. Ogilvy, the magistrate, who was still in power there, and dragged through the streets to the cutcherry; three men having seized him to effect that purpose, without any previous warning. After having been kept in the compound for upwards of an hour, this papers having also been taken possession of,) he was admitted to the "presence," where he found Mr. Ogilvy on the bench, and another person, whose name Mr. Shaw was not acquainted with. He requested Mr. Ogilvy to inform him who the gentleman was; but Mr. Ogilvy declined. Mr. Shaw insisted on his right to be informed who it was, by whom he was to be judged; whereupon both the gentlemen on the bench tebuked him harshly, and paid no attention to his protest, against the examination of his private papers. Mr. Ogilvy at length said, that he considered Mr. Shaw's bail to be invalid, and that, therefore, Mr. Shaw was to be detained in custody. Upon this Mr. Hedger, who had hastened to the scene, on hearing of Mr. Shaw's arrest, informed Mr. Ogilvy, that as he Mr. Hedger, had been bail for Mr. Shaw, he considered himself discharged from all further responsibility. To this Mr. Ogilvy demurred; but Mr. Hedger informed him with firmness, that as he had chosen to take Mr. Shaw again into custody, he had, ipso facto, freed the bail, and that Mr. Hedger should act accordingly. Thus Mr. Shaw was again incarcerated by a proceeding so arbitrary, that we should have thought no magistrate would have dured to have excised his power in such a manner upon a British subject, since, has been going on there, it seems from the accounts received, to be worse than mockery. Mr. Ogilvy, who stands accused of the highest crime known to human law, was actually conducting the investigation. He has, however, been temporarily removed from his acting magistracy—a course of proceeding which will secure an impartial investigation of the affair, Mr. F. C. Smith, condemns as especially indiscreet and improper, the conduct of Mr. Ogilvy, subsequently to the first arrest of Mr. Shaw, and the magistrate has been accordingly summoned to Calcutta.

Ogilvy, and a criminal information against Mr. Barlow for improper neglect in the discharge of his magisterial and judicial duties, no less than thirteen civil actions, arising out of the Culna affair, have been instituted by different parties against the first-named gentleman, who has been arrested by Mr. O'Hanlon, the magistrate, but bailed on two lacs of rupees.

The preliminary proceedings in the case of the pretender to the raj of Burdwan, commenced before the magistrate of Houghly on Monday. Pertaub Chund was in the cutcherry, the greater part of the day, having portions of the documentary evulence read. He admitted many of the letters addressed by him to neighbouring Rajahs. On Tuesday, Mr. Shaw and Mr. Graham attended on his behalf. Neither of these gentlemen had taken out a mooktar-nameh. There was no objection to his cross-examination of any of the witnesses on any points relating to himself; and he very frequently addressed the magistrate. The proceedings were not of much importance. The soi disant Rajah was not present on Tuesday.

On the 14th instant, seven other witnesses were examined for the prosecution in Mr. Ogilvy a case, in the course of which one of the witnesses said, his son was one of the people shot, and gave other particulars which we are requested by the magistrate to withhold, also the other evidence given. At the conclusion of this day's examination, Mr. Prinsep observed, that no distinct evidence had been heard of Mr. Ogilvy's giving the order for the firing. In reply to which, Mr. Longueville Clarke said, that very plane evidence had been given on that point.

The final examination of witnesses for the prosecution and defence, in Mr. Ogilvy's case, concluded at seven o'clock on the 22d instant. The na-zir and darogah of Burdwan, were the two ast witnesses examined for the defence. The former deposed. to his being sent for by Pertaub Chund, and to his going on board Lis budgerow, and to his having received a letter written in English for the magistrate, but which he returned to the bearer of it; and also to his having received two other letters written in Persian, from Pertaub Chund. He could not state the hour he received the letters, nor from whom they came. They were signed by Rajah Pertaub Chund. He directed the bearer of the English letter to send it himself to the magistrate, if he wished it to be sent. To the bearer of the two Persian letters, he gave no reply, but sent the epistles to the magistrate, after the disturbance was over. The contents of one of the Persian letters was a request to him, the uazir, to point out or say, how many and what part of Pertaub Chund's followers he wished to disperse. He further said, that he informed the magistrate of the whole of the proceedings; but when cross-examined, he stated, that he was about to inform the magistrate of the letter he had received, but was inturrupted by the magistrate's saying, "insert all in your report." This conversation took place on his way with the magistrate and others, to Mr. Alexander's house. He saw the sepoys load their ourse but saying the saw the sepoys load. their guns, but could not say whether they put balls in or not. He was on the bank of the river when the sepoys were drawn up in a line. A boat was seen making off from Pertaub Chund's boat, and the Captain ordered two guns to be fired over them. They were fired; then three others were fired, and afterwards many others were fired, one after another. He did not hear It is said, that besides sundry indictments against Mr. Ogilvy give any orders to fire. Mr. Ogilvy was in his sight all the time. Deponent further said, that forty-idency of Hyderabad; should be accept it. Colonel Prawn Baboo's, or the Raja of Burdwan's employ. He saw them on the banks of the river. After some further questions were put to this deponent, the darogah was called.

The daragah deposed, that no riot or disturbance had taken place on the part of Pertaub Chund's people.

In many instances he denied what the pazir had stated. He was examined as to the deposition he had made before Mr. Ogilvy at Burdwan, and, respecting which, he could give no explanation. He said, that he could neither read Bengallee nor Persian; that the nazir had done all. He gave further evidence, which we are not permitted to publish. Mr. O'Hanlon said, that himself and Mr. Robison thought the affair was bailable. and he doubted not but that such would be his determination on the following day. It was then intimated, that the same bail which had been given, would again be offered. Mr. Leith, addressing the magistrate, said, that he had no wish to throw the least obstacle in Mr. Ogilvy's way, but that it was for the magistrate to consider the heavy amount that would be required to bail Mr. Ogilvy, and the efficiency of that bail.

Ross Donnelly Mangles, Esq. and John Lowis, Esq. have since become bail for Mr. Ogilvy's appearance, to stand his trial at the next sessions of over and terminer. Mossrs. Prinsep, Ogilvy, Mangles and Lowis, were closetted with Mr. O'Haulon; but the subject of their confabulation has not yet transpired, as all reporters Nobody were prevented from entering the room. attended on behalf of the prosecution.

BURDWAN .- In consequence of the failure of the Ranee of Burdwan to pay the Government revenue with punctuality, the Sudder Board of Revenue have, on the report of the local commissioner, directed that immense court of wards. This will eject Pran Baboo, who is the brother of one Rance and the father of the other, from all management of, or concern with, the property.

The commissioner for the division, will proceed by dawk to carry these orders into effect, and in person make arrangements for the future control of the estate.

PHORIMS TO JUGGURNAUTH .- Letters have been received at Calcutta from Balessur, and other stages on the way to Juggurnauth, stating, that the pilgrims proceeding to that place, to witness the approaching festival of Ruthjattra, are immense; and that the price of provisions has, in consequence, considerably risen almost everywhere, a circumstance which has inconvenienced the poorer orders very much.

CIVIL APPOINTMENT .- Mr. F. Halliday succeeds Mr. R. D. Mangles, as secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the judicial and revenue departments, an appointment calculated to give general satisfaction.

THE BERENICE .- By private letters of the 19th ultimo, received from Bombay, we learn there was a remour at that presidency, that the Berenice would be despatched, not to the Red Sea, with the May packet, but to the Persian Gulph with troops, in consequence of disturbances having broken out in that quarter.

Wilkinson, the political agent, is to be fransferred from petition to the following effect. That on the night of Chota Nagpore to Burra Nagpore, and that Captain Sunday last, he called on a Mr. F. Lynch, (who reside Eric Sutherland is to succeed Captain Wilkinson. Major Sutherland, they say, has been offered the resion terms of intimacy) on private business, when he was two burkundazes had been sent to Culna, by a person in Spiers will go to Gwalior, and somebody else to Rajpootna. Major Sleeman is spoken of, as likely to be appointed superintendent of police for all India.

> TAIL OF CALCUTTA .- The great jail of Calcutta is at present, and has been for some days past, crowded to excess by debtors in large and small amounts, and criminals from different parts of the country-many debtors are there on account of small debts of nine and ten rupees.

> insuring goods.-The recent action brought by the consignee of goods against the insurance office, (although the ultimate decision of the court on the legal question was in favour of the defendants) has suggested to most insurance offices the adoption of the measure of precau-tion by inserting in every policy a clause somewhat to the effect following:

> "It is hereby further declared that nothing herein contained shall be construed or taken as a guarantee or affirmation on the part of the assurers, that the abovementioned goods or any parts thereof have been or shall be laden on such vessel or any other, and that no such guarantee or affirmation is hereby intended to be given by or on behalf of the assurers, to the assured or to any person or persons whatsoever, before or at the time of granting this policy.

> EXTORTION OF THE THANADARS .- That worthy gentleman, J. H. Patton, Esq., the magistrate of the 24-pergunnalis, has ordered notice to be stuck up both in Bengallee and English, at the boundary guard at Malauly's durgah and elsewhere, authorizing any person or persons to take into custody any one found extorting from the venders of fish, vegetables, or other articles, and hand him or them to the police authorities.

KIDNAPPING .- Several cases of kidnapping have been zemindarree to be brought under the jurisdiction of the brought to light during the month, which call imperatively for the interference of the Government to check the abominable system of enslaving the people, which has been for some time going on. In one instance, at Chuck-kerbare, thirty-two individuals were released from imprisonment in a gaol, guarded by an armed burkundauze force, and where some of these unfortunate wretches had been confined for about five months, and from what we learn, dealt with very cruelly. One old man, in parti-cular, had been daily subjected to flagellation, for refus-ing to comply with the requests of his captors, and when he was released, his back presented a truly pitiable eight, being horribly scarrified and inflamed from the nape of the neck downwards. Information has also been received by Mr. Patton, the magistrate of the twenty-four pergunnahs, that several hundred individuals are confined in different parts of his district and the town of Calcutta, and he has instituted a search for their Much praise is due to the indefatigable magistrate and Mr. Dias, who has been mainly instrumental in bringing this affair under the cognizance of the magistrate, for their exertions to release the unfortunate kidnapped individuals from durance vile and ultimate slavery. We hope the miscreams who have been the prime movers in this nefarious traffic, will be brought to condign punishment.

JUNE 11 .- BRUTAL AND COWARDLY ASSAULT .- Mr. Charles Augustus Kreiting, the youngest son of the late Hon. Jacob Krefting, Governor of Serampore, ap-POLITICAL APPOINTMENT.—It is said, that Captain peared before the magistrate this day and presented a filkinson, the political agent, is to be fransferred from petition to the following effect. That on the might of suddenly assaulted by several inmates of the house. He | the house where this tragic scene occurred, were immewas first of all thrown on the steps by two burkandauzes, who held him one by each arm. Lynch then sprang upon him and seated himself across Krefting's chest. and while in this defenceless state he beat him across the face with his clenched fists in the most cruel and unmanly manner. When Lynch had got tired of this mode of ill-usage, he laid hold of Krefting by the hair of his head, which latter he kept dashing against the step for some time. When he was released by Lynch and his myrmidons, he was delivered into the hands of chokeedars, who conveyed him to the Mannicktollah thanah, and after having been kept there upwards of two hours, the thannadar was pleased to release him. The confinement and release was done without the knowledge or consent of Seigeant Dyson, to whom Krelling stated all the particulars. Mr. Krefting's clothes were actually torn from his back, and a new hat was stolen from his head. Several ladies and gentlemen who were at Allipore as witnesses against Lynch, informed us, that they had heard Lynch and a fellow named Baboo Oboychura Doss, assert, some days previous, that the first time they caught hold of Krefting they whould either beat him severely or murder him outright. Mr. Krefting never gave any cause whatever for this unmanly treatment. His tace is in a shocking condition; he can scarcely see out of his eyes, and his forehead is cut and bruised in a most shocking manner.

Mr. Krefting attended the magistrate this day, Monday, when the depositions of his witnesses were taken and he applied to Mr. Patton to admit Mr. C. B. Marnell, junior, as his attorney, to conduct the prosecution against Lyuch, which was granted.

DACOITY AND MURDER .- On the 24th of June, a da coity was perpetrated in the house of a bahoo at Sulkeah, by a band of nearly one hundred armed men! who cruelly murdered two men, and severely wounded three others. The object of the vallams, in attacking the house of the baboo was to obtain possession of twenty thousand rupees, which he had received the day previously; but they were disappointed in their expectation, as the money had been sent to Calcutta. They, however, took away property to the amount of twelve thousand rupees. Strange to say, the whole of this large body of dacoits, after perpetrating the murders within three miles of Calcutta, with torches burning, and playing their flutes, drums, &c , effected their escape and remain undetected!

Several dacoities attended with murders, have lately been committed within a short distance of Calcutta, with impunity, the villains almost invariably effecting their escape; and latterly these robberies seem to have greatly increased. This state of affairs, calls loudly for a speedy reform in our police system. While the police committee are maturing their plans for the ameliaration While the police of the system, peaceable ditizens are being pulled out of their beds and murdered, by bands of lawless marauders, who roam the country sans peur, undeterred by the imbecile police of the mofussil.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENTS .- It appears that the statistical inquiries which the committe of the Capital Punishment Society has instituted, have led them to the conclusion, that milder penalties are more efficacious in all cases, and that the total abolition of Capital Punishments. would be a measure equally of humanity and expediency.

suicide.— On the 28th of June, between the hours of five and six o'clock, Mr. Charles Dessa, a respectable East Indian, residing in north road Entally, was discovered suspended by a rope from the ceiling of his heddiately informed of the circumstance, and they lost no time in repairing thither; when, finding the body still warm, they cut it down, but life was quite extinct.

AN FUROPEAN FOUND DROWNED .- On the 20th instant. the thanadar at Howrah, reported to J. H. Patton, Esq., that an European was found drowned that morning, whose body washed on Sulkea ghaut.

CRIM. CON .- The decent monotony of mofussil life has recently experienced a slight shock at a station not 100 miles from Dinapoor, in consequence of the sudden fancy of a married lady, the wife of a staff officer, to occupy the bungalow of a gallant son of Mars, detinguished tor his literary and theatrical talents. The attraction is said to be purely platonic; but, nevertheless, the gentlemen of the long robe, are about to institute a cold matter-of-fact inquiry into all the pros. and cons.

CASE OF SEDUCTION .-- An East Indian, who is a writer in one of the public offices, lately seduced a young female, who, it appears, had formerly been a ward of the Free-School, and had been subsequently apprenticed to a milliner. He, under some pietence, took her on board a boat in the river, and there, after effecting his purpose, left her completely destitute. Information of this occur-rence was conveyed to Mr A. Garstin, the secretary to the Free-Shool, who proceeded to the ghant, where the boat was moored and brought the girl out of it, and took her to the residence of the chief magistrate, who took down her depositions in which she crarged the young man with a rape. He was consequently arrested on the charge, and gave bail for his appearance at the police office to defend himself. The case was fixed for trial on Monday, the 21st instant; but as the prosecutive has not yet made her appearance to conduct the case, it is to be supposed, that the affair has been hushed up.

SEDUCTION AND BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE .-- Mr. - appeared at the police office, accompanied by his daughter, to prefer a charge of a duction and breach of promise of marriage, against one Mr. William I'who is on the eve of marriage with another party. We could not ascertain what decision the magistrate passed in the case, but we heard Mr. I'. loudly declaining against the gay Lothano, who, we sincerely trust, will be made to pay the penalty of his overt gallantry.

STEAMER ENTERPRIZE, - i he hull of the steamer En. territies, which was put up for sale to-day at Messis. Moore, Hickey and Co.'s auction room, for the second time, was, we hear, again bought in—the highest bid being but 7,000 rupees.

SHAFT OF THE BERENICE .- What the skill of the Pombay engineers was unable to effect, and what in truth they dispaired of getting effected out of England, has been successfully wrought by the superior scientificability of Major Forbes. The shaft which was preparing at the mint, for the Berenice, has been completed under the able superintendence of that officer; and we consider that the simple fact speaks more than anything we can presume to utter, as to the praise he may justly claim for having thus shewn our friends the ducks that a remedy was nearer at hand than they had ventured to imagine.

SHIPWRECK .- The American ship Gasper, has been totally wrecked near Hooghly Point.

DISTRESS IN THE UPPER PROVINCES .- The following extract of a letter shows the great discress prevailing in the upper provinces:

MAY 27, 1838 .- The present state of things in this part of the country, presents matter for consideration, room. His friends who live but a short distance from in my opinion not less interesting to the legislator than to the philanthropist. The city and suburbs of Agra another harvest is preparing. Thus, of the whole proare supposed to contain a population of 80,000, and now nearly an equal number of paupers from the neighbouring districts may be added. By the last daily report, the burials by the police were 400, and were from three to four hundred for several days before-say 10,000 a month, at which rate the whole population, ordinary and accessory, would be swept off in sixteen months. From 100 to 150 per diem, of those taken to the asylum die within twenty. four hours, from the impossibility of restoring the exhausted powers of nature, impaired as they generally are by disease. It is understood, that of the low caste village servants, few beyond those now congregated at Agra and other places, where relief is afforded, survive. Even of the small tenters a large number have perished, others have abandoned their lands to escape from claims for rent or debts due to mahajuns, which they had no means of satisfying: but a still more extraordinary fact is, that some who hold rent-free lands have fied to other parts of the country, deserting their rights in despair. Everywhere are some roofless villages, and even large towns thinned of half their inhabitants. So utter has been the destruction of agricultural capital, that unless Government will advance to the remaining zemindars the means of purchasing the necessary cattle and seeds and supporting the labourers, there can be no cultivation, however favourable may be the approaching season for agricultural purposes. Mark that this does not proceed from any actual dearth of provisions. The markets are well supplied with corn enhanced indeed in price by the expense of bringing it from a distance, but not so dear as to be beyond the reach of the labourer employed at the usual rate of hire. Does not this shew that the root of the evil lies in that part of the agricultural system that makes the labourer dependant on the profits, and not on the wages of his own individual labour? The labouring agricultural population becomes multiplied to the utmost extent that an average season will afford surplus falls below the average, they borrow; when it exceeds it they refund. In such circumstances the failure of two crops successively, necessarily brings with it utter privation without resources. The capitalist may, on reduced means, support a smaller number of labourers, and those who are cast adrift may starve; but the ryut who has by the failure of one crop, exhausted his means of borrowing, must perish with all his family, if the second crop does not yield a sufficient return to subsist upon till the first crop of the following year is realized. Half a crop will not be applied to the maintenance of half the population for six months, but of the whole population for three months, leaving the whole no resource for the remaining three months. Such is the cottar system. Such has it been found in Ireland, and if not equally destructive in the Highlands of Scotland, it is because in seasons of distress the landlords racked their means and their credit to support their dependants. The prosperity of a neighbouring district affords no resource to the population of the less fortunate. That is already stocked chook full of labours, and can employ no more. Perhaps, indeed, a few hundred families may find room in new lands, as has happened this year at Dehra Doon, Even the village manufacturer or aritisan perishes in the ruin of his customs. To see clearly where the mischief originates, is one step towards the discovery of the remedy. The legislature treats the zemindar as a contractor for the rents of certain lands, of which rents it leaves him a share for his trouble and responsibility. It does not assign to him, but to the cultivators, the fruits of superior culture or of a succession of favourable seasons. He is interested in affording the ryuts assistance only when that is indispensable, and only in so far as it is so for the realization of his rents. He has no further interest than that, either present or prospective, in agricultural improvement, and practically his concern and interference are limitted precisely to the attainment of that pay his rent and support himself and his family, while nonsence the journal contains, we would say, that the duce, the only part that is not consumed by the actual labourer and the tax-gatherer, is that which is sold to pay the Government dues. The most intelligent persons here estimate the Government share at one-sixth of the next produce, and r deducting seed and food for cattle. Supposing the share of the zemindar to be another onesixth then two-thirds remain to repay the labour of production. Were the zemindar the party entrusted in raising the produce to the maximum of value at the minimum of expense, he would of necessity become a capitalist. Very possibly more produce might not be raised than is at present, but the surplus after payment of labour would undoubtedly be far greater. A much smaller portion of the whole population would be altogether dependant in the course of the seasons, and there would be a fly-wheel power or compensation-spring in the hands of the farmers to equalize irregularities. Here is a great legislative object, the means of accomplishing which may not be very obvious or easy of attainment, but are surely well worth the consideration of the council.

LIGHTNING .- On the 6th instant, the gunpowder magazine at Howrah, had a narrow escape from destruc-tion by lightning. The south-east corner was struck and a piece of the masonry knocked off. The sepay on guard gave the alarm expecting every moment the magazine would explode. On examination, however, it was found that the building was but slightly injured and the lightning had not penetrated the interior.

THE SOCIETY FOR THE ACQUISITION OF USEFUL KNOWanner .- The second monthly meeting of the society for the acquisition of useful knowledge took place at the Sanscrit college-hall on Wednesday evening last. Tho anatomy delivered by Baboo Rajkissen Dey, a student of the medical college. The discourse was a creditable one. After he had taken his seat, Baboo Udoy Chaund Addy delivered a speech in Bengallee on the vernacular tongue, pointing out the imperfect state in which it is at present, and the ease with which it may be rendered copious and expressive; and shewing the necessity on the part of his countrymen to cultivate it. The Baboo spoke at considerable length. The Reverend Mr. W. Adam. who is famous for his familiar acquaintance with the vernacular tongue, was present on the occasion, and expressed himself highly gratified with the Baboo's style.

THE HINDOO CHARITABLE INSTITUTION .- The second annual examination of the pupils attached to the Hindoo charitable institution, and the distribution of prizes to such of them as had rendered themselves deserving of the same, took place at the Town-hall on the 13th instant. This institution, which affords instruction in English to a number of boys whose parents are void of means to pay for tuition elsewhere, is principally conducted by liaboo Gopaul Laul Mitter, a student of the Hindoo college. The examiners, Mr. Hare and Rajah Kalikissen, expressed themselves gratified with the progress the students have made.

THE EAST INDIA POLITICAL REGISTER. - The prospectus of a periodical, under the above title, to appear once a week, commencing from Saturday, the 9th of June next, has been circulated. It is to be of the size of Cobbett's Political Register, containing thirty-two closely printed. columns, and giving the fullest detail of all English, foreign, and domestic news, parliamentary debates, &c.

This journal is to be edited by T. Beresford Gahan, Esq., late proprietor of the national advocate, and a special magistrate in the West Indies, and now a resident at Calcutta. The register has since appeared, and we are of opinion, that the editor has mistaken his single object. Then comes the ryut who is just able to vocation. If we may form an opinion from the rabid best thing the editor could do, would be to locate himself forthwith in Mr. Beardsmore's asylum, and entrust Rajah's service, lately passed through Agra on a mission himself to the safe-keeping of that gentleman.

MISSING MAIL .- The Calcutta dawk of the 16th of May, for Delhi, Meetut, Shaharunpore, Loodianah, Simla, Subathoo and Umballa, is reported missing after passing Mynporee with all letters and papers, but under what circumstances, there is no information; and from the length of time that has elapsed, it is to be apprehended, none is forthcoming.

MR. PEARSON .- We are informed that Mr. Assistant Surgeon John Thomas Pearson, is likely to be appointed assistant surgeon in medical charge of Dorjeeling.

WAX-CLOTH versus CLOUTCHOUC .- Previous to determining upon the substitution of caoutchouc for waxcloth, it has been deemed advisable to have a certain quantity prepared for the purpose of ascertaining how tar, in common wear and tear, it is superior or even equal to wax-cloth, its comparative cheapness with the usual cost of the latter being undoubted. In conformity with this design, a small piece of caoutchouc cloth was lately submitted to a committee, who, it appears, after testing its quality by various experiments, have pronounced it inferior to wax-cloth, and not at all calculated to constitute a saving substitute, which it was expected to permi.-The skeleton of a human body, measuring nine feet four inches, was dug up by miners, near the southern extremity of the Hymalayan mountains, during the past month, at a very short distance from the surface of the nearest stratum of mould.

Captain Abbot, of the artillery regiment, reached Delhi from Mhow, some days ago, having been neither stopped nor robbed on the way up.

Captain Abbot, merely heard the voices of some fifteen horsemen, who passed on the closed side of his palanqueeu, at about twenty yards distance from it, and after whom a "hue and cry" was raised, by a rabble of villagers, near Humeergurh.

The rise of the river Jumna, bas carried away the bridge of boats at Rajehat.

Rumours of the murder, in Persia, of Mr. McNeil the British representative, prevail at Delhi and the neighbouring stations.

The artifleryman, Cotter, who was sentenced to death, by a general court-martial, lately assembled at Kurnaul, underwent his sentence in presence of all the troops at that station, on the morning of the 8th instant. The unfortunate man met his fate with great firmness, and marched round the square with a steady and deliberate step, keeping as exact time with the music, as if he had been one of a funeral party following a comrade to the grave.

FURRUMH NUGGER .- Several natives of Delhi, to whom the Nawaub of this zillah is indebted, lately made a representation to the Governor General, in which they stated, that they could not sue the Nawaub in the Session Judge's Court, for the recovery of their debts. as the judge of that court would not try complaints against a man of the Nawaub's rank. In reply to this, His Excellency very properly directed all complaints from parties within the Company's jurisdiction to be beard against the Nawaub, and adjudged.

4GRA. - Government have refused to acknowledge the claims of Mirza Kamber, to be considered as heir to his late father Prince Sooleeman Shakoh. One branch of the native noblesse has thus been cut off.

Slight shocks of an earthquake were felt at the station on the 26th and 27th ultimo, but very imperceptibly. They were most distinct beyond the city.

Captain Runbeer Singh, an officer in the Nepaul to Candahar.

The late revisit of cholera in the 23d regiment has nearly ceased, but the native portion of the troops are still suffering with fevers to an unprecedented degree for Agra. The native part of the community is tolerably sheltered from the intense heat of the season; but amidst the miserable employed or unemployed destitute poor, who have assembled here, the mortality is quite appalling. The state of the weather is most appalling from intense heat and sand; the burden of the atmosphere is altogether almost unendurable.

MYNPOORES. - A bhangy dawk from Calcutta was recently plundered near this station. No particulars have transpired beyond the pregincts of office.

JAUJEMOW .-- On the 28th ultimo, the house on the Jaujemow estate, the residence of Mr. J. Amman, affjoining Cawapore contonnents, was entered by 70 or 80 armed depredators, who managed to carry away property to the amount of 8,000 rupees, chests of drawers, &c. were broken open by hatchets. Mr. Wilson, the magistrate, repaired instantly from his residence at Nabob Gunge to the spot, but the t ieves had by that time gone away with their booty. However, it is hoped, that they will not escape unpunished. Mr. Amman was from home during the outrage, and Mis. Amman with her two little children and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Trickett took refuge in a fisherman's boat which happened to be at the ghaut. The chokeedars were unable to offer effectual resistance; three of them were severely injured in opposing the attacking party.

NEEMUCH .- The remains of the Joora force were expected to return to this station by the 29th instant. Nobody appearing inclined to take the country, it was abandoned to the lawful and most lawless owners. None of the musterers for whose apprehension the force was sent out have been apprehended, so when was the business managed ?

NU-LERABAD. - Heavy showers of rain have recently tallen here and in the neighbourhood.

nonce .. - Cholera is raging here with great violence. On the 28th instant twenty people are said to have died in one hour, and from that time till the succeeding day. not one, who was attacked, escaped.

CAWNFORE. - The heat is intense; much sickness prevails amongst the European troops, especially Her Ma-jesty's 3d diagoons. Eight funerals took place on the evening of the 2d instant, at the calvary end of cantonments. Every door on the windward sides of the dragood barracks is closed at night "by order," and not a breath of air suffered to perfitte these densely inh ibited buildings. The prevailing sickness, which particles much of the nature of apoploxy, cannot be attributed to want of exercise, as the dragoons are judulged with riding school every morning, and frequently enjoy foot parades, which last until dark in the afternoon.

ALLAHABAD. - The following is an account of a dreadful whirlwind at Allahabad :

On Saturday, the 2d June, (that is the day before yesterday,) the whole sky looked strongly hazy, and the barometer for three or four days previously having indicated the approach of bad weather. I left office rather early in order to be at home when the gale should come on. About 5 o'clock, we were at dinner when the room became so very dark, and there was such a cry of surprise outside amongst the natives, that I went out to see what was the matter. The whole sky was blood-red, not with clouds, for there was not a cloud to be seen, and, overhead moved immense masses of dust; but below there was not a breath of wind ! The people said they never before saw such a sight.

Shortly after, it became dark and the wind moved on was still buried under the rubbish. I screamed to the strongly, carrying with it the sand and dust. We collected together in the compound, to witness what was going on, and it soon became so extremely dark, though the sun was still up, that we could not see one another at the distance of two vards.

The darkness was not only visible, but tangible, and as each volume of it passed, the light from above flashed down like lightning, so that those whose eyes were not thoroughly stuffed up could get a glimpse of what was going on around. It was really terrific. At last there came on a dreadful crash; every thing moved from its place, bundles of bamboos clattered along, branches of trees, crows, and tiles were swept furiously past, and the frame-work of the tiled roofs shook like a sheet, sending a shower of tiles up with every shake. It now became much clearer; but soon after this, there was another dreadful gust accompanied with total darkness. I left my tent and staggered about trying to get to my family, as by a great crash of tiles and the sound of falling timbers, I thought they were builed under its ruins; but I could see nothing. Thank God I found them safe, but the building was much shattered. Some rain with hail and thunder now came on and the sky consequently cleared. Chairs and tables, a large bed, and the other usual furniture of a room had a reel about the compound; every rope of the tent having snapped, and the traps made their escape. Such a storm was never remembered by that venerable authority, always appealed to in such cases, - the oldest inhabitant. The loss on the river must have been dreadful, but I have not yet heard anything particular. On shore, people were dashed into ravines, and against walls and trees, others suffered by the talling of buildings and trees, and many were cut by tiles, and I understand that two dead bodies have been picked up. I forgot to mention that a few days ago about seven in the morning we had a slight shock of an earthquake.

Now, this has a good deal of the marvellous in it; and would read well in the Wonders of the Universe, or any other veritable work on the inysteries of nature; but it only forms the first course to a rare treat; -so, be prepared to give your powers of beliefa little further re-laxation. Yesterday, at the same hour. on it came Yesterday, at the same hour, on it came again, though not heialded in with so much grandeur; but I will not tell you with so much minuteness; let it suffice, that the gale was very dreadful throughout; but, at one particular moment, it was more like a thunderbolt than the effect of wind. Buildings, and even trees of great size, were laid prostrate in the twink-ling of an eye. The Sudder Board office is in such a state of wreck, that another house has been taken for the business, and the disarrangement and injury done to the records, will much impede the public business for some time. Several bungalows are irreparably injured, and the tiled houses of the native are every where unrooted. Even the Sudder Dewanny offices, which are thorouguly puckah government buildings, had sustained injury. We hear of many people baving been injured. I heard one man crying who was crushed under a tree, and it is wonderful that any who were out, were able to save themselves, for the tiles were quoited down at times with sufficient force to split a man's skull. All my own property is injured, and a great proportion of it, is utterly destroyed. When the great gast came on Mis. * and I were standing at the door of the little building I before mentioned; the terrific rain that accompained its bursting upon us, made me determine to run to the open garden. The moment I said "we had better run," Mrs. * ran forward, that door being to the leeward, instead of keeping under the wall; but just then down came the roof unwer.—The reforming Rajah of this state has not upon us. I heard her shrick, and after getting close to reformed his own barbarous and inhuman habits. He the place myself, I looked for her and found that she recently ordered the hands of a Meenah to be cuits of, people, who were about the compound, but could get none to hear; - when I attempted to run forward against the wind, I was, really moving backwards, and it was with the greatest difficulty that I managed to keep about which I found had fallen edgeways across the small of her back with a beam of wood. Fortunately, I at last made myself heard, and a man came to my assistance, and we got Mrs. * out, wonderful to say, unhurt, except from a few slight bruizes. Thank God it is over, and so well over. Beams of wood with nothing attached to them, to give them wings, flew fifty yards. A rabbit coop which takes six men to lift, jumped away about thirty feet,-a tree growing in a grove was lifted up into the air carried over a compound wall, right up to the door of the dwelling. I need not give you any other specimen.

It is really worth while to see a dust storm up here at any time; you can have no idea of the sublimity of the approach. There is nothing admirable afterwards. The day before yesterday my mouth got so full of dust, that I looked as if a rajmistry had been feeding me with a handful of cutcha plaster. The whole station is in consternation.

I learn that the barometer indicates a still more severe storm for to-day than either of the last. If so, God help the poor inhabitants.

HUSSINGABAD .- Letters from Saugor, of date 3d June. state that a most daring dacoity had been lately com-mitted at Hussingabad. The rascals attacked the city, adjacent to the cantonments, so early as half past seven o'clock in the evening, cutting down every one who opposed them, killed five men and wounded several, and carried off 15,000 ruppees in money and goods. Major Ouseley has his people in active pursuit, scouring the country in every direction, but with what success, has not yet been ascertained.

MATIVE STATES. .

HERAT.—It appears that Herat has at length fallen to the besiegers. The son of Dost Mahommed Khan had previously proceeded with a considerable body of horse to pay his court to the King of Persia. Dost Mahom-med Khan has now himself treated with the King, and to incite the latter to attempt the conquest of Hindoostan, has assured Ilis Majesty that Cabul and Candahar are prepared to obey his bidding, and that he may deal with these countries as in his wisdom and mightiness he may think fit, provided only he will aid him in the invasion of India. Thus there seems every prospect of a very promising flare-upon our frontiers!

LAHORE .- Ukhbars from Lahore state, that on the Maharajah being informed that a letter had arrived for him from Captain Burnes, announcing his withdrawal from Cabe, his Highness observed, that Dost Mahommed Khan might live to rue the day, and it was now clear enough that that chief believed he had made a better book with the Russians. Sirdar Ummur Sing remarked, it was impossible to say what such a combination of powers might effect, but that, if it were every man for himself, the khyburwalla, with his one hundred thousand horse and twenty-five thousand infantry, might come down when he pleased. He would encounter Sikhs, who have been victorious in the mountains in Moolton and in Cashmere, JUEPOOR .- The Rawul Beree Sal expired here on the 27th ult. His death, it is thought, proceeded from apoplexy. Luchwan Sigh, his nephew, succeeds him in his regency for the present. Chorles still rages.

ULWUR .- The reforming Rajah of this state has not tacked and half devoured by swine and carrion birds! on duty on the palare some years since, he became but the rest of the party were in the most deplorable cognizant of the murder of a thakor, who had, while state. The trip including passage-money, &c. cost four-sengaged in an angry dispute with the Rajah, kicked his highness in the belly, an insult which so enraged the other thakours present, that they murdered the author, as he retired by the passage which the Meenah guarded.

Not is the cruelty of this Rajah confined to his own He sanctions, and even encourages the direct acts. atrocious crime of suttee, two instances of which occurred in his estate, within the last seventeen months, one of them at Ramghur. Yet this is in the face of a positive pledge given by him to Government, that he will discountenance and prohibit this barbarous rite!

BOKHARA .- By letters received from merchants at Bokhara, considering hunself as an old friend to the ruler of Herat, had forwarded an army, consisting of tour thousand musketeers, for the protection of the territories of the latter. When they got near the fort of Gorgan, spies took information to the chiefs of the Iran army. that forces from Turkistan had arrived for the aid of Herat, and their intention was to enter the fort. On this, measures were adopted to stop the progress of the said army, and the consequence was, that they were obliged to return home disappointed.

CAUBOOL .- The chief of Caubool lately held a council of the wise heads of his empire, to consult about the best means to be resorted to for the safety of the state. The chief requested to know whether it would be wise for him to form alliance with the chiefs of Hindoostan, Some of them maintained or with the people of Iran, that the latter ought not to be done, as the Iranians belonged to the Shea sect of the Mahometan creed; but this objection was overruled by one of the Moulavees stating, that inasmuch as the Sheas are not prohibited from reading Namauz and the Koran, and they perform the pilgrimage to Mecca, and other ceremonies prescribed by the Mahomedan religion, there can be no harm in making friendship with the ruler of Iran. The chief approved of the remarks, and made up his mind to send one of his sons to Iran.

MADRAS.

ICE HOUSE. - The good folks in Madras, have determined on leaving the luxury of ice afforded them, and are about to erect an ice house.

ERECTION OF A THEATRE, &c .- It is said, that some public-spirited gentlemen at Madras, have projected a scheme tor an establishment to comprise a theatre, an assembly 100m, and accommodation for the Masonic Lodges working at Madras. It is calculated that a sum of about 35,000 rupees will be required to compass these objects, and this is proposed to be raised on the principle of a joint-stock company, in 700 shares of fifty rupees each.

IORD ELPHINSTONE. - The report of the regall of Lord Elphinstone, is not true.

MR. HARRY VIVEASH.—This fortunate gentleman has come in for a fortune of £100,000, by the death of his cousin, and inow Harry Baskerville, Esq. against Mr. Garrow, is now complete. It consists of Mr. Stonhouse, Mr. Babington, and Mr. Ashton.

THE NABOB AND HIS FAMILY .- His Highness the Nabob and the poor wretch to be, in this condition, exposed outside the gate of the city, where he expired from loss of blood. Before life had become extinct, he was attacked and half devoured by swine and carrion birds! Captain to steer back to Madras. The Nabob by all This unfortunate creature's crime was, that as a sentry accounts is a good sailor, and was quite well on board,

> THE TANJORE COMMISSIONERS .- The H. C.'s -sloop Amherst arrived at Madras, for the purpose of conveying the ex-Tanjore commissioners to Calcutta, and they received a notice to be on board on the 2d instant last, but not having completed their arrangements, and believing that Government would order the ship to wait here for a few days longer, they neglected to obey the summous of Captain Jump, who has actually sailed without them, and left them to experience the inconvenience of not taking a jump in time.

CAUSEY CHITTY .- That ill-fated man, Causey Chitty, Bokhara, it appears, that Shah Morad, the ruler of has at length, after an incarceration of nearly a quarter of a century, obtained his liberation, unconditionally.

ROBBERS .- A short time since, as Mr. Babington's party were travelling through the Salem district, on their way to Combatore, they were attacked, near a place called Tripatore, by a gang of robbers. The leader seized and stopped the palankeen of Miss Molle, a young lady who accompanied them, but not being teadily supported by his less valiant companions, he was knocked down and beaten off by the beaters.

Shortly after the same set made an assault upon the baggage, but there also meeting with superior opposition, they took their revenge by stoning the defenders of the property, and spoiling the beauty of some of the female followers.

THE BARQUESCAR .- The barque Star, which left Malacca on the 26th ultimo, with a detachment of the 48th regt. N. I. on return to Madras, got aground off the coast of Lookoet on the 30th ultimo, and little hopes were entertained for her preservation. The Fanny, which arrived at Malacca, on her way to Singapore, with the head-quarters of the 8th N. I., disembarked the troops, and went to the assistance of the Star, but had not returned at the date of the last advices. The Star narrowly escaped an attack while conveying a detachment of the 8th to Malacca, having been sur-rounded by five piratical praos, but owing to the gallant assistance of the troops and the prompt discharge of a few vollies of musketry, an attempt to board was not made.

WAR WITH BURMAN .- On dit, that dispatches have been received by Government bringing the following unfavourable intelligence from Ava. "King Thurrawaddie had positively and finally refused to receive a new resident, or to comply with any of the other demands which were insisted on by the agents of Government." this information be correct, a war is inevitable, and the necessary preparations will soon be in progress.

BOMBAY.

EXTRAORDINARY FALL OF ICE.—At Nowloor, in the neighbourhood of and about two miles from Dharwar, there fell, a few days since, a block of ice or a body of hailstones in one mass, which measured nineteen feet ten inches. This extraordinary mass feil on a Sunday night, and on the Wednesday succeeding a servani, MESSRS. BANNERMAN AND CARROW.—The commission who was sent for the purpose of bringing away a pail to investigate the charges preferred by Mr. Bennerman full of the bulk, reported that the mass then still remaining was as large as three palanquins.

INDUS TRADE FAILURE .- The four boats which left Bombay in April for the Indus, with a return cargo for and his family, after embarking on board the Herefordshire and proceeding to sea for twenty-four hours, have mouths of which they with difficulty escaped shipwreck, returned without accomplishing the object of their voyage. The mother of his Highness suffered so se. One of them was thrown on her beam ends by the heavy swell which sets in there at this season, but fortunately righted again. The poor men have been kindly re- Indian navy is to be increased sixty rupees per mensum, ceived by the resident, Colonel Pottinger, but it is to be regretted that any attempt was made so late in the season.

WAR WITH PERSIA .-- The course of events in Persia has called for an armed interference on the part of the Government of Bombay. An armed force is to proceed the Persian gulph forthwith, according to directions received from Lord Palmerston, and take possession of the island of Karack, which is situated a little to the northward of Bushne. The indiculously small number of 600 sepoys, is to be despatched on this expedition.

THE WRECK .- The following is an extract from a letter which has been received from Captain Jump, of the Hon. Company's ship Amherst, who was directed on his voyage down the coast to survey the spot in which the wreck of a 600 ton ship was said to have been discovered by Capt, Green of the Triumph.

"At 1 past 5 p. m. I went myself in the cutter to examine the wreck, and found the peel of a most 8 to 10 feet above water, and a small spar about 4 feet above above the level of the ocean, and encircled by lakes on water. This must evidently belong to a large buggalow, being a rough poon spar 18 to 20 inches in diamater, and the smaller one appears to be the yard (of poon also). The heel of the mast is much bleached, and the part under water is covered with barnacles, showing it must have been there some time.

They must not be very secure in that description of vessel, must have got unshipped, and is now hanging by rigging. In that case it would give way to a concussion such as that of a ship running against it, and not be more dangerous than a large fishing stake.

Captain Green's bearings were pretty correct."

Captain Green, however, must have been very shortsighted, not to distinguish the difference between the mast of a buggalow and that of a large ship. He bendes said nothing about the spar being loose, although his men tried to detach it, and not a word was spoken of the barnacles.

DUTY ON NUIMIGS .- The Government has thought proper at last to give up the duty imposed on nutmegs, &c. on being imported into the island.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION EXPECTED AT GOA .- There is a rumour among the Portuguese population of Bombay, that another revolution is on the point of being perpetrated at Goa. According to the latest accounts from that unfortunate city, a private notice had been received by the secretary to Government, that three of the regiments had leagued together to take up are is against the constituted autho ities, the object of the combination being, to depose the Governor and certain others of the leading functionaries, with the exception of the Commander-in-Chief. The reason assigned for this movement, was the irregularity in the payment of the troops, who are now, it would appear, three months in arrears. The embarrassments of the Portuguese Government may in some measure be accounted for, by the necessity that occurred lately, for the fitting out of an expedition which proceed to Macao, for the purpose of supporting the Governor of that place, who, but the last accounts, was in daily ex- it appears, was put to death in the most violent and outpectation of being compelled to abdicate, on account of lageous manner, usual forms in all cases of executions his having rendered himself exceedingly unpopular with of any of the royal family, having been dispensed with, his new subjects as well as obnoxious to the Chinese—he was dragged forth and beheaded like a common authorities. sailors, who left Goa on the 15th ultimo, in a corvette, cover his rights of which he had been deprived by the Should the threat of a rising at Goa be put in execution, there can be but little doubt of its success, as the military there are all powerful and have invariably succeeded in cashiering their chiefs, civil or military, when prompted throne, has been followed by that of a great many indited to do so by that impatience of control so habitual to viduals connected with him. THE INDIAN NIVY .- The pay of lieutenants in the by the addition of batta at the rate of Re-two per day. The allowance to captains of steamers from passagemoney to the Red Sea is to be reduced to Rs- three hundred instead of as at present Rs four hundred.

BUILDING OF SEVENTY-FOURS. - Orders have been received from England for the construction at Bombay of two seventy-tour gun ships, for the royal navy. This will put the dockyard establishment in motion, and lead to a good deal of bustle in the building department. These vessels for want of room in the regular docks, are to be built at Cross Island, which will thus be turned to good account, and perhaps be rendered permanently very useful as an auxiliary to the dockyards.

DISCOVERY OF THE SOURCE OF THE RIVER OXUS .- The interesting discovery of the source of the river Oxus has been made by Lieut. Wood, of the Indian navy, attached to Captain Burnes's mission. This celebrated river uses among the mountains of Pameer in Sirikool. from a lake nearly fitteen thousand six hundred feet all sides except the west, through which it finds a channel. To the late Captaia Buines and Lacut, Wood have given the appropriate name of " lake Victora.

SECUNDERABAD. - Accounts from Secunderabad state. that the present is one of the severest seasons that has been known there for many years, the thermometer being in the shade 104 degrees. There has been no rain, and consequently no decent forage is procurable. fruit trees are drooping fast, notwithstanding all the watering and care bestowed on them. The troops are. however, extremely healthy. Murders and robberies are common in the neighbourhood of the camp.

THE TURKS .- It is said that a Turkish force has overrun one of the finest of the south-western provinces of Persia. Should then the force sent up to the gulph be of no further service, it may yet be extremely useful in restoring this unfortunate province to a state of order. We have heard no further particulars.

Thugs .- An extensive execution of persons convicted of thuggee has taken place at Mangalore, and no less than eight of these miserable enemies of mankind prished on the scaffold. A large number is also on the road to Madras for transportion to Moulmein.

BURMAH.

Moulmein Chronicles of the 28th of April, have been received during the week. Affairs seem to be in statue quo. Major Benson, of the H. C. 11th native infantry, and late nulitary secretary to Lord William Bentinck, proceeds immediately to Rangoon, in the room of Colonel Burney; and we shall soon learn how far the determination of Tharrawaddie not to treat personally with any representative of the British Government, will be persevered in.

In the mean time the clouds are collecting on our Nepaulese frontier.

Mr. Blundell and the British residents at Maulmein, assisted by a few Burmese and Chinese, have subscribed Rs 1,117 to the famine fund for the northwest frontier.

THE LATE HEIR APPARENT .- The late heir apparent, The force sent, consisted of 270 soldiers and criminal. That he had been guilty of attempting to reusurpation of the present king, has not yet been established on sufficient evidence.

The execution of the young late heir apparent to the becoming very unpopular among the people—a perfect change is visible since the perod of this Woondock's directions to Captain Congatton to down to the junk; but loyalty, I would say, they would willingly join any party, to be from Tharrawalhe's Government." * *

Ar all events, he cannot know how far Providence is in his favour, till he has a quarrel with us, an event which he seems to covet rather than to dread."

Coal has been found, in large quantities in Mergui.

THE GEORGE SWINTON STRUCK BY LIGHTNING. - On the 23d of May, the George Swinton, was struck by lightning, by which the fore-royal and top-masts were shattered, but her gallant and lower masts escaped with little damage. No person on board was injured.

THE VICEROY OF RANGOON. - Accounts from Rangoon mention that the viceroy of that place begins to ma-miest a better feeling towards the English rest-ients there. The shoe-order has been restored to its former footing at the top of the stairs, or at some other respectful distance from "the presence.

orders in respect to head-coolies, which will probably blu iderbusses, spears, &c. remove some vexations, attending unloading and loaling vessels.

But the most remarkable act of the Rangoon viceroy is, that he has lately decided receiving a handsome and valuable present from an European merchant, who had the honour of an audience soon after the shoeorder was rescinded.

SINGAPORE. PIRACY .- We have advices from Singapore to the 10th May, but there seems nothing of importance stirring at that settlement. Piracy, bowever, continues to flourish.

A most barbarous act of piracy and murder was com-mitted on the crew of a small boat consisting of four Chinese, all mere lads, on their way from Rhio to Singapore. At the entrance of the Straits of Rhio, in the vicinity of the Pan Shoal, she was set upon by a sampan containing six Malays, w o boarded her and butchered in cold blood, three of the poor Chinese, appa ently with no other object than to grattly their diabolical cruelty, as there was nothing for them to plunder; the other was left on board cruelly mangled, and weltering in blood, and probably owes the preservation of his life to the belief of the savaged that he was also dead. He was three days in the most denlorable condition, suffering from his wounds, and subsisting on the leaves of trees growing on the beach, towards which he had contrived to paddle his boat, when he was fortunately fallen received deving the month, in with by a sampan pukat, and taken to Singapore, The creditors of Hung Ta where his wounds have been attended to.

DESTRUCTION OF PIRATES. - The Diana steamer was on the 18th of May, off Tringganu, in company with her Majesty's sloop Wolf, engaged in action with a fleet of six large Illanoon pirate prabus, as they were in action with and nearly capturing a junk that had sailed a few days before from Singapore laden with a valuable cargo for China. - It appears from Captain Congalton's account, that the pirates were discovered about 9 o'clock in the forenoon bushe Wolf, as they were attempting to enter Tringganu load, were she was then lying at auchor; but on perceiving her they stood out to sea and attacked the junk under sail some miles distant. The Wolf instantly got underweigh, but without her armed boats or the gun-boats attached to her, which had been ordered to a neighbouring island in quest of another fleet of pirates that were reported to have committed depredations upon some Tringganu. The steamer was seen from the Wolf to the northword at about noon, when Captain Stanley immediately despatched his gig went on shore and jolly boat to her, well armed and manuel with out his basis.

But I am convinced, that the ruling pas-titus reinforced, reached the pirates, who were then a loyalty, I would say, they would willingly join any little astern of the junk, and repeatedly fired on her as she neared them. As soon, however, as she took a position, she poured in such a murderous fire on each of the prahus that their decks were soon cleared, and on a breeze springing up five of them hoisted sail, leaving their commodore in the large prabu to continue the action. She was, however, soon silenced, boarded, and brought astern of the Drana pass sunset; but finding she was in a sinking state, Cap am Congalton cut the tow rope and left her to her fite after taking out the prisoners, while the Diana proceeded in chace of her consorts; but they escaped with the darkness of the night, aided by some squally weather that followed. There was no doubt, from the severe manner in which they were mauled by the Diana, that these prahus will never again be fit for . 3a, and that the remainder of their crows have had an awful lesson for their temerity. nearly one hundred and forty having been killed and wounded, and thirty taken prisoners out or three hundred and sixty, the number which the fleet is stated to have been composed of. On the day following that occurrence, the Wolf was joined by the boats, (which had been absent on a cruize to some islands on the coast) and were instantly despatched in pursuit by Captain Stanley, with orders to proceed in the direction of the Redang islands to which it was considered tikely the pirates would resort for the purpose of refit ing; the boats of the Welf having, on a previous visit to this islands, discovered traces of a piratical rendezvous at that place, with docks for laying up the prahus, &c. As the piratical fleet was in a manner cut off from the main land, besides being at the same time in too disabled a state to permit of their continuing their course homeward, there seems every probabil'y of the expedition of the boats to the Redang islands being attended with success. The only probability against it, in the miads of those who were present at the encounter, and witnessed the crippted condition of the prahus that escaped, is, that they all went down during the tempestuous night which succeeded the engagement.

MEETING OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF BENGAL.

CALCUTTA, JULY 2, 1338.

At a meeting of the Australian Association of Bengal, at the Town-hall this morning,

Edward Stirling, Esq., C. S., in the chair,

The secretary read the report of the committee as follows:

THIRD REPORT OF THE COMMITTER OF THE AUSTRALIAN

We are happy to have it in our power to commence our third report, by announcing the safe return of the first ship despatched by us.

The Gaillardon, Capt. Rapson, left Calcutta on the 17th Doc., and the Sandheads on the 20th, and returned here on the 20th ultimo, exactly six months. The passage to the Swan was rather a long one, and in consequence of the great delay and detention, the vessel was likely to suffer by going to the new settlement in South Australia. Capt. Rapson decided with the concurrence of the majority of his passengers, to proceed direct to Hobart-Town, and there to take up freight and passage for the cargo and passengers bound to Adelaide; under the encumstances, we approve of Capt. Rapson's determination in that respect. The vessel returned through Toures' Straits, and although a trifle was earned by her after she left Calcutta, the amount will not materially add to the profit of the voyage, which we teckon about 1,500 rupees, though we have no accounts jet from Sydney.

Our agency at Sydney was addressed in the first instance to Mr. R. H. Browne, late of the firm of Shedden and Co. of this place, but as that gentleman had no settled purpose of remaining in the colony, or at any rate residing at Sydney, our affairs passed into the hands of Messrs. Campbell and Co. of Georgestreet, as provided for in four instructions. We are inclined to think, that the discretion exercised by them in sending the vessel back at once in ballast, rather than incur certain expense for the chance of freight and passengers, has been advantageous.

We attribute the success of our first ship in a great measure to the active exercions of Capt. Rapson, who obtained the most satisfied ory testimonials from the passengers, as to the table and general conduct of the voyage. We consider him deserving of our best thanks, and trust the meeting will join us in the expression of them.

It was our desire to take up the skip again immediately, but no sufficient freight or passengers have yet offered to warrant our deing so. We have, therefore, suggested to Capt. Rapson to take an intermediate voyage, so as to be back here in time to sail in December, and should he act upon our suggestio shall be prepared with your sanction to make arrangement with him for a further voyage.

Our letters from Sydney are few, and hitherto from Van Diemen's Land we have none; and, therefore, cannot say what support we can reckon upon from the colonies. As yet we have only received good wishes for our success.

We would observe, that although the voyage of the Gaillardon is satisfactory in its results, we think, there are grounds for the expectation of still greater success in future operations. First, because the ship is calculated to earn a larger freight than on her last voyage. Second, because Captain Rapson is now willing to undertake the voyage for a specified sum, and third, because we may reasonably reckon upon more freight and passage-money in return voyages hereafter, when our arrangements shall be more complete and more generally understood.

The disasters of our second ship, the Emerald Isle, have been a source of much regret and annoyance, and, we fear, the voyage will entail considerable loss on the association, but we have the consolation of knowing that every thing was done by us that could be done to usure success, as will appear by the report of the gentlemen you deputed to inquire into the matter at the last general meeting. We trust that the conduct and language we and our zealous secretary have had to endure from the passengers of that vessel, will be deemed by you to have been wholly unnersited.

We have reason to believe ourselves unfortunate in the choice of the ship and of her commander, the former being a new ship, her defects only became apparent in the course of the voyage; we trust they will have been remedied ere she leaves the Mauritus. Ifer sailing qualities are spoken very favourably of. We have yet no information of her having proceeded on from the Mauritus, but the intelligence may be daily expected.

As a strong prejudice appears to have been excited at Madras, and, as we have but one subscriber at that presidency, we submit to the meeting, whether, it may not be desirable for the future to avoid the expense of time and money, which must be incurred by calling there, and which, so far as we can see, is likely to be thrown away.

We beg to submit the accounts of the association with our secretary.
